EXHIBIT NO. 9 TO STIPULATION.

This Agreement, Made and entered into this thirty-first day of July, 1885, by and between the Oregon and California Railroad Company, of Oregon, hereinafter called the Selling Company of the one part, and the Central Pacific Railroad Company, of California, hereinafter called the Purchasing Company, of the other part,

Witnesseth, as follows:

First: The Selling Company hereby agrees to sell and transfer to the appointee of the Purchasing Company all its railway lines (the constructed portion of which lines extend from East Portland to a point about one and a half miles south of Ashland, and from Portland to Corvallis, and from Albany to Lebanon and are about 451 miles in length) and the appurtenances and all its rolling stock, supplies and equipment, its lands remaining unsold at the date of this agreement, and its rights and interests in lands, and rights to acquire and earn lands, and all its rights, grants, and franchises granted by the United States and also all its interests of every decription in the Northern Pacific Terminal Company, at a price and upon the terms hereinafter specified.

Second: The transfer of the property sold shall be made as soon as possible, and in any case not later than the first day of July, 1886, and in such manner as to give a good and clear title to the property sold to the appointee of the Purchasing Company, either by means of a sale under foreclosure of the deed of first mortgage of the Selling Company, or by such other means as the Counsel of the Purchasing Company may approve.

Third: The property sold shall, when so transferred, be free from all debts, liabilities and encumbrances of every description, except such liabilities and duties as may be incident to the land grant and franchises granted by the United States to the Selling Company and agreed to be transferred to the appointee of the Purchasing Company and except any and all such liabilities for arrears of rent or otherwise, as may be incident to the interest of the Selling Company in the Northern Pacific Terminal Company. The value of the supplies transferred shall not be less than the value of those on hand at the date hereof and the Selling Company shall keep up the property to its present state of repairs until the transfer takes place. The whole amount of land sold at the date hereof does not exceed in aggregate 800,000 acres.

Fourth: For the purpose of adjusting the accounts and operating expenses, and dividing the earnings on the transfer of the property, an account shall be stated between the purchasing and Selling Companies as of the First day of July next; and all earnings of the railroads and other property sold, received after that date and the net proceeds and rentals of or from all lands sold or leased after the date hereof shall go to the credit of the Purchasing Company or its appointee which shall undertake all expenses appertaining to the operation of the road as from the first day of July, 1886, and shall from such last mentioned date pay interest on the bonds to be issued in payment for the property purchased as hereinafter specified and shall pay or account for the dividends becoming due after said first day of July, 1886, on the shares in the Purchasing Company, to form part of the price as hereinafter mentioned. All net earnings of the existing railroads previous to the first day of July next, and the net price of all lands sold previous to the date hereof, shall belong to the Selling Company and no charge shall be made by the Purchasing Company or its appointee for receiving and paying over such amounts. The carriage of construction, labor and material over the existing lines shall be done at cost and without profit to the Selling Company, the certificate of the Chief Accounting Officer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company as to the amount of such cost being agreed to be final between the parties.

Fifth: The price of the property sold shall be $8,000,000 par value of the shares of the Purchasing Company, and carrying all dividends declared after July 1st, 1886, and $10,500,000 par value of bonds made or guaranteed by the Purchasing Company, to be secured on the property purchased as next hereinafter described, and carrying interest from July 1, 1886.

Sixth: The bonds to be issued or guaranteed by the Purchasing Company and delivered in payment as last mentioned, shall be payable principal and interest in gold, forty years after date and bear interest from the first day of July next, at the rate of three per cent per annum for two years, and five per cent per annum thereafter, payable half yearly. Such bonds shall be either issued by or unconditionally guaranteed by, the Purchasing Company, as the Purchasing Company may decide, and shall be secured by a mortgage (to be made to the Farmers Loan and Trust Company in case such Trust Company shall perform the duties of trustee at not exceeding fifty cents per bond, otherwise the Union Trust Company, or such Company as shall be agreed upon by the parties) of all the property purchased hereunder, and of all extensions and of the future acquired property of the Purchasing Company in Oregon; and the deed of Mortgage shall be similar—except so far as otherwise stated in this agreement—to the existing deed of trust mortgage of the Selling Company. The net proceeds of the lands transferred and included in this mortgage shall form a sinking fund for the redemption of the bonds at par. The amount of the bonds to be issued under the mortgage shall be as follows: $30,000 per mile for every mile of standard gauge road, now or hereafter constructed or acquired and comprised in the mortgage and $10,000 for every mile of narrow gauge road now or at any time hereafter constructed or acquired and comprised in the mortgage. The mortgage deed shall provide for the issue and delivery to the Selling Company, upon the above mentioned transfer of the property to the appointee of the Purchasing Company, of the $10,500,000 of bonds above specified and that the trustee of the mortgage shall further issue to the Purchasing Company or its appointee, for each mile of road constructed between Ashland and the California State line, $100,000 for such bonds, and for each ten miles of steel rails laid down on the present lines of the Selling Company and not now laid with steel rails, 450,000 of such bonds.

On the completion of the rail connection between the present lines of the Selling Company and the line of railway of the Purchasing Company any unissued bonds for which the mileage shall then be constructed, shall be transferred by the trustee to the Purchasing Company, or its appointee; Provided, However, that such aggregate issue to the Purchasing Company or its appointee shall not exceed, including the $10,500,000 to be issued to the Selling Company, the limit of $30,000 for each constructed mile. For any additional mileage constructed or acquired, either between Junction and Corvallis or elsewhere in Oregon, the Purchasing Company, or its appointee, shall be entitled to receive from the Mortgage Trustee, the sum of $30,000 for each mile of standard gauge road and the sum of $10,000 for each mile of narrow gauge road. The Mortgage Trustee, however, not to be compelled to accept less than ten miles of road at one time, except in cases of terminal sections. Deliveries of bonds under such mortgage are to be made by the Trustee from time to time upon presentation to it of affidavits of the President and Chief Engineer of the Purchasing Company, or its appointee, to the facts authorizing delivery of such bonds under this article, and without other evidence and proof thereof.

Seventh: Notwithstanding the provisions to be inserted in the mortgage deed restricting the future issue of bonds to a mileage rate as above specified, the mortgage deed, shall permit the Purchasing Company, or its appointee, to require the Trustee at one time, or from time to time, to issue and permit the sale of such amount or amounts of bonds as the Purchasing Company, or its appointee, may think fit: Provided, However, that the proceeds of such bonds shall be received by the Mortgage Trustee, and not by the Purchasing Company, or its appointee, and shall be disbursed by the Mortgage Trustee to the Purchasing Company, or its appointee, only pro-rata as and when the Purchasing Company, or its appointee, would have been entitled to receive such bonds thereunder under the foregoing articles hereof.

Eighth: The present holders of the First Mortgage Bonds of the Selling Company shall have the option, for 21 days after notice to that effect shall have been published in one daily paper in London and Frankfort respectively, of subscribing, in the ratio of one new bond for every three old bonds now held by them, respectively, to the new bonds to be issued in the manner above stated, at the price of eighty-six per cent of their par value, payable one-fifth on subscription and the residue in equal parts at the expiration of three, six, nine and twelve months from the date of such subscription.

Ninth: The Purchasing Company, or its appointee shall, within three years, from the transfer of the property as above prescribed, complete the railway between the present Southern terminus of the railway lines of the Selling Company, at or near Ashland, in Oregon and the present Northern terminus of the Oregon division of the Railway lines of the Purchasing Company, at or near Delta, so as to form a through line between Portland in Oregon and San Francisco in California.

Tenth: The 80,000 shares of the capital stock of the Purchasing Company of the nominal value of $8,000,000 above mentioned, shall be delivered to the Selling Company upon the transfer of the property as above prescribed, and shall, in the first instance, be registered for the purpose of delivery in the joint names of George Henry Hopkinson, the President of the Selling Company, or of such other person as may be the President of the Selling Company and C. E. Bretherton, Vice President of the Selling Company, or of such other person as may be the Vice-President of such Company. But such shares shall carry dividends only from the 1st day of July, 1886, as above stipulated.

Eleventh: This agreement shall be void unless the Stockholders of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, shall, within two months from this date, ratify this agreement, and the two committees now formed respectively in London and Frankfort and representing the First Mortgage Bondholders of this Company, shall, within the same time, execute in due form a confirmation and acceptance of this agreement.

Twelfth: The Selling Company binds itself to execute to the Purchasing Company or its appointee, on or before the First day of July, 1886, a proper deed transferring the property hereby agreed to be sold, free from all debts, liabilities and encumbrances, except as above specified, and to transfer the possession thereof and in case it shall fail to do so, the Purchasing Company, may, at its option, declare this agreement to be void.

Thirteenth: No personal liability of any description shall attach to the officers of the two contracting Companies, who execute this agreement on their respective behalf.

In Witness Whereof, the parties hereto have, by their respective Vice-Presidents thereunto duly authorized, executed these presents the thirty-first day of July, 1885.

Vice-President.

That each and every railroad company aforesaid which has received from the United States any bonds of the said United States, issued by way of loan to aid in constructing or furnishing its road, or which has received from the United States any lands granted to it for a similar purpose, shall make to the said Auditor any and all such reports as he may require from time to time and shall submit its books and records to the inspection of said Auditor or any person acting in his place and stead, at any time that the said Auditor may request, in the office where said books and records are usually kept; and the said Auditor, or his authorized representative, shall make such transcripts from the said books and records as he may desire.

SEC. 5. That if any railroad company aforesaid shall neglect or refuse to make such reports as may be called for, or refuse to submit its books and records to inspection, as provided in section four of this act, such neglect or refusal shall operate as a forfeiture, in each case of such neglect or refusal, of a sum not less than one thousand nor more than five thousand dollars, to be recovered by the Attorney-General of the United States in the name and for the use and benefit of the United States; and it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior, in all such cases of neglect or refusal as aforesaid, to inform the Attorney-General of the facts, to the end that such forfeiture or forfeitures may be judicially enforced.

SEC. 6. This act shall apply to any and all persons or corporations into whose hands either of said railroads may lawfully come, as well as to the original companies.

SEC. 7. This act shall take effect on and after the first day of July, anno Domini eighteen hundred and seventh-eight.

Approved, June 19, 1878.

EXHIBIT NO. 17 TO STIPULATION.

Exhibit No. 9 to the Answer should be corrected in the following particulars:

1. The introductory clause states that the Exhibit contains "a few instances" of the acceptance by the Interior Department as based for lieu land selections, of lands conveyed by the Oregon and California Railroad Company in quantities greater than 160 acres to a single purchaser, and at a price exceeding $2.50 per acre. This leaves the implication that there are other similar instances. As a matter of fact, this Exhibit contains all of the transactions of this character.

2. Exhibit No. 9 to the Answer states that in each instance noted the lieu base deed and lieu selection was approved by the Interior Department. The fact is that a number of these forest lieu selections were pending in the Interior Department at the time the investigation of the subject-matter of this suit was instituted in the year 1907. Upon the recommendation of the Attorney General all of these selections pending at that time were suspended, and still remain under suspension. As to these selections which are under suspension no action has been taken by the Interior Department, and the title to the base lands has not been approved. The selections under suspension are as follows:

All of the 5,042.96 acres conveyed by the Railroad Company to A. B. Hammond Company, described in Exhibit No. 9 to the Answer as Contract No. 5392;

All of the 5,013.18 acres conveyed by the Railroad Company to John Claflin, described in Exhibit No. 9 to the Answer as Contract No. 5393;

All of the 6,214.34 acres (excepting 4,014.34 acres) conveyed by the Railroad Company to Big Blackfoot Milling Company described in Exhibit No. 9 to the Answer as Contract No. 5394;

All of the 3,700 acres conveyed by the Railroad Company to Marcus Daly, described in Exhibit No. 9 to the Answer as Contract No. 5395;

All of the 9,044.35 acres (excepting 2,787.72 acres) conveyed by the Railroad Company to R. S. Moore, described in Exhibit No. 9 to Answer as Contract No. 5401;

With the exceptions above noted Exhibit No. 9 to the Answer is correct.

EVIDENCE

Whereupon, It is further certified that in addition to the foregoing "Stipulation as to the Facts" there was duly taken within the time allowed by order of the court, by and before M. A. Fleming, Special Examiner, duly appointed to take and report the testimony herein on behalf of the complainant and the said defendants and appellants in said cause, further and additional evidence in words and figures as follows:

Whereupon, Counsel for defendants objected to any testimony being taken in this cause, on the ground that a court of equity has no jurisdiction and that this court has no jurisdiction to hear and determine the matters in issue.

TESTIMONY FOR COMPLAINANT.

Whereupon W. W. COTTON, called as a witness on behalf of the United States being first duly sworn, testified: That he has resided at Portland, Oregon, for 22 years and is now (December 8, 1911) secretary of the Oregon & California Railroad Company and has been such since September 15, 1904; that his predecessor in office was George H. Andrews and that his first official relation with the Oregon & California Railroad Company was his position as secretary; that he has also been a director of the Oregon & California Railroad Company) but occupied no other position; that he does not know exactly whether he has been an employe or not of the Southern Pacific Company; that he received no salary from that Company of any kind, but for a given period—exactly how long he does not know—the Southern Pacific Company paid a portion of his salary to the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company for part of the work he was doing for the Southern Pacific Company; that he never received, directly, any salary from the Southern Pacific Company or the Oregon & California Railroad Company and no salary as secretary of the Oregon & California Railroad Company. He was secretary, director and general attorney of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company from the time of its organization in 1896 and prior to that time had been secretary of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company and was attorney for E. McNeill, receiver, and also for S. H. H. Clark and others, receivers of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company prior to that date. From September, 1889, to October 15, 1893, he was attorney for the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, then operating the lines of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company under lease; he is the general attorney of the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation Company and its assistant secretary, also held similar positions with some subsidiary corporations of Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company. As secretary of the Oregon & California Railroad Company has custody of its corporate records, including the record of the minutes of its directors' meetings and stockholders' meetings and he has in his possession six volumes of these records: Volume 1 commencing on the 17th day of March 1870, Volume 2 commencing with a continuation of the meeting of December 14, 1878, Volume 3 commencing June 4, 1883, Volume 4 commencing September 19, 1887, Volume 5 continuation of meeting of May 6, 1895, Volume 6 meeting of April 10, 1906. And he has the original triplicate of the Articles of Incorporation of the Oregon & California Railroad Company which the statute required should be filed with the secretary of the corporation; also that he has in his custody the corporate records of the old West Side Oregon Central Railroad Company. Whereupon it was stipulated that Mr. Luther F. Steel may produce for the inspection and use of counsel in this case all the corporate records in the possession of the Secretary of the Oregon & California Railroad Company relating to the Oregon Central (West Side), Oregon Central (East Side) and the Oregon and California Railroad Company. Whereupon, the witness further testified that said Steel was his clerk and in personal charge of all these records; and that he (witness) was about to go away from Portland for an extended absence, that is, to be absent for at least five months, and that he would turn over to said Steel, as his confidential clerk, all records, documents, stock ledgers and other papers in his custody as secretary of these corporations, so that said Steel might identify them if subpoenaed to produce them in evidence in this case. The witness further testified that he identified as the records of these various corporations the documents, and books that he would turn over to Mr. Steel. Whereupon it was stipulated that no question would be raised as to the identification of such documents, books and records.

Whereupon, said witness upon cross-examination further testified: That he received from George H. Andrews, his predecessor, as secretary of the Oregon and California Railroad Company the corporate records of that Company, identified by him, and also the corporate records of the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Portland, known in this record as West Side Company, and also the corporate records of the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Salem, known as Oregon Central East Side, and that he received a large number of other papers all covered by a receipt; that he was not secretary of the Oregon Central (West Side) or Oregon Central (East Side) and never has been; that as a matter of fact there is no corporate officer of the Oregon Central (West Side) or Oregon Central (East Side) at the present time that he knows of; that his leave of absence is on account of serious illness from which he has just now recovered; that he has no official relation with the Southern Pacific Company at this time (December 8, 1911) excepting that he is statutory attorney in fact upon whom process can be served; that he has never been a member of its Board of Directors or a corporate officer, but was a stockholder for a short time.

Whereupon L. F. STEEL, called as a witness on behalf of the United States, being first duly sworn testified: That he is associated with W. W. Cotton and is the same person referred to in the testimony of W. W. Cotton in whose custody Mr. Cotton would leave the records of the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Portland known as the West Side Company, the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Salem, known as the East Side Company, and the Oregon & California Railroad Company, and witness now produces the records of the directors and stockholders meetings of the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Portland, known as the West Side Company and of the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Salem, known as the East Side Company. Whereupon it was admitted by counsel for the defendants that said records so produced were the corporate records of said Companies. Whereupon the witness further testified that he thought he possibly could not produce the original triplicate of the Articles of Incorporation of the Oregon & California Railroad Company that was filed with the Secretary of the Company but would make a search for the same so that he could either produce said documents or testify that it cannot be produced.

Whereupon the complainant offered in evidence the complete records of the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Portland, known as the West Side Company, produced and identified by the witness L. F .Steel, heretofore marked by the Examiner for identification "Government's Exhibit 100-A" and also the records of the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Salem, known as the East Side Company, produced and identified by the witness L. F. Steel, heretofore marked by the Examiner for identification "Government's Exhibit 100-B" with the understanding that the originals might be withdrawn and copies substituted and read into the records, which said "Government's Exhibit 100-A" is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of Evidence and identified herein as "Government's Exhibit 100-A" and which said "Government's Exhibit 100-B" is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified herein as "Government's Exhibit 100-B."

Whereupon JOSEPH GASTON, called as a witness on behalf of the United States being first duly sworn, testified; that his full name is Joseph Gaston and he resides at 440 Sixteenth Street, Portland, Oregon, and has lived at Portland for 44 years; was born in 1833 at Loydsville, Belmont County, Ohio; that he spent a year or two occasionally on his farm in Washington County, but considered Portland his home all the time; that he left Ohio in 1862 at the age of 29 and came direct to Oregon, settling at Jacksonville, Jackson County, Oregon, and lived there until the year 1865, when he moved to Salem; that he studied law and was admitted to the bar before he left Ohio and that he practiced law in Jackson County, Oregon, and for a while in Marion County, after he came to Salem; that he moved from Jacksonville to Salem and lived at Salem until 1868, when he moved to Portland and since that time, with the temporary absences mentioned, Portland has been his home; that in addition to practicing law at Jacksonville and Salem, he was engaged in newspaper work, temporarily editing the "Jacksonville Sentinel" for a salary and at Salem the "Oregon Statesman" for a salary; that he is the Joseph Gaston who was the first President of the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Portland (West Side) and was intimately connected with the whole railroad history of the State of Oregon and that he first became interested in the subject of constructing a railroad in Oregon under the following circumstances:

In the autumn of 1863 a surveying party making a reconnaisance or preliminary survey for a railroad from Marysville in California to the Columbia River, came to Jacksonville on their way north from California and there, not having paid their men, they were stranded and stopped there. And in their troubles to pay their men they came to me to help them out in some way, and I heard all their stories and consulted with various citizens of Jackson County, and finally took up the proposition of taking care of the men until the next spring, and raising some money to continue this survey northward from Jacksonville to Portland, or the Columbia River.

That there were three men, Simon G. Elliott, George H. Belden and A. C. Barry in charge of that surveying party; there were eight men besides these three men who were actively engaged in the work of surveying, and A. C. Barry is the same man who afterwards continued the survey in Oregon. Barry was then a floater in Oregon, but his home residence was in Danville, Illinois. Mr. Elliott was a Californian. Mr. Belden was a citizen of Portland. Belden was a competent engineer. Mr. Elliott claimed to be, but witness does not think he had any qualifications for the place and Mr. Barry was not a surveyor. He was a lawyer that had been in the army fighting the rebels, got wounded and retired, coming out to Oregon. There was no progress made as to the survey during the Fall of 1863; after the men arrived at Jacksonville they simply stayed there and he (witness) subsisted them until the next spring. A dispute arose between Elliott and Belden as to who should control the survey from Jacksonville to Portland and this controversy was not settled at all. They could not agree. Elliott went back to California and Belden came on to Portland and just left the men there. Neither of them had any further connection with the survey in Oregon. Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

"The question of a railroad from Portland up the Willamette Valley had been discussed by prominent men in Portland, and Mr. Belden being a civil engineer, and anxious to get into that kind of business, had promoted the idea, and finally a survey was made from Portland to Eugene City, on the East Side of the Willamette River, by Mr. Belden, and the expenses of the same was borne by people of Portland. I think Mr. W. S. Ladd was prominently connected with it; and then by people along through the towns and counties on the East Side of the Willamette River. The survey went no further than Eugene City, and their proposition was no further than Eugene City."

Whereupon the witness further testified that it was the plan of Belden and Elliott, when the party reached Jacksonville in October, 1863, that they would continue the survey to Eugene but they could not agree as to who should control the survey between Jacksonville and Eugene City. Belden claimed that he had the right to direct the survey in Oregon, according to the agreement, the same as Elliott had directed the survey in California. They talked it all before him.

The first thing to be done during the winter of 1863-64 preparatory to the continuing of the survey in Oregon, if it was to be continued, was to make a provision for the surveyors, the men who had done the work so far and he secured what was called the old hospital building in Jacksonville, which was already provided with beds and cooking utensils and everything, and vacant, and he put the men in that building to stay there until spring and provided them with food; he then commenced talking with various leading citizens of Jackson County to raise money to pay for the support of the men during the winter and to continue this work next spring on to Portland; he found the farmers generally willing and the first man to contribute any money and actively support the measure was the father of the man now called "Big Bill Hanley"—Michael Hanley—and with his assistance witness raised a subscription of enough money to keep the men during the winter, and to hire a team, and start the men in the spring. For the purpose of making the survey and subsequently building the railroad; he wrote to some men in the northern part of the state and in Jackson County about the matter, but did not get anybody to encourage it much, excepting Judge Shattuck; there were some others but he was the man that encouraged the matter more than any one else although not a capitalist and not a man who could build railroads; they formed a little temporary incorporation under the laws of Oregon, to be a nucleus around which anything that was done might be held together which was called the California & Columbia River Railroad Company and the articles of incorporation of such Company were filed on October 13, 1863 although he does not remember whether that is the exact date or not; the witness thought that J. H. Moores, J. Gaston, S. G. Elliott and Charles Barry were the signers of the articles of incorporation of the California & Columbia River Railroad Company; this Charles Barry was the same person known as A. C. Barry before mentioned; he signed his name then as Charles Barry. His full name is Augustus Charles Barry. There was never any Board of Directors of the California & Columbia River Railroad Company and the organization was never perfected by the election of officers or the subscription of stock, but the survey during the next year, 1864, was conducted in the name of that Company. The receipts for payments to that promotion fund were issued by the witness as secretary of that corporation and in its name. Mr. Barry, outside of the men that did the actual work, was the only man that rendered any particular assistance associated with witness during the survey of the year 1864; of course there were a great many men that he was in correspondence with that helped along in any way they could, but in the sense of leadership Mr. Barry assisted witness in a general way. With the financial support that witness had solicited during the winter of 1863-64 they resumed the survey in the spring of 1864, starting from Jacksonville and proceeding northerly, keeping on northerly to the Columbia River at St. Helens, then the party came back to Portland and commenced a line at Portland and ran up through the line now where the Narrow Gauge road is, or what we call the Narrow Gauge road, through the Sucker Lake pass, and on up into Yamhill County, connecting with the original survey there. Witness does not know exactly what time it was they reached Portland, but thinks it was in September, but is not certain as he was not here then, at this end of it. If the record shows October 1st, 1864 that is about correct. In the meantime witness thinks that he was aware of the fact that Congressman Bidwell of California had introduced in Congress a bill providing for a land grant to aid in the construction of a railroad from the Central Pacific in California to Portland, in Oregon. After the survey was completed Mr. Barry and witness got the engineers together at Salem and they made maps of their survey and witness and Barry prepared a pamphlet on the resources of Oregon to show the practicability of this proposition and had it printed at Salem. Mr. Barry took the maps and all the evidence of the engineers and that pamphlet and went on to Washington City to present the matter to Congress, in view of getting a land grant for the Oregon end of the proposition and witness thinks it was in the month of November 1864 when Mr. Barry went to Washington. Barry remained most of the winter in Washington City. Witness does not know whether the bill introduced by Mr. Bidwell, after some amendment, was the same bill which finally became the Act of July 25, 1866, although he had correspondence with General Bidwell about it and Bidwell advised them to get into that bill in some way and co-operate with him. Witness had correspondence with Cornelius Cole who was a Senator from California. Witness could not say now whether Bidwell's bill was the one that passed Congress. There was a continual effort made to secure the passage of such a bill from some time in 1863 until the final passage of the act of July 25, 1866. Barry did not return to Portland after his trip East in the fall of 1864, but went back to Illinois. He did not have anything further to do with this project after that. The effort to secure the passage of the bill that winter was not successful. Witness did not go to Washington himself after that and he was not in Washington at any time prior to the passage of the Act of July 25, 1866 and took no part in the passage of that Act, except through the local Senators and Representatives in Congress and correspondence, but did endeavor to have the California & Columbia River Railroad Company designated as the corporation to build that part of the railroad in the State of Oregon, but failed in that attempt. Such failure was the trouble between Colonel Barry and Judge Williams who quarrelled over that matter. The fact was that Barry and witness had spent a great deal of time and some money in trying to elect Judge Williams to the United States Senate on his promise that he would stand by us in that railroad proposition, and when he did not do so and backed out of it Barry and Williams had a quarrel in Washington. After the passage of the Act, his first information as to its passage was a letter from Senator Cole that the Act had passed. Cole sent him a copy of the Act and witness then took steps to get men interested and incorporate a Company in Oregon with a view of being designated under the act to receive the land grant. The Oregon Legislature then convening in September of that year, witness prepared articles of incorporation and got them signed and also prepared a bill pledging the State to pay interest on $1,000,000.00 of the Company's bonds and presented the matter to the Legislature. After he had got 25 or 30 names—witness has forgotten now how many—signed to the articles of incorporation witness took them to the office of the Secretary of State and to the office of the County Clerk in Portland and had them filed.

"I told the Secretary of State that I still wanted to use them with members of the Legislature after I had handed them to him to file, and he says, 'Well, I will just make a pencil filing on them, and you can use them,' and handed them back to me.

Q. Now, do you know what date that was?

A. Well, that was some time in September, I cannot remember just exactly.

Mr. Fenton: October 6, 1866.

Q. October 6, 1866?

A. Well, I thought maybe it was September.

Q. To refresh your recollection, I will direct your attention to a certificate of the Secretary of State upon the subject.

A. Yes, well.

Q. You observe that it was October 6, 1866?

A. Yes, I see. When I prepared that article, of course, I referred to the records.

Q. Now, on October 10, 1866, the Legislature of the State of Oregon passed the Joint Resolution No. 13, designating the Oregon Central Railroad Company as the corporation to receive the benefits of the act of 1866. I will ask you to state what you did after you presented these articles to the Secretary of State for filing and he made the pencil notation, down to the time that the Legislature passed this resolution.

A. Why, I was showing these articles of incorporation to the members of the Legislature.

Q. Were you in Salem at the time?

A. I was there every day. I lived there at that time.

Q. Who was Governor of the State at that time?

A. George L. Woods.

Q. Did you present these articles of incorporation to him?

A. I think so.

Q. Did he address to the Legislature a message upon the subject?

A. He did.

Q. I will ask you if you can identify the document that I now present to you as that message?

A. Yes, that is the message. I know there was a matter of some amusement about it. There was some stuff in it here toward the last that was considered buncombe, and very much like George L. Woods."

Whereupon counsel for the United States offered and there was admitted in evidence the special message of the Governor of Oregon identified by the witness and marked by the Examiner "Government's Exhibit 101," which said "Government's Exhibit 101" is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified herein as "Government's Exhibit 101."

Whereupon the witness further testified there was no other corporation being organized by the name of "The Oregon Central Railroad Company" at that time so far as he knew and that the corporation referred to in the message aforesaid was the corporation that the witness was then engaged in organizing as he has described. That he consulted with Governor Woods about his signing that message. The Governor was helping him all he could. Witness presented the Governor with the articles of incorporation that he had prepared and had presented to the Secretary of State and the corporate name of the corporation whose articles of incorporation he had so presented was "The Oregon Central Railroad Company." After the Legislature passed the resolution of October 10, 1866 designating the Oregon Central Railroad Company as the corporation to receive the benefits of the Act of Congress approved July 25, 1866, witness got a certificate under the corporation law signed by a certain number of incorporators designating himself to open the stock books of the Company—the corporation—and after that other signatures were obtained. It was represented to him by Governor Woods, at the time he sent in his message that if he (witness) would see R. R. Thompson with whom he had had a talk—R. R. Thompson was a wealthy man in Portland —and Captain Ainsworth and Simeon G. Reed, that he (the Governor) was satisfied that they would be willing to put up the money to build the first 25 miles of railroad, but that they must be consulted now, and considered, and that if they would sign the articles of incorporation the Governor thought it would be a very fortunate thing, and so witness came to Portland and saw these gentlemen and they did, or at least some of them did sign the articles, or at least agreed to support the proposition. Witness then went back to Salem and reported that he had succeeded in getting these men in. Witness brought to Portland with him the articles of incorporation for the purpose of getting these further signatures and did it with the knowledge and advice of Governor Woods. Witness being asked to examine the articles of incorporation, a copy of which was then exhibited to him, further testified that he thinks it likely that H. W. Corbett was one of the first signatures he secured after the resolution had passed the Legislature, and that it is likely that Joel Palmer, the name preceding the signature of H. W. Corbett was the last signature obtained prior to the passage of the resolution of October 10, 1866. George L. Woods, the Governor, signed these articles of incorporation after the resolution of October 10, 1866, together with the other names which follow the name of H. W. Corbett. When witness came to Portland and saw Mr. Corbett, with whom he was acquainted, Corbett said "Yes, I will sign the articles, but I cannot put any money in," and witness asked Corbett if he would give him a letter to C. H. Lewis. Witness was not acquainted with Lewis. Corbett said "Yes, my signature is good enough for Lewis. You tell him that I sent you there." Witness went down and saw Lewis who said "Well I will sign them because Corbett did, but I won't put any money in." That was the recollection of witness of these two men. He then went to R. R. Thompson. He had a letter from Woods introducing him to Thompson and Thompson and Ainsworth and Reed all got together in a back room and they talked for an hour or so about the matter and then signed. Witness got John McCracken, who is still living, to sign afterwards. Afterwards he got Brown and Cox and witness was the last man to sign. Of these persons who signed the articles of incorporation prior to the passage of Resolution of October 10, 1866, J. S.

Smith was a man who had been prominent in affairs in Oregon. He was a member of Congress in Oregon afterwards and was at that time in Salem and manager of the woollen factory and was a large owner in the woollen factory in Salem. I. R. Moores was private secretary of Governor Woods and a man of some property in Salem and had been in the mercantile business there for years. J. H. Mitchell is the same Mitchell who afterwards became Senator from the State of Oregon and was afterwards identified with the East Side Company. I. R. Moores was present in the State House at Salem at the time witness presented these articles for filing on October 6, 1866. Samuel E. May was Secretary of State at that time and the conversation with reference to filing the same took place between witness and Mr. May on October 6, 1866, I think, in the presence of Mr. Moores, who was I think, assistant to Mr. May and private secretary to the Governor; that is, he was Assistant Secretary of State. Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

"Q. Well, Mr. Gaston, I assumed that you had related, or narrated the conversation between yourself and Mr. May, but to avoid any doubt upon the subject, I will ask you to state fully the conversation between yourself and Mr. May upon that occasion, and whether Mr. Moores was present and overheard it.

A. Well, Mr. Moores was present and heard the conversation. And when I presented the articles of incorporation to him, I think that they were not in an envelope, and that Mr. May opened them, and looked to see if there were three names attached, as he said that that was necessary to form a corporation before the paper could be filed; and after he saw that there was more than three names, he says to me, 'I will just file these in pencil, and give them back to you to use, as you wish.' And he made that filing in pencil, and afterwards admitted that he had made such a filing, because his writing was plainly visible after the trouble commenced between the two corporations. I showed him that and he took back a statement that he said formerly that he had not filed them.

Q. What was that pencil notation? How did it read?

A. Filed October 6.

Q. 1866?

A. 1866.

Q. And upon what part of the document was it?

A. Why, it was on the back part of the folded up document, where the space was left. There was no writing or anything. It was not on an envelope; it was on the document itself.

Q. Now, was it the same day or afterwards that you took them to Governor Woods—took the articles of incorporation to Governor Woods?

A. Well, I couldn't say now whether it was the same day or not, because I was in Woods' office every day that we were working on that proposition.

Q. Well, was it between the time that you had this conversation with Mr. May and the time that the legislature passed the resolution?

A. Oh, yes. I think I took them—I took them to Woods' office immediately afterwards, and then he said he would write this message to the Legislature.

Q. Now, how long were you engaged in soliciting further signatures to those articles of incorporation at Portland? About how long?

A. I think I was only one day in Portland—might have been two. I came down in the steamboat, and stayed a day, and went back, I think the next day.

Q. Can you, by reference to any memorandum or article that you have written upon the subject, state when you returned the articles of incorporation to the office of the Secretary of State?

A. Well, I could not state that exactly.

Q. I say, could you by reference to your articles here?

A. I don't know.

Mr. Fenton: The acknowledgment, Mr. Townsend, will show.

Mr. Townsend: November 21st. It won't do any harm to lead him on that.

Mr. Fenton: No, that is all right.

Q. Everything shows it was November 21st, if that conforms to your general idea?

A. That, of course, I think was about the time.

Q. Now, you did return them to the office of the Secretary of State about November 21st?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you know at the time that any new filing mark was made upon those articles of incorporation?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you know that there was then indorsed upon the articles of incorporation a filing mark as of November 21, 1866?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you know at that time that other articles of incorporation, designating the same corporate name, had been filed as of November 17, 1866?

A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. When did you first learn that?

A. Well, it was, I think, about a month afterwards, after I took the articles back, that I learned of that.

Q. And who informed you?

A. Mr. Moores.

Q. I. R. Moores?

A. Yes, Mr. I. R. Moores.

Q. Did you then go and inspect the articles of incorporation of the other company?

A. I did.

Q. Did you find the fact to be that the other articles appeared of record as having been filed prior to your articles?

A. I did.

Q. The records show that the signers of the other articles of incorporation were J. S. Smith, I. R. Moores, and E. N. Cooke. Was that the same I. R. Moores?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Moores, then, was a signer of your articles?

A. Yes.

Q. And overheard the conversation between yourself and May as to the withdrawal of your articles from the files, and in the meantime signed the other articles, and filed them prior to yours?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. After you learned that articles of incorporation of another company bearing the same corporate name as your own had been filed, just state in a general way what, if any, controversy arose between you, and what resulted, carrying your narrative down to the time that Mr. Elliott arrived and the corporation of April 22, 1867, was attempted to be organized.

A. Well, after I found out that Moores had filed those second articles, we had conversations. I told him that he could not do it; that there could not be two companies in the same name, and that he was aware that the articles I had filed, and had been before the Legislature, had been filed, and that the corporation was in existence under the statute, and that his filing of second articles was a void act—it was impossible for him to make it stick. But I didn't want any trouble, and he professed the same feeling, that he didn't want any trouble over the matter, and we had several meetings to try and compose the differences. And I wouldn't agree to anything but that they should withdraw their articles and proceed on the original filings, as that was the material that was before the Legislature, and that would not be disputed. It went on that way, in an unsettled manner—there was no agreement arrived at until Mr. Elliott—

Q. How about Mr. Clark?

A. Mr. Clark and then Mr. Elliott arrived on the scene, and after that, why, there were these third articles filed."

Whereupon witness further testified that the Mr. Elliott referred to was the same S. G. Elliott who arrived at Jacksonville in the fall of 1863 with the party of surveyors and he appeared in Oregon the next spring, in April 1867, he thinks, and immediately after he came to Salem to see him and Elliott said he had made arrangements for capital to build the road and all that and wanted witness to go in with them and become secretary of the Company. Elliott would be president and they would build the road right off. Witness declined to throw away the old articles. Elliott wanted him to go in on the new articles—the third articles—and finally witness told Elliott if all the incorporators of the Company that witness represented would instruct him so to do, he would do so, but could not stipulate away any rights that they had, so that after Elliott arrived the third set of articles of incorporation, bearing the same corporate name, was prepared and these are the articles of the so-called East Side Company. Nothing was ever done with reference to the second set of articles filed on November 17th other than the mere filing of the same. There never was any organization under that whatever. Witness thinks that the third articles of incorporation were filed about April 22, 1867. The first controversy, after the articles prepared at the instigation of Mr. Elliott were filed, arose from the use of the corporate name and that was the controversy in the newspapers and among the people interested in the building of the railroad in a public way. It was discussed in the newspapers and the first thing witness did after he learned that they had authorized the issue of bonds in the name of the Company of witness was to send a circular to the bankers and brokers in New York, Philadelphia and Boston informing them of the facts of this dispute and that the third Company, or the Salem Company was to his notion, a fraud and a swindle upon any person that would invest in their securities.

fered said exhibit in evidence to which defendants objected as incompetent and as a self serving declaration, which said exhibit is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of the Statement of the Evidence and identified as Government Exhibit 102.

Whereupon witness further testified that in the meantime they had to organize by subscription of one-half the capital stock of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, (West Side) before they (witness and his associates) could elect a Board of Directors. That was done by witness and other parties and they elected a Board of Directors, and proceeded to get their subscriptions and in Portland Captain John C. Ainsworth undertook to canvass himself for stock subscriptions and secure considerable money, which was collected and invested in the construction of the road. Witness does not recollect distinctly with reference to the acceptance of the grant extended by Congress by the Act of July 25, 1866, or as to whether it is not a fact that failing to secure a subscription of one-half of the capital stock of his Company within a reasonable time the incorporators did not sign an assent or acceptance and forward same to the Secretary of the Interior, which was rejected upon the ground that the acceptance had to be by the Directors of the corporation instead of the incorporators.

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

"Q. "Now, the records of the West Side Company, which are now in evidence show that the West Side Company was finally organized on May 24, 1867?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, it is a fact, is it not, Mr. Gaston, that you failed to secure subscriptions to one-half of your capital stock, and to effect an organization you were finally compelled to, and did, subscribe in your own name, for the use of the corporation, a considerable—how much was it? Two Million?

A. Two and a half million.

Q. Two million and a half of the capital stock of the corporation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the organization was effected in that manner?

A. Yes, sir."

Whereupon the witness further testified that it was after that that directors and officers were elected and the assent of the West Side Company adopted and forwarded to the Secretary of the Interior. The subscription by himself was not in the name of the Company like that made by the Salem fellows. It was in his own name, although it was by him as Trustee for the corporation. That O. H. Browning, Secretary of the Interior was part of the Committee that examined witness when he was admitted to the bar and witness wrote him a private letter explaining why these things were done in this way, with the other papers; witness was afraid at the time that they would investigate that subscription he made to the capital stock and might question it and witness wrote Brownell a private letter explaining that all to him, with the assent of the Company which was forwarded. The Directors of the West Side Company were elected at the time the first stockholders meeting was held in May, 1867 and they proceeded to elect officers. Witness was elected first president and W. C. Whitson secretary, and speaking generally, from that time on until 1870 witness represented the West Side Company in a general way in its controversy with the East Side Company and its other dealings. Down to the time that Mr. Holladay became identified with the East Side Company in September 1868, John H. Mitchell represented them in this controversy and in all the dealings of the East Side Company in Courts and a great deal of the time outside of the Courts, but I. R. Moores was the man in all business transactions. Moores was secretary for a good while, but whether Moores was president at that time or whether George L. Woods was president he could not say. After witness and his associates got the line located for construction purposes as far as Fulkerson Gap in Polk County, they filed a map showing the exact line, in compliance with the formal requirements of the Act of July 25, 1866. It is my recollection that it was the Fulkerson Gap, but it might have been the other Gap. Witness thinks the date, alleged in the bill of complaint and admitted by the answer that the map that he speaks of was filed on August 20, 1868 in the office of the Secretary of the Interior is correct. During the year 1867 witness canvassed among the people of Washington and Multnomah Counties for subscriptions to the stock, and anything to get donations of land or anything that would give the Company a showing of property on which it could get money. Witness put in the time that way and after he quit, Captain Ainsworth took up the work and got subscriptions to the stock among the business men of Portland and the work of soliciting subscriptions to the capital stock was continued after what he considered to be the organization in May 1867. He did not have any other business and prosecuted that as diligently as he could. Nothing was done during the year 1867 in the way of construction work, and nothing was done in the way of construction until after Captain Ainsworth got some $50,000, he thinks it was, subscribed in Portland, it might not have been more than $25,000, but they were all cash subscriptions and when that was completed, the Company commenced work. There was nothing done during the year 1867 by the East Side Company in the way of construction, or preparation for construction, and witness thinks the East Side Company did not succeed in getting any subscriptions among the people. What efforts the East Side Company made he does not know, but Elliott went east after their organization, that has been described and endeavored to raise money there by the sale of these bonds that they offered. This general controversy that he has spoken of as to the right of the East Side Company to use the corporate name of the Oregon Central Railroad Company was carried on throughout the year 1867, but was not so bitter as the succeeding year. The West Side Company broke ground on the 15th of April, 1868, and the East Side Company the next day. Witness further testified that as a result of his work, with the assistance of Mr. Ainsworth, the financial means of the West Side Company for carrying on the work of construction at the time it commenced construction on April 15, 1868, both as a cash donation and guarantees of interest on bonds etc. was as follows: "The most important item in the assets of the Oregon Central Railroad Company (West Side) was ten blocks of land here in the north end of the City, donated by the Couch Estate on condition that we make that the terminus of the line. Then there were various pieces of land in South Portland donated—Judge Marquam, I think, donated some, and other parties; and then there was the subscription list of Captain Ainsworth, which was immediately available, and probably was more important than any of them, because it was ready cash. We didn't have any cash in the treasury—never had any there—but we had these assets. Then in Washington County a great many men had made donations of land. There was one piece of land donated that is now inside of the town of Hillsboro, that was sold. It wasn't sold for very much then, but it was a valuable piece of land; and there were other tracts of land around over the country. And Mr. Newby had succeeded in getting donations of land himself, and Robert Kinney, I think, to the amount of about $12,000 at McMinnville. Altogether I suppose that these items amounted in value to $100,000."

Whereupon witness further testified that during the same session of the Legislature that adopted the resolution of October 10, 1866, it passed an Act guaranteeing the interest on a million dollars of the Company's bonds, but witness thought the conditions of that Act were that as each 20 miles of road was constructed the Company would get so much of these bonds guaranteed. There was a guarantee by the City of Portland of interest on $250,000 of bonds and a like guarantee by Washington County of $50,000 of bonds and $75,000 of bonds by Yamhill County. This in a general way constituted the available and prospective assets of the West Side Company. The bonds, of course, were available as they constructed the road, the other matters they had in hand and could deal with. The East Side Company, in a general way, did not have anything at the time it commenced construction. It had no money, no subscriptions to stock that were available, no donations of land or anything else that he ever knew of. The West Side Company commenced construction at a place on Carter Street in South Portland. As to the assets of the East Side Company, Elliott had gone east on the basis of what his Company had done to raise means there. He succeeded in buying two locomotives of someone in the East and in getting rails for 5 miles of track, and these were sent out to Portland. The freight was not paid. Nothing was paid but they were shipped and it looked as if the East Side Company owned them. After they got the bills of lading for the rails and locomotives they went to B. Goldsmith in Portland and borrowed $20,000 and on that money they commenced work very close to where the car shops of the Southern Pacific are located on the East Side of the Willamette River in East Portland. It was then out in the country. There was no town there then but that piece of land had been donated to them on condition that they would start there and make their track there, or shops, or something. He thinks it was in Tibbetts Addition, about one mile this side of the car shops. Mr. Tibbetts made the donation. It was on his land and he took a very active part for the East Side Company. During the year 1868 the West Side Company built the big bridges on the first five miles and graded the first five miles of track and the East Side Company, during 1868, commenced in East Portland, built a little showing of track along there and along out on their line up towards Oregon City, but he don't know how much work they had done because he never saw it. During the year 1868 the controversy continued between the East Side and West Side Companies. This controversy was carried on by witness and his associates undertaking to stop the East Side Company in every way they could. The East Side Company had located its right of way this side of Oregon City across a man's land that would not consent and they got this man to assist the West Side Company in fighting the East Side Company and the attorneys of the West Side Company answered for this man, denying that the East Side Company was a corporation. The East Side Company did not try the case, but made a new survey and went around the man's land and they got rid of it in that way. Then the West Side Company brought a suit in Marion County Circuit Court to enjoin the East Side Company from the use of the corporate name. Richard Williams acted as attorney for the West Side Company and Judge Boise declined to grant any relief on the ground that no pecuniary damages had been alleged or shown by the West Side Company, (and another reason was that he did not see such men as W. S. Ladd sitting around interested in the case,) so he turned the West Side Company down. The West Side Company questioned the incorporation of the East Side Company at Portland in Multnomah County. District Attorney Mulkey brought an information questioning their right to act as a corporation, this being a quo warranto proceeding. On some technicality Judge Upton denied the writ. Judge Upton had been down to the office of the West Side Company and wanted Captain Ainsworth to take some interest in it, as this was an important matter and Ainsworth wanted to know what sort of interest they could take. Upton said they could give him some of their bonds. Ainsworth told Upton that they were not in that kind of business. They did not get any decision from Upton on their side of the case. It was then concluded that they would bring the case of Newby—William T. Newby had a son in San Francisco who was a lawyer—and they assigned to him a bond and upon this a suit was commenced before Judge Deady, and this suit was prosecuted until Deady made his decision that the East Side Company had no right to use the corporate name of the West Side Company and knocked them out. In addition to legal proceedings which he and his associates caused to be instituted, this general controversy was also carried on by public meetings, circulars and newspaper articles. They not only published from time to time over the authority of the Company statements respecting the East Side concern and its illegitimacy but especially pamphlets. The East Side Company published a pamphlet and the West Side Company published a reply to it, but the newspapers on the West Side of the Willamette River, with one exception, took up the controversy and espoused the cause of the West Side Company while the newspapers of the East Side of the River, if they said anything, were generally in favor of the East Side Company on their side of the River. The most of them did not say anything in behalf of the East Side Company. In addition to that public meetings were held at Corvallis and other points and witness attended the meetings generally representing his Company but some of them were attended by Mr. Newby and some by Lair Hill who was one of the attorneys for the West Side Company. John H. Mitchell and Mr. Elliott represented the East Side Company and attended some of those meetings. The West Side Company projected its line of railroad on the West Side of the Wlilamette River and the East Side Company on the East Side of the Willamette River and these two names East Side and West Side had reference to the Willamette River. In a general way the nature of this controversy between the East and West Side Companies and the particular questions that were discussed in the newspaper articles, in public meetings and otherwise, were two main points. First, that the East Side Company was not a corporation but a fraud; that it was a violation of the law and it had no legal existence and was simply a nuisance in the way of the West Side Company in carrying out its legitimate work and that it was injuring the prospects of the State and the Company in getting the land grant, and that the West Side Company was really entitled to that land grant. These were the three points that were brought up everywhere and discussed. Of course the personality of the parties engaged was to some extent involved and there were a good many bitter things said on both sides. The East Side Company's contention, in a general way, was that the West Side Company had not complied, that they never were legally organized in time to receive that designation, and therefore never had any right to the land grant, and that after, of course, they were recognized by the Act of Congress of April 10, 1869, that they had as much right to contend for the land grant as the West Side Company had. Witness identified "Government's Exhibit 103" as one of the circulars that was sent out on behalf of the West Side Company, signed by witness as its president, in connection with that controversy. This was distributed to the extent of thousands of them, sent to all the leading men in Oregon, to banking houses, brokers and railroad material men in Eastern Cities and was issued and circulated with the authority of the West Side Company.

Whereupon witness identified the document that was presented to him as a circular printed by the East Side Company during that same controversy marked "Government's Exhibit 104." The last named document is dated 1868 but is not signed by any one at all but was circulated by the Salem people. The witness identified a memorandum on the back of this circular in his own writing that says it was about May 1, 1868, and refreshing his recollection by this notation says that the circular was published and circulated about May 1, 1868, generally. It was sent to a great many people all over the Willamette Valley. Whether it was circulated outside of the State witness has no means of knowing, but there were a great many copies sent to them from friends of the West Side Company up in the Willamette Valley.

Whereupon the complainant offered in evidence "Government's Exhibit 103," to which defendants objected as immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent and particularly in this that it is a self serving declaration and not competent to prove the alleged facts recited therein and does not appear to have been authorized by the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Portland, heretofore marked by the Examiner for identification "Government's Exhibit 103, and which said "Government's Exhibit 103" is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified as "Government's Exhibit 103."

Whereupon the witness further testified as to "Government's Exhibit 104," that he had no definite knowledge or authority from which he could say that the same was published and circulated with the knowledge of the East Side Company, but witness believed it was so published and circulated and everybody believed it but there was no definite knowledge or authority that he could refer to, to say that the East Side Company had authorized it. The same general arguments appearing in this circular "Government's Exhibit 104" were made by John H. Mitchell and others representing the East Side Company in the public discussions that took place between witness and others representing the West Side Company, and this circular represents the arguments that were used against the West Side Company. The East Side Company had some men at work right straight along from the time it commenced construction during the year 1868, but he does not know how many men there were, there never was a very large force. They got out of money and had to sell the locomotives in California to continue the work. Mr. Elliott was in charge of the work on the East Side Railroad at that time.

Whereupon the complainant offered in evidence "Government's Exhibit 104" heretofore marked by the Examiner for identification "Government's Exhibit 104" and which said "Government's Exhibit 104" is hereinafter set out and described and made part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified as "Government's Exhibit 104."

To which defendants objected as heresay, incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant and as containing self-serving declarations, and not proven to have been authorized by the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Salem (East Side Company) and that such document cannot be used to prove substantive facts therein stated.

Whereupon witness further testified that there was another pamphlet after that on behalf of the East Side Company distributed during the year 1868, and witness identified "Government's Exhibit 105" as such circular or pamphlet. It was generally circulated throughout Western Oregon, particularly the Willamette Valley and witness thinks it was taken to Washington City.

Whereupon the complainant offered in evidence "Government's Exhibit 105" heretofore marked by the Examiner for identification "Governments Exhibit 105" and which said "Government's Exhibit 105" is hereinafter set out and described and made part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified as "Government's Exhibit 105" to which defendants objected as incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant and a self-serving declaration incompetent to prove any substantive fact stated therein and as not shown to have been authorized by the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Salem (East Side Company.) These were the only two statements that witness knew of that were circulated ostensibly on behalf of the East Side Company during the year 1868. Elliott had charge of the work on the East Side road from the beginning under a contract of construction given to A. J. Cook & Company, which A. J. Cook & Company was a myth; there was no one but Elliott. It was a contract with himself. Elliott was in charge of the work throughout 1868 but when Holladay came up to Oregon and took over the affairs Elliott remained a director of construction forces for a short time but they soon quarreled and Elliott was ousted and had nothing further to do with the Company and as to financial affairs he had nothing to do with that after Holladay came. Elliott was superseded entirely by Holladay. Witness cannot tell the date Holladay came, but just as soon as he came to Oregon his financial man was George W. Weidler. He was Holladay's right hand man and made all payments in money after that. Holladay came to Oregon after the East Side Company began construction and after it had graded, as he thinks, as far as the Clackamas River. It was in the latter part of the summer of 1868 witness thinks when Holladay came. Whereupon counsel for complainant and dedefendants agree that it was September 12, 1868.

The general recollection of the witness was the same as shown by the records of the East Side Company, that Holladay took control of the Company by assignment of the contract with A. J. Cook & Company on September 12, 1868. Prior to that time the East Side Company had not, to his knowledge, made any claim to the land grant.

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

"Q. In the circular Government's Exhibit 104, which you say was circulated about May 1, 1868, it is stated as follows: "The charge has been extensively circulated that we are seeking to defraud the West side of the river of a valuable franchise—of State and Government aid—in answer to which we have only to say, that we recognize that the Act of Congress granting lands, and the Act of the last Legislature of Oregon, are both inoperative, from the fact that the terms and stipulations of those Acts have not been, and cannot be, complied with. Any aid to be granted railroad enterprises in Oregon must be re-enacted by both State and General Government, and we have no hesitation in affirming that we claim no grants, privileges, or rights for our Company, we do not desire also extended to the West side of the valley.' I will ask if that represents fairly the general contention urged on behalf of the East Side Company during the controversy, prior to the time that Mr. Holladay became connected with the transaction.

Mr. Fenton: Objected to as immaterial, incompetent, irrelevant and as not binding on either Company.

A. I think it does."

Whereupon witness further testified that the controversy took this direction after Holladay came in that witness and his associates were soon apprised of the fact that Holladay was going to make an effort in the Legislature to have the Company that he was connected with either designated to receive the land grant or measures or action taken leading in that direction. The Legislature met every two years at that time in September, so that there was a session convening in September 1866 and the next session in September 1868 and the matter was carried before the Legislative session which convened in September 1868. Both Companies appeared before the legislature and carried on the fight in the Legislature. The leaders that addressed the legislature on behalf of the Companies were John H. Mitchell for the Salem Company, the East Side Company, and James K. Kelly on behalf of the West Side Company. Holladay was in Salem and kept open house. Witness only knew from hearsay the manner of Holladay's campaign, he never was at his caravansary, but Holladay had quite a number of hired men there to work with members of the legislature, and after witness sold out his interest to Holladay the latter admitted to witness what Holladay had done there to beat them.

Whereupon witness being asked what Holladay said, counsel for defendants objected to that as not binding on the East Side Company as a corporation and as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Whereupon the witness answered that "he told me that it cost him $35,000 to get that action of the legislature in behalf of the East Side Company, and he told me the sums of money that he paid to some of the members of the legislature."

Whereupon counsel for defendants moved to strike out this answer as incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant.

Whereupon the witness further testified that this statement was made to him in the fall of 1870, or sometime between July and the fall, witness cannot tell the exact time. It was in one of his interviews in Holladay's house on Third Street and Holladay was at that time president of the Oregon & California Railroad Company.

Whereupon counsel for defendants renewed the motion to strike out this testimony upon the ground that the declaration of Holladay could not be binding upon the Oregon and California Railroad Company and that it was not authorized.

Whereupon said witness further testified that this fight that was carried on in the legislature in the fall of 1868 finally resulted in the resolution of October 20, 1868, which in terms rescinded the former designation of the West Side Company and made a new designation in favor of the East Side Company. When the fight in the legislature started, the work of construction continued by both Companies. Witness thought that "Government's Exhibit 105" was not circulated on behalf of the East Side Company until after the legislature adjourned. That is his recollection. If it was circulated, it was circulated secretly. He did not see it until after the legislature adjourned. After the legislature adjourned, the fight was carried into Congress. The East Side Company employed Mitchell and witness thinks Chadwick to go to Washington City and present the matter there before Congress and the West Side Company sent Simeon G. Reed to represent its interests but witness did not go and was not in Washington during the time the matter was before Congress. He did not go until after the fight, until after they had got the enabling act passed Congress, meaning the Act of April 10, 1869, and after they had practically complied with the act in constructing 20 miles of road. Then, witness went on to Washington City to get the new grant from Portland to McMinnville with a branch to Astoria. He went on to Washington in December 1869, and stayed there until May, 1870, but had only hearsay knowledge as to whether "Government's Exhibit 105" was used before Congress. He heard what he knew from Mr. Reed, their agent there. Reed represented that they had given copies of this to all the members of Congress and Senators.

Whreupon counsel for defendants moved to strike out the answer of the witness as hearsay. Witness further testified that he had a conversation with Senator Corbett on this subject and he told him the same thing but does not recollect that he ever had a talk with Mr. Holladay about it.

Whereupon counsel for defendants renewed his motion to strike out all of said testimony as hearsay and incompetent.

Whereupon the witness further testified that there was a circular prepared on behalf of the West Side Company for use before Congress in reply to "Government's Exhibit 105" and which was used before Congress, also with an additional statement made by Mr. Reed and thinks—but does not know—some other person joined with Mr. Reed in that statement.

Whereupon witness identified that circular as "Government's Exhibit 106" and testified that he wrote the circular himself after he had seen "Government's Exhibit 105." That he had "Government's Exhibit 105" before him when he prepared "Government's Exhibit 106" and it was prepared for use before Congress and was prepared in January 1869. January 19, 1869 is approximately the correct date and it was authorized by the Company after he had written it.

Whereupon complainant offered in evidence "Government's Exhibit 106" to which counsel for defendants objected as incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant and as a self-serving declaration in favor of the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Portland, West Side, and as not competent to prove any probative or ultimate fact therein stated and as a narrative of alleged past events, as not authorized by the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Portland and as not used or circulated among members of Congress prior to vesting of the rights of the Oregon Central (East Side) to the grant of July 25, 1866, by the designation made by the joint resolution of October 20, 1868.

Whereupon the complainant offered in evidence "Government's Exhibit 106" heretofore marked by the Examiner for identification "Government's Exhibit 106" which said "Government's Exhibit 106" is hereinafter set out and described and made part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified as "Government's Exhibit 106."

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

"Q. Well, the controversy in Congress finally resulted in the passage of the act of April 10, 1869?

Mr. Fenton: Objected to as calling for a conclusion and not for a fact.

A. Yes, sir."

Whereupon the witness further testified that after the act of April 10, 1869 was passed the East Side Company pushed its construction work more vigorously than before and the West Side Company completed temporary grading from the end of the five mile post on its line to the town of Hillsboro during that summer, but the West Side Company did not lay any track whatever prior to December 25, 1869, and the East Side Company completed its first section of 20 miles on December 25, 1869. He does not recollect doing anything on behalf of the Company with reference to the land grant under the Act of July 25, 1866 after the West Side Company failed to complete its first section of railroad within the time required by the granting act. If they did anything it has escaped his memory; that is, anything with reference to the land grant. The condition of the financial resources of the West Side Company in the fall of 1869 were very limited. It received its financial backing from the sources witness has already mentioned and the Washington county people had collected some money on their stipulation to pay interest on the bonds, which was turned over to the Company. The City of Portland had collected $10,000 or $12,000 on account of the interest it had stipulated to pay and it was turned over to the Company, and the Yamhill people, he thinks, never levied any tax to collect the interest on bonds they had endorsed. The Company, by its own officers, carried on the work of construction on the West Side Railroad down to the fall of 1869. They had no contract with any one except the contract for the construction of the bridges which had been let to Stephen Coffin who had, under his contract, constructed the bridges on the first five miles of road. Witness had forgotten, but they had a contract with S. G. Reed & Company to construct, he thinks, 150 miles of road, which the witness thinks was dated in the fall of 1868, and this was one of the reasons that Reed went on to Washington to get the land grant to support that contract. After the act of April 10, 1869 was passed this contract was abandoned, and the Company was again thrown on its own resources. The Reed contract came to be entered into in this way. While witness was engaged in directing the work and expending the money that they had on the West Side road, Edwin Russell, manager of the Bank of British Columbia, said to him that he, Russell, was going back to London on a visit and if witness would give him a power of attorney he would see if he could raise any money for him in London on his bonds. Witness did not think there was much probability of his being able to do anything, but talked the matter over with Captain Ainsworth who thought, with himself, that they could not raise any money in any money market on their bonds as long as they were in litigation in the way they were with the East Side Company, but they decided that it would do no harm anyway and so they made out the power of attorney to Mr. Russell to sell $500,000 of the Company's bonds in London. Russell went on there and to their great surprise within 30 days after he reached London cabled back that he could sell $500,000 worth of the Company's bonds at sixty five cents on the dollar cash and asked him to answer promptly whether they would take it. Witness showed the cable to Ainsworth who said to give him 24 hours to think about it and witness replied "All right," and went out to the country and gave him his 24 hours. Next day, not receiving any answer from witness Russell, knowing that Ainsworth was interested with him in the road cabled Ainsworth who replied declining the offer. Witness very greatly regretted this action and told Ainsworth that he thought it was a great mistake, that that would put the Company in funds to finish their 20 miles of road and get the land grant and Ainsworth said if they sold bonds at that rate they never could sell any more. On account of the disappointment to witness in that London transaction Ainsworth induced Reed to go into the contract to construct 150 miles of the road. When Mr. Reed came back from Washington and failed to get the legislation in shape that he wanted, or prevent the legislation of the East Side Company, the West Side Company abandoned the contract with S. G. Reed & Company and it was apparent to witness then that they would not be able to build the road in time. That is the first section of its railroad in compliance with the Acts of Congress. Subsequently they took steps to get another land grant. With the means he had he kept up work on the road until the temporary grading was finished to Hillsboro and then Captain Ainsworth gave witness $1,000 to go back to Washington and see if he could get a subsequent land grant in aid of the West Side Company. Before he went back he had a talk with Senator Williams upon the subject.

Whereupon witness being asked to give the substance of that conversation, it was stipulated between counsel for the parties that this testimony should be subject to the objection of the counsel for defendants as incompetent, irrelevant, immaterial and as hearsay.

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

"A. Well, in Congress the senatorial representation from Oregon was divided. Mr. Corbett was an active friend of the West Side Company, and Mr. Williams assumed friendship to the East Side Company, and was instrumental in getting through the act of April 10, 1869; and for that action of Senator Williams, he was very generally condemned on the West Side of the river in the Willamette Valley, by the West Side people, and by a great many men in Portland. And when he came back to Oregon, he felt that more than ever and he came and had an interview with me at my office in Portland, and to defend himself for his course in Congress, and then wound up by saying, 'Now, I will show you my good faith and friendship for your company by doing everything I can to get you another grant,' and advising me to go to Washington, and be there and render him any assistance I could."

Whereupon the witness further testified that this conversation took place about the 20th of December, 1869, Congress meeting on the first Monday in December. Witness went to Washington pursuant to the suggestion of Senator Williams. Captain Ainsworth gave him $1,000 to defray his expenses there and witness went to Washington and arrived there about 15 days after Congress convened in December, 1869, and after that time the West Side Company never made any claim to the grant under the Act of July 25, 1866. Witness stayed in Washington until May 1870, but as soon as the second land grant bill was passed on May 4, 1870 he left Washington and came back to Oregon, leaving 4 or 5 days after May 4, 1870. During that winter, for the purpose of procuring the passage of that bill, witness met with the Committee on public lands repeatedly and discussed the proposition. The bill was drawn up by Judge Olney. When witness got to Washington he found that Cyrus Olney, of Astoria, had gone there for the purpose of getting a land grant bill in aid of a railroad to Astoria. Witness had not heard of that before leaving Oregon, but when he arrived at Washington Judge Williams told him of that and told him to have an interview with Judge Olney and combine their interests; that it would not do to have two bills, one for his Company and one for Olney's Company, and that they must get together and combine their interests and work together. Witness did that. He had an interview with Judge Olney and they immediately agreed upon a bill for a land grant from Portland to Eugene City on the West Side of the Willamette River, with a branch from the main line to Astoria, from the vicinity of Forest Grove, and that bill was introduced by Judge Williams. After it was introduced, Mr. Holladay came on there and wanted to get a land grant for himself from Portland to Tacoma and the Northern Pacific people immediately commenced to "oppose our bill" with the belief that "we could knock out Holladay" because they wanted the land grant between Portland and Tacoma. Witness had numerous interviews with the representatives of the Northern Pacific and finally agreed with them that witness and his associates would work for the Northern Pacific land grant and the Northern Pacific representatives would work for theirs and put Holladay out of the ring. Witness then had meetings with the Senate and House committees on public lands and this bill for their Company was drawn up by Judge Olney and before the House Committee. Witness had frequent interviews with George W. Julien, who was chairman of the Public Lands Committee as to the features of that bill. Witness worked also with members of Congress. Sam Cox was an old friend of his from Ohio and John A. Bingham likewise. Bingham made a speech in the house for the bill and Sam Cox, notwithstanding his old friendship, and while witness had helped elect him to Congress, opposed the bill. He did not do it very bitterly but said he had to maintain his record that he was opposed to land grants. Witness had to talk to a great many men. The sentiment in favor of land grants to railroads was about dead and that was the last bill that Congress ever passed in favor of land grants to railroads.

"Mr. Fenton: That was May 31, 1870?

Mr. Townsend: May 31, 1870. There was one March 1, 1871, the Texas Pacific.

Mr. Fenton: The one he refers to between Tacoma and Portland, in favor of the Northern Pacific, was May 31, 1870. That is the Northern Pacific Resolution.

A. Well, they were all agreed to at that same time, I think, before the committees. I thought our bill was the last one, and that they got theirs through first."

Mr. Fenton: No, yours was first."

Whereupon the witness further testified that the bill for the second grant which may be called the West Side grant, as originally introduced in Congress called for a grant along the west side of the Willamette River to Eugene and there was another proposition introduced in Congress to extend that grant. After witness had been in Washington two or three weeks or more, B. J. Pengra, of Eugene City, came on and made known to Williams that he wanted the land grant for a railroad over the line of the Oregon Central Military Wagon Road land grant, so as to provide for the construction of a railroad from Winnemucca in Nevada to Eugene City, Oregon. This was somewhat embarrassing, and they all had a meeting that were interested in these things at the house of Tom Fitch, who was a member of Congress from Nevada. Pengra had succeeded in interesting

Fitch in the proposition very much, and it was there agreed—at the house of Fitch—Fitch being Pengra's particular friend in the matter, that Pengra should have a land grant from Winnemucca to Eugene City, and that the West Side road, the Oregon Central Company, should have the land grant from Eugene City to Portland, with the branch from Forest Grove to Astoria, which would satisfy Judge Olney; and the land grant to Eugene would satisfy the old West Side Oregon Central Company; and the land grant from Eugene to Winnemucca would satisfy Pengra and his friends and the stockholders in the Oregon Central Wagon Road. When Holladay came into the field he objected to the land grant going any further than McMinnville, in fact any further than Forest Grove for the reason that it would prevent him, Holladay, from selling his bonds on the East Side road and defeat his enterprise, notwithstanding he would get the old land grant because it would be paralleling his line, and would possibly interfere with his land grant, so that Holladay induced Judge Williams to cut off the West Side land grant at McMinnville, under the promise that after he, Holladay, had sold his bonds, at the subsequent session of Congress, witness and his associates should have the gap between McMinnville and Eugene filled up with an additional grant. The bill providing for the grant from Eugene to Winnemucca was then pending in Congress. Winnemucca is on the Central Pacific, so that the plan would have made a continuous line from Portland to the East. There was a change in the legislation after witness left Washington which had effect upon the future history of the West Side Railroad. Witness left Washington, he thinks, about the 7th or 8th of May and stopped at Wheeling, and at Belmont County, Ohio and then came to Oregon. When he got to Umatilla he received a telegram from Pengra to come back to Washington immediately, that Williams had backed out of his agreement and had introduced an amended bill for Pengra's road, compelling it to connect with the Oregon & California Railroad in the Rogue River Valley and that was the change. That amended bill was brought in in favor of Pengra's road. There was no change in the branch, or Astoria's interest.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

"Q. Well, now what promise of financial assistance, if any, had you had, that was withdrawn from you because of that change in the plan?

A. Well, before we had the meeting at Tom Fitch's house, Pengra brought Mr. C. P. Huntington, who was at the head of the Central Pacific Company over to Washington City to satisfy Judge Williams that he could get the money to build that road; and Huntington authorized the statement, and made the statement there, that if Congress would pass the land grant as Mr. Pengra desired it, and as it was agreed upon at Tom Fitch's house, he would finance the proposition and build the road to Oregon immediately from Winnemucca."

Whereupon witness further testified that the Pengra bill was never passed and no effort was subsequently made to extend the grant of the West Side road from McMinnville to Eugene.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

"Q. Did you have any other prospective financial support than the assurance of Mr. Huntington at the time you returned to Oregon? That is, I mean, of any substantial character?

A. Well, I had a contract with some people in Philadelphia to build the railroad to McMinnville.

Q. And when did you make that contract?

A. While I was in Washington City.

Q. The records of the West Side Company disclose that it was on January 19, 1870. Is that approximately correct?

A. I expect it is. I don't recollect the date."

Q. Well, now, at that time did the West Side Company, as represented by you as its president, have any intention or purpose of claiming any further benefits, making any further claim of benefits, under the act of July 25, 1866?

Mr. Fenton: Objected to as immaterial, and as incompetent, and as not a waiver of any rights which the West Side Company may have obtained by what it did, under what record it had made.

A. No, we never asserted any further rights in the old grant; never expected to get anything from it of interest to us.

Q. And when this contract was made with the Philadelphia people in January, 1870, did that have reference to the former grant, or to the grant that you expected to get?

A. It had reference to the grant we had and what we had promised to get. The Philadelphia people had sent a man over to Washington to see whether we were likely to get what we claimed.

Q. Was that contract an absolute contract, or was it contingent upon your securing the new grant?

A. No, it was an absolute contract. They sent out an agent here to look the ground over afterwards.

Q. Well, now, what became of that contract?

A. Well, it was abandoned when Holladay bought the majority of the stock in the West Side Company."

Whereupon witness further testified that Holladay bought a majority of the stock in the West Side Company in June or July, 1870, shortly after witness returned home from Washington and he was induced to dispose of his interest in the West Side Company because they were in debt very much, and Holladay had bought up claims, and there were threats to bring bankruptcy proceedings against the Company and witness knew that that would be the end of the Company if they did, as they were not in position to pay at that time. Witness had negotiations with Holladay and when they got to that state of affairs he had quite a negotiation with Holladay, through other parties before witness met him and these negotiations finally resulted in a specific proposition that Holladay would give witness $50,000 for his interest in the Company, as he had control of the stock. The proposition was verbal and conveyed to witness by Ben Simpson. Afterwards witness talked the matter over with Holladay for several evenings and Holladay confirmed the proposition Simpson made to him. Simpson was present. They had quite a discussion over the proposition. Witness was in debt on account of railroad business something over $40,000 and wanted these debts cleared off and the question was whether to get Holladay to go into a hard and fast proposition. He would pay the debts and give witness the balance in money, as witness had bought a homestead in King's Addition and wanted to build a house for a home. The proposition was in three parts; that Holladay would pay all the debts of witness and pay him the balance in cash and would keep the witness in the employ of the Company for five years at $250 per month. The debts referred to meant the debts of the West Side Railroad Company, for which witness was responsible. The negotiations finally resulted in an agreement. Holladay agreed to the terms of witness. Holladay first offered to keep witness in the employ of the Company as long as he wanted to stay. There was no trouble about that. And would settle the debts of the Company, but he first wanted witness to take 100 feet square on the southeast corner of Alder and Fourth Streets for the $8,000 cash, but witness declined that. Then Holladay offered him land in the land grant, a township of land, and witness told him he could not give him any; that he did not have any right under the Act to dispose of the land that way. Witness told him that under the provisions of the Act it would have to be disposed of to actual settlers; that he did not propose to go out there and be an actual settler for 160 acres of land. Holladay finally agreed to pay the debts and give him the $8,000 and keep him in his employ, but after it had run a year or so and Holladay had not paid the debts and witness got the proxies of the London stockholders in the company into his possession and elected a Board of Directors, then they had a fight for the possession of the road and the fight was kept up. Judge Shattuck issued injunctions in favor of witness and his associates and Holladay and his associates got injunctions in favor of their side and it was hard to tell who had possession of the road for awhile. They had two boards of directors and two superintendents and Holladay and his associates threw the men of witness and his associates off the trains and their men threw Holladay's men off the trains. Finally Latham of San Francisco, who had raised all the money for Holladay, interfered and arranged with Mitchell, who was coming back from Washington to come up and have the debts paid off. Holladay finally authorized the money to be paid to Colonel Cornelius to pay off the debts and Cornelius went out and paid off all the debts. Another proposition that was in dispute was that Holladay had refused to establish stations at Hillsboro and Forest Grove and wanted to build a town at Cornelius and pull down those two towns, and they had to have that settled, so it was agreed that those two towns were stations and Cornelius paid off all the debts and then the Board of Directors of witness and his associates surrendered and that was the end of the connection of witness with the West Side Company, or the East Side Company either. He never had any connection with railroads afterwards, except to help the Southern Pacific in some of its right of way cases and damage cases and that way. Witness was general freight and passenger agent for the West Side road for several years—three years or more—and had charge of Holladay's real estate companies and edited a daily paper—The Bulletin. Holladay was at the head of the affairs of these two railroads after witness sold out to Holladay. Halsey was Holladay's vice president and George Weidler was a general utility man and they ran the business until the German bond holders sent Mr. Koehler out here and then Holladay did not have so much to say.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

"Q. Now, Mr. Gaston, I want to call your attention briefly to a few of the issues raised by the answer of the defendants in this case, and, supplementing your former testimony, I want you to tell us what you can upon those disputed questions, avoiding repetition, so far as you can, of your former testimony. It is charged in the bill of complaint that a controversy arose between the East Side Company and the West Side Company as to which of the two companies was entitled to the land grant after the resolution of the Legislature of Oregon of October 20, 1868, was passed. The answer admits that a controversy arose, but alleges that it arose at about the time of the incorporation of the East Side Company on April 22, 1867. What is the fact?

A. Why, the controversy arose about the name as soon as the East Side Company was incorporated, and it never stopped until it was apparent that the West Side Company could not earn the land grant. It was a continuing controversy.

Q. As to the name?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But when did the controversy as to which company was entitled to the land grant arise?

A: Well, that arose as soon as the East Side Company appeared in Congress and wanted to put in its—well, as soon as the legislature passed the resolution declaring that we had not received a lawful designation, it was apparent then that they were going to take steps to get the land grant, and the controversy about that arose then.

Q. Prior to that time had they made any claim to the land grant, so far as you know?

A. No; they had disclaimed any claim to the land grant.

Q. Now, the bill of complaint alleges that after the East Side Company procured the passage of the resolution of October 20, 1868, which rescinded the former designation of the West Side Company, and assumed to make a new designation in favor of the East Side Company, the East Side Company applied to Congress for an extension of the time within which it might file an assent. The answer denies that the East Side Company applied to Congress. State what is the fact with reference to that, if you know.

Mr. Fenton: Object to that as incompetent, that the witness could not know, and that his information would only be hearsay, as he was not in Congres, not there, not a member, and did not go to Congress until December, 1869, after the loss of the land grant of July 25, 1866, by the West Side Company.

A. Well, I could only speak from hearsay and public report, that they were taking steps to claim the land grant. That is the way I understood it from my information.

Q. Was the subject discussed in the newspapers at that time here in Oregon?

Same objection.

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Were the proceedings in Congress upon the subject discussed in the newspapers?

Same objection.

A. Oh, yes, they were all published and discussed by everybody interested in those things.

Q. State whether or not the general newspaper discussion disclosed whether representatives of the East Side Company were in Washington soliciting the passage of a new act.

Objected to as hearsay and incompetent.

A. Yes, from time to time there were publications, by telegrams from Mitchell, as to the proceedings as things went along, and letters published as things went along, and when the act was finally passed in their favor, why, Mitchell and Chadwick sent a telegram to the Oregonian that they had gained everything they claimed—something like that.

Mr. Fenton: I object to that as not the best evidence.

Q. Now, did any officer or representative of the East Side Company ever, to your knowledge, dispute or deny any of those reports, or telegrams, or letters?

Objected to as immaterial.

A. No; not that I know anything about, no.

Q. It is also alleged in the bill of complaint, and denied by the answer, that the West Side Company appeared in Congress and opposed the application of the East Side Company for an extension of time. You have already identified the circular that you prepared for use in Congress upon that occasion. Have you any further information upon the subject?

Mr. Fenton: Same objection, and as hearsay.

A. Nothing more than the fact that we had sent Mr. Reed there for that express purpose, of opposing any claims of theirs, and Reed's letters to myself and Ainsworth and others.

Q. Did Mr. Reed ever report to you, or the West Side Company, the circulars or statements which he presented to Congress?

A. He sent me copies. He never made any official report. He sent me copies.

Q. Are these documents the ones that you refer to?

A. Yes. These are the two. I don't know of any others, but these are the two documents that I refer to: one 'Remonstrance' signed by Reed and the other 'Objections' signed by Reed."

Whereupon counsel for complainant requested that these two documents be marked "Government's Exhibits 107 and 108" respectively for identification and the same were so marked and were identified by the witness as the circulars received by him from Mr. Reed, sent from Washington.

Whereupon the complainant offered in evidence "Government's Exhibits 107 and 108," to each of which counsel for defendants objected as incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant, and as self-serving declarations purporting to be made by S. G. Reed, and as incompetent to prove any substantive fact recited or claimed to be stated therein, and as not having been shown to have been authorized by the West Side Company. Which said "Government's Exhibits 107 and 108" are hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified herein as "Government's Exhibits 107 and 108."

Witness was thereupon shown a newspaper clipping and stated that it was a publication of the telegram signed by J. H. Mitchell and S. F. Chadwick, referred to by him in his previous testimony and included in an editorial notice of the matter in the Oregonian.

Whereupon counsel for complainant offered this newspaper publication of the telegram in evidence and asked to read the same into the record instead of identifying the same as an exhibit.

Whereupon counsel for defendants objected to the same as hearsay, incompetent, immaterial, irrelevant and as not binding on any one, waiving objection to the method of identifying the same; which telegram reads as follows:

"Washington, D. C. April 10, 1869.

Editor Oregonian: The East Side Railroad bill has passed both Houses and received the signature of the President. The victory is complete.

J. H. Mitchell. S. F. Chadwick."

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

Q. "Mr. Gaston, the bill of complaint alleges that the West Side Company failed to complete the construction of any of its railroad within the time required by the Act of Congress July 25, 1866, and the Act of Congress of June 25, 1868. The answer denies this fact. Which is correct?

A. Well, it did not construct any railroad within the time required.

Q. The bill of complaint also alleges that the West Side Company abandoned all claim to the East Side grant under the act of July 25, 1866, on or about the month of January, 1870 and in lien thereof applied for and received and accepted a new grant under the act of May 4, 1870. This is denied by the answer. Please state what is the fact.

Mr. Fenton: Objected to as calling for a conclusion, both of law and fact, and as incompetent.

A. The fact was that the company did abandon all claim to the Act of Congress of July, 1866, and accepted the new act of May, 1870, in lieu thereof.

Q. Who represented the West Side Company at that time? Who had authority to say whether the West Side Company should abandon all claim under the Act of July 25, 1866?

Mr. Fenton: Objected to as immaterial, and for the further reason that the record of the witness thus far taken, and his testimony, shows that the West Side Company was unable to complete the first twenty miles required by the Act of July 25, 1866, after the passage of the act of April 10, 1869, and that when that failure occurred Mr. Gaston, for his company and his associates, no longer made any claim to any interest in the grant of July 25, 1866, but applied for another and an independent grant, without regard to the grant of July 25, 1866, after such failure and loss of the East Side grant by failure to construct within time.

A. Why, the board of directors represented the company, and it was decided to apply for a new grant, without any reference to the old grant. There was no condition of abandonment one way or another. It was simply concluded that the company never could earn the grant nor get it, and the thing to do was to get a new grant, if possible.

Q. Mr. Gaston, it is alleged in the bill of complaint that the East Side Company became involved in litigation, questioning the validity of its corporate organization, and because thereof the East Side Company was in effect reorganized under the name of the

"Washington, D. C. April 10, 1869.

Editor Oregonian: The East Side Railroad bill has passed both Houses and received the signature of the President. The victory is complete.

J. H. Mitchell. S. F. Chadwick."

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

Q. "Mr. Gaston, the bill of complaint alleges that the West Side Company failed to complete the construction of any of its railroad within the time required by the Act of Congress July 25, 1866, and the Act of Congress of June 25, 1868. The answer denies this fact. Which is correct?

A. Well, it did not construct any railroad within the time required.

Q. The bill of complaint also alleges that the West Side Company abandoned all claim to the East Side grant under the act of July 25, 1866, on or about the month of January, 1870 and in lien thereof applied for and received and accepted a new grant under the act of May 4, 1870. This is denied by the answer. Please state what is the fact.

Mr. Fenton: Objected to as calling for a conclusion, both of law and fact, and as incompetent.

A. The fact was that the company did abandon all claim to the Act of Congress of July, 1866, and accepted the new act of May, 1870, in lieu thereof.

Q. Who represented the West Side Company at that time? Who had authority to say whether the West Side Company should abandon all claim under the Act of July 25, 1866?

Mr. Fenton: Objected to as immaterial, and for the further reason that the record of the witness thus far taken, and his testimony, shows that the West Side Company was unable to complete the first twenty miles required by the Act of July 25, 1866, after the passage of the act of April 10, 1869, and that when that failure occurred Mr. Gaston, for his company and his associates, no longer made any claim to any interest in the grant of July 25, 1866, but applied for another and an independent grant, without regard to the grant of July 25, 1866, after such failure and loss of the East Side grant by failure to construct within time.

A. Why, the board of directors represented the company, and it was decided to apply for a new grant, without any reference to the old grant. There was no condition of abandonment one way or another. It was simply concluded that the company never could earn the grant nor get it, and the thing to do was to get a new grant, if possible.

Q. Mr. Gaston, it is alleged in the bill of complaint that the East Side Company became involved in litigation, questioning the validity of its corporate organization, and because thereof the East Side Company was in effect reorganized under the name of the Oregon & California Railroad Company. The answer denies that the East Side Company became involved in any litigation questioning the validity of its incorporation. You have referred in your testimony to two proceedings of that character. Can you call to mind any other proceedings?

Mr. Fenton: Objected to as immaterial and not the best evidence.

A. I think I have stated that proceedings were instituted against the East Side Company to prevent them from using our corporate name, and to dissolve their alleged corporation, under the quo warranto acts of Oregon, in the State courts. Now, if I did not mention the proceeding by the bondholder Newby in the United States Court, why, that—

Q. You did.

A. Well, that is the only thing in addition to what was done in the State courts. That case was prosecuted against the East Side Company until Judge Deady decided the matter.

Q. Mr. Gaston, to what extent, if any, did the line of railroad adopted by the West Side Company under the act of May 4, 1870, from Portland to McMinnville by way of Forest Grove, differ from the route of the road that had been adopted in the first place by the company under the act of July 25, 1866, that is, between those two points?

A. It didn't differ at all. It was precisely the same."

Whereupon the witness further testified that in the settlement with Holladay in the summer of 1870, his stock was assigned to Dr. R. H. Towler, the private secretary of Ben Holladay, as he recollects it, and after this settlement with Holladay the affairs of the two roads were still conducted separately and two corporations were maintained. Witness was general freight and passenger agent of the West Side road when they kept the business separately. Had separate freight offics and a man to look after that whose name he has forgotten, but thinks the general bookkeeping was done by Mr. Cunningham in the O. & C. office. This man whose name he had forgotten was Major Hampton, and then there was another man besides him. Major Hampton was the bookkeeper of the West Side road until it was taken over in 1876. Witness knows he kept his office up at the other place, and that young man, W. S. Ward, had his office in the old freight shed and kept that business separate. That was about all the separation. The freight house of the East Side Company was on the east side of the river and the West Side Company on the West Side of the river; that there was no bridge in those days so that the two freight offices had to be maintained separately.

Mr. Fenton: Mr. Townsend, the general offices also were kept separately. I don't know whether Mr. Gaston meant to be understood as saying that there was any combination, but, as I understand, the Oregon Central (West Side) offices were kept entirely separate from the Oregon Central (East Side).

A. Yes, as Mr. Fenton says, there was Major Hampton there for years, and there was another man, too. I have forgotten his name. I am just trying to get it clearly in my own head. It was all kept separate, and Mr. Peebles came out here from London to look into the matter for the London stockholders, and I know I went with him out over the road, and everything was kept separately from the other company.

Q. The earnings and everything?

A. I think so. I think there is no doubt about that. Mr. Peebles looked into everything very carefully."

Whereupon witness further testified that Holladay, after settlement with witness the real dominating head of the West Side Company until the German bondholders came and displaced him, and during that same period was the real dominating head of the East Side Company. He does not think there were any relations between Judge Williams and Holladay, except Williams' fear of Holladay's opposition and the influence of Senator Mitchell, whom Holladay controlled. Witness never thought that Williams had ever yielded to any pecuniary influence or anything like that, but the relations of Holladay and Williams were friendly. Aside from what witness has testified, he does not think that Senator Williams gave Holladay any other support in that fight. Judge Williams was perfectly aware that the majority of the people in Oregon were opposed to Holladay and his ways of doing business, and Judge Williams himself was not in favor of Holladay's corrupt schemes and his highway methods of doing business; but what he did was to placate his opposition rather than to help him along witness thinks. Witness was on terms of friendship with Holladay after his settlement with him and does not think that in his subsequent talks with Holladay he learned anything that would indicate whether the East Side Company was presenting these circulars and making that fight before Congress—he does not think that was ever mentioned between them. Holladay was in Washington during that fight in Congress. He went there every year. He had two purposes there. The first was to look after his railroad interests and the second to get the old "mule claim" paid, as they used to call it. He had a claim before Congress for a large sum of money for the mules that the Indians and the rebels ran off during the war. Alleged mules and alleged rebels.

Whereupon on cross examination witness further testified that he studied law at St. Clairsville, Ohio, and was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of Ohio at Newark, by Chief Justice Thomas W. Bartley, who presided over the District Court, which entitled him to practice in all the courts of Ohio, and on this certificate of admission he was admitted to the Bar of the Supreme Court of Oregon in September 1863, about a year after he came to the State. He had practiced at Jacksonville since about July 1862, being admitted by Judge Prim, a Justice of the Supreme Court at that time, and a Circuit Judge, now dead, and continued his practice at Salem with John Cartwright, afterwards United States Attorney. He was in partnership with him about a year and practiced law to a certain extent with Judge Kelly, afterwards United States Senator from Oregon, and Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Oregon. He practiced in his office after Judge Kelly retired from the bench in 1882-3 and 4. He was, to a certain extent, in touch with his profession from the time he was admitted to the Bar in Ohio until he retired from active business of any kind. At the time he became connected with the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Portland, called the West Side Company, he would not pretend to say that he was conversant with the land laws of the State, or in a general way with the land grants that had been passed by Congress, or the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States up to May 4, 1870, because he would not have a knowledge of anything that he had not specially looked up. It was the understanding of witness and his associates that the construction of the first 20 miles of road was a condition necessary to earn the grant. That is to say, if the Company did not construct the first 20 miles, or any part of it, within the time, that by reason of the failure to construct, the grant would be lost and witness thinks that was a provision in the Statute and he thinks it was the general judgment of the legal profession at that time.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

"Q. Now, do you recall the case of Schulenberg v. Harriman, that was decided in the October term of the Supreme Court, 1874, reported in 21 Wallace page 44, that announced a different doctrine from that generally understood before that time?

A. No, I don't.

Q. You were not familiar with that case?

A. No.

Q. And you have not examined it since?

A. No, Never did."

Whereupon the witness further testified that the California & Columbia River Railroad Company was never organized. The incorporation papers were filed. Witness prepared them. It was an Oregon corporation. He cannot say whether the articles were filed in the office of the Secretary of State at Salem or whether they were simply executed, but thinks that they were filed.

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

"Q. Do you recall whether what is called the Barry Survey, which was printed in the form of a pamphlet, was survey of the California & Columbia River Railroad Company, or was it a survey under the name of the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Portland?

A. I don't think there was any particular—I ain't certain that there was any particular name to it.

Q. Well, you said in your testimony that there was a Barry Survey?

A. Well, that was a general name that got to be attached to it because he was a manager of the party going along with it. It never got to be—it was never any legal or corporate signification.

Q. This Colonel Barry's report, then, was a report that was made and printed, as you recall, and it is referred to in the legislative proceedings, I think the Journal of the Oregon State Senate, 1864, in the Appendix, pages 36 and 37, and also the House Journal of 1864, pages 185 to 189. Do you know of its having been considered by the Legislature of 1864?

A. Well, I think it was read there, or parts of it was read, and referred to, and I think that there was an effort made to have it printed by the state.

Q. Well, now, that was a report based upon what survey and whose survey, as you recall it?

A. That was Barry's survey.

Q. Well, what I am getting at is, is that the same surveying party that stopped at Jacksonville, when you took it up when they were stranded there, and they subsequently went on north to the Columbia River?

A. Yes.

Q. That is the same survey that you referred to in your testimony.

A. Yes.

Q. And that was made in what year?

A. 1864."

Whereupon witness further testified that he does not think that the California & Columbia River Railroad Company ever had any capital stock subscribed, or elected a Board of Directors, but that was a fact he does not think that Barry knew when he made his report. Witness prepared the articles of incorporation of the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Portland, West Side, and they were written out by him in Salem.

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

"Q. I call your attention to page 141 and page 142 of Volume 7, No. 2, of the Quarterly of the Oregon Historical Society, which purports to contain a copy of these articles of incorporation, and of certificates of acknowledgment, and file-mark endorsement by Samuel E. May, and ask you if the signatures to these articles—J. S. Smith, I. R. Moores, J. H. Mitchell, E. D. Shattuck, Jesse Applegate, F. A. Chenoweth, Joel Palmer, and H. W. Corbett were not all taken, and their acknowledgments taken by you as notary public, at Salem, on or about the 29th day of September, 1866, and while the Legislature of the State of Oregon was then in session?

A. Well, now, it don't say—

Q. Will you look at your certificate of acknowledgment so that you may refresh your memory?

A. Well, I suppose that that states the fact. As they were taken, they would sign and acknowledge from time to time; but that certificate was not made up until some time afterwards.

Q. The certificate bears date what date?

A. The 16th of November.

Q. 1866?

A. Yes.

Q. Then the names that I have mentioned were signed to that document sometime on or before the 29th day of September, 1866; that is correct, isn't it?

A. Yes, they were signed before, just as I could see them.

Q. And this certificate shows that M. M. Melvin signed these articles at Salem on or about October 23, 1866, or rather acknowledged it before you at that time —is that correct?

A. Yes. They acknowledged the signature.

Q. And the certificate further shows that George L. Woods, at Salem, on or about November 10, 1866, acknowledged these articles. Now, when did Woods sign the articles? At what date?

A. Well, I suppose so, but I wouldn't say positively. I suppose that states the fact. There is some of them signed after the articles were first filed.

Q. I notice that the certificate recites that R. R. Thompson, J. C. Ainsworth, S. G. Reed, John McCracken, and C. H. Lewis acknowledged the execution of these articles on the 16th day of November, 1866, and it is certified by you under date of November 16, 1866, that they then and there, at these several times set forth in this certificate, did sign and seal said articles before you, and in your presence, and acknowledged the same. Is that according to your recollection?

A. Well, I think that that certificate there states it about as it was.

Q. States the facts?

A. Yes, I should say so.

Q. Now, I notice that on the 20th day of November, 1866, Seth R. Hammer certifies that B. F. Brown, Thomas H. Cox, and J. Gaston, personally known to him to be the identical persons whose names are subscribed to that document, acknowledged to him that they signed the same for the purposes therein set forth. When did Brown and Cox and Gaston sign with reference to that date?

A. I think that day.

Q. Now, the J. Gaston mentioned in that certificate is the same J. Gaston whose name appears last on the articles of incorporation, and that is your name?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, at the time that you went into the Secretary of State's office and delivered one copy of these articles of incorporation to him, being Samuel E. May, and as you say asked him to file the document, whose name, as you now recall it, were on the articles?

A. I think all of them above that of Mr. Corbett.

Q. It would be including Mr. Corbett?

Mr. Townsend: Including Mr. Corbett.

A. Well, maybe including that.

Q. All of those that you certify acknowledged and signed the same on or about September 29, 1866? That is the way your certificate reads?

A. Yes.

Q. At that time, though, when you handed these articles to the Secretary of State, you had not written the certificate of acknowledgement?

A. No, sir.

Q. And you did not then have the signatures of M. M. Melvin, George L. Woods, R. R. Thompson, J. C. Ainsworth, S. G. Reed, John McCracken, C. H. Lewis, B. F. Brown, T. H. Cox, or J. Gaston?

A. No.

Q. And you had not taken their acknowledgments?

A. No.

Q. And the acknowledgment of yourself, Thomas H. Cox and B. F. Brown had not been taken?

A. No.

Q. Now, when you delivered this document in that condition to Mr. Samuel E. May, Secretary of State, what did you say to him, and what did he say to you, as you now recollect?

A. Oh, I couldn't recollect that. I suppose I said that 'Here is the articles of incorporation of the Oregon Central Railroad Company. I want you to file them.'

Q. And what did he say, or do you recollect what he said?

A. And that I wanted to use them afterwards, in showing them to the members of the Legislature. He said, 'All right. I will put a pencil filing on it, and you can bring them back, and then I will put a pen and ink filing on it.' He put that on as a memorandum of the date that I presented it to him.

Q. That is, he put a pencil memorandum, as you recollect, on the back of this article or document?

A. Yes.

Q. Of the date when you delivered it to him?

A. Yes.

Q. And then he handed it back to you?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, was the object of it being handed back to you to enable you to go and get further signatures to the articles of incorporation, and complete the acknowledgment?

A. Yes.

Q. You had intended to get other signatures to it after, at the time he handed it back?

A. Yes; well, my main object was to show it to the members of the Legislature, and get these signatures that George L. Woods said he wanted put on.

Q. That would be Thompson and Ainsworth and Reed, of Portland?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, Thompson and Ainsworth and Reed were all known to be capitalists?

A. Yes.

Q. And were the leading capitalists interested in the West Side of the river, where Portland was then and now is situated?

A. Yes.

Q. C. H. Lewis and W. S. Ladd were the two other leading capitalists interested in Portland at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, pursuant to that suggestion of Governor

Woods, you desired to have these articles so that you could get these other signatures?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall when George L. Woods was inaugurated as Governor?

A. No, I don't recollect the date.

Q. He was elected Governor at the June election, 1866, wasn't he?

A. Yes.

Q. Then he was Governor as soon as the Legislature met and canvassed the vote in September, 1866?

A. Yes.

Q. Then he was actually Governor at the time he signed these articles?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall when H. W. Corbett was elected to the Senate, whether it was at this session of 1866?

A. Well, let me see—no, it wasn't at that session, was it?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, that was about the last day of the session.

Q. Yes, he was elected in September, 1866?

A. Yes, I recollect now, because he was up there fussing around about his candidacy for the Senate, and among other things, we had a reception up at my house, and he was there, and interviewing members of the Legislature.

Q. Now, I call your attention to the names of all these parties who signed the articles of incorporation of the Oregon Central Railroad Company of September, 1866, referred to in your testimony, and which were acknowledged by you,—the acknowledgments taken by you as indicated and concluded by Seth R. Hammer, and will ask you if there is any one living of that list of eighteen excepting yourself and John McCracken?

A. That is the only ones that I know of. I don't think there is any others.

Q. I call your attention to the articles of incorporation of November 17, 1866, referred to in your testimony, and purporting to be signed by J. S. Smith, I. R. Moores and E. N. Cooke, and will ask you if they are not all dead?

A. They are all dead.

Q. I call your attention to the articles of the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Salem, filed April 22, 1867, signed John H. Moores, Geo. L. Woods, S. Elsworth by Geo. L. Woods, Atty., I. R. Moores, J. S. Smith per I. R. Moores, Atty., E. N. Cooke per I. R. Moores, Atty, Sam'l A. Clarke, and will ask you if they are not all dead?

A. They are all dead.

Q. C. S. Woodworth, Notary Public, appears to have taken the acknowledgment to the articles of incorporation of April 22, 1867. He is dead, too, isn't he?

A. Yes.

Q. Is Seth R. Hammer living?

A. No, Seth is dead.

Q. Is Samuel E. May living?

A. No. May is dead now.

Q. Is J. C. Cartwright living or dead?

A. He is dead.

Q. M. N. Chapman, formerly Deputy Clerk of Marion County—"Mem" Chapman, as you knew him?

A. I don't know whether he is living or dead. He was alive three or four years ago, but I don't know whether he is living or not.

Q. You don't know. He is dead, is he not? I call your attention to an article signed 'Joseph Gaston' which appears in the Quarterly of the Oregon Historical Society, December, 1902, under the subject 'The Oregon Central Railroad,' and found at pages 315 to 326 of this Quarterly, and will ask you if you prepared and wrote and signed that article?

A. I did.

Q. I call your attention to this language, on page 325: 'After losing the land grant the Oregon Central Company sent Mr. Gaston to Washington City in December, 1869, where he was successful in getting from Congress a second grant of land to aid in constructing a railroad from Portland to McMinnville, with a branch from Forest Grove to Astoria; and under which grant the road was constructed to the Yamhill River at St. Joe.' You remember that paragraph, do you?

A. Well, if it is there, I wrote it.

Q. Now, you state there that, after losing the land grant, the Oregon Central Company sent Mr. Gaston to Washington City in December, 1869. Now, it is true, isn't it, Mr. Gaston, that before you started for Washington in December, 1869, the Oregon Central Railroad Company, as you have stated here, thought it had lost the land grant of July 25, 1866?

A. Well, the conclusion was that we were utterly unable to comply with the Act of Congress, and from that we assumed that we had lost the grant.

Q. In other words, because your company (West Side Company) was unable to build its first twenty miles before December 24, 1869, within the time required by the act of June 25, 1868, you and your associates thought the grant was lost?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, isn't this true, Mr. Gaston, that the reason why Mr. Reed, representing the Oregon Central (West Side) went on to Washington to oppose any further legislation, and particularly the act of April 10, 1869, was because your company desired to contest in the courts the rights which each of you claimed to have under the respective designations made by the Oregon Legislature in 1866 and 1868, and that you did not want Congress to pass any act that would allow the East Side Company a chance to compete for the land grant, and give them a chance to build the first twenty miles, or to comply with the previous legislation? Isn't that the reason why your company sent Reed on to oppose any further legislation?

A. Well, now, as I recollect, the conversation between myself and Reed and Ainsworth in their office, when they agreed to that contract, was that if Congress let the grant stand as it was then, and made no alterations or amendments, that they, Reed and Ainsworth and Thompson, would put up the money immediately and build the twenty miles without any reference to any litigation.

Q. In other words, if there was no legislation, the West Side Company was ready, and had promise of financial support, and felt that it could earn the grant of July 25, 1866?

A. Oh, yes, there was no question about that, because those men had the money. They were here in Portla nd They didn't have to go anywheres else to get it.

Q. And that was your position—I mean, the position of the West Side Company, and your associates, notwithstanding the Legislature had attempted to designate the Oregon Central of Salem in October, 1868, as the company entitled to the grant?

A. Yes. They didn't care—Reed and Ainsworth said they didn't care a snap for what the Legislature had done; if Congress didn't interfere, why, they would build the road.

Q. And they didn't then ask for any legislation?

A. No.

Q. In 1869?

A. No, they simply—

Q. Opposed it?

A. Opposed it."

Whereupon the witness further testified:

In the controversy at Washington, Mr. Corbett, who lived on the West side of the river, and whose interests were in Portland proper, at that time there being no East Portland, or city on the East side of the river, and he having been elected Senator in 1866, when the West side company was designated as the beneficiary of the grant, or entitled to have the grant of July 25, 1866, supported that company in all of these efforts to prevent legislation, or to help it to earn the grant. While Williams, elected in September 1864, and who had been two years in the Senate when Corbett arrived, was occupying a rather neutral position as to the two companies, desiring to please both if he could. In 1868 this controversy between these two companies as to who should build the road, and as to where it should be built, and as to which company should have the benefit of the land grant, had become a political question in the election in June 1868, and witness thinks that it is about true that the counties on the West side of the Willamette River as far south as Eugene, or Lane County, was practically unanimous for the West Side Company, and the East side counties from Multnomah as far south as Eugene were practically unanimous for the East Side Company, and that entered into the election of state senators and representatives to the legislature in 1868 on both sides of the river. He does not know whether it is true that the contest was carried forward along the same lines from Lane County south, through and including Jackson County. He had lived in the Southern part of the state, and most of the men down there supported him in the fight, but he does not know that they took sides simply because the West side counties were on his side.

Refreshing his memory of those early days, witness recollects that Upton was a representative from Multnomah County in the Legislature of 1868, and afterwards became Circuit Judge for that county. Witness remembers that some one offered House Joint Resolution No. 13, to designate the Oregon Central Railroad Company, that is, the West Side Company, as the company entitled to receive the land and all the benefits of the Act of Congress approved July 25, 1866, on October 6, 1866, but he had it in his mind that Foudray of Jackson County offered the resolution, but if it is recorded that Upton offered the resolution, it is probably true. Witness knows that the special message of Governor Woods, identified by him, was communicated shortly before this legislative action was taken, but he does not think that he asked the Governor to send in his message, but the Governor was very enthusiastic over the matter, because he wanted to have some personal interest in it, and volunteered the proposition. Witness knows that House Joint Resolution No. 13 was referred to a committee, and knows W. W. Upton, E. D. Foudray of Jackson, James Gingles of Benton, Binger Herman of Douglas, and John Whiteaker of Lane; they were in the Legislature in 1866. Whiteaker had taken an active part in the matter, and witness thinks he was favorable to it. Witness knows that the Jackson County members supported the measure very enthusiastically, but he does not recollect as to the Portland members, but knows that Upton did, because Upton was figuring all the way through to get some interest in the proposition. Witness knows that Corbett, W. S. Ladd and Governor Woods and others were called before the House, and Woods and Corbett made very encouraging speeches in favor of House Joint Resolution No. 13. Ladd said he did not know much about it, but was in favor of building railroads and in favor of the general proposition; he had not considered the matter much.

Witness recalls the bill that was passed and approved October 24, 1866, and referred to in the proceedings as House Bill No. 78 entitled, "A Bill to aid in the construction of the Oregon Central railroad," by which the state undertook to pay interest on a million dollars of bonds, to be issued by the Company, he having drawn the bill himself after the decision of the Supreme Court of California on a similar law. It was repealed at the next session and never executed in any particular. He does not recall that on October 17, 1868 Senator Miller of Jackson County introduced or offered Senate Joint Resolution No. 16, reciting the passage of House Joint Resolution No. 13 and making the recitations which appear in that rescinding resolution, and that he urged its passage; and does not recollect the vote on Senate Joint Resolution No. 16, but knows that it carried through the Senate afterwards. He remembers that S. C. Adams of Yamhill County, T. R. Cornelius of Washington County, Binger Herman of Douglas County, B. F. Holtzclaw of Josephine County, H. C. Huston of Lane County, S. Ison of Baker, C. M. Pershbaker of Douglas, Coos and Curry, and B. F. Burch of Polk County, voted against Senate Joint Resolution No. 16. and that the controversy became geographical, the West Side Senators voting as a unit, assisted by scattering votes from the other sections of the state; Witness thinks there was a lot of them dodged, that is, did not vote at all. The action of the Senate was communicated to the House on October 19th, according to the records, and witness re-

The action of the Senate was communicated to the House on October 19th, according to the records, and witness recalls that C. B. Bellinger, who had successfully contested the seat of Daniel Carlisle, of Benton, strongly advocated this rescinding resolution, and that the House divided upon the same lines geographically as the Senate, but Bellinger was then running a little store up at Monroe, in Benton County, and for his action in that matter was compelled to leave the county or give up his storekeeping, and he came to East Portland afterwards and Holladay gave him a half block over in Holladay's Addition.

Witness knows that there was some scrap between R. A. Bensel and J. C. Alexander, but that was all he knew. The result was that the Legislature of 1868, after a full and vigorous campaign on the respective merits of the two lines, or the location of the two lines, succeeded in dividing Western Oregon geographically. Some of them voted on geographical division and for the people that they thought they were representing, and some of them voted for the coin that was in it.

Witness wrote the book called "Portland, Its History and Builders," as a matter of history and not as a matter of legal parlance, in drawing legal documents, and when he used the words "Thus securing this act of the legislature in his favor, Holladay continued to push the work of construction on the grade, and sent agents to Washington to get an act through Congress enabling his Salem company to file its acceptance of the land grant act. Congress finally, on April 16, 1869, passed an act extending the time for filing acceptance of the land grant and providing that whichever of the two companies should first complete and put in operation twenty miles of railroad from Portland southward into the Willamette Valley should be entitled to file such acceptance of grant." That was the understanding of the effect of what was done, that was the popular way of expressing it. Witness furnished to Mrs. Victor a paper called "Gaston's Railroad Development in Oregon" in manuscript, and from this statement she compiled the statement that is in Volume 2, Bancroft's History of Oregon.

The desire to have a railroad from Oregon to the East took expression in the form of various companies and surveys, various works of exploitation, from as early as the exploitation of Governor I. I. Stevens in 1853. They had a railroad project up in the Provisional Government at one time before that, witness thinks, but Stevens was the first man to call national attention to the matter. The Willamette Valley Railroad Company was a project gotten up, witness thinks, to build a railroad from St. Helens up into the Willamette Valley. He could not vouch for the statement that a charter was granted to a company styling itself the Oregon & California Railroad Company, which proposed to build a road from Eugene City to some point on the East side of the Willamette River below Oregon City, or possibly to the Columbia River, back in April, 1854, but knows there were various schemes proposed about that time, and knows the St. Helens people had a great proposition, proposing to take all the business of the Willamette Valley to St. Helens.

Witness knows that the Governor's special message and this House Joint Resolution No. 13 found on page 251, down to and including the middle of page 260, House Journal, 1866, introduced by Foudray, was referred to a committee of which Foudray was a member, and that he took an active part and made some sort of report back to the House about it, but that is all he knows about it. They submitted therewith House Bill No. 78, a bill to aid in the construction of the Oregon Central railroad, which finally passed and became a law.

Whereupon Counsel for defendants offered and there was admitted in evidence and read into the record from the House Journal of 1866 the following: Mr. Foudray, from the select committee, to whom was referred the special message of the governor, in relation to railroad grant, presented the following report, accompanied by a bill:

REPORT

Mr. Speaker:

The special committee to whom was referred the governor's special message and the house joint resolution No.—, on the subject of railroads, have had the same under consideration, and beg leave to submit the following report, with the accompanying bill, to aid in the construction of the Oregon Central Railroad:

For several years the question of constructing a railroad through the Willamette, Umpqua and Rogue River valleys, has been very generally discussed before the people, some preliminary surveys have been made and much valuable information gathered upon the subject; but before this legislature will adopt any legislation bearing upon the question, it will doubtless be necessary to lay the important and material facts necessary to a proper understanding of the enterprise fully before the house, and to that end your committee has directed its labors.

That a railroad through the above named valleys is badly needed by the farmer and producer, and in fact all classes of our population, must be obvious to the most careless observer, and the bare mention of a few facts is amply sufficient to set it forth in the strongest light.

It is a well known fact that the wheat crop, the great reliance of the Oregon farmer, scarcely ever yields him one-third the price it commands in the San Francisco market. In 1864 while wheat was selling readily for $2.00 in San Francisco, it would bring the farmer but 75 cents in the Willamette valley, and now when it is above $1.00 in San Francisco, it is dull sale at half that price here. The same inequality of prices will be found to prevail in all other articles of produce. It is absurd to expect our farmers to prosper and aid in developing the country, as long as they are subjected to such disadvantages in competing with the farmers of California. And we cannot expect that other branches of business will prosper when the farmer is thus deprived of the profits of a good market for want of cheap transportation at all times. And as agriculture underlies the prosperity and wealth of the state, it is useless to hope for general prosperity unless we resort to the means which other states and countries employ—cheap and ready transportation to a sure market. In southern Oregon the obstacles to the exportation of agricultural products are so great as to amount to a complete embargo; and such must forever continue to be the condition of that country, at least so far as the most profitable part of the farmer's labor is concerned, until the country is tapped by a railroad leading either to Portland or San Francisco. And as illustrating the necessity of a railroad connection to the people of the southern counties, we may mention the fact, ascertained from the books of the commission merchants at Crescent City, California, that the inhabitants of Josephine and Jackson counties have in a single year paid out as freight money alone, on 1,800 tons of merchandise imported, the sum of $179,-

700. This large expenditure would be reduced fully three-fourths by the construction of a railroad, while it would give the people some opportunity to pay for this merchandise by the exchange of the produce of the farms, while cheap goods and cheap machinery would stimulate the production of the mines immeasurably.

These are some of the burdens that the farmers of Oregon are laboring under for want of railroad transportation. It is growing worse every year, and will continue to do so, for the plain reason that the State of California is fast completing its system of railroads, having now over three hundred miles in actual operation and hundreds more miles projected, by which the resources of every acre of the agricultural land of that State will be afforded the advantages of railroad transportation to tide-water, and thus giving the farmers of that State such an advantage as will enable them to keep Oregon produce out of the markets of the world, until we, as a State, do for our farmers what California, as a State, has done for hers—aid in the construction of a system of railroads.

It is true that we have some steamboat transportation in this State. So had California; but, unfortunately for the State, it was like the steamboat advantages which compelled California to build railroads. It can only be relied on in certain seasons of the year, which being the season of rain and mud compels the farmer to submit to any rate of charges and send his produce to market, it may be, at the very time when prices rule the lowest. The prices for steamboat transportation are generally felt to be onerous and burdensome, no matter whether they are as low as they might be or not, and the want of a railroad is all the more keenly felt, in order to afford that sure and permanent competition which always results in the prosperity of the country. As further illustrating the advantages of a railroad to the business of the country, we make the following extract from a report on this subject, by the senate committee on corporations to the last legislature:

"The direct pecuniary advantages of a railroad through Oregon may be briefly but more clearly set forth by a little calculation. Statistics carefully prepared by reliable men show that Polk county has this year produced one million bushels of wheat. Suppose that six hundred thousand bushels of this crop could be spared to the San Francisco market. At the prices heretofore prevailing since harvest, this was worth in Polk county about 75 cents per bushels, or $450,000. If there had been a railroad running through Polk county to steamship landing, this wheat would have sold in Polk county, readily, for $1.50 per bushel, or $900,000, making a clear gain of $450,000 to Polk county, on a single crop of wheat, and leaving a margin of 50 cents per bushel to transport the wheat to San Francisco—and all the direct result of railroad transportation. This calculation might be applied to wool, bacon, lard, oats, and especially to the article of hay. Oregon can ship no hay for want of means of transportation, while we have the ability and can produce the best hay in the world, and at a very large profit, if it could be cheaply transported to Portland.

"Owing to these burdens on Oregon farming, it is a notorious fact that California is now importing grain for feed from the Atlantic states cheaper than she can get it from the granaries of her neighbor Oregon. Some persons are disposed to berate and belittle Oregon farmers for their want of energy in not supplying this San Francisco demand at such handsome figures, and our newspapers take up and echo the cry, 'no energy, no industry,' etc.; and while it is true that Oregon farmers are no better than they ought to be, it is not true that they will be found lacking in energy and industry to supply San Francisco or any other good market, when the means for doing so is afforded them, so they can compete on an equal footing with the farmers of California and the eastern states."

Freight and passengers—rise in land.

One of the most striking and convincing prooofs of the great value of railroad transportation, is to be found in the rapid development of the western states, and especially in the increase of the wheat crop. In 1850, Wisconsin had no railways, and Illinois next to none. The wheat crop of Wisconsin that year was but 4,250,000 bushels; Illinois, 9,500,000; of Pennsylvania, 15,500,000; and Pennsylvania was then the greatest wheat producer of all the states by 2,000,000 bushels. But from 1850 to 1860, Wisconsin and Illinois completed their thorough railroad system, which enabled them cheaply and readily to bring their grain to the markets of Milwaukee and Chicago; and so, in the year 1860, we find by the census tables, Wisconsin has produced 15,700,000 bushels of wheat; Illinois 23,900,000 bushels, and Pennsylvania but 13,000,000 bushels. During the ten years between 1850 and 1860, there was a falling off in the wheat production of the Atlantic states, while at the same time, almost wholly through the encouragement given to production by railway transportation, the five great wheat states of the west, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and Iowa, increased in production 47,000,000 bushels per annum—over three hundred per cent on the products of 1850 was yielded in 1860; and what is most remarkable, the price of wheat was nearly twice as high in the latter as in the former year. In the same states a similar increase is noted in almost every other agricultural production.

As a natural consequence to such results in the production of a country, would be an enormous increase in the value of all real estate and other permanent property. Such is found to be the fact everywhere. The construction of a railroad has always increased the value of the land in any country through which it runs, even in old settled countries, not less than three fold, and often quadrupled the returns on the assessor's list. But this is a fact so well known that it need not be dwelt upon.

THE OREGON CENTRAL RAILROAD

We come now to consider a definite proposition. Through the efforts of a few of our citizens, acting in conjunction with some railroad capitalists of California, and aided by the Pacific coast delegation in congress, a grant of twenty sections of public land per mile has been secured from Congress to aid in constructing a line of railroad from Portland, Oregon, to the Central Pacific Railroad in California. It is made the duty of this legislature to designate the company which shall receive and manage so much of this land grant as lies within the state of Oregon. In view of these facts the following named gentlemen have incorporated themselves under the general incorporation law of this state, to wit: J. S. Smith, I. R. Moores, J. H. Mitchell, E. D. Shattuck, Jesse Applegate, Edward R. Geary, S. Ellsworth and H. W. Corbett, under the name and style of "the Oregon Central Railroad Company," for the purpose of receiving the said grant of land, and using it so far as it may go, towards the construction of the proposed railroad, passing through the Willamette, Umpqua and Rogue River valleys. Under present circumstances, the land is not available for the purpose of raising money, one of the grant conditions being that twenty miles of railroad must be finished and put in operation before the government patent will issue for the land. It would be unreasonable on our part to expect the federal government to construct our works of internal improvement, without the least effort upon our part. We are also able to state that this corporation, composed of our own citizens, have received an offer from capitalists able to command the means to construct the road, that if the State of Oregon would render certain aid to the enterprise, all the funds needed would be forthcoming. We are of opinion that it is better for the state to aid the matter, in its collective capacity, than to rely on the uncertain aid of private individuals. The reasons for this are many and obvious. It is emphatically a work for the benefit of the whole state, and every man, woman and child in it. It will benefit all in proportion to their property, and it is but simple justice that the property thus benefited should contribute its ratable proportion to secure a work of common benefit. We must offer some inducement for foreign capital to become associated in our interests.

It cannot be expected that the money of our Oregon capitalists, readily yielding here twelve per cent. per annum, will desire or be willing to go into a great enterprise with capital which is satisfied with six and seven per cent. per annum. For this reason we cannot rely on individual aid alone in the matter. The great profits and benefits of a railroad comes back to the people in that indirect way of increasing the value of their land, and raising the prices of their crops, rather than in dividends on subscriptions. Other states aid their railroads. In fact, it is the shape in which almost all the local aid is furnished. New York has been made the Empire State by a liberal policy toward its internal improvements, giving upwards of $20,000,000 to canals alone. Virginia has given six millions to railroads. Ohio gave many millions to the construction of its canals and railroads. The young state of Minnesota has contracted to loan its bonds to the railroads of that state, to the amount of $24,950,000. Missouri has already given $17,656,000 in state bonds to the railroads of that state, which liberal policy would have ere this made her the Empire State of the west, but for the losses by the rebellion. California has contracted to pay the interest on $1,500,000 of the bonds of the Ceneral Pacific Railroad Company. And so it is in every state that would keep up with the prosperity of the age.

It is proposed by the Oregon Central Railroad Company, that if the legislature will levy and appropriate, whenever a section of twenty miles of railroad is finished and put in operation, a sum of money sufficient to pay the interest on $500,000 of the company's bonds; and whenever one hundred miles is finished and put in operation, the additional sum sufficient to pay the interest on another $500,000 of the company's bonds, and so pay this interest for twenty years, and also loan the company the sum of $10,000 for preliminary contingent expenses, the whole amount to be secured by a mortgage of all the company's property to the State, and to be returned at the expiration of the twenty years, then this company agrees to proceed at once to the work of constructing the road. After fully considering the matter, your committee are decidedly in favor of the proposition and have reported the accompanying bill to carry the same into effect.

Experience has shown in other states that such assumption of liability has not increased the rate of taxation on the property of tax-payers, and that the consequent increase of revenue growing out of the increase in the value of taxable property has more than compensated the interest assumed, and the states as well as the tax-payers have been less burthened, besides becoming holders of good mortgage security for all the money advanced. In Santa Clara county, California, where the county had subscribed $100,000 in bonds, the interest on which amounted to $7,000 per annum, stating that the rate of taxes had not been increased. The town of Evansville, Indiana, subscribed $200,000 in bonds to the Evansville and Crawfordsville Railroad, and it was not necessary to increase the rate of taxes in order to pay the annual interest. H. C. Wait, register of the United States Land Office at St. Cloud, Minnesota, states that the taxes have not been increased by reason of the aid furnished railroads by that state. The secretary of the state of Wisconsin reports that a large amount of the counties and towns of that state aided in their corporate capacity in the construction of railroads in that state, but that in no instance was it necessary to increase the rate of taxation in order to pay the annual interest on the bonds. In 1852 the state of Illinois issued its bonds to the amount of $12,000,000, taking therefor stock in the railways projected in that state, and although the annual interest on this vast amount of indebtedness amounted to $840,000 annually, yet such was the rapid increase of property on the tax roll, that it was not necessary to increase the rate of taxation to pay it. The revenue from taxes on the increased value of property occasioned by these railroads, has already enabled the state to pay off more than $4,000,000 of the principal debt, and it is now believed that the remainder will be extinguished by the year 1876, without even increasing the rate of taxation from the time the $12,000,000 bonds were first issued until they are finally paid and cancelled. This is a great historical fact in the growth of this country, and assures us of our duty in going forward to do something for the State of Oregon.

If Oregon gives the aid to this railroad proposed by this bill, it will be necessary to pay $70,000 per annum as soon as one hundred miles of road is finished. Then how will the taxes stand? One hundred miles of railroad will add to the tax list, first, its own cost—not less than $4,000,000; secondly, not less than fifteen million dollars on the increase of value of land and all other property; aggregating an addition of nineteen million dollars to the assessable property of the state. At five and a half mills on the dollar, the present rate for state taxes, this railroad addition to the tax roll would produce $104,000 annually—$34,000 more than is asked for by the proposition submitted; so the argument is in favor of granting the aid asked for to build the railroad.

Your committee recommend the passage of the accompanying bill.

H. B. No. 78—"a bill to aid in the construction of the Oregon Central Railroad."

Whereupon the witness further testified that S. F. Chadwick, J. H. Mitchell, W. S. Ladd and Simeon G. Reed are dead. The old West Side Company did not lay any track prior to December 24, 1869. It made a temporary grade all the way to Hillsboro by December 26, 1869, and had built the bridges referred to and had built some bridges in Washington County further out, but had laid no rails. The Company obtained an ordinance for the location of its line on Fourth Street earlier than December 26, 1869. The measure had been pending for some time before the council, but he does not know exactly when it was passed. The bond issue of the City of Portland was for $250,000, and was afterwards enjoined in a suit brought by H. C. Coulson against the City of Portland and set aside as illegal. The counties of Washington, Multnomah and Yamhill turned over the money that they had collected; they made an assessment to pay the interest on the $50,000 and collected that money in and gave it to the West Side Company, but afterwards this was enjoined by the courts. A petition was circulated over Washington County asking the County Court to guarantee the interest on $50,000 of the bonds, and the County Court made an order to that effect. That was afterwards set aside, but Yamhill County made no order.

Witness has seen the articles reported in the Oregonion April 16, 1868, giving an account of the exercises which took place at the breaking of ground on the West Side April 15, 1868, and he made an address on that occasion, and he supposes he must have subscribed it "J. Gaston, President of the Oregon Central Railroad Company," or else it would not have been in the paper that way.

"Q. I understood you to say that the Oregon Central Railroad Company (West Side) did not have one-half of its capital stock subscribed prior to the Stockholders' meeting of May 24, 1867, when the minutes of the Stockholders' meeting, as shown by Journal No. 1 introduced in evidence, were recorded in this book, at which B. F. Brown was President, George W. Lawson was Secretary, and it is recorded here as the first Stockholders' meeting. Had there been no Stockholders' meeting of the Oregon Central (West Side) before that time?

A. Isn't that a meeting of the incorporators?

Q. It reads this way: 'Stockholders' Meeting. Salem, Oregon, May 24, 1867. At a meeting this day held at the office of the company B. F. Brown was duly made president and G. W. Lawson secretary of the first stockholders' meeting. Whereupon came Seth R. Hammer holding the proxy of Thomas H. Cox, incorporator, G. W. Lawson holding the proxy of M. M. Melvin, incorporator, Cyrus A. Reed holding the proxy of Joel Palmer, incorporator, and B. F. Brown and J. Gaston, incorporators, in person, and also the present stockholders of said company, and upon a ballot being taken for the election of a board of directors, the following named persons were duly elected directors of the Oregon

Central Railroad Company, to-wit: William T. Newby, J. M. Belcher, B. F. McCleuch, W. C. Whitson and J. Gaston. The incorporators appointed Saturday, the 25th day of May inst. as the time and the town of Amity, in Yamhill County, as the place for the first meeting of said Board of Directors. Whereupon the meeting adjourned. B. F. Brown, President.'

A. Now, I had forgotten that meeting. I thought it was held at Amity, but that was a meeting of the directors that was held at Amity.

Q. This was at Salem. This was the first meeting, then, of the corporation?

A. Yes.

Q. Had you not had a meeting of the stockholders before that?

A. That was a meeting of the stockholders as well as of the incorporators.

Q. Yes, I know; but at that time, isn't it true, Mr. Gaston, that more than half of the capital stock of this company had been subscribed, so that you were legally organized?

A. Yes. In order to make a legal incorporation, I had subscribed one-half of the stock, and others had subscribed a little—a share or so.

Q. When was that subscription made by you of one-half of the capital stock?

A. It must have been about that time—a day or two before, or on that day—I couldn't say.

Q. Well, the articles were filed with the Secretary of State, or by Samuel E. May, Secretary of State, were actually formally filed, and indorsed as filed, on November 21, 1866, and you claim they were actually tendered for filing, and received by him for filing, on October 6, 1866, in their uncompleted condition?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, when were the stock books opened for the subscriptions to the stock? About when, do you remember?

A. Well, it was about the time of that meeting there that you just read.

Q. Not until about May 24, 1867?

A. Well, that must have been about the time.

Q. Then, at the time that you were designated by the Legislature the stock had not been subscribed?

A. No, no stock had been subscribed.

Q. There had been no election of directors?

A. No.

Q. There had been nothing done excepting to execute in part the articles of incorporation?

A. Yes.

Q. Had you at that time filed the triplicate in the County Clerk's office, of Multnomah County?

A. Yes.

Q. You did that when?

A. I did that a day of two before I presented them to May.

Q. That is, before the 6th of October?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, now, did you leave them with the County Clerk in their then signed condition?

A. In Multnomah County?

Q. Yes.

A. I can't say now whether I did, or whether I brought them back that copy to Salem or not. I couldn't say positively about that.

Q. Well, now, if you left them with the clerk here of Multnomah County in October, but prior to October 6, 1866, then the articles that you left here were only signed by the first four or five people?

A. Yes. I must have taken them back and carried the three copies around, because they are all signed, I think, the whole three copies are all signed by those folks.

Q. Then if you tendered it for filing here, you did it the same as you did with May:

A. Yes.

Q. And withdrew it to get more subscribers?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you afterwards leave with the Secretary of the Oregon Central Railroad Company a completed copy?

A. Yes.

Q. As certified and acknowledged by you, and Mr. Hammer as the Notary Public?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that, of course, was not done until on or about November 21, 1866?

A. Yes.

Mr. Townsend: It could not be done until after May, 1867. There wasn't any secretary, you know, don't you? There wasn't any secretary until May 24th.

Q. With whom, now, did you leave this third copy?

A. I kept it myself.

Q. What capacity did you have?

A. Well, I was appointed, you know, by the incorporators to solicit stock, and had in that way the charge of the papers.

Q. You had custody of the corporate records, as far as anybody had custody of them?

A. Yes.

Q. Until the stockholders met with the incorporators on May 24, 1867?

A. Yes, the incorporators executed a paper authorizing me, as secretary of the incorporators, to solicit subscriptions of stock.

Mr. Townsend: Just a moment Mr. Gaston. The statute provided that the incorporators, or a majority, should designate one of their number to receive subscriptions to capital stock?

A. Well, that is what they did.

Mr. Townsend: Yes, and it was under that authority you were designated?

A. Yes, and under that authority I had kept the office copy of the incorporation papers.

Q. But, as a matter of fact, the corporate stock books, or the subscription of the stock, was not actually made until a few days before the meeting of May 24, 1867?

A. No.

Q. That is to say, the physical subscription of your name for one-half of the capital stock was not made until a day or two before May 24, 1867?

A. Yes, I think that is the fact.

Q. And do you recall whether that subscription was made on a stock book, or what it was made on?

A. Oh, I think we had a little stock book, but I don't know what became of it, or how that was managed. We must have had a little stock book.

Witness further testified that J. M. Belcher was a director and elected Vice-President of the West Side Company, and was a merchant at Lafayette. Belcher had a farm out near Wheatland in Yamhill County, at the time this was going on. Mr. McClench had a farm near Wheatland; lived just over the county line, above Wheatland. Belcher is dead. W. C. Whitson and Judge Williams are dead, and he thinks F. A. Chenoweth is dead. M. M. Melvin, J. C. Ainsworth, C. H. Lewis, B. F. Brown, Geo. L. Woods, Joel Palmer, R. R. Thompson, T. H. Cox, C. N. Terry, W. T. Newby, B. F. McClench, S. Ellsworth, W. W. Upton, E. D. Shattuck, Matthew P. Deady, C. B. Bellinger, W. S. Caldwell, J. A. Chapman, former mayor of Portland, Ira Jackson, County Judge of Washington County, Thomas B. Humphreys, County Clerk of Washington County, E. W. Haines, Secretary of the West Side Company, George H. Andrews, T. R. Cornelius, S. C. Adams, James B. Newby, son of William T. Newby, S. G. Elliott, Ben Holladay, J. N. Dolph, George Weidler, R. W. Towler, H. B. Tucker, George W. Eberts, S. Coffin, C. M. Carter, J. B. Underwood, Levi Estes, S. M. Smith, C. S. Silby, Judge Olney of Clatsop, W. R. Halsey, all are dead. All of the men, as far as he knows, that were in any wise connected with the Oregon Central Railroad Company (West Side), excepting himself and John McCraken, one of the incorporators, are dead.

Whereupon the witness, upon redirect examination, further testified that after he sold out his interest in the West Side Company to Holladay, as he has described, and after he entered the employ of the West Side Company under Holladay, he became acquainted, to a certain extent, with the plans of Holladay as to handling the land grants. He became so acquainted by conversations with him, just casual conversations, not specially you know.

Q. What were those general plans, so far as you became acquainted with them?

Mr. Fenton: Objected to as hearsay, and as not binding on the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Portland, or the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Salem, or on the defendants or either of them, and as not showing any authority on the part of Mr. Holladay to make any declarations or statements on this subject.

A. He had organized a corporation, with main office in San Francisco in charge of Mr. Wilson, who had formerly been Commissioner of the General Land Office in the United States Government, and who had charge of the whole business of disposing of the lands. Mr. Wilson had prepared maps and pamphlets, and sent them broadcast over the United States and European countries, advertising the lands for sale; and they had appointed a local land agent here in Oregon, and made Mr. I. R. Moores, who had formerly been connected with the East Side Oregon Central Railroad Company—put him in charge of that office in Portland; and advertised the lands in Oregon. And men would come in there and file applications to purchase the lands on time. I filed applications to buy a quarter section in Wapato Lake, in Washington County; and oh, there were a great many men came in; and the terms were very liberal to people who wanted to buy the lands—a small payment down and interest on the balance, and small payments running for eight or ten years.

Q. Well, now, was the corporation that you refer to The European and Oregon Land Company?

A. I think that was the name of it.

Q. You say that he placed Mr. Joseph F. Wilson—was it?

A. Joseph S. or Joseph F. I couldn't say what the middle name was. I was acquainted with Mr. Wilson. I met him in Washington City.

Q. Joseph S. Yes, you are right—Joseph S. Wilson. He had formerly been Commissioner of the General Land Office at Washington, D. C.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, when was he Commissioner of the General Land Office?

A. Well, he was Commissioner of the General Land Office when I was in Washington City in the winter of 1869-70.

Q. Did you know anything about any correspondence between Mr. Holladay and Mr. Wilson on the one hand, and Senator Williams, who had become Attorney General of the United States, on the other hand, with reference to a legal construction of the provision of the grant prohibiting sales except to actual settlers, in limited quantities, and for a limited price?

A. No, sir, I did not know anything about it.

Q. Or did you know anything about any correspondence between Mr. Holladay and Mr. Wilson, on the one hand, and the Department of the Interior on the other hand, upon that subject?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see Mr. Wilson's writing so as to become acquainted with it?

A. Well, I think I had correspondence with Mr. Wilson myself. I have seen his signature.

Whereupon, the witness, being shown Government's Exhibit 109, idetnified the copies of the letters purporting to have been signed by Wilson therein, and identified the signature of Wilson, as being his signature.

Whereupon, Counsel for complainant offered in evidence Government's Exhibit 109, Government's Exhibit 109-A, Government's Exhibit 109-B, Government's Exhibit 109-C and Government's Exhibit 109-D, duly certified, as prepared by and under the direction of James F. Casey, employee in the Railroad Division of the General Land Office at Washington, D. C., to each and all of which exhibits Counsel for defendants objected that the same were immaterial, irrelevant, and as not controlling the legal effect of the acts of Congress; which said several Government's Exhibits 109, 109-A, 109-B, 109-C and 109-D are hereinafter set out and described, and made a part of this statement of the evidence and so identified herein.

Whereupon the witness further testified on re-direct examination, that he thought he had made himself clear, that the vote on the proposition of this railroad grant before the Legislature of Oregon in 1868 was made on geographical lines, except where members of the Legislature were influenced by other and improper considerations. It was the understanding of witness then and is yet that the division in the vote for and against the proposition referred to was upon geographical grounds except where the members had changed their minds and voted for a consideration personal to themselves without reference to the justice of the contentions of the two companies or the interests of their constituents.

STIPULATION

Whereupon it was stipulated between the parties by their respective counsel that the record from the Sennate and House Journals of the State of Oregon for the year 1868 shows the residence by counties of the members of the Senate and the members of the House who voted in favor of Senate Joint Resolution No. 16, which subsequently became the resolution of October 20, 1868, and that the Senate Journal for the year 1868, at page 253, shows that there were fourteen votes cast in favor of the Resolution and eight in opopsition thereto and that the fourteen Senators voting in favor of the Resolution were from and represented the fourteen counties, as follows:

It is further stipulated that the House Journal shows at page 366 that twenty-eight votes were cast in favor of the Resolution and eighteen in opposition thereto and that the names of the twenty-eight who voted in favor of the Resolution, together with the counties which they represented, respectively, are as follows:

Whereupon upon re-cross examination the witness further testified that he had no personal knowledge of the formation of the partnership agreement of Ben Holladay with C. Temple Emmett and S. G. Elliott, alleged to have occurred on September 12, 1868; he only knew the general statement that they were partners. Holladay came to Oregon first in connection with the railroad enterprises in the latter part of June or the 1st of July, 1868. Witness does not know whether Holladay was interested or not in the promotion of surveys of California parties earlier than that. That was his earliest knowledge of Holladay being in Oregon. He met William Norris connected with these railroads only once. Norris was a great friend of Holladay and was in some way an intermediary in the steamship companies with Latham. He did not know that the European & Oregon Land Company was incorporated as a California corporation December 21, 1870. He only knew in a general way that it was a California corporation, but did not know when it was incorporated. Witness knew that Joseph S. Wilson was president of that company and he saw the offices at 3320 California Street, San Francisco, California. Witness does not think that Wilson was ever in Oregon in connection with this business. I. R. Moores was the land agent of the company at Portland during this short time that the European and Oregon Land Company undertook to dispose of this grant, but he does not think it ran a great while. They did not succeed in selling the land; it was a very expensive proposition and Holladay said to witness that he would have to get rid of it, or something like that. They caused the advertisement of the sale of this land to be circulated on the Continent of Europe in various languages and spent considerable sums of money to invite settlement of these lands as early as 1871 and 1872 as witness understood from the statements and the literature that he saw. He saw a great deal of that literature and knew that a great deal of it was in languages he could not read and that they were extensively circulated for the purpose of inviting settlement of these lands; witness saw several pamphlets at Holladay's rooms; of course he could not read them, but Holladay said they were being circulated. Witness thinks that Norris was concerned in that matter, he was a sort of confidential friend of Holladay's. He could not say that he knew any of the officers of the European and Oregon Land Company, except Wilson. He was personally acquainted with Wilson before Wilson came to California. Witness knew that William C. Ralston and Francis Avery were interested with Holladay in these schemes, but he could not say that they were officers of the European and Oregon Land Company. He remembers that Ralston was cashier of the Bank of California and knew him personally; he knew that William Norris was connected with the Northern Pacific Transportation Company, but could not say in what capacity, and that Faxon D. Atherton of San Francisco was one of the trustees of this company, and that Milton S. Latham was manager of the London and San Francisco Bank and also one of the trustees of this company; he knew Latham in Ohio before Latham came out here. Witness did not know Ed. H. Green and does not recollect that he was one of the board of trustees of the European and Oregon Land Company.

Whereupon S. S. Marr, called as a witness on behalf of the United States being first duly sworn, testified upon direct examination; that he is now what is called law examiner in the General Land Office and has been working continuously in the Railroad Division of the General Land Office since May 1, 1877. The Railroad Division was created about June, 1872. Before that, it had been what was called "F Section of Division C" of the Public Lands Division. He was formerly Chief of the Railroad Division from 1897 or 1898 until sometime in 1908 and was chief at the time this suit was instituted.

Witness prepared at the request of counsel for complainant, or caused to be prepared in his Division a statement showing the date of the lists or selections, the number of selections, the Act of Congress under which they were made, the area as finally clear listed, and patented, the date of approval by the Secretary, number and date of patent, of all lists and selections and patents pertaining to the grant in Oregon under the Act approved July 25, 1866 and the grant under the Act approved May 4, 1870.

Whereupon the witness identified this statement as Government's Exhibit 110 as such statement prepared by him and under his direction and from his belief it is correct; it was prepared for that purpose and was compared and the statement is correct as far as it could be made. It was prepared under such circumstances that as an official he could certify as to its accuracy; he was Chief of that Division at the time it was prepared from the records of his Division, under his immediate supervision and he felt responsible for the accuracy of it.

Whereupon counsel for complainant offered in evidence Government's Exhibit 110, to which counsel for defendants objected as immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent, and renewed the objection to the jurisdiction as made at the opening of the case and it was stipulated that these objections may be understood as going to all the testimony of the witness. Whereupon it was stipulated between the parties that Government's Exhibit 110 may be read into the record and the original exhibit withdrawn, which said Government's Exhibit 110 is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified herein as Government's Exhibit 110. Whereupon witness further testified that Government's Exhibit 110 was prepared before the year 1909, during his service in the Railroad Division of the General Land Office, his work pertaining to the administration of these railroad land grants, including the proceedings with reference to lists and selections and the issuance of patents. He would not like to say now that he approved any of the lists with reference to any of the lands involved in the present suit; he does not remember whether any patents were issued to the company during his time, but the record will show if any were issued during his time, that he approved those lists as Chief of the Division, approved the certificate of the clerks of his Division that was attached to them, that the lands are clear, of the character prescribed in the grant, and passed under it. Such a certificate as that is attached to every list, and if any such patents were issued during his time as Chief of the Division he approved that certificate. Whereupon, upon cross-examination, the witness further testified, that he was clerk in the Railroad Division from May 1, 1877, up to the time he became chief; his duties were from May 1, 1877, up to the time he became chief, adjusting conflicting claims between the railroad companies and settlers or others within the limits of the railroad grant; when any tract of land became in conflict or was claimed by somebody other than the railroad company, within the limits of this railroad grant, that came up to his Division for adjustment; that Division determined and decided the matter, and witness did that; that was his particular duty during that time. He examined some of the grants, perhaps some of the lists to see whether they were clear or not, but the particular duty was settling that contest between the settler or other claimant and the railroad claimant. When he became Chief of the Railroad Division his duties were to administer the Division; review all the letters that were written, see whether they were correct or not and in accordance with the law. He had about 20 clerks under him as chief of the Division, and the Commissioner who would sign the letters, was his superior officer. After a letter was prepared, that is a decision rendered deciding this conflict that occurred, it would go to what is called the law clerks—an examining board of lawyers; they would pass upon this question, and issue it, sign it, approve of it, and then it would go to the Commissioner for signature, who would sign it, return it to the Division and the Division would copy and mail it. Any of the clerks of the Division that had any occasion to go to the files would have access to the files relating to these two grants. In the adjustment of a claim, a conflict between the railroad and settler, or others, it was the duty of all the clerks who had that to examine to examine all these files; not only that but to examine the plat books and all the other records of the office and often times the field notes. In explanation of the manner in which the correspondence relating to these grants is kept the witness says: "When a letter would come to the office that had reference to any particular railroad grant, we have a file that belongs to that particular railroad—a box that we put that letter in. If it is something that we don't think would affect the grant in any way, why, it goes as a miscellaneous letter; but if it is a letter that we think would have any effect upon this grant, we would put it in what we would call the Oregon and California file —have a file for that purpose. Now, when that letter is answered, or any decision is rendered in the matter, why, that is press-copied—used to be—in a book for that purpose, just an ordinary press-copy book. And they had no particular press-copy book; they all went into the same book. All the letters addressed to registers and receivers went into one book, and all the letters addressed to individuals, miscellaneous letters, went into another." Witness further testified that letters addressed to the Secretary of the Interior would go into the miscellaneous press-copy book, as a rule. For a time they had a Secretary's record, but for a good many years back now it has gone into the miscellaneous book. Different persons would pass upon the railroad selection lists in the Railroad Division and in other Divisions. It used to be the practice to have two clerks examine that list in his Division and append their certificates to it and sign it; then at times there were other clerks—it went to what is called the Swamp Division; a clerk there would examine it and append his certificate; it went to the Mineral Division, and clerks of the Mineral Division would append their certificate. Each one of those certificates, being approved by the chief of the respective Divisions. It is now the practice upon its return from the Department clear-listed and approved by the Secretary to go to the Recording Division to be written up as a patent. At the time that most of these patents were issued, they were written in the Railroad Division. No one clerk had full charge of examining the lists and writing the patent, but it was the practice, really, to give the lists to the clerks who had charge of the particular state that the land was located in, because he was more familiar with that than anybody else, and more likely to get it right, but no one man had everything to do with one particular list. Whereupon the witness upon redirect examination, further testified that the course one of these lists and selections of lands by land grant railroad companies took, in detail, from the time it was first filed in the local land office and transmitted to the general land office was that the list was taken up and examined by the Railroad Division of the office, for the purpose of determining whether it was of the character of lands prescribed in the grant and subject to patent to the company. The examination of the Railroad Division was of tract-books and the plats and field notes, to determine that there was no conflicting claim. After the examination was made the list was referred to the Mineral Division of the General Land Office for examination by that Division to determine whether it was free from any mineral claim. After that it was referred to the Swamp Division to determine that it was free from any swamp claim. The Mineral Division and the Swamp Division appended their certificates to the list, but only as to whether the land was mineral or swamp land. The Railroad Division did all the rest of the examination. The Railroad Division determined that the land was within the proper limits described in the list. Sometimes it was an indemnity selection, an indemnity list; sometimes it was a primary list. If it was a primary list the office determined that the land was within the primary limits of the grant; and if it was an indemnity list, the office determined that it was within the indemnity limits of the grant, in the first place. They had on file maps which defined the primary and indemnity limits of each grant, so that by reference to the records he could tell whether the lands claimed by the railroad company were within the limits of the grant to that company. That was one thing that the Railroad Division determined. The other Divisions didn't pay any attention to that part of it. Their certificates were as to whether the land was mineral in the Mineral Division, and whether it was swamp in the Swamp Division. There were some claims in the Mineral Division that did not show upon the tract books. That was the reason of referring to the Mineral Division. The Swamp Division kept a set of tract books of its own, and that was the reason of sending it to the Swamp Division, for fear that there might have been some neglect or error in posting it. But the work of determining that the land was free from all claims was the work of the Railroad Division, and that Division first determined whether it was within the limits of the grant at all. After witness came into the office it was determined by the office whether the railroad had been constructed opposite the lands claimed, and whether the lands had been earned. Prior to that time this had not been done. It frequently happened that there was land, particularly under the old state grants, which the office certified without knowing whether the road was constructed at all, and that happened so in the other grants, too, sometimes; witness thinks that this was avoided when he came in the office in 1877. The office then determined that the road was constructed opposite the land and it ought always to have been done so. The office determined whether there were conflicting homestead, pre-emption or other claims of record; that is any claim under the public land laws of the United States, or any other laws of the United States, or any private claim, or anything else that conflicted with that grant. In the examination of those grants, if they found there was a claim existing to that land, either at the date of the grant or at the date of the definite location of the road, then they would cut that tract out of the list. That would defeat the grant, even though the land might have been free at the time of the selection or listing by the company. If it was covered by some claim at the date of the grant or at the date of the definite location, it ought not to pass under the grant. These are what the office calls present grants, and when the line of the road is definitely located, then the grant attaches in the primary limits; and whatever is free and clear and of the character of lands intended to be granted, passed at the time of the definite location of the road, or did not pass at all. In the indemnity limits, the right accrued on selection, and it did not make any difference what the previous condition of the land might have been if it was clear at the time of the selection; but in the primary location, that land must have been free at the date of the grant and at the date of the definite location. Witness does not think that outside of these several things mentioned by him that the Railroad Division determined anything else. When these things were all determined in favor of the Railroad Company, the list was submitted to the Secretary, with recommendations that it be approved. The land was all clear-listed before it went to these other Divisions. If the other Divisions found anything the matter with the list they would have to write that list over again, or partly, whatever it was to make it clear. After all the examinations had been made the list was then submitted to the Secretary for his approval, and if there was anything discovered that was wrong with it up to the date of approval, they would correct it if necessary. They got the clear list after examining the records of each Division, excepting the Mineral Division and the Swamp Division. Many times they would have that examination made by the Mineral Division and Swamp Division before the Railroad Division made the fair clear-list, then it would have to be gone over again afterwards before the other Divisions put their certificates on. The certificate of the Mineral Division would show that there was no mineral claim there, or if there had been a mineral claim that the mineral claim had been adjusted, and rejected, and wiped off the record. And it would be the same with the Swamp Land Division. Then it was for the Railroad Division to determine if there had been any previous claim that had been wiped off the record, whether that claim was sufficient to have defeated the grant, that is to bring the lands within one of the exceptions to the grant.

"Q. Now, since you have been identified with the Railroad Division in 1877, has the Railroad Division ever, in recommending a list or selection for patent, considered or determined whether any of the conditions subsequent annexed to the grant have been violated?

Mr. Fenton: Objected to as immaterial and incompetent.

A. No.

Q. Well, why haven't you done that?

Mr. Fenton: Same objection.

A. Why, the reason, perhaps, why we haven't done this was that this land passed under the grant. We had determined that, that it passed under the grant.

Q. That matter was determined by the Department of the Interior's own act?

A. Yes.

Q. And the rule as to what it would do?

A. Yes.

Q. I want to know what the practice has been, and when it arose, and whether it has been followed, and for how long, of passing upon the breach of conditions subsequent annexed to the grant or not passing upon them. I want to know which is the fact.

A. We did not. We never passed upon the question as to the breach of the conditions subsequent. The way I understand this thing is this, now, that that was something that the company was required to do after it got its patent. It had no right, legally, to do these things until it got its patent. For instance, the sale of the land, if it did, it might have sold something that it had no right to at all. But after the company got its patent, then the condition subsequent required it to do something. Now, that was a matter that we didn't pay any attention to.

Mr. Fenton: I move to strike out the answer of the witness as an opinion on a legal question, and as incompetent.

Q. I will ask you, Mr. Marr, whether, since the decision of the Supreme Court in Schulenberg v. Harriman, speaking generally now, the Department of the Interior, and particularly the Railroad Division of the General Land Office, either considered or determined whether there had been any breaches of any conditions subsquent annexed to the grant, in passing upon lists and selections of land and approving them for patent?

Mr. Fenton: Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.

A. Well, I will say this, that only for a short period along in the early '80's—I cannot remember the time exactly—when there was a question as to looking to the forfeiture of these grants, we were directed then not to issue patents under railroad grants where the road had been constructed after the time prescribed in the law when it should be constructed. That was afterwards set aside, or anyhow we were directed to go on and issue these patents, for the reason that we had no right to do anything else. After the road was constructed, that was.

Q. I understand. Well, at the time in the early 80's that you were instructed not to issue patents for lands to railroad companies who constructed the railroad after the time prescribed, do you not recall that there were many acts pending in Congress for the forfeiture of those grants, some general acts as to all grants, and a great many acts relating to pacific grants, and that the order of the secretary in most instances referred to the fact that legislation was pending, and no patent should be issued until Congress had acted?

A. Yes.

Q. You find that set forth in Donaldson's Public Domain?

A. Yes. Yes, that was the reason for it—there was legislation pending. In fact, the Act of March 3, 1887, was under consideration some time before it was passed.

Q. And the General Forfeiture Act of September 29, 1890, was under consideration for some time?

A. Yes.

Q. Thirteen or fourteen years, was it not?

A. I don't remember how long, but it was some time; a good while, anyhow."

Whereupon, upon recross examination, the witness further testified, that since he had been connected with the Railroad Division, he had always ascertained, or attempted to ascertain, whether the roads claiming lands under these land grants had constructed their roads opposite to and coterminous with the lands applied for, and he thinks that this rule has not been departed from since he has been with the Railroad Division. For a time he was instructed not to approve for patents lists applied for where the roads were not constructed within the time, although at the time of the application for patent the road had been constructed past or opposite to and coterminous with the lands; and that was particularly from the time these acts introduced in Congress were fiirst introduced up to September 29, 1890, when the General Forfeiture Act was passed, that, that practice prevailed. The Act of September 20, 1890, was a General Forfeiture Act, and attempted to forfeit, and did forfeit, for failure to construct opposite to and coterminous with the road not then constructed. It did not forfeit anything opposite constructed road. All constructed road, whether constructed in time or not, was considered as if it had been constructed within the time under that act, and was so construed in the Railroad Division. These lists were posted on the tract-books as soon as they could get them there, but at the time witness first came into the office, those lists would come to the Railroad Division first, and they would send them up to be posted on the tract-books before the Railroad Division took action. That was the first thing the Railroad Division did.

Whereupon J. F. CASEY called as a witness on behalf of the United States, being first duly sworn testified; that he is at present employed in Division F of the General Land Office, which has several Divisions designated by letters. Division F is the designation of the Railroad Division. He has been employed in the Railroad Division for about a year (March 4, 1912), but was there before, about fourteen years before for about four years and in the meantime has been employed all the time in some other Division of the General Land Office. He first came in to the General Land Office in 1889. Was out then for a short time and returned in 1893 and has been continuously in the General Land Office since 1893. He is familiar with the records of the Railroad Division in the General Land Office pertaining to railroad grants. "Government's Exhibits 109, 109-A, 109-B, 109-C and 109-D" were prepared and certified under his direction, for use as evidence in this case, at the request of counsel for the Government. Explaining the manner in which correspondence is filed and kept for reference in this division, witness testified that the letter, when it is received, goes to what is called the mail room, is there docketed and a jacket made for it; the jacket is briefed. All the papers pertaining to that letter are put in one jacket; that is, if there were more than one or two papers, if not, it did not have any jacket. Then the letter is referred to the Division in which it belongs. It is answered there and if the letter relates to one of these particular grants, it is put in the file box of that grant. If it relates to any general subject it is put in Miscellaneous Files. There is a separate file for each grant. This jacket contained a brief of what the letters contained, that is, the subject matter of the letters. At the time he had the certified copies designated as "Government's Exhibit 109, 109-A, 109-B, 109-C and 109-D" prepared they covered all the correspondence upon that subject found in the files of the General Land Office, but he did not examine the records in the Interior Department thoroughly. He did examine the complete files pertaining to the Oregon and California grant and the so-called Oregon Central grant, being grants under the Acts of Congress approved July 25, 1866, and May 4, 1870, respectively and there were no other papers in these files pertaining to the subject matter of these exhibits, except the ones set out in said exhibits. He took all the boxes containing the files of letters received, examined these and then went through the press copies of the answers, that is he read them and he did not find in the files anything pertaining to the restrictions of the grant, upon the sale of the granted lands, other than disclosed by "Government's Exhibits 109, 109-A, 109-B, 109-C and 109-D."

Whereupon, witness testified as follows:

"Q. Is there any record in the General Land Office showing that that subject was ever before the General Land Office, except this one transaction?

A. This is all found in the Railroad Division. As to other divisions, I could not answer."

Whereupon witness further testified that he is familiar with the general system of handling the correspondence in the General Land Office and if any correspondence had reached the General Land Office, or any transaction had been addressed to the General Land Office in any manner pertaining to the construction or administration of these provisions of the grants restricting the sale of the granted land, they would have been referred for action and for filing to the Railroad Division. He gained his familiarity with the manner of handling the mail in the General Land Office in what is known as the Mail Room, where the mail is received and distributed. He worked there for two, or three or four years. He does not exactly remember how long. He has examined the records of the General Land Office and particularly the Railroad Division so that he can explain the circumstances under which the patent of June 21, 1909, designated as "Supplemental Patent No. 3 for 161.75 acres of land, covered by Selection List No. 2, of September 23, 1871" was issued to the Oregon & California Railroad Company. The patent was issued for the fractional northeast quarter, the southeast quarter and the fractional southwest quarter, away back. Subsequently Mr. Hoehling, on June 10, 1909, requested that as a re-survey had been made of that and the plat showed the description to be different from the description which is in the patent, a supplemental patent correcting the description so it would agree with the survey, be issued, and that was the reason the second patent was issued, to correct that description in the original. It was just to correct the original patent and not to cover any additional lands. To correct the description of the patent dated May 29, 1872. He has examined the lists and selections filed from time to time by the Oregon & California Railroad Company under the Act of July 25, 1866, and also under the Act of May 4, 1870, upon which patents were issued, as to the form of these lists and selections and the name of the party who acted for the Railroad Company as Land Agent or Land Commissioner, and has prepared a statement which accurately sets forth the facts.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

"Q. Please refer to this statement, and explain fully concerning the forms of lists and selections used in the administration of these two land grants, and the names of the persons acting on behalf of the Oregon and California Railroad Company from time to time as land agent, or acting land agent, or Land Commissioner.

A. Under Act of July 25, 1866, no lists or selections were made except in the name of the Oregon and California Railroad Company. Under the last named Act lists and selections were made in the general form of List No. 1 (Government's Exhibit 111), dated July 12, 1870. Selections and lists continued in this general form until early in 1876, and were signed by I. R. Moores as Land Agent. Beginning on or about June 17, 1876, the selections and lists were upon the general form of List No. 8 (Government's Exhibit 111-A), signed by Paul Schulze as Land Agent. Selections and lists continued in this general form until about the year 1885. From the latter date the selections and lists were upon the general form of List No. 16 (Government's Exhibit 111-B), signed by George H. Andrews as Acting Land Agent, until November 19, 1888, when William H. Mills was appointed Land Agent, and thereafter the lists and selections were in the general form of List No. 17 (Government's Exhibit 111-C), until September 15, 1904, at which latter date Charles W. Eberlein was appointed Acting Land Agent, and thereafter the selections and lists were in the general form of List No. 104 (Government's Exhibit 111-D), until June 15, 1908; at the latter date Henry Conlin was appointed Acting Land Agent, and thereafter the lists and selections were in the general form of List No. 106 (Government's Exhibit 111-E), until September 21, 1908, when B. A. McAllaster was appointed Land Commissioner, and since that time lists and selections have been in the general form of List No. 116 (Government's Exhibit 111-F).

Under the Act of May 4, 1870, all lists and selections upon which patents have been issued were made in the name of the Oregon and California Railroad Company. Under the latter act the selections and lists upon which patents have issued were in the general form of List No. 1 (Government's Exhibit 111-G), dated January 20, 1888, signed by George H. Andrews as Acting Land Agent, until November 19, 1888; since which latter date all lists and selections have been in the general form of List No. 11 (Government's Exhibit 111-H), signed by William H. Mills as Land Agent. No lists or selections have been made under the Act of May 4, 1870, since Mills ceased to be Land Agent for the Oregon and California Railroad Company."

Whereupon the lists and selections referred to in the answer of the witness are produced and identified respectivly to conform to the answer of the witness.

Whereupon the complainant offered in evidence "Government's Exhibits, 111, 111-A, 111-B, 111-C, 111-D, 111-E, 111-F, 111-G and 111-H" excepting the description of lands and blank forms which are not filled out, and which by consent are omitted, to each of which counsel for defendants objected to as immaterial.

STIPULATION.

Whereupon it was stipulated that certified copies of said exhibits just offered may be substituted for the originals and that such certified copies should be read into the record, which said several exhibits are hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified herein as "Government's Exhibits 111, 111-A, 111-B, 111-C, 111-D, 111-E, 111-F, 111-G and 111-H" respectively.

Whereupon the witness further testified that the subject of the issuance of the corrective patent on June 21, 1909, as shown by the records of the office was referred to Mr. Lord, an employe of the Railroad Division, who prepared the letter transmitting the patent to the Recorder for signature. Mr. Lord is now dead. Everybody knew that this suit was pending, but he could not tell whether Mr. Lord knew it. Witness looked up generally the records of the Railroad Division relating to any correspondence or other transactions involving the provisions of these two grants, restricting the manner of selling the granted lands. There was no other correspondence with other parties, or other transactions relating to the same subject that he was able to find.

Whereupon the witness, upon cross-examination, further testified that the stamp on the letter of June 10, 1909, purporting to be signed "A. A. Hoehling, Jr., attorney for said Company," referring to the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company which contained on the upper right hand corner these words and figures "65218. Registered G.L.O. June 12, 1909. Referred to ———————— Assigned to Lord." was put on in the Mail Room where they received the mail and the Mr. Lord there referred to is F. C. Lord of the Railroad Division, who had charge of the lists and patents. The presumption is that this matter was referred to Mr. Lord and that he prepared the patent and sent the letter transmitting the patent to the Recorder for the President's signature. Mr. Lord was in the Railroad Division in that capacity a great many years, and was between 50 and 60 years of age somewhere when he died.

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

"Q. Isn't he the man that would know, probably, as much about the pendency of this suit to forfeit these land grants as any other man in the Railroad Division?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Wasn't it his duty to know about the issuance of patents, and to take orders as to the refusal to issue further patents?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, if there was a suspension of the further issuance of patents, on account of this suit or for any other reason, Mr. Lord would be the man to have that knowledge, wouldn't he?

A. He would be very apt to have it, yes, sir.

Q. Whom would he get it from?

A. Just like the rest of us.

Q. I mean, from whom would he get it?

A. Unless he was told unofficially, there would be an order issued.

Q. If it came to him unofficially, from whom would it come?

A. From his chief, or somebody told him.

Q. Who was his chief?

A. I don't know whether it was at that time a Mr. Dudley or Obenchain.

Q. It was a matter of common knowledge that the Government, after the passage of the resolution of April 30, 1908, by Congress, was prosecuting this suit to forfeit these lands? I mean, a matter of common knowledge in the office of the General Land Office?

A. I don't know whether it was common knowledge. I couldn't say that of course.

Q. The officers in the Railroad Division knew it?

A. I couldn't answer that.

Q. In your direct examination, I understood you said everybody knew it?

A. Well, at that time, 1909."

Whereupon the witness further testified that the letter of Mr. Hoehling of date June 10, 1909, was referred to Division F, Oregon and California Railroad Company, and is a request for a supplemental patent, and this is the patent about which he has been interrogated. Acting upon that request the patent was issued.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence, as part of the cross examination of the witness this letter marked "Defendants' Exhibit 250," and requested that the exhibit be read into the record and withdrawn by consent, which said "Defendants' exhibit 250" is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified as "Defendants' Exhibit 250."

Whereupon the witness further testified that the original jacket copied on the first page of "Government's Exhibit 109" is the original jacket which should have contained the letter of Attorney General George H. Williams of date June 27, 1872, addressed to Willis Drummond, Commissioner of the General Land Office, and replied to by Mr. Drummond in his letter of July 16, 1872, which is set out and made a part of "Government's Exhibit 109" and is identified as "Government's Exhibit 109-D." The number of the original jacket was so faint, perhaps it was not taken. The number shown is "7128" in red ink and the letter on the jacket is "K," which refers to the series. They used to use these letters instead of the years. The number "7128" was given when it was received in the office to identify it. Referring to letter "L" on the copy of the jacket when it is letter "K," the letter on the original is so faint perhaps it was not taken. Witness could not tell what the letter "R" in ink on the margin of this jacket stood for in these days, but thinks it was to show the Recorder put it in the book. That is, that the letter of June 27, 1872 was recorded. It would be recorded in two books. One in volume 1, page 13, and this would be found in the General Land Office somewhere. He went and looked up the original volume where it was recorded when it was received here, but never noticed the volume number. He found that letter recorded and the original of it, that is the letter of Williams of June 27, 1872. What he found was merely the record of the receipt of the letter, the letter itself was not recorded. The letter "R" merely indicates that the letter was received and not that there was a record of the letter. The letter "M" in ink under the words "Answered July 16, 1872" stands for Mendenhall, who was a clerk in the office, but is now dead. It would have been his duty to answer this letter of Attorney General Williams of June 27, 1872 and return it to the filing clerk to put in the files and it would then have been in his custody until he returned it to the files. Witness first looked to find this letter of Attorney General Williams of date June 27, 1872, in November 1911. He did not look in the Department of Justice among the files of the Attorney General's office and could not tell if there are any records, letter-books of the letters written by the Attorney-General in 1872, kept in the Attorney General's office and he made no search for them there.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

"Q. Now, I notice this envelope, or 'Jacket' as we call it, is simply an envelope of about the size of 4½ inches, about the size of a legal envelope or docket folded about 8x2½ inches, and on one side of it is really the form of a sealed envelope; on the other side are these words: 'Letter No.' printed, and then at the bottom 'Referred to Div.' and 'Received G.L.O. 18' printed. All the rest is manuscript on the face of the jacket? That is correct, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, in that jacket, which was produced here in this condition by Mr. Marr in our presence, just awhile ago, I notice copy of opinion given by Samual M. Wilson, etc., marked in red 'B'—letter 'B'; and I notice a letter from Willis Drummond, of June 14, 1872, addressed to George H. Williams, Attorney General, on paper headed 'Department of the Interior, General Land Office.' And I notice a printed document, with the red letter 'A' on the same, being copy of contract between Trustees of Land Grant, Second, The E. & O. Land Company, and third, The O. & C. R. R. Company; and a letter to Attorney General Williams on the office letter-head of The European and Oregon Land Company, of date January 27, 1872, signed 'Jos. S. Wilson, Prest.' And I notice a letter of June 5, 1872, purporting to be a copy, on paper 'Department of the Interior, Washington, D. C.' signed 'C. Delano, Secretary.' And I notice another letter, on the letter-head of the European and Oregon Land Company, of date January 27, 1872, addressed to Ben Holladay, and signed 'Jos. S. Wilson, Prest.' And I notice another letter, of April 10, 1871, addressed to Hon. Jos. S. Wilson, Prest. E. & O. Land Co., purporting to be signed 'I. R. Moores, Land Agent O. & C. R. R. Co.' And another letter, of no date and no signature, but headed 'Department of the Interior, Washington, D. C. 18—' addressed to Jos. S. Wilson, President E. & O. Land Co., San Francisco, Cala.' Now, are these all of the documents, letters or correspondence, or papers, that you found in this jacket when you first made your search?

A. I couldn't answer that without examining that copy there to check it. I think it is, though.

Q. Well, if these documents that I have referred to all are copied and no others are copied, in Government's Exhibit 109 and 109-A to D, inclusive, then your answer would be that it covers all that was found in the jacket when you went there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't find any written opinion there from John H. Mitchell as the attorney of the Oregon and California Railroad Company?

A. No, sir, not unless there was a copy made.

Mr. Townsend: No, it is not there.

Q. As a matter of fact, there is no such opinion in that file, or was in that jacket, written or signed by John H. Mitchell as attorney for the Oregon and California Railroad Company?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know how many different people may have had access to this jacket and its contents since July 16, 1872, down to a year ago, when you first examined it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Every clerk in the General Land Office, or in the Railroad Division, would have access to that, wouldn't they?

A. If they had some business, yes.

Q. As a matter of fact, it was out in the hall, where any one could come along and look at it?

A. It was out in the hall, yes, sir.

Q. And this file is in a loose jacket, and how is it kept separate from the other years, or other letters in the file known as the Oregon and California Railroad Company file?

A. That is 1872. There was a band around the 1872 letters.

Q. Well, now, isn't it true, Mr. Casey, that these contents are sometimes not all returned into the same jacket, and that one paper might get into a file for 1873, for instance?

A. Yes—it doesn't very often happen.

Q. It does happen, though?

A. Yes, sometimes.

Q. And isn't it true that sometimes an important instrument, like the assent of a railroad company to a land grant, is examined by some person who is interested, gets into the wrong file, or gets into an entirely different pigeonhole in these records, and is afterwards found in this place, and restored to the proper file?

A. Papers are sometimes misplaced.

Q. And that experience is not altogether unusual, then, in the way these records are kept?

A. It is not very ordinary.

Q. And it sometimes might get into a file entirely different from the Oregon and California Railroad Company, as in a case where an acceptance got into the file of the Northern Pacific Company, and was afterwards found in the wrong file?

A. There is a possibility."

Whereupon the witness further testied that he could not say that sometimes a letter or document belonging in one file may be mislaid and placed inadvertantly in the file of another different company or individual and does not come to light for some years. That is not very liable to happen. These records known as the Oregon and California Railroad Company file, that were in the General Land Office, that is the general files, were not kept in one room, but were in about four rooms. That is, three and the hall, as witness thinks. He thinks there is no clerk, or chief, or officer here in the office that was in charge in 1872. Witness could not answer whether nearly all are dead or are gone or out of the service that were employed in 1872, but that Mr. Marr was the oldest employe in the General Land Office in this Division. That is, the oldest in service, and is the oldest one that would have anything to do, or any connection with, the file of the Oregon and California Railroad Company. Witness does not know who Buxton is, whose name is on this jacket in pencil. This name was on the jacket when witness first examined it. He does not know whether he was a clerk in the office or not.

Whereupon, upon re-direct examination, the witness further testified as follows:

"Q. Mr. Casey, your attention has been called to the fact that the photographic copy of the jacket containing the Government's Exhibits 109, 109-A to 109-D, inclusive, reads at the top 'Letter L,' whereas it appears upon the original to be 'Letter K,' and your attention was also directed to the fact that upon the original jacket it appears to be 'No. 7128,' while upon the photographic copy it appears 'No.——,' the number itself not appearing. Combining these two circumstances, and examining the original jacket and the ink in which the letter 'K' is written and the figures '7128' are written, I will ask you to explain how this probably occurred.

A. The letter 'K' is written in purple ink, and it does not photograph. The figures '7128' are so faint that they possibly did not photograph, or probably did not photograph.

Q. So that this jacket originally was printed in black ink 'Letter L. No.——' and the letter 'K' has been written over the printed letter 'L' in ink, so that if the ink did not take the photograph would show 'Letter L. No.——,' as it was originally printed?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did you find any other jackets relating to this general subject?

A. Two others.

Q. Please produce them.

A. Letter I No. 92,880, containing a letter from Honorable George H. Williams, Attorney General, dated April 20, 1872; and letter K. No. 6956, which contains a copy of letter of June 5, 1872, from the Secretary of the Interior.

Q. Now, can you explain why when the letter of June 27, 1872, was received from Attorney General Williams, the former correspondence was transferred to the jacket in which was placed the last letter received from General Williams upon the subject?

A. The papers were all taken over, presumably, from the way the answer reads, the papers were taken over to the Secretary and brought back, and the letter answered, and all the papers placed in the last jacket.

Q. Do the documents placed in this last jacket, which has been identified here as 'Letter K. No. 7128' bear any filing marks that show that they were intended to be kept in that jacket?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Fenton: In what jacket?

A. This last one.

Q. How is that indicated?

A. They are labeled on the inside, each paper, beginning with 'A'—labeled 'A-7128,' 'B-7128,' etc.

Mr. Ogilvy: Are there two A's and two B's?

A. No.

Mr. Fenton: While we are on that subject, I don't understand the reason for the A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H.

A. Each letter was indicated in that manner that went into the file.

Mr. Ogilvy: Were these numbers there when you first examined them, Mr. Casey—A, B, C, D, etc. 7128?

A. I couldn't swear to that. I think they were, though. I didn't notice for that particularly.

Q. I will call your attention to the notation at the bottom of this jacket, 'Letter K No. 7128.' It originally read as follows: 'Received (G. L. O.) June 28, 1872' which was the day after the date of the last letter written by Attorney General Williams; and the date at the bottom was subsequently changed to read July 17, 1872; and a further notation upon this jacket shows that the letter was answered on July 16, 1872. Does this not indicate that the entire files were transferred to the Secretary's office, as you have stated, and were finally refiled on July 17, 1872?

A. Yes, it appears to indicate that. The letter downstairs shows the date it was received was on the 17th. It was taken over, and must have been received informally.

Mr. Ogilvy: It shows it was received the day after it was answered?

A. Yes. It was probably received informally."

Whereupon, the witness further testified that from the records of the Railroad Division, it appears that William H. Mills, who acted as Land Agent for the Oregon and California Railroad Company from 1888 until some time in 1904, also acted during the same period as Land Agent for the Central Pacific in 1888, but he could not tell for how long thereafter. Mr. Lord died about a year ago, to the best of his knowledge. Other people besides the clerks of this Division had access to these files; an attorney in good standing, and attorneys for the Railroad Companies have access to them. It is a frequent occurrence for attorneys representing those land grant companies to go up and inspect these files. He has not had charge of the files but believes the attorneys had had as much assess to these old files ordinarily as the employes of the Department. He could not state how recently these files had been examined by attorneys for the Railroad Companies, but he does not mean by his testimony to raise any implication that papers have been taken out of their proper files either accidentally or intentionally by the employes of the division.

Whereupon upon re-cross examination, the witness further testified that he does not mean to imply by his testimony that any employe or attorney of any of these railroad companies intentionally or accidentally took out any of these documents.

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

"Q. I notice that this jacket you referred to under the head of 'Letter K' bears a number '6956' and is headed 'Honorable Secretary of the Interior, June 5, 1872.' and down below in pencil 'Copy of'—then in ink 'Reply to ours of the 20th ult.' and then in pencil this language: 'This copy belongs to certain papers filed by Attorney General Williams May 20, 1872, and has been placed therewith:' and in brackets 'To be filed:' then the usual blank 'Referred to Division F' in ink; then 'Received (G. L. O.)' in print; in ink 'July 16, 1872.' This is the jacket that you referred to as from which the transfer was made to jacket No. 7128?

A. No, sir; it is the first one—92880.

Q. Well, that is one of them—one of the two jackets?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In whose handwriting is this pencil memorandum 'This copy belongs to certain papers filed by Attorney General Williams May 10, 1872, and has been placed therewith. (To be filed') And at the bottom in pencil is the name 'Cromwell'. Is that in his handwriting?

A. I couldn't tell you that, sir. There was a clerk here by the name of Cromwell."

Whereupon witness further testified that Cromwell was just a clerk in connection with the Railroad Division and would have access officially to these files, and his duties would sometimes require him to have such access. Cromwell died about 1895. The pencil memorandum on this jacket was there when witness first saw it. He notices that the jacket now contains a copy of a letter of June 5, 1872, purporting to be from Secretary Delano to Commissioner of the General Land Office Willis Drummond, which is typewritten on Department of the Interior stationery, but he does not think the original is in '7128.' The original letter of the Secretary addressed to Commissioner Drummond is not in these files and he cannot tell where the original is. It would probably be in these files, he could not tell why the original letter of Secretary Delano addressed to Commissioner Drummond should be in the Secretary's office and not in the Commissioner's office. This is a typewritten and not a photographic copy witness thought.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

"Q. Now, I notice this 'Letter I. No. 92,880' jacket is endorsed in writing 'Hon. George H. Williams, Attorney General, April 20, 1872. Papers in the case of Oregon & California R. R. Co. &c. Acknowledged May 20, 1872. Papers sent to Secretary May 20, 1872. Sec. to Atty. Genl. June 14, 1872, transmitting copy of Secretary's opinion;' and then 'Received (G. L. O.) April 22, 1872.' Now, is that a part of this same file relating to this correspondence between Attorney General Williams and the Commissioner of the General Land Office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I notice the figures '15-139' on the back of that jacket. What does that mean?

A. It means the volume in which the thing was docketed.

Q. Now, in that jacket I now find an original autograph letter of George H. Williams, written on stationery 'Department of Justice, Washington, April 20, 1872,' addressed to Hon. Willis Drummond, Commissioner General Land Office, Washington, D. C. From your knowledge of the handwriting of General Williams, or Attorney General Williams, would you say that was an autograph letter of his? It is written in the same hand as the signature, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And appears to be an autograph letter, doesn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, is that photographed by you, or did you photograph the carbon copy?

A. That was photographed.

Q. The letter itself?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The photograph would take all this ink, would it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you found that as the only inclosure in jacket No. 92,880 at this time?

A. That is all.

Q. These three jackets are the only jackets that you found anywhere in the office of the General Land Office, or in the files of the General Land Office, relating to this subject matter?

A. That is all.

Q. You don't mean to say that there are no other? There may be some other correspondence?

A. That is all I found.

Q. That is all you found. That is all.

Mr. Townsend: In your investigation of the records relating to the Oregon and California grant, you have also examined the files of the office of the Secretary of the Interior, have you not?

A. Yes, sir."

"Counsel for defendants admits that the counsel for the Government, through Mr. Casey, produces a jacket from the files of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, formerly the Oregon Central, indorsed thereon 'Received January 20, 1869. Dated January 19, 1869. From Hon. George H. Williams, U. S. Senate. Subject, encloses S. Bill No. 776, To authorize the Oregon Central R. R. Co. to file assent to Act July 25, 1866, and asks for Secretary's views. Case 2, G 1, and answered January 20, 1869, page 565, Volume 1 Railroad,' and therewith a letter of George H. Williams of date January 19, 1869, headed 'Senate Chamber,' addressed to 'Hon. O. H. Browning, Secretary of the Interior, Washington, D. C.' together with a pamphlet enclosed therewith entitled 'Statement of facts relative to the incorporation and organization of the Oregon Central Railroad Co. of Salem, Oregon,' being a copy of Government's Exhibit 105."

STIPULATIONS.

Whereupon it was agreed that the circular or pamphlet designated as "Statement of Facts" need not be included because it is a duplicate of "Government's Exhibit 105." It was also admitted that by letter dated January 20, 1869, Joseph Gaston transmitted to the Secretary of the Interior a copy of "Government's Exhibit 106," entitled "The Inside History of the Oregon Central Railroad Companies," which was filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior on March 15, 1869.

And it was further stipulated that if the Government shall offer certified copy of the jacket enclosing this document, the document itself need not be repeated for the reason that it is an exact duplicate of "Government's Exhibit 106." And it was further stipulated that if this copy is made, the ink writing will be shown on the photograph, by ink if necessary."

Whereupon it was further stipulated between the parties, by their respective counsel, as follows:

STIPULATION.

Mr. Townsend: It is stipulated that J. F. Casey, if recalled as a witness on behalf of the Government, would testify that the records of the General Land Office show that the forest lieu selections referred to in Exhibit No. 9 to the joint and several answer of the defendants Oregon and California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, and Stephen T. Gage, were examined as to the title of the base lieu land tendered to the Government by the following named persons, who were law clerks in the General Land Office during the time that said forest lieu selections were pending in the Interior Department, namely: F. C. Dezendorf, Albert G. Hall, Harry W. Happy, Marvin M. McLean, Fletcher Meredith, Benj. F. Sparhawk, George C. Stewart, Alva S. Taber, James D. Tyler and Hugh H. Williams; and that, in so far as the titles to any of said base lands were accepted and approved by the Interior Department, as set forth in said Exhibit No. 9 to said joint and several answer as corrected by Exhibit No. 17 to the Stipulation as to Facts entered into in this suit, the same were approved and accepted by the foregoing named law clerks.

It is further stipulated that, if the foregoing named law clerks were called and sworn as witnesses on behalf of the Government in this cause, each of them would testify that he approved the title to said base lands without actual knowledge of the provisions of the Act of April 10, 1869, or the Act of May 4, 1870; that he passed the title after an examination in the following manner: Accompanying each forest lieu selection was an abstract of title showing patent by the Government to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, conveyance by the latter to a certain grantee, and conveyance by the latter or some subsequent grantee to the United States; the patent record of the General Land Office was examined to verify the statement in the abstract as to the issuance of patent—all of which patents were recorded and of record at length in the General Land Office; the tract books were then examined to ascertain that the lands tendered as base had not been used before for the same purpose, and to ascertain generally whether the lands tendered were proper base for the selections tendered; each of said law clerks passing upon said titles as aforesaid then approved the title, assuming that the patent created an unconditional and unrestricted title, and without examining the granting acts, and without actual personal knowledge of the provisions of the Act of April 10, 1869, or the Act of May 4, 1870; after the title to the base lands tendered had been examined in this manner, the selection was referred to the several divisions of the General Land Office to ascertain if the selected lands were subject to any prior adverse right of any kind; after the selection had been approved by each division of the General Land Office examining the subject, it was referred to the Chief of the Forest Lieu Division, with the certificates of all of the law clerks and other employees who had examined and approved the selection as above stated; the Chief of the Forest Lieu Division then approved the selection without special examination of any of the subjects investigated by the law clerks and chiefs of the several divisions as stated above; in reliance upon the approval of the latter, the selection was then approved by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and in like manner was approved and patent ordered issued by the Secretary of the Interior.

It is further stipulated that, for the purpose of this case, it shall be considered that the parties above named have been sworn and testified as heretofore set forth, subject to such objections as counsel for defendants now desire to interpose.

To which testimony contained in said stipulation, and the whole thereof, and to each and every part thereof, excepting as to the approval by the Secretary of the Interior, the defendants objected upon the ground that the same is incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial and particularly upon the ground that such testimony cannot be considered to impeach, qualify or limit the action of the Secretary of the Interior, or of the United States acting by and through him as such Secretary.

STIPULATION.

Whereupon it was stipulated that Mr. Charles J.

Winton, if called as a witness would testify as follows:

"That he and three of his former business associates came from Wisconsin, where they were engaged in business, in the year 1901, for the purpose of purchasing timber lands in Oregon, which trip resulted in a written contract between the Oregon and California Railroad Company, as vendor, and A. B. Hammond and Charles J. Winton, as purchasers, covering approximately 45,000 acres of these railroad lands situated in the Counties of Tillamook, Yamhill and Washington, all of which were included in the West Side grant with the exception of 160 acres. The lands covered by this contract are not involved in the present suit, No. 3340, but are involved in the separate suit instituted against Hammond and Winton and others, being suit No. 3449. The contract referred to was dated August 16, 1901, but was in fact executed early in September of the same year, when Mr. Winton made a second trip to Oregon for that purpose. This general statement is made to explain the references by Mr. Winton in his testimony to the different trips to Oregon. The transactions referred to in the testimony of Mr. Winton now offered occurred after the signing of the contract dated August 16, 1901, and during Mr. Winton's second trip to Oregon, which was some time in September, 1901."

Whereupon it was further stipulated that the George H. Andrews referred to by witness in his testimony was George H. Andrews who, as shown by other testimony in this case was for many years acting land agent and secretary of the Oregon & California Railroad Company, and who died about two years ago, to all of which testimony the defendants objected upon the ground that the same is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and particularly upon the ground that it appears from the testimony of Winton that the so-called verbal option was not in fact or in law an option, but if anything, a general conversation with a prospective purchaser of some of these lands; that it does not appear that Andrews, either as secretary or acting land agent, had any authority to make or offer to make a verbal or any option; that the terms of the verbal option were not reduced to writing, were not certain either as to price or quantity or location, and the same would be void under the statute of frauds because not in writing and void because uncertain; that the minds of the parties did not meet either as to price, acreage, time or terms.

Whereupon counsel for defendants admitted that contract No. 6242 of date August 16, 1901, was executed by the Oregon & California Railroad Company, as party of the first part and A. B. Hammond and Charles J. Winton, as parties of the second part, and that it was executed by the Company in the words stated and that this is the contract referred to in the testimony of witness.

Whereupon a certified copy of this contract of August 16, 1901, as recorded in the county records was admitted in evidence on behalf of the Government, to which contract reference is made in this Statement of the Evidence, as if the same were fully written herein and the same may be considered a part of this Statement of the Evidence.

Whereupon it was stipulated that said witness C. J. Winton, would further testify as follows:

"Q. What else did you have to do with Mr. Andrews at that time in reference to the purchase of these lands, and what else did you do?

A. I talked with Mr. Andrews regarding the timber resources of Oregon, chance of manufacturing, and asked him as to what his opinion was as to my coming to Oregon to live—whether there was an opportunity here of carrying on a successful active operation in his judgment, and he told me that there was and that he thought I could make no mistake in coming, and before I left for my home—I am not sure whether it was on that trip or the third trip I made, because I came to Oregon a third time in the Fall—it was on the second trip, I think I am correct in saying it was on the second trip, and I had a verbal option from Mr. Andrews on one hundred thousand acres of Southern Pacific land, or the Oregon and California land—

Q. When you speak of the Southern Pacific lands you refer to the lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company—

A. Which were in Oregon.

Q. Which is a part of the Southern Pacific system, so far as the operation is concerned?

A. Yes, sir. The lands upon which I had this option embraced all the so-called Oregon and California Railroad lands in the State of Oregon, and were to be selected in lots of not less than ten thousand acres in one locality, burned spots and bare spots thrown out, and the price was eight dollars an acre, and the terms were one-tenth down, and the balance in nine annual payments, six per cent interest. The price on the lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company had been advanced—their general price—from seven to eight dollars per acre, shortly after the purchase made by Mr. Hammond and myself of the Tillamook tract.

Q. The first thing you did when you came to Portland on the second trip was to go before Mr. Andrews in company with Mr. Hammond and close up your contract?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your option for additional lands was a subsequent transaction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long was it before you returned home on that trip that you had this conversation with Mr. Andrews with reference to the purchase of additional railroad lands?

A. We had talked in a general way about different tracts of lands that he was offering for sale and during one of those conversations I brought up the proposition of getting an option on one hundred thousand acres from him in groups, as I have stated. This—shall I tell you what was in my mind on that thing, or don't you care?

Q. Go ahead and state completely the negotiations you had with Mr. Andrews upon that subject, give the nature of the understanding you had with him, and any purpose you had you may add by way of explanation.

A. He gave me the option and said that this would mean the withdrawal of the Oregon and California lands in the State of Oregon from market until we had made our selections.

Q. That is—now, to make that definite, Mr. Winton, he gave you an option to select one hundred thousand acres from all of the unsold railroad lands?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The lands to be in tracts of not less than ten thousand acres in any one particular locality or watershed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the price was to be eight dollars an acre?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long was the option to run?

A. The option was to run until I could tell him definitely whether we would make the purchase, and payment would be made then of one-tenth the purchase price.

Q. That is when you exercised the option?

A. When we made the selections.

Q. But how long were you to have to make the selection—how long after you got home?

A. A year to make the selection, if we told him we would take it—we were to have a year to make the selections.

Q. How long were you to have to tell him whether you would take it?

A. Until I could confer with my associates.

Q. That is after your return home?

A. The second time.

Q. And he understood in a general way that that would be within a couple of weeks or so—something like that?

A. Something like that.

Q. Now, did you have any contract in writing covering that option?

A. No contract in writing, no writing about it.

Q. You simply had a verbal option and probably an understanding that some written agreement would be made if you notified him that you and your associates would exercise the option?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. After your return to your home after the second trip you did not exercise the option, and so notified him, I assume?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was the end of that transaction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For a course of two or three weeks, then, you had under consideration, as you understand it, had the right to exercise the general option which you have described?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, now, why didn't you exercise that option, Mr. Winton?

A. I favored exercising that option. My associates thought it would be better—they didn't favor it and they were in the majority and I let it lapse.

Q. What objection did they have to the deal?

A. They knew of the lands that we were buying on the Kilches River for less money, and I told them that we could buy claims here—at least they were so represented to me and we had bought some of them for less money than the railroad company's offer. We could get them direct from the homesteaders at from six to six and a half an acre; the railroad company asked eight dollars.

Q. Who made that objection? Who of your associates objected to the exercising of this option upon the ground that you have just stated?

A. Why, it was talked over in a general meeting that we had, and that was the conclusion arrived at.

Q. How did Mr. Mortenson feel on that subject; how did he express himself, I mean?

A. I don't know as I could say. He has generally been pretty lenient with me in letting me have my own way in transactions we have been interested; I think he would have agreed if I had urged him to. I wasn't perhaps as strong in my conviction that that was the thing we ought to do as—I don't remember how he expressed himself on that.

Q. Do you remember how the Gilberts expressed themselves?

A. I think it was the general talk that we had better rest a little bit and await developments.

Q. Do you remember how Mr. Ross and Mr. Smith expressed themselves with reference to this option?

A. I think Mr. Ross didn't favor buying it.

Q. Well, now, if you knew that you could get lands from homesteaders at six dollars and a half an acre, why did you favor the purchasing of timber lands from the railroad company at eight dollars an acre?

A. I thought it was a chance to do a big amount of business on a small amount of money. The selecting of that land would tie up all the railroad company's lands in Oregon for a year, and I didn't think it could be done inside of two years. In the meantime we would select out the choice tracts of ten thousand acres at eight dollars an acre, and I thought we could in turn sell them and make a good turn on them at an advance over what we had paid.

Q. Well, now, neither you nor your associates had learned of anything that influenced you in determining whether you would exercise that option?

A. Not a thing. The question of the title of these lands never came up in any way, shape or manner that we have had any occasion to consider it until this agitation in 1907. We considered that the contract that we had with the Oregon and California Railroad Company was just as good as though we had a contract with the United States Government for that much land, and that we got exactly the same title.

Q. I understood you to say yesterday that you and Mr. Mortenson and your associates on your return to Wisconsin, the first trip, considered that you could afford to pay more for these railroad lands than for the homestead lands because of your confidence in the titles?

A. And the fact that they were grouped up. It costs money to group up lands. Some one has to stay here and meet the man when he comes in to sell, got to meet him and wait for him until the time comes when he wants to sell.

Q. Now, if that consideration influenced your associates and yourself on your first trip to Oregon, what occurred between these two trips that you know of that induced your associates to reverse their position and recommend not taking these additional lands because homestead lands could be bought for less?

A. Well, the transaction of these one hundred thousand acres was a large transaction and they didn't care to go into a transaction of that magnitude; they didn't want to obligate themselves for that much money. The business had developed into one of a great deal larger magnitude in just a few months than any of us contemplated when we first came to Oregon and it was turned down on that account.

Whereupon Frank Griffith, called as a witness on behalf of the complainant, and being duly sworn, testified: That he is in the employ of the Government at the present time and has been in its service since 1899, and during that time he has been employed in the Interior Department and under assignment to the attorneys for the Government in connection with public land cases and is at the present time assigned by the Interior Department to assist counsel for the Government in this

Oregon and California land grant case and other public land cases; that at request of counsel for Government in this case he examined the files of the office of the Secretary of the Interior and the General Land Office with reference to all correspondence and all documents relating to land grants of the Oregon and California Railroad Company that are involved in this suit. He found among the files of the General Land Office and the office of the Secretary of the Interior, correspondence relating to the construction of the Act of April 10, 1869, which has been introduced in evidence in this case as Government's Exhibit 109, and this exhibit together with the other documents that have been introduced in evidence by the defendants in connection therewith, constitute all of the letters, files and other records relating to that question which are on file in the office of the Secretary of the Interior and the General Land Office; he made a careful search to ascertain if what he has stated is true, extending over a period of several weeks. He made different trips, once in regard to the land office and at another time in regard to the Secretary of the Interior's office and examined every document on file in either office relating to these two grants; these files included the letters that had been received by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, or by the Secretary of the Interior, in any way appertaining to these grants, or at least, the files purport to contain those letters.

"Q. I will ask you whether during the early administration of the Oregon and California Railroad Company land grants, being the Act of July 25, 1866, and the Act of May 4, 1870, involved in this cause, who, if any one, acted as the medium of communication between the railroad company or its officers on the one hand, and the Interior Department, or Commissioner of the General Land Office on the other part?

Mr. Fenton: I object to that as calling for the opinion of the witness, and his conclusion from numerous documents and files and from the correspondence itself, and is therefore not competent, the documents being the best evidence.

A. George H. Williams, both while he was in the Senate and was Attorney General for the United States.

Mr. Townsend: Q. About how many communications did you find which were presented to the commissioner of the General Land Office or the Secretary of the Interior by George H. Williams which emanated from the Oregon and California Railroad Company or its officers relating to these land grants?

Mr. Fenton: Same objection.

A. I should say about forty-five.

Mr. Townsend: Q. Did those letters relate to varied subjects or to one particular subject?

Mr. Fenton: Same objection.

A. They related to every subject connected with the road.

Mr. Townsend: Q. Including filing maps of location, etc., of lands, issuance of patents, and subjects of that kind?

A. Yes."

Whereupon the witness further testified that during a part of the time he was engaged in examining the records of these offices Mr. Townsend, counsel for the Government, personally participated with him in the work. A. A. Hoehling, Jr., is the Washington Attorney, or one of the Washington attorneys, of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, the California and Oregon Railroad Company, Central Pacific Railroad Company, and Southern Pacific Railroad Company, or allied companies which had land grants. Witness during that time, and while he was examining the records of the General Land Office and of the office of the Secretary of the Interior, found Mr. Hoehling or his assistants engaged in a search of those records relating to land grants of the Oregon and California Railroad Company. Witness is familiar with Government's exhibit 105, being "Statement of facts relative to the incorporation and organization of the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Salem, Oregon," and found a copy of that pamphlet in the files of the office of the Secretary of the Interior. Whereupon, upon cross examination the witness further testified that he did not read the whole of Government's Exhibit 105, but from the outside cover of it and about the last page of it, he would say that it is the same thing. He did not read either of them all the way through;

he read the outside cover and the last page. He saw no more than one pamphlet there, that is the only one of its kind that he saw on file back there were other pamphlets but not on that subject. The one he saw was Government's Exhibit 105. He was going through those files on two different trips. The trip that he found the pamphlet was in 1912, about the end of March. He found these various documents, including the correspondence, and communications from the various companies to the Commissioner of the General Land Office and the Secretary of the Interior pretty well scattered around the General Land Office. They did not keep the same system; whether the system was bad or not he would not want to say, but it was the old style system of filing that was followed, there was a place for everything, but nearly everything was in that place. It goes by years. They would just put on the year 1868, and everything that related to a railroad company for that year would be there; there would be a band right on the outside of it, but it just goes by the year. There is a band around 1869, too, and if that band happened to get loose and the papers detached, the papers for the several years might be mixed. He could not say whether the files of the Oregon Central of Salem were separately kept or not, and would not say that they were found indiscriminately among the files of the Oregon and California Railroad Company and the Oregon Central, West Side. He does not recollect whether he found a separate file for the Act of May 4, 1870, or found a separate file for the Oregon Central. He saw that Book of Letters Received, but did not pay much attention to that part, because there was not much correspondence there at that time. It was generaly given under the name of the person who wrote the letter. No one showed him where these files were, as he was pretty well acquainted where they were, or where they ought to be, but he went down with another fellow and they hunted for them and found them. He had worked at this thing for over thirteen years and knew where all of those files were and where they ought to be.

STIPULATION.

Whereupon it was stipulated that the court should take judicial notice of the pleadings, records, files and proceedings in each of the suits in equity referred to in Exhibit No. 10 of the joint and several answer of the defendants Oregon and California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company and Stephen T. Gage herein.

Whereupon Richard Koehler, called as a witness on behalf of complainant, being first duly sworn, testified; that he now lives and has lived in Portland since 1874; that he was born in Germany; in 1874 he came to the United States as the financial agent or representative of the German bondholders of the Oregon and California Railroad Company under its bond issue of 1870 and some subsequent issues; he was connected with the railroad in various capacities as the representative of the bondholders committee jointly with Mr. Villard and others for some time, and when the road was reorganized in 1881 became vice-president; was vice-president before that and was manager or local manager of the property. When the road was placed in the hands of a receiver in January 1885 he became such receiver and had charge of and managed the road during the receivership until June 6, 1888, when the receivership terminated. He then became general manager of the railroad and acted in that capacity until 1904. He is and was familiar with the railroad, the nature of its property, the character of the track, extent of the track, extent and character of the rolling stock, depots, buildings and other equipment, and has been so familiar since shortly after he came to Oregon in 1874. At the time the mortgage of July 1, 1887 was executed the Oregon and California Railroad Company owned 451 miles of railroad in Oregon; the mortgage covered that, together with any additional mileage that the railroad might afterwards acquire, and the company had this number of miles of railroad as early as January 19, 1885. After the railroad was reorganized in 1887 and 1888, as set forth in the pleadings and evidence in this case, the railroad was extended from Ashland to the southern boundary line of the state, connecting with the line which had been extended from the south; since that time the company has constructed and has bought and reconstructed a number of miles of railroad, until the present mileage is about 661 miles and a fraction, but he does not know the exact mileage at this very moment, but would have to refer to some of the annual reports or statements, but it is over 660 miles. In his judgment the railroad of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, including all equipment and rolling stock, and the other property mentioned in the mortgage, on July 1, 1887, with the exception of the land grant lands, was of the value at that time about $50,000 a mile. To which last named testimony the defendants objected as incompetent and immaterial, but the competency does not go to the qualification of the witness to testify on that subject, and it was understood that this objection should go to all the rest of the testimony of the witness upon this subject. The witness further testified that the value of the road, after that time, has increased and to-day with its 660 miles of track, or more, he thinks the reasonable cash value of the road exceeds $50,000 a mile. The mortgage of July, 1887, restricted the bond issue to $30,000 a mile, that is, bonds were issued in accordance with the terms of the mortgage, and these bonds were never issued to a greater extent than the limitation provided for in the mortgage. Whereupon upon cross examination on behalf of the defendant Union Trust Company the witness further testified: That in his testimony he estimated the value of the road at the time of the Union Trust Company mortgage at $50,000 a mile and bases that figure upon his remembrance of the value of the railroad property generally, the cost of construction of railroads, and its prospective earning power. These are the three elements he would mention, and also his knowledge of railroad property generally. The road was finished to a connection with the lines of the Central Pacific in the State of California, except the part to be built over the Siskiyou Mountain Range. While this construction was quite expensive, yet it would have created practically a through line between the Northwest and Portland, Oregon, and San Francisco, and there was to be expected a large amount of passenger travel as well as freight travel to be gradually developed. He took this into consideration when he stated that the property was worth $50,000 a mile. He figured that if the connection was made with the California and Oregon line in California, there would be a future probably for the road. If connection had been absolutely impossible for whatever reason it may have been, the value would have been less, how much less he is not prepared to say. The cost of construction from Ashland south was very great. That was an expensive piece of road to build, that is to a connection with the California and Oregon line over the Siskiyou Mountains. The road was only once in the hands of a receiver, but it was near bankruptcy often; it was near bankruptcy in 1884, but never came to actual bankruptcy until January, 1885. His testimony that the value of the road has increased since that time up to the present, is based also upon the consideration of the traffic arrangements between the railroad and the Southern Pacific and what is denominated by the Government as the Southern Pacific System. Without through traffic, the value of the property would not be as much as it is by enjoying this through traffic. Suppose that in the future, or immediately, or at any time these traffic arrangements should cease, and the Southern Pacific, instead of continuing to use the line as at present, should use the Natron cut-off, which comes into the Oregon and California at Eugene, and connectes with the Central Pacific at Weed, and suppose in addition to that, that a parallel line down the Willamette Valley should connect at Eugene with this line over the Central Pacific at Weed, he could not give any estimate what the Oregon and California line from Portland to Ashland would be worth, but thought however that the increase in population all over this section of the country would in part at least compensate for any loss of travel which at present is enjoyed by the only line between Portland and San Francisco. A condition is possible when it would not be the only line down through the Willamette Valley and there is now a line known as the "Oregon Electric" running to Eugene. If traffic arrangements were made so as to connect that up and go across over to Weed then the Oregon and California line from Eugene to the southern boundary of the state would not grow in value as if it remained a monopoly; it would be a local line beginning at Portland and ending at Ashland, with no transcontinental connections whatever, unless it found its own independent connections in California, and unless it should go on and build, say from Ashland, a separate line on down through, but as the conditions are now, it would have no connections with anybody or any other line, except its own. To which last named testimony counsel for complainant objected for the reason that the Act of July 25, 1866, requires the operation of the railroad from Portland to the southern boundary line of the state and from there connecting with the California and Oregon Railroad in California to the Central Pacific in California, as a continuous line. Witness further testified upon redirect examination, that on July 1, 1887, the railroad from Ashland to the southern boundary line was nearly completed and the same was true of the railroad on the California end northerly to connect with it and that the contract for the construction of the railroad was made early in the year 1887 and work was well along at that time. In the valuation of the road on July 1, 1887, he had taken into consideration the connection of the two lines. He thinks the name of the road constructing the Natron cut-off is the Oregon and Eastern Railroad Company. He is now exclusively an official of the Oregon and Washington Railroad and Navigation Company. He would not go so far as to assume that there will be no future railroads constructed unless there is an increase in business which justifies the investment. He has not taken into consideration the construction of future roads in making his estimates, but does not believe there will be any future road constructed for the sole purpose of depreciating the value of this railroad. The railroad of the Oregon and California Railroad Company is in his opinion an essential link in the railroad service of the Pacific Coast, and in his judgment this railroad will always possess a value, not only for the local business, but as a connecting link in the general railroad systems of the United States, and particularly the Pacific Coast, but he would say that there is a possibility that several lines of railroad may be built within territory which permits of better operating features as to grades and curvature than the Oregon and California extension presents, but that fact does not change his opinion as to the value of the property.

STIPULATION.

Whereupon it was stipulated that Richard Koehler if called as a witness by the complainant, would testify that the Southern Pacific Company, one of the defendants in this case, is solvent and financially responsible and financially able to pay all outstanding bonds of the defendant, Oregon and California Railroad Company, the payment of which has been guaranteed by the Southern Pacific Company, as set forth in the pleadings and as shown by the evidence and stipulation as to the facts in this case. But the defendants object to the testimony as incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant. Whereupon the complainant offered in evidence that certain contract, dated November 11, 1902, between the Central Pacific Railway Company and the Oregon and California Railroad Company, as parties of the first part, and the Pokegama Sugar Pine Lumber Company, as party of the second part, being a certified copy of the original contract filed in the office of the County Clerk for Klamath County, Oregon, which was admitted in evidence and marked Government's Exhibit 127, which said Government's Exhibit 127 is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement, of the Evidence and identified herein as Government's Exhibit 127.

STIPULATION.

Whereupon it was stipulated by and between the parties hereto that all the facts and circumstances proven by Government's Exhibit 109, should for all purposes be deemed to have been specifically pleaded in detail in the bill of complaint herein, and that the admissibility of said evidence and the legal effect thereof should in all respects be the same as if all of said facts and circumstances had ben set out in detail in said bill of complaint; and that a formal amendment to said bill of complaint may be made at any time herein, in this court or in the appellate court, to carry out the purpose and intent of this stipulation. And it was further stipulated by and between the parties that the replication filed by the complainant herein shall have the same force and effect as if filed after the filing of the amended answers of the defendants and all amendments to the amended answer, the purpose hereof being to waive the filing of a second replication subsequent to the aforesaid amendments to the answers. It was further stipulated by and between the parties hereto that all of the evidence in this case shall be deemed to have been taken after all of the amendments had been made to the pleadings and the issues framed. It was further stipulated that no further pleadings, answer or amendment on the part of the defendants shall be necessary or required as to the facts and circumstances proven by Government's Exhibit 109, to which the stipulation hereinbefore made refers. It was further stipulated by and between the parties that the corporate records of the defendant Orgon and California Railroad Company shall be considered in evidence as Government's Exhibit 129, and that the originals may be withdrawn, and that such portions thereof as either party may desire may be included in the printed record in this cause and made a part of this statement of facts, subject to any objection that either party may have that the same are incompetent, immaterial, or irrelevant. Whereupon the complainant offered in evidence certified copies of letters on file in the office of the Secretary of the Interior and General Land Office, collectively, and identified as Government's Exhibit 130, it being agreed that the original certified copies may be withdrawn and the documents read into the record, which said Government's Exhibit 130, as read into the record, is in words and figures as follows to-wit: Letter of George H. Williams addressed to Secretary of the Interior O. H. Browning, dated January 19, 1869:

'Senate Chamber,
Washington, Jan'y. 19, 1869.

"Sir:

I respectfully invite your attention to Sec. (1) of an Act entitled 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad & telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California to Portland in Oregon approved July 25, 1866,' providing for the disposition of the lands granted by said Act in the State of Oregon.

"Enclosed please find a pamphlet entitled 'Statement of Facts' which fully sets forth the rights & claims of a company designated by the Legislature of said State in October, A. D. 1868, commonly called the 'East Side Company.'

"Enclosed also please find a paper signed by nine members of the Oregon Senate protesting against the action of said Legislature in October A. D. 1868, in which the rights & claims of a company designated in October 1866 commonly called the 'West Side Company' are fully stated.

"I have nothing to say as to the rights or claims of either company, but in view of the fact that the Articles of Incorporation of the West Side Company were not filed in the office of the Secretary of State until after its designation by the Legislature in 1866, & in view also of the fact that the East Side Company cannot file its assent as required by the Sixth Section of said Act, I am apprehensive that the benefits of said Act will be wholly lost to the State unless something is done to prevent it. Will you be good enough to advise me if there is anything in the action of your Department or the views you entertain of this matter making unnecessary the proposed legislation.

Yours truly,

Geo. H. Williams.

Hon. O. H. Browning,
Secty. Interior,
Washington, D. C."

Also letter written by Secretary O. H. Browning to George H. Williams in response to the foregoing, dated January 20, 1869:

"DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

Washington, D. C. January 20, 1869.

Sir:

I have received your letter of the 19th instant, and the accompanying copy of S. Bill 770, to amend 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California to Portland in Oregon, approved July 25th 1866,' with other papers relating to the subject.

Said act of 1866 required the Legislature of Oregon to designate a company organized under the laws of the State to locate and construct so much of said road as was in Oregon, and that the Company so designated should file its 'assent' to the Act of Congress within one year after its passage.

By a resolution adopted by the Legislature, October 10, 1866, the Oregon Central Railroad Company was designated to locate and construct said road in Oregon.

Two companies called the Oregon Central Railroad Company claim to have been so designated. These it appears are locally called the East-Side Company and the West-Side Company.

At the date of the adoption of said resolution by the legislature neither company had been organized as required by the laws of Oregon. The West-Side Company however filed its assent to this Department within the year.

By a resolution adopted by the legislature in October, 1868, the East Side Co. was designated. The purpose of the bill as understood, is to authorize this company to file its 'assent' without prejudice to the rights or interests of the other company, and you ask for an expression of my views as to whether there is any necessity for the proposed legislation.

In reply I have the honor to state, that as the matter now stands, the grant so far as the portion of road in Oregon is concerned, has lapsed, while the grant for that portion of the road situate in California is still in force, and some legislation by Congress is necessary to revive the grant for the Oregon portion of the road.

The proposed bill, if it becomes a law, will, in my opinion, accomplish that purpose.

On the 13th instant, I declined to act upon maps filed by the West-Side Company 'in the absence of a judicial decision as to the rights of the claimants, or some action by Congress upon the subject.' I enclose a copy of said letter.

The papers which accompanied your letter are herewith returned.

I am, Sir,

Your Obt. Servant,

O. H. Browning,

Secretary.

Hon. George H. Williams,

United States Senate.

Also letter written by J. H. Mitchell, signed as Attorney for the Oregon Central Railroad Co., Salem, Oregon, addressed to Honorable Jacob D. Cox, Secretary of the Interior, dated April 12, 1869:

"Washington, D. C.,

April 12th, 1869.

Hon. Jacob D. Cox,

Secretary of the Interior.

Dear Sir:

By the terms of an Act passed by Congress and approved July 25, 1866, entitled 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, in Oregon,' it was provided that the grant so far as Oregon was concerned should go to such company thereafter organized under the laws of Oregon as the Legislature of that State should designate. The sixth section of such act also required the assent of the company so designated to be filed in your Department within one year from the date of the passage of such Act.

No company was designated, however, until October, 1868, when the Legislature by Joint Resolution, which I herewith transmit, designated the Oregon Central Railroad Company, of Salem, Oregon, as the company to take and manage the grant.

By an act passed June 25, 1868, the time in which the first twenty miles, and in fact the whole road was to be completed was extended, and by another act passed at the recent session of Congress, and approvd April 10th, 1869, the time in which the assent of the company designated was to be filed in the Department of the Interior was extended giving one year from that date. This assent will be presented for filing as soon as I can return to Oregon and have a resolution for that purpose adopted by the company designated in Act 1868, which is the only company that ever has been designated by the Legislature. And I now call attention to this matter in order that no action may be taken by your department that will in any way recognize another company known as 'The Oregon Central Railroad Co. of Portland, Oregon, which never has been designated by the Legislature, and which has been attempting to secure some recognition by your department as being entitled to the grant. And in this connection I would attract your attention to a letter of Secretary Browning addressed to Senator Williams dated January 20, 1869, wherein your predecessor decided that unless some such legislation as the act recently passed was had the grant would lapse. In proof of the statement here made I beg leave to submit the accompanying documents which this communication I ask may be filed in your office, to the end that no action may be taken until the assent of the Oregon Central Railroad Co. of Salem, Oregon, can be filed.

Very respectfully,

J. H. Mitchell,

Attorney for the Oregon Central Railroad Co., Salem, Oregon."

"Office of the O. C. R. R. Co.

Salem, Oregon,

June 9th, 1869.

Dear Sir:

Herewith please find enclosed proceedings of the Board of Directors of the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Salem, Oregon, assenting to the provisions of the Act of Congress of July 25, 1866, and acts amendatory thereof, which assent I am instructed to present in your office for filing. In doing so I would respectfully attract your attention to a letter of your predecessor (Secretary Browning) of date January 20th, A. D. 1869, also to report of Senate Committee on Public Lands made March 22, 1869, a copy of which I herewith enclose; and would also attract your attention to an Act of Congress approved April 10, 1869, based on said report, whereby the Act of July 25, 1866, aforesaid entitled 'An Act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California to Portland in Oregon' was amended so as to authorize the company designated to file its assent within one year from that date. A map showing the location of the road for the first sixty miles will be forwarded at an early day.

Hoping enclosed assent will be filed and requesting an acknowledgment of receipt of same.

I have the honor to be very respectfully,

Geo. E. Cole, Secretary O. C. R. R. Co.

Also letter signed by George H. Williams, addressed to Honorable J. D. Cox, Secretary Department of the Interior, Washington, D. C., dated September 21, 1870:

"Portland, Oregon, Sept. 21st, 1870.

Sir:

J. Gaston, Secy of the Oregon Central R. R. Company, has handed me your letter of August 2, 1870, addressed to him as the President of said company, in which you state that the 'assent' offered by said company, to the provisions of an Act of Congress entitled 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland to Astoria and McMinnville in the State of Oregon,' approved May 4, 1870, will be accepted as a sufficient 'Assent' to said Act, if it be shown that the company which Mr. Gaston represents is 'the Company for whose benefit the said grant was made.' I can state of my own knowledge that the company of which Mr. Gaston was formerly President, and of which he is now Secy, is the corporation entitled to the benefits of said Act, and for which it was passed.

The East Side Oregon Central R. R. Co. was regularly disincorporated and dissolved by voluntary action of its stockholders, before the above named Act of Congress became a law; and the company which Mr. Gaston represents is now the only corporation under its name in this State.

Respectfully yours,

Geo. H. Williams,

Hon. J. D. Cox,
Secy. Dept. of Interior,
Washington, D. C."

Also letter signed by J. Gaston as Secretary O. C. R. R. Co., addressed to Honorable J. D. Cox, Secretary Department of Interior, Washington, D. C., dated September 21, 1870:

Portland, Oregon, Sept. 21st, 1870.

Sir:

Enclosed please find certain documents, which please place on file, with the 'Assent' heretofore sent you on the 18th of July, 1870.

I am directed to notify you that the Oregon Central Railroad Company and their assignee, The Willamette Valley Railroad Company, objects and protests against the withdrawal of any public lands for the Northern Pacific Railroad Company on their line between Portland, Oregon, or Vancouver, W. T., and Puget Sound, until such reasonable time as the two first named companies can file their maps on their line between Portland and Astoria, Oregon; for the reason, that the land Grants of these several companies, on these lines, will overlap, each other, and the grant of the first named companies being prior in time, is prior in right.

Respectfully yours,

J. Gaston,
Sec. O. C. R. R.

Hon. J. D. Cox,
Secy. Dept. Interior,
Washington, D. C."

Whereupon the defendants objected to the admissibility of each of said documents and to the whole thereof, as immaterial and irrelevant.

Whereupon complainant rested its case in chief.

TESTIMONY FOR DEFENDANTS.

Defendants proceeded to offer testimony in their behalf.

Whereupon B. A. McALLASTER, called as a witness on behalf of defendants, being first duly sworn, upon direct examination testified that he resides at Oakland, California, and is Land Commissioner of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, Land Commissioner of the Central Pacific Railway Company, Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and Southern Pacific Land Company, and was appointed by the Board of Directors of the Oregon and California Railroad Company its Land Commissioner September 28, 1908, effective September 21, 1908.

Whereupon witness produced a certified copy of the resolution of said Board of Directors, which was offered received in evidence marked "Defendants' Exhibit 251," and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, identified herein as "Defendants Exhibit 251."

Whereupon witness produced a copy of his appointment by the Board of Directors of the Central Pacific Railway Company as its Land Commissioner, which was offered and received in evidence and marked "Defendants Exhibit 252," and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of evidence, identified as "Defendants Exhibit 252."

Whereupon witness further testified that he was appointed Land Commissioner of the Central Pacific Railway Company on September 26, 1908 as of date September 21, 1908, and was appointed Land Commissioner of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company by the Board of Directors September 23, 1908, effective September 21, 1908. Whereupon defendants offered in evidence the minute book of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, the minute book of the Central Pacific Railway Company, and the minute book of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, showing the adoption of these various resolutions, and asked leave to withdraw same and substitute copies thereof marked as heretofore. Whereupon the resolution of the Board of Directors of Southern Pacific Railroad Company was marked and identified as "Defendants Exhibit 253," which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, identified herein as "Defendants Exhibit 253."

STIPULATION.

Whereupon it was agreed between the parties that the Southern Pacific Railroad Company is the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California, and not the defendant Southern Pacific Company, and the so-called Southern Pacific Railroad Company is the company that was consolidated pursuant to the laws of the State of California, the constituent companies consisting of the former Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California and corporations bearing the same corporate name organized under the laws of Arizona and New Mexico.

Whereupon witness further testified that he first entered the land department of the Union Pacific Railway Company, in the branch office at Kansas City, in December, 1882, as a clerk; that office then handling what were formerly land grants of the Kansas Pacific Railway Company, extending from Kansas City to Denver, Colorado, and the land grant of the Denver Pacific Railway and Telegraph Company, extending from Denver, Colorado, to Cheyenne, Wyoming. In 1887 that Kansas City office was consolidated with the Omaha office of the Union Pacific Railway Company, which office had previously handled the Union Pacific land grant from Omaha, Nebraska, to Ogden, Utah, and at that time he was made chief clerk of the consolidated office. In May, 1890, he was appointed land commissioner of the consolidated office, and retained that position until September 21, 1908, and was land commissioner of the Union Pacific Land Department from 1890 to 1908; from 1882 to 1887 he occupied various desks in the office, and then in 1887 was made chief clerk of the consolidated office and had general charge of the entire office under the then land commissioner, and after his appointment as land commissioner, he had the administration of the land grants of the Union Pacific, Kansas Pacific and Denver Pacific companies, leasing lands, selling lands, appraising them, acquiring patents, and attending to all the duties pertaining to the land department. He was appointed by the executive committee of the Southern Pacific Company as land commissioner on or about the 8th of October, 1908, to take care of certain lots which that company owned in the towns of Russell City, Alameda County, California; Mina, Esmeralda County, Nevada, and Imlay, Humboldt County, Nevada. Whereupon defendants offered in evidence the instrument evidencing the appointment of witness as land commissioner of the Southern Pacific Company for the purposes stated by him, and asked leave to read the same into the records as "Defendants Exhibit 254," which said "Defendants Exhibit 254" is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified herein as "Defendants Exhibit 254." The Southern Pacific Company never has had a land department, within his knowledge. From 1882 to 1887 the Kansas City land office had charge of the Kansas Pacific land grant from Kansas City, Missouri, to Denver, Colorado, and the Denver Pacific Railway and Telegraph Company's land grant from Denver, Colorado, to Cheyenne, Wyoming. From 1887 to 1908 the consolidated office at Omaha cared for those two grants, and also the Union Pacific Railway Company grant from Omaha, Nebraska, to Ogden, Utah. The dates of the Acts of Congress making these grants to the Union Pacific and Central Pacific Railway from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean were July 1, 1862 and the amendatory acts of July 2, 1864.

The jurisdiction of the Central Pacific Railway Company in relation to its land grant, territorially, was from Ogden, Utah, to Sacramento, California, under the acts of 1862 and 1864, and from Roseville Junction, California, to the north line of the State of California under the act of July 25, 1866. The Central Pacific grant originally ran through to San Jose, but that grant was disposed of. The Central Pacific does not own it now from Sacramento to San Jose; the railroad between Sacramento and San Jose came back to the Central Pacific, but not the land.

The Southern Pacific Railroad Company held the grant from San Jose to Tres Pinos in California, and from Alcalde to Needles in California under the act of Congress approved July 27, 1866, and branch line grant from Mojave to a point near Yuma, Arizona, under the Act of Congress approved March 3, 1871.

The Central Pacific Railway Company now owns that portion of the grant in the State of California made to the California and Oregon Railroad Company under the act of July 25, 1866. As Land Commissioner he has jurisdiction over that portion of the grant of July 25, 1866 made to the California and Oregon Railroad Company, now owned by the Central Pacific Railway Company in California, and also the grant of land owned by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and also that portion of the grant of July 25, 1866 in Oregon now owned by the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and such jurisdiction also covers the unsold portion of the grant of May 4, 1870 owned by the Oregon and California Railroad Company. As Land Commissioner he keeps records showing the boundaries of the various grants; plats showing the location of the lands granted to the company and also those lost to the grant; records showing the applications filed by the company for patents; the issuance of patents; any and all contests or hearings in the land offices relating to the right of the company to receive patents for certain or any lands; records of the field examinations of the lands, of their appraisal, and the character and topography of the lands; records of sales made by contract or for cash; records of deeds made, and various and sundry other records necessary to know what is acquired, how disposed of, and what is left. He has a fairly complete set of the plats of the United States surveys, and copies of field notes to an extent, but not complete. The companies have tract books showing in a condensed way the various conditions of title, etc., although these are not now in use. The companies substituted for that a card record as to lands that had not been disposed of prior to the institution of the card record system. The card records do not show all the lands, because cards were not made for those lands which had been sold and deeded by the company prior to the time when the card record was instituted. Otherwise than that, they do show all of the land owned by the company or claimed by it. The tract books show the rest up to that time. The companies have reports showing the topography and character of the lands, occupancy of them, the values as estimated by the field agent who makes the examination. Those values are not always treated as being the market values. It is absolutely necessary that these various records, reports, etc., be kept full and complete and correct. Otherwise the companies could not handle the land grants at all.

In the execution of land sales, the companies use generally a deed which grants and conveys the land, and these forms are substantially the same as to each land grant. In cases where the companies may sell a piece of land for which patent has not yet been received by the company, or where there may be some occupancy that the companies would prefer to recognize the occupant and deal with him on a quitclaim deed rather than first dispossess him in order to put it where the companies could handle the tract with a grant and convey deed, the Companies use quitclaims for conveyances. There are very few quitclaim deeds used. They use quitclaim deeds where a former deed has ben lost by the grantee, who seeks a deed of further assurance, or a deed from the company to replace a lost deed that has not been recorded. He has three forms of Central Pacific deed. Form No. 3332 has been in use heretofore, but is not now used. Form 4501 is for the conveyance of land in which there is no right of way to be reserved for the railroad, and Form 4502 is the form in which rights of way are reserved, and these two forms are the ones customarily used at the present time to convey Central Pacific lands. Deeds of the other companies are similar in form. These forms 3332, 4501 and 4502 are not used for conveying Oregon and California Railroad Company lands, but they are substantially the same.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence Forms 3332, 4501 and 4502, which were received in evidence as "Defendants Exhibit 255," which is hereinafter set out and described, made a part of this statement of the evidence and so identified herein.

Whereupon witness further testified that Form 3332 is one used when the company has occasion to convey a tract of land that is unpatented but the company claims that it is entitled to a patent but has not yet received it, and that is the reason that form is used. Form 4501 is used for any patented land through which it is not necessary to reserve rights of way for the railroad, but occasionally it is necessary to include some special exceptions in particular cases. and for this there is a blank space left for such exceptions. Form 4502 is used in conveying lands through which it is necessary to reserve rights of way for the railroad. He had made no sales since his appointment as Land Commissioner of the Oregon and California Railroad Company of any consequence, and the only deeds that have been executed, with certain exceptions to be mentioned later, were deeds made in completion of contracts outstanding prior to the institution of this suit, that is to say, where there were executory contracts upon which partial payments had been made, which were in effect, where parties were entitled to their deeds on payment of the balance of the purchase price as they matured,—and in such cases the company has performed by executing the deeds called for by these contracts. Since this suit was instituted in September, 1908, there has been made a sale, in October, 1908, to the City of Sheridan of forty acres, as to which the City of Sheridan had previously instituted proceedings to condemn the tract for water supply, and the purchase price for this tract was $10.00 per acre,—$400.00. In December, 1908, a sale was made of 160 acres, at $2.50 per acre,—$400.00, to Franklin Martin, in settlement of a suit which Martin had brought some time before. This suit was not brought pursuant to any claim that he had a right to it at the $2.50 per acre under this statute. In December, 1910, the company sold a right of way to the Salem, Falls City and Western Railway Company, 3.20 acres at $15.62 per acre, total $50.00, pursuant to condemnation proceedings which had been instituted by that company. In May, 1912, the company sold to the Oregon Electric Railway Company a right of way, 2.60 acres, for $500.00, pursuant to condemnation proceedings. In January, 1910, the company sold a right of way to the Portland Southwestern Railway Company, number of acres not stated, total consideration $1220.80. That was also pursuant to condemnation proceedings. In June, 1910, the company sold to Roy W. Minkler 80 acres at $22.50 per acre—$1,800.00, and that sale was in settlement and compromise of a suit brought by Roy W. Minkler, one of the defendants in this suit. With the exceptions noted, no sales of Oregon and California Railroad Company lands have been initiated or consummated by him as Land Commissioner since his appointment or since the commencement of this suit.

The form of deed which the Oregon and California Railroad Company has been using in the consummation of the executory contracts for land that were contracted to be sold prior to the commencement of this suit, is Form No. 3398, which is regularly executed by the Vice President and Secretary of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and where they are trust lands, joined by the Union Trust Company. Whereupon defendants offered in evidence said Form 3398, which was received and marked "Defendants Exhibit 256," which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified herein as such.

Q. Now, I wish you would state, if you know, what the policy of the land department of the various companies that you have represented in the past, and that you now represent, has been in respect to promotion of settlement of any of these lands that are subject to or capable of settlement? What do you know about that?

Mr. Townsend: That is objected to, on the ground that it is immaterial and irrelevant, and particularly in view of the testimony of the witness that his personal knowledge as to the Oregon and California Railroad land grant is limited to the period commencing September 21, 1908, during which entire period the pleadings admit that all lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company have been withdrawn from sale, and therefore this witness can have no personal knowledge as to the policy of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and the testimony is therefore incompetent and hearsay.

A. The policy of the Union Pacific Railway Company was always to induce settlement by every means possible, for the reason that settlement means building up the country and traffic for the road. The policy of the Central Pacific Railway Company and of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company since my appointment has been along the same lines.

Q. What would have been the policy of the Oregon and California Railroad Company as to that class of lands but for the institution of this suit, if you know?

Mr. Townsend: That is objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, calling for a conclusion of the witness as to what would have been the policy, instead of evidence as to the actual policy of the company.

A. The policy would have been to have offered the lands for sale, had it not been for the fact that this suit had been instituted before I took hold of the department.

Q. And in making these offers of sale, what would have been the policy of the company as to inducement to promote settlement as to lands that were capable of settlement, if you know?

Same objection.

A. Well, the principal inducement that we offer is a long-time contract.

Q. What I mean is, would you have offered any inducements to promote the settlement of any of these lands that are capable of settlement, if you had the opportunity to sell?

Mr. Townsend: Same objection; and upon the further ground that it permits to the witness his own opinion as to what lands are capable of settlement.

A. Well, the efforts of the department are mainly directed to securing settlers.

Q. Is or is not this a policy which these land-grant roads have pursued from the beginning of your connection with them, and continued up to the present time wherever possible?

A. It has always been the policy to sell the lands to people who would settle on them and improve them.

Whereupon the witness further testified that he had prepared or caused to be prepared a tabular statement for each county in which some portion of the lands of the so-called East Side and West Side grants are situated, showing the record of deeds or contracts, selling or for the sale of the lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, which tabulated statement was prepared under his direction and supervision, and is an accurate transcript of these records. Whereupon witness produced the tabulated statement for inspection, and further testified that this tabulated statement had been checked up and found to be correct according to the recorded instruments, with the character of the instrument, the date, the name of the grantee, the description of the lands, and consideration stated, and the book and page of the various records. They show that information correctly, and in the conduct of his office these documents are relied upon by him as correct and as correctly stating the facts therein collated. Whereupon defendants offered in evidence said tabulated statements for Columbia, Washington, Multnomah, Tillamook, Yamhill, Polk, Marion, Lincoln, Linn, Lane, Douglas, Clackamas, Coos, Josephine, Curry, Jackson, and Klamath Counties, Oregon, and Clarke County Washington, which was marked collectively "Defendants Exhibit 257," which "defendants Exhibit 257" is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified herein as such.

Explaining how these documents were tabulated and from what sources of information they have been obtained, witness further testified that the fire of April 1906 destroyed all of the records of the land department, and after that it became necessary to restore those records from all sources from which the information could be obtained. In so doing, individuals were sent to the various counties, or arrangements made with abstract companies who had abstracts of record, to furnish the department with complete abstracts of all deeds which had been given by the Oregon and California Railroad Company. The same arrangements were made in respect to deeds of the other companies, and not only deeds, but contracts—anything—any document of record in the county records, which had been executed by or on behalf of the Railroad Company, were ordered abstracted in that manner, and those abstracts became the company record of the deeding of lands prior to the 1906 fire, and these are compiled from those abstracts. These abstracts and examinations thus made were furnished to him as the records of his office, upon which he acted, and upon which the company relied to re-establish the records of the land department after the fire of April, 1906, and witness has these original abstracts and reports for the inspection of counsel for the Government if desired. Witness is satisfied from these abstracts and from the reports thus made and obtained, that this tabulated statement is a correct record of what it purports to be, and he, as Land Commissioner, is acting upon that record. Whereupon defendants renewed their offer of these documents so tabulated and so compiled, heretofore herein referred to as "Defendants Exhibit 257."

Whereupon Counsel for Complainant interrogated

the witness, who further testified that he first came to San Francisco to take charge of the land department of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, together with these other companies mentioned by him, September 21, 1908, and prior to that time he had had nothing whatever to do with the land department of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, although he had inspected somewhat the records of the land department of the Oregon and California Railroad Company in May 1907. May, 1907, was the first time he saw any of the records of the land department of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, from which he compiled "Defendants Exhibit 257," and his knowledge as to the manner in which they were obtained is what he had to learn in order to carry on the office. He had nothing to do personally with the procuring of these records, and his knowledge was from what he learned in the office, and not from his personal contact with the transaction, as witness said he found the records in the office, and as to the manner in which they were obtained his knowledge was limited to what he had ascertained from the employees of the office, or otherwise, since he became connected with it.

Mr. Townsend: Now, the Government objects to the introduction of this Exhibit 257, on the ground that it is incompetent and hearsay, and no foundation has been laid.

Mr. Fenton: I was going to say that counsel for the Government, unless he withdraws this objection, puts us to the expense and necessity of calling the county recorder of each of these counties to check up personally these lists; and if he can satisfy himself that they are correct, I should be glad to have him do so, and save us that expense and delay.

Mr. Townsend: In response to that, I will state in the record, that I have no present reason to doubt the accuracy of these statements, but, in view of the manner in which they have been vouched for, not intending to challenge the good faith of the witness, still I do not feel justified in consenting that they be received in evidence at this time. However, if I can satisfy myself that they are correct in fact, the objection as to the manner of identifying the county records will not be urged as an objection.

Mr. Fenton: Very well. I will ask leave to withdraw these, and have the recorder and clerk put in the date of the record of each one of these documents in a column on the margin of them, and then return them to the files.

Mr. Singer: And certify to it.

Mr. Fenton: I will offer them for the present with that promise, and ask leave to withdraw them from the examiner for that purpose.

Mr. Townsend: The Government consents to the withdrawal of these documents for the purpose stated, reserving the right to either renew or waive its objection when the documents shall be reoffered as proposed.

Mr. Fenton: That will be all right. I would like to have it understood, Mr. Townsend, that all these re ords and files referred to by Mr. McAllaster are subje to your inspection, and tendered to you for that purpos if you should desire at any time to do so.

Mr. Townsend: I will not attempt to avail mysel of that privilege at this time, but will indicate later t the witness any records that I desire to inspect.

Received and marked as "Defendants Exhibit 257, and withdrawn as agreed.

Whereupon witness further testified that he, as Lan
Commissioner of the Oregon and California Railroa Company, has in his possession certain records require to be kept by him in the administration of these tw grants, known as the East Side and West Side grant and had prepared a typewritten statement of the resul shown by the tract books and cards referred to by hi as to the status of all lands within the limits of the Ea Side grant, so-called, and a similar statement of all lan within the limits of the West Side grant, so-called, as May 1, 1912, showing the total quantities lost by or o account of other grants, entries, etc., with the particular the total quantities realized, with the particulars, an the total deficiencies of each grant, and the causes ther of, which the witness then produced, and the same w identified and marked "Defendants Exhibit 258.
Whereupon witness testified that "Defendants Exhib 258" correctly states the status as of date May 1, 191 of that part of the grant situated in Oregon made b

Act of Congress approved July 25, 1866, and also the status as of date May 1, 1912, of the grant made by Act of Congress approved May 4, 1870. Whereupon counsel for Complainant reserved the right to object to the introduction of said document, after cross examination of the witness. Whereupon, the same was received and marked "Defendants Exhibit 258," which is hereinafter set out and described, and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified herein as such.

Whereupon witness further testified, in explanation of the figures representing the acres stated on Defendants Exhibit 258, that the information is contained in the company's land office records, and was obtained from examination of the General Land Office records and United States Local Land Office records, and this "Defendants Exhibit 258" correctly states, as shown by the company's land department records, and as shown by the records of the General Land Office and the United States Local Land Offices, the facts upon which this exhibit is based. These figures and notations explaining the figures are relied upon by him as correct in the administration of these grants. He has prepared a map showing the results disclosed by the records of the land department in his custody, as to the primary and indemnity lands of the so-called East Side and West Side grants, showing in colors lands patented to the company, granted or available under the grants but not patented, lost to the grants by other disposition made by the United States, and disposed of by the company. This map was prepared under his direction and supervision, and the information on which it was prepared is based upon the records of his office, and as in the case of the statement just presented, is based on information taken from the General Land Office and local land offices of the United States. He believes the map to be absolutely correct, and he, as Land Commissioner of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, acts upon it and relies upon its verity. Whereupon witness produced said map, and the same was received in evidence as "Defendants Exhibit 259," which is hereinafter set out and described, and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified herein as such.

In explanation of that map and the legends thereon, the witness says that the interior red lines on the map indicate the 20-mile or primary limits of the grant of July 25, 1866 on either side. The exterior red lines indicate the indemnity limits—the 30-mile limits on each side. The green interior lines up at the top of the map indicate the 20-mile limits of the grant of May 4, 1870, and the exterior green lines indicate the outer five-mile limits, or indemnity limits of the same grant. The green coloring on the sections indicates the patented and unpatented unsold lands of both grants, not including unselected indemnity lands. The sections colored carmine are lands covered by outstanding contracts of sale. The sections colored blue are those lands which have been deeded by the grantee companies. The sections colored yellow are lands lost to both grants by adverse entries. The sections colored brown are lands unavailable for indemnity selection because within forest or other reserves established subsequent to the grant. The sections enclosed within green lines are unselected indemnity, including pending suspended lists and unsurveyed lands. In other words, they are indemnity lands that either have not been selected or are in pending selection lists. The large body of land in yellow from Portland south to about Creswell, Lane County, Oregon, both within the place and indemnity limits of the grant of July 25, 1866, indicates lands which were lost to the grant by reason of entries or other disposals made by the United States before these grants became operative. The most of the losses came under the Donation acts and the Settlement acts in that territory. There were other causes of loss. To a very large extent these parcels marked in yellow are lands which were occupied or taken under the Donation or Settlement laws in the early settlement of Western and Southern Oregon, as ascertained by witness from his knowledge of the township plats and records in the General Land Office and in the United States Local Land Offices, obtained in various ways, and particularly in compiling this map. To a large extent, the lands indicated by a large valley in yellow, or a body of land in yellow indicated on this map, of which Roseburg, Douglas County, on the Umpqua River, is substantially the center, were lost by donation claims and homestead entries. That body of land also includes the Roseburg and Coos Bay Wagon Road grant, which was lost because the United States erroneously patented them under the wagon road grant instead of holding them for the railroad grant, to which they properly belonged.

Whereupon, counsel for complainant objected to the testimony of witness last above, as to whether the United States erroneously patented these lands, as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and a mere conclusion of law and fact by witness.

Whereupon witness further testified that it was a fact that these lands were lost to the Oregon and California Railroad Company and were granted or patented to the Wagon Road Company, and it is true that these lands in and about Roseburg, Douglas County, Oregon, that were taken under the Donation Land Laws, were settled, as witness understood, in the early settlement, and are largely in the agricultural portion of Douglas County. The lands indicated by the body of yellow surrounding the town of Medford, in Jackson County, are agricultural, and were lost to the company under the Donation Land Law and other settlement laws, long prior to the grant of July 25, 1866. That constitutes part of the Rogue River Valley, of which Medford is the central town. This yellow, all through on this map, shows lands that are situated in the valleys of Western Oregon, and which are chiefly in the agricultural portions thereof, to which counsel for complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Whereupon witness further testified that he had been through these lands on the train and particularly observed that in certain localities lands in sight from the rain were agricultural lands, and were being cultivated, nd he would not dispute that the Willamette Valley is ituated largely where that large body of yellow shown n this map is located, for it is a fact that the Willamtte Valley is so situated. The Umpqua Valley is situated in and about Roseburg, as shown on the map. The Rogue River Valley is situated in and about Medford. He has prepared another map of the unsold lands involved in this suit, showing as a result from the records of the company, the timbered and non-timbered lands of these grants, the topography of the country in which they are situated, and generally the character of these lands, which was marked as "Defendants Exhibit 260." The information indicating the different classes of lands indicated by the green and yellow coloring on the map, was obtained from the records of his office, based on General Land Office and United States local Land Office records. The information as to topography, streams, mountain ranges, etc., was taken from the plats in the office of the Surveyor General of the United States for Oregon. As a sample report showing information as to the topography, timbered character or non-timbered character, or other information for use in his office, used by him in connection with the field notes of the Surveyor General's office and the United States Land Office records, in the preparation of this map, witness says there are six original reports of field examination of lands which show the information required. He has all of the original reports in his office, of which this bunch of six is a sample, and they are all prepared in the same way under his direction by his employees and representatives, for the files of his office, and largely all on the same printed forms, although there have been different forms in use at different times. These reports are required by him to be made in the administration of the grant, and the Company acts upon and relies upon them and they are part of the files of his office as Land Commissioner.

Q. For the guidance of yourself as Land Commissioner, and in the administration of the land grant, is there any other way to obtain accurately the information contained in these reports, excepting in the way these have been obtained?

Mr. Townsend: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant, immaterial, a mere conclusion, and argumentative.

Q. I mean, any other practicable way?

A. No, sir.

Q. As Land Commission, in your experience with the various land grant companies to which you have referred and about which you have testified, is this the usual and ordinary way to obtain the information desired?

Same objection.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a man experienced in the operation and administration of land grants, and in ascertaining the value, the physical characteristics, situation, location, topography and timber contents, have these reports been obtained in the usual and ordinary way by you as an expert, in the conduct and management of these particular land grants?

Mr. Townsend: Objected to upon the same ground.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you prepared to say, from these records, reports, and the records of the United States Land Office, and the records of the Surveyor General's office, that this map—Defendants' Exhibit 260—correctly represents what it purports to represent?

Mr. Townsend: That is objected to on the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial; that it is based entirely upon hearsay and self-serving declarations made by the officers and agents of the railroad company; that the witness has not qualified himself to testify as to the character of the lands included within this grant, and that his testimony is necessarily hearsay and incompetent; and upon the further ground that the so-called classification of these lands is a mere arbitrary classification, and does not describe the lands with reference to any issue involved in this case; and upon the further general ground that it is immaterial in this case whether the lands are timbered lands, agricultural lands, or what their character may be.

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Mr. Fenton: Defendants now offer these six sample reports as a physical illustration of the method pursued by the Land Commissioner, and as part of the files of his office, and ask to have the same marked as "Defendants' Exhibit 261." I now tender to the Government's counsel all the records and files of the office of the witness, particularly all of the original reports of which Defendants' Exhibit 261 is a sample, which is received in evidence and marked Defendants' Exhibit 261, and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, identified herein as such.

Mr. Townsend: Government objects to the introduction of Defendants' Exhibit 261, upon the same general grounds last stated, and upon the further specific ground that this is an attempt to prove the character of two million three hundred thousand acres of land by exhibiting unidentified reports and thus denying to the Government the opportunity to cross-examine the men who claimed to have made an examination of these lands, and upon whose alleged examination of the lands it is now sought to establish the character of the lands; the evidence is therefore incompetent and hearsay; and the evidence is further incompetent and hearsay to prove the contents of other reports made by the land examiners of this railroad company.

As to the offer by the counsel for defendants to the attorneys for the Government that the records of the office of the witness may be inspected, counsel for the government further objects, upon the ground that such an offer is obviously impracticable, and furnishes the Government no opportunity whatever to test these records, it being obvious from the testimony of the witness that it has required a large force of officers and agents of the railroad company to compile the information which they themselves now offer, and it is impossible for the Government attorneys to inspect these records and verify the accuracy of the hearsay evidence now offered; and moreover there is no legal authority for an attempt to prove these facts in any such manner.

Q. Please, state, Mr. McAllaster, the names of your field examiners and their residences, so that counsel for the Government may know who they are, who made these reports.

A. Mr. A. W. Rees, Portland, Oregon. He is our chief field examiner for that district, and in charge of the work, and does a great deal of it himself. He has as his assistants Mr. L. D. McLeod, S. C. Bruce, D. C. McLennan, J. C. Rogers, Alexander Wilkinson, Elmer Capell. Those men constitute our present force of examiners in Oregon.

Q. Are these the names of all who made reports of field examinations of these lands, that were and are a part of the files of your office, on which any part of this map Defendants' Exhibit 260 is based?

A. No, we have had other men in that kind of work, who are not now with the Company.

Q. Can you give me their names, and their residences, if you know?

A. S. A. Carmichael, C. A. Cavel, F. A. Elliott, Ben Irwin, Roy Woods. That is all of which I have a record at hand. There may have been others.

Q. Who was or is Mr. F. A. Elliott? What position does he hold at the present time?

A. He is State Forester—I think is his title—of Oregon. He has charge of the forestry work carried on by the state.

Q. His offices are at Salem, Oregon, are they?

A. Yes, sir.

Whereupon witness further testified that he had prepared a statement showing the number of acres of land in each county in Oregon and Washington involved in suit 3340, being the suit now on trial, United States vs. Oregon and California Railroad Company et al., showing the number of acres which had been covered by the Oregon and California Railroad Company's field examinations, and the classification thereof as determined from such examinations, as shown by these reports, whereupon witness produced that table or statement identified as Defendants' Exhibit 262, and testified that it is a correct statement. Whereupon defendants offered the same in evidence, to which counsel for complainant objected upon the same grounds as hereinbefore set out, and it was agreed that such objections may be considered as here set forth in full. Which said Defendants' Exhibit 262 was received in evidence and is herinafter set out and described, and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified herein as such. This Defendant's Exhibit 262 purports to show that the total acres involved in this suit are 2,075,616.45 acres, of which there has been examined 847,795.98 acres up to the date stated, and that this is forty per cent of the entire grant. These figures are correct. It purports to show that seventy-eight per cent of the area examined is timber land, and this is correct according to these reports. Whereupon it was stipulated that all testimony as to the details of Defendants Exhibit 262, including the preceding testimony and all similar testimony that may follow, shall be received subject to the objections heretofore assigned by complainant.

Whereupon witness further testified that the table or statement showing that nineteen per cent of the area examined was grazing land is correct according to these reports, and that two per cent of the area examined is agricultural land, and is correct according to these reports.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence the map heretofore identified as "Defendants' Exhibit 260," and the same was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit 260," which said Defendants' Exhibit 260 is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified herein as such, to which complainant objected upon the same general grounds heretofore assigned as to any evidence based upon the reports of the so-called land examiners of the railroad company and other sources of information related by the witness, it being stipulated that these objections may be considered as having been made and set forth in full.

Whereupon witness further testified that as Land Commissioner of the Oregon & California Railroad Company, he had prepared a third map showing the unsold lands of both grants and illustrating in colors the disposition made by the United States of intermediate even sections, which he produces for the purpose of identification and which is marked "Defendants' Exhibit 263." This map was made upon information, records and files in his office and is a correct map. The green coloring indicates the lands of the Oregon & California Railroad Company involved in this suit; the lands colored green without other marking being patented lands; those colored green with a red circle are unpatented lands involved in this suit; and those colored green with black circle are unsurveyed lands involved in the suit. The red coloring indicates lands not involved in the suit which were taken up as public lands of the United States under settlement entries. The lands colored yellow are those taken up as public lands of the United States under non-settlement entries. The homestead entry law was principally availed of to obtain the settlement entries indicated in red; the timber and stone law principally to obtain the lands indicated as non-settlement entries in yellow, and some to general entries and cash entries. The timber and stone act of 1878 included the State of Oregon, but he does not remember what other Pacific Coast States or Territories it embraced, or whether it was limited to Oregon, California, Nevada and Washington. The information as to the Company's own lands was obtained from its own records made up as heretofore explained. The information as to the even numbered sections was obtained by examination or the records of the United States Local Land Office and abstracted from them.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence "Defendants' Exhibit 263" to which counsel for complainant objected, upon the general grounds heretofore stated and particularly upon the ground that no foundation has been laid for the testimony of this witness, as to the accuracy of the map, and it appears from such testimony that the map is compiled from information furnished to the witness, or his office, by others, and there is no testimony vouching for the accuracy of the details from which the map is compiled.

Whereupon said "Defendants' Exhibit 263" was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified as "Defendants' Exhibit 263."

Whereupon witness further testified that the information from which "Defendants' Exhibit 263" is compiled is all of record in his office and part of the records of the office and the Company relies upon the map as being correct. Referring to rough township plats prepared by him, showing disposition by entrymen of the portions of even sections marked "Defendants' Exhibit 264" he testifies that this set of plats was compiled from abstract made by employes of the Department from the United States Local Land Office records in Oregon, from the County records of the sundry Counties in Oregon, and from examinations made of the lands themselves and it is a correct showing of the facts therein indicated.

Certain of the settlement entries, which were entries made under the Donation claims law, Homestead law, Pre-emption law, and like laws, were not examined —that is, the lands were not examined in the field—and those tracts are marked by the letters "P" indicating pre-emption, "H" indicating homestead, "D" indicating Donation claims. Other lands, taken under like settlement entries, were examined in the field, and the green coloring indicates grazing lands now owned by the entrymen, but not occupied. Green coloring with the black "T" indicates grazing lands owned by transferee from the entryman, but not occupied. Green coloring with the letter "E" indicates grazing lands occupied by the entryman. Green coloring with the letter "O" indicates grazing land occupied by a transferee from the entryman. The red coloring indicates timber lands owned by the entryman, but not occupied. Red coloring with the letter "T" indicates timber land owned by a transferee from the entryman, but not occupied. Red coloring with the letter "E" indicates timber land occupied by the entryman. Red coloring with the letter "O" indicates timber land occupied by transferee from the entryman. Under the head of "Non-settlement

Entries" are shown those lands which have been taken by any form of entry under a public land law which does not require settlement as part of the acquirement of title. Lands covered by these entries were not examined in the field. The blue coloring with the letter "E" indicates timber entries owned by the entrymen. The blue coloring without any letter indicates timber entries owned by transferees from the entrymen. The yellow coloring indicates lands entered by scrip, and now owned by timber companies. The yellow coloring with the letter "S" indicates lands entered by scrip, and now owned in small holdings. Uncolored lands marked with letter "C" were cash entries. Those marked with letter "M" were mineral entries. Those marked with the letter "I" were Indian allotments. Those marked with the letters "Is." were isolated tract patents. And those marked "Coal" were coal entries. These colors in "Defendants' Exhibit 264" are not intended to have any relation to the colors on these maps. It is a separate color scheme used in these plats. Roy Woods, whose name appears on the first seven townships of this "Defendants' Exhibit 264" was one of his employes as a field agent who examined lands in the field. The coloring indications, so far as land examinations go are based on his reports. W. E. Stuart, whose name is mentioned on this Exhibit was an employe of the Department and did all the work of coloring and lettering of these plats. He compiled the information from the records made by abstractors and examiners. J. H. Ray was one of the employes of the Department engaged in gathering the information. He was a field man. Edmond Stowe was one of the field men engaged on that work. Ivan Hawkins was one of the men engaged. Kendall, whose name appears on certain of these sheets was one of the men engaged on the work. Kinser, Kemptoy, G. E. Cartier, E. and W. J. Lander, L. M. Stonebreaker, C. L. Knox, Lynch, Olinger, White, Boehmer, Beekman, Eberspacher, Rodolf, Williams, Lake, Coppock, Landers, O'Shea, Lyman, Ashford and Look, were field agents employed by the Department to make this examination and reports. They made, respectively, written reports from field examinations and delivered them to him, and based upon these reports and upon the examination of the Local Land Office records, and the County Records, where the deeds are recorded and other records, all sources of information obtainable by him, this "Defendants' Exhibit 264," with the showing as stated, was prepared and brought to date (about May 12, 1912).

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence said document "Defendants' Exhibit 264," reserving the right to call any or all of these field men to testify further in reference thereto if Governments counsel shall not be satisfied, on investigation, that it is substantially accurate.

Whereupon counsel for the Government objected to the introduction of said exhibit upon the general grounds heretofore assigned as to compilations attempted to be identified by the witness, including the ground that the same is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, based upon hearsay, and no foundation has been laid for the testimony of the witness as to the accuracy either of the compilation itself or to the materials from which the exhibit is compiled, which said "Defendants' Exhibit 264" is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified as such.

Whereupon witness testified that he had certified copies of the field notes of the surveyor generals office of Oregon showing the character of the land as returned by the surveyors when the Government survey was made and these notes were a part of the information used in making up "Defendants' Exhibit 264." These certified copies have been conveniently bound in packages 1, 2 and 3 and for the purpose of identification being marked "Defendants' Exhibit 265" were produced by him.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence said certified copies so identified as "Defendants' Exhibit 265," to which counsel for complainant objected as irrelevant, immaterial and incompetent particularly upon the ground that the character of the lands involved in this suit is immaterial under the issues.

Whereupon it was stipulated that all evidence as to the character of the lands involved in this suit, or the lands in the intermediate even sections, including "Defendants' Exhibit 264" is received subject to this same general objection.

Whereupon said "Defendants' Exhibit 265" was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified herein as such.

Witness testified that he had prepared from the records of the Company, or caused to be prepared, a map showing the elevations above sea level of stations between Roseville Junction, California, and Portland, Oregon, on the line of the located and operated road mentioned in the act of July 25, 1866, and produces the same for the purpose of identification, and the same was marked "Defendants' Exhibit 266," and in explanation of said map witness further testified that the green line shown thereon is the line of the present constructed and operated so-called West Side line (that is, from Portland by way of Forest Grove to a point at or near McMinnville) under the Act of May 4, 1870. The red line shown on the map is the line of the constructed and operated road from Portland south to Roseville Junction, known as the East Side line, constructed under the Act of July 25, 1866. These lines appear to be located on the map of the standard form of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, showing the lands granted, not only to that Company, but to the California and Oregon. It is the Company's lithographed map showing the lands which the Companies claimed. That is to say, it shows the place and indemnity limits of the grant of July 25, 1866, and of May 4, 1870, on either side of the located and constructed and operated roads indicated in green and red respectively. It shows the lands unsold and claimed by the Company at the time the map was printed, June 1, 1907, and it aims to and does show the exterior limits of both grants. The figures in circles along this line show the elevation in feet above sea level. The lands shown in black on this map represent the lands that were owned at the time the map was printed, June 1, 1907. No sales have been made since 1907. There have been lands deeded since, that were sold under contract, with the exception of the few instances heretofore related by him. Lands that were standing under executory contract in 1907, when this map was lithographed, in many instances, have been subsequently deeded, but this would not bear on this map. It is not a title map of the lands, or aimed to be. He has used the lithographed map of the Company and has located these railroad lines or tracks with the elevations and that is the purpose of that map.

Whereupon defendants offered and there was received in evidence said map "Defendants' Exhibit 266" which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified herein as such.

Whereupon witness produces "Defendants' Exhibit 267" and in explanation of such exhibit testifies that this picture and photograph and memoranda attached, were records of his office, found by him therein when he took charge September 21, 1908. Charles W. Eberlin was the Acting Land Agent of the Oregon & California Railroad Company and F. A. Elliott and Homer D.

Angell were employes of defendant's land department. B. A. Gifford was the photographer that took the pictures, but witness has no personal knowledge of the taking of the photographs, or the facts stated in the memoranda, merely producing them as a part of the files of his office.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence "Defendants' Exhibit 267" under promise to call Homer D. Angell and B. A. Gifford to further identify the exhibit. Whereupon counsel for complainant objected to the introduction of said exhibit on the ground that same is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and that the character of the land is immaterial and irrelevant.

Whereupon said exhibit was received in evidence with the memoranda thereto attached and the same is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of Evidence and identified herein as "Defendants' Exhibit 267."

Whereupon witness produced a photograph with certain memoranda attached dated April 15, 1912, which was marked "Defendants' Exhibit 268." Whereupon witness testified that the photograph shown in "Defendants Exhibit 268" was taken under instructions given by witness to Mr. Rees and taken by Mr. Gifford during the spring of 1912 and covers lands within the limits of the grant.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence this exhibit with leave to verify the memoranda attached if required by complainant. Whereupon counsel for complainant made the same objection to said exhibit as to "Defendants' Exhibit 267." Whereupon the said exhibit was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of Evidence and identified herein as such.

Whereupon witness produced a map marked "Defendants' Exhibit 269" and testified in relation thereto that the photograph was taken during the year 1912 under instructions given by him to A. W. Rees and the photograph was made by Mr. Gifford and shows an area lying within the limits of the land grant. There are two photographs taken from slightly different view points.

Whereupon "Defendants' Exhibit 269" was offered in evidence by defendants, with leave to call A. W. Rees and Mr. Gifford to further identify the same and the lands shown therein, to which counsel for complainant made the same objection as last above, which said exhibit was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified herein as such.

Whereupon witness produced a package of photographs, 92 in number, marked collectively as "Defendants' Exhibit 270." Whereupon witness testified that seven of these photographs were taken in the early part of 1912, under his direction, and the direct supervision of A. W. Rees, and taken by a photographer employed by Rees; that attached to each photograph is a memorandum showing the location of the land and the names of the parties claiming the improvements shown. The remainder of the photographs were largely taken before witness took charge of the Department and he found them in his office when he came in. Attached to each photograph is a memorandum showing the location of the land and the name of the party claiming the improvements in each case and the name of the photographer who took the photograph. Some of these were taken shortly after witness came to San Francisco; that is, those that are dated subsequent to September 21, 1908, but under instructions given by his predecessors in office. They also bear similar memorandum. These lands shown in these various photographs are all lands belonging to the Oregon and California Railroad Company and involved in this suit. From his knowledge of these structures and his investigation of the matter, none of these structures were put upon these lands by the consent, permission or direction of the Company, or any representative of the Company. Most of these structures were built along about 1907 and 1908. All of these photographs, except the seven taken in 1912, are photographs of locations involved in the so-called Lafferty suits parties plaintiff who have been made defendants in this suit, or who may have intervened, or filed cross complaints. Some of these taken in 1912 were lands involved in such suits and others not. The remainder of the seven relate to improvements made by trespassers or so-called applicants to purchase these lands who have been refused. About 10,000 applications to purchase quarter sections of timber lands belonging to the Company at $2.50 per acre have been made to the Company and refused since the commencement of the first Lafferty suit, about that time, up to July 30, 1912. These applications are made usually in this way. Some person comes in to the office with a bunch of applications, any where from 5 to 10 up to 50 or 100 and presents one application and tenders the sum of $400.00 with it and that being rejected, this person follows by presenting another application and tendering the same $400.00 and that being rejected the process is gone through with the entire bunch that the party brings in. This party is attorney or agent for the applicant, or at least claims so to be and in nearly all cases the blanks used by these so-called applicants are printed forms. He has prepared a memorandum showing the number of applications of that class up to a certain time and whether or not several persons have made application for the same quarter section. This memorandum was prepared about March 1, 1909 and shows the applications that were in his hands at that time. There were 7991 applications in his hands on March 1, 1909, covering 6168 quarter sections, or in some cases less. Occasionally an 80 acres. The entire number of applications up to July 30, 1912, would, he thinks, approximate 10,000. When this table was made up on March 1, 1909, there were 4749 tracts of land each covered by one application; there were 1097 tracks each covered by two applications; 256 tracts each covered by three applications; 54 tracts each covered by four applications; 8 tracts each covered by 5 applications and 4 tracts each covered by six applications.

Whereupon witness testified that insofar as the lands covered by these applications had been examined, he finds them to be timber lands. To which testimony counsel for complainant objected upon the ground that the testimony of witness and exhibit compiled by him with reference to the character of the lands involved in this suit in incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant, the character of the lands not being a material issue in this suit.

STIPULATION

Whereupon it was stipulated between the parties, by their respective counsel, that any and all testimony hereinbefore and hereinafter set out tending to show the character of this land, submitted by defendants, shall be deemed to be taken subject to this objection. This stipulation shall be deemed to apply to all of such testimony hereinafter set out taken on behalf of defendants and shall apply to all testimony, including exhibits hereinafter set out, taken on behalf of defendants, tending to show the character of the even intermediate sections within the limits of the grants involved in this suit.

Whereupon witness testified that the lands covered by these applications are all valuable timber lands and the best are included therein, and they are chiefly valuable at the present time for the timber. The lands will range in value from $10.00 an acre to $100.00 an acre. The value of these lands with reference to their desirability is fixed by the amount of timber measured or expressed in the number of thousand feet board measure; that is to say, the stumpage, or the number of board feet as shown by the cruise of a timberman. The value ranges from 75c per thousand feet up to $2.00 per thousand feet stumpage for these lands and similar lands in Oregon. The variation in value between 75c per thousand feet and $2.00 per thousand feet is caused by the kind of timber, the character of the timber, its location and the logging conditions, and he had in mind by the use of the word location, accessibility to transportation by water or rail. These improvements shown in these various photographs "Defendants' Exhibit 270" are largely in what are known specifically as the Lafferty suit cases, and his recollection is that they made application in practically the same way.

Whereupon witness produced three printed blank applications filled out, which collectively were marked as "Defendants' Exhibit 271" and testified that these were a fair sample of the printed applications presented to the Company in the way he has indicated by these so-called intending purchasers. He did not, nor did anyone connected with the Company have anything to do with the preparation of these printed blanks, or authorize the use of the same. When these applications are received by mail, or presented in person, they are rejected and filed away and preserved. They have been preserved upon the advice of counsel for the Company. These applications generally contain a tender and witness thinks it occurs in all of them, to-wit:

"I herewith tender to said Company the sum of $2.50 per acre in payment for said land," etc. When coin is produced it is merely tendered in connection with a group of applications, if more than one is presented. The same coin is used by the same person for each of the different applications. The business of land brokers that has grown up out of this controversy and which has resulted in the application of some 10,000 people to purchase these lands is co-extensive with the boundaries of the United States, perhaps including Alaska and the Islands. There are offices and men engaged in this kind of business advertising it in Omaha, Kansas City and as witness recollects in Boston and New York and many other places that he does not now recollect. These attorneys or timber locators interested, take these applications on behalf of the applicants and purport to file the applications upon lands which the County Records show free from any similar application and they charge the applicant generally about $75.00 per application, sometimes it is $50.00 and at other times it may be other amounts, but as a rule it is about $75.00 per application. That is their fee and the understanding is that the applicant will have $2.50 per acre to pay whenever this suit is determined. In many cases these attorneys or land brokers require the applicant to sign an agreement to sell the land whenever they get title at an agreed price per thousand feet of stumpage that may be on the land, usually at a price of about one-half of the market value. Whether there is any contingent fee in it, he does not know.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence "Defendants' Exhibits 270 and 271" which was received and are hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of Evidence and identified as "Defendants' Exhibits 270 and 271."

Whereupon witness testified that he had seen a good many advertisements purporting to advertise for applications and applicants headed "Oregon & California Railroad Company lands" where the party did not disclose his agency but attempted to represent that he was really acting for this land grant or for the Company, but he does not recall now the particular wording in any of the cases, but as a rule they were so worded that to the ordinary reader they would appear to be published by someone authoritatively acting as agent for the Oregon & California Railroad Company. They were not authorized in any instance.

Whereupon witness produced a package of advertising blanks and forms used by these timber locators so-called, with notations of his office thereon, which collectively were marked "Defendants' Exhibit 272."

Whereupon witness further testified that some of these were clipped from newspapers, others came in with correspondence from different people making inquiry regarding the matter and asking if the facts were as there stated. The power of attorney purporting to appoint H. W. Miller of the City of Portland, State of Oregon, the true and lawful attorney for the applicant came in with some letter. Miller had no authority to act for the Oregon & California Railroad Company for him or for any one else connected with the Company. Some one at St. Louis wrote him to ascertain something concerning the advertisement of John M. Kreider, Suite 806-7 New Bank of Commerce Building, St. Louis, Mo. and that is all he knows about Kreider.

Whereupon witness, referring to a letter purporting to be signed J. M. Kreider, addressed to A. C. Edwards, 3863 Farnam Street, Omaha, Neb. dated July 15, 1909, and the letter of witness of July 20, 1909, to Edwin R. Tuttle, Traveling Passenger Agent, Union Pacific Railroad Company, St. Louis, Mo. enclosing the following clipping:

"OREGON.

OREGON TIMBER.

United States government gave 6,000,000 acres choice timber land in Oregon to railroad company 40 years ago, to be sold at $2.50 per acre; 1,300,000 acres remain unsold; now worth $50 per acre; male and female American citizens only can now apply for 160 acres of this land at $2.50 per acre; only $75 payable now. For full particulars address, J. M. Kreider, 806-7 New Bank Com. Bldg., St. Louis, Mo."

stated that these are a part of the advertisements and literature circulated by J. M. Kreider procured by witness since this question arose as to the disposition of this grant. Kreider enclosed a lithographed circular under St. Louis date July 21, 1909, purporting to be signed by St. Louis business men of standing and this accompanied these circulars. Witness does not remember that they had any particular application from clients through John M. Kreider, although there may have been, but he did not represent the Oregon & California Railroad Company or the land department or any one connected with it.

Q. I call your attention to my letter to Mr. Eberlin, of August 9, 1907, enclosing clipping from the "Journal" and "Telegram," which clippings, for the purposes of this record, I will identify by reading them. Telegram July 18, 1907:

"FOR SALE—TIMBER LANDS.

TIMBER—

Parties wishing to make an application for some choice railroad lands, heavily timbered, cannot do better than to call at our office and get full particulars. We are prepared to locate several at this time, and our fees, including making all the papers and location, are within the reach of all.

HOWSE & MILLER,
66 Sixth St."

Also notice purporting to have been printed in the Journal of July 19, 1907, which reads:

"TIMBER.

WE ARE STILL IN A POSITION TO locate several parties on railroad lands in southern Oregon, cruising better than 4,000,000 feet per quarter section; for making tender to the company and filing papers in the clerk's office afterward, location, including all attorney fees, we charge the sum of $25. Now come and look into this proposition, if you have never bought any lands from the company heretofore, remember this does not interfere with any of your other rights, call and get full particulars.

HOWSE & MILLER,
66 6th St.

Open evenings. Phone Main 6188."

Also:

"TIMBER LANDS.

Intending purchasers desiring to be located upon lands with heavy timber in the land grant of the Oregon & California railroad in southern Oregon can secure the same by acting quickly. Location fees including all necessary attorney's fees are reasonable. Address J. E. Verdin, Grants Pass, Or."

Did you receive, or did you find these in your files and the files of your predecessor in office?

A. Yes, sir.

Whereupon the witness further testified that he did not know Howse & Miller, or either of them, or J. E. Verdin and neither of them had any authority to act for the Company, him or the land department. The Portland Journal and Evening Telegram were printed and circulated in Portland at that time.

"TIMBER CLAIMS. The present time now affords you the opportunity to locate yourself upon a splendid timber claim, accessible to both railroad and driving streams; cruise ranges from 4,000,000 to 9,000,000 feet. Price $2.50 per acre. We locate and you purchase. Address P. O. Box 1206, Tacoma, Wash." Is that one of these advertisements that you found?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did that advertiser represent you or the company?

A. Not at all.

Q. Does that refer to the same class of lands that these others refer to, as far as you can tell?

A. Presumably so, yes.

Q. I notice a circular here headed: "Land Grant is Basis of Suit," purporting to be from the Evening Telegram, Portland, Oregon, Monday, September 16, 1907; and purporting to be an advertising circular of Coates & Horsman, Spokane, Washington, on the outside cover of which appears these words:

"C. H. Coates J. H. Horsman.

COATES & HORSMAN.

Railroad Timber Lands $2.50 per Acre.

Spokane, Wash."

Do you know these gentlemen?

A. No, sir.

Whereupon witness testified that he received this circular in the usual way. That these gentlemen did not represent the Oregon & California Railroad Company, himself or any one else and that neither authorized the publication of this circular or the article.

Q. I notice another circular here, headed "Extracts from the Oregon and California Railroad Grants, Act of 1869," purporting to be from M. P. Alford, Chicago Office 923, 184 La Salle St. 'Phone Main 2022." Did Mr. Alford represent the company or you?

A. Not in any way.

Q. Did you receive this in the same way that you received these others?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I notice a circular here enclosed by Mr. M. P. Alford, Chicago Office, headed: "Exceptional. An Opportunity to file on Timber Lands in Oregon." Did you obtain that circular in the same way that you obtained these others?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did Mr. Alford have any authority to represent you or the company?

A. No, sir.

Q. I notice a long circular here headed: "Railroad Lands. Statement of Facts," with pencil notation, "Trewavas, Lee & Co., 26 Montgomery St., S. F." with a report thereon by you to Mr. Herrin, of date March 19, 1912. Do you know this firm?

A. Not personally, any more than as shown by that report.

Q. Where do they purport to be doing business?

A. At 26 Montgomery Street, San Francisco.

Q. Have they any authority, or did they ever have any authority, to represent the Oregon and California Railroad Company, or to make these advertisements?

A. No, sir.

Q. One of these refers to a clipping from the Oakland Tribune, of Sunday, March 17, 1912, relative to lectures given by this firm. Do I understand that these gentlemen conducted a lecture course here in Oakland, or in San Francisco, trying to induce people to make application to them for the purchase of these lands?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I notice a clipping here purporting to be from the Omaha World-Herald of December 18, 1909, which reads:

"Oregon.

$75.00 will locate you on a quarter section of the best agricultural land, level, heavy timber, close to the Pacific Ocean and accessible to railroads and rivers. Price $2.50 per acre when you secure title. Call or write 413 Karbach Block."

Is that one of these advertisements that you secured the same way?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I notice another which reads:

"OREGON TIMBER LANDS.

You now have an opportunity to apply (without interference with homestead rights) for 160 acres of valuable timber and agricultural lands in Oregon at $2.50 per acre; timber averages 4,000,000 to 8,000,000 feet per quarter section (cedar and fir); accessible to railroads and rivers; close to Pacific Ocean and in á desirable climate; limited 160 acres to each applicant; locating fees very reasonable.

FORREST LAND CO., 612-613 Shukert Bldg."

Is that one of these numerous advertisements that you procured?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who is the Forrest Land Company?

A. I don't know them at all.

Q. Who is the party who says, "Call or write 413 Karbach Block," and where is that?

A. That is a building in Omaha. I think I had some correspondence with the people, the name I don't remember now.

Q. Did these people, or either of them, or did this company, have any authority to represent the Oregon and California Railroad Company, or to act for it?

A. No, sir.

Q. I notice also an advertisement which reads:

"$150.00.

"$150 is all the money required to get 160 acres of timber land in Oregon cruising from 3 to 6 million feet of good merchantable timber. No prior timber or homestead applications affect this, as it is not Government land. For full information call at OREGON DEV. CO., 1110 and 12 Call Building."

Did this so-called Oregon Development Company have any authority to make this advertisement, or to represent the Oregon and California Railroad Company, or you?

A. No, sir.

Q. That appeared in a San Francisco paper, did it, or do you know?

A. Well, I should judge so, but I couldn't say positively.

Q. I show you a circular purporting to advertise "Timber Land Information Club, Daniel McDonald, Hotel Chandler, Marshfield, Oregon." Did this gentleman represent you or your company, or any one connected with it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did he have any authority for the company, or for you, or any one else connected with it, to issue that circular?

A. No, sir.

Q. I notice, among others here, a clipping from the San Francisco Chronicle, headed "Denounced by Land Office. Statements of Northern Promoters Declared to be Untrue." "Special Dispatch to the 'Chronicle'." Under a Seattle date line. Is that one of the clippings that you made with reference to the activities of these gentlemen in advertising these lands?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had nothing to do with the publication of any of these notices, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. I notice "San Francisco, March 16," 1912 date line dispatch which appears in the Oakland Tribune of Sunday, March 17, 1912, descriptive of the firm of Trewavas, Lee & Co. Is that the same firm about which you spoke some time ago in this examination?

A. That is the same firm, yes, sir.

Whereupon defendants offered all of these for the purpose of showing in part the origin of the long list of applications and that defendants did not authorize or promote the same and to show that this activity took place since about 1907, subsequent to the passage of the Memorial of the Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon of February, 1907, to which said exhibit counsel for the Government objected as follows:

"The Government admits that the defendant Oregon & California Railroad Company never authorized any of the parties mentioned as having solicited applications to purchase to represent the railroad company or its land department, or any of its officers; but the Government objects to the evidence as immaterial and irrelevant, in so far as it may be claimed to characterize all of the applications to purchase, because it does not appear that all of the applications to purchase originated in this manner; and further objects to the exhibit upon the ground that it is immaterial how the parties were induced to make applications to purchase, if applications in fact were made and rejected, and the terms of the grant were violated in that manner; and the Government objects particularly to the letters that are included in this exhibit, upon the ground that they are incompetent, hearsay, irrelevant and immaterial."

Whereupon said documents were received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit 272" which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified as such.

Whereupon witness testified that he had caused to be taken certain photographs, 88 in number, showing the improvements upon certain lands in even sections within the limits of these grants, which were collectively marked "Defendants' Exhibit 273" and that these photographs were taken under his instructions by field agents, showing as they made examinations of the even numbered sections, which are shown on the map, improvements or lack of improvements, as the case might be on those tracts. These photographs of tracts on the even sections are tracts of land within the limits of this grant and were taken the early part of 1912, possibly a few the latter part of 1911, but he thinks all were taken in 1912. Noticing a memorandum on one of these, which, for illustration, reads "Photo by C. W. Kempton 5/7/12/ S. E. ¼ Sec. 26-4, S. R. 5 E. Looking Southeast. No improvements except pile of stones which appear to have been used as temporary fireplace." He testified that Mr. Kempton was one of the field agents engaged in making examination of these lands and as a rule the memoranda on the backs of these various photographs identify the land claimed by so-called settlers and the date when the photograph was taken. The photographs were taken under his direction and supervision for the use of his office. Noticing as a sample "S. W. ¼ Sec. 34, Township 8 South, Range 2 East. Leon D. Hedges' Homestead. View looking north. Picture taken by C. W. Kempton April 27, 1912." He testifies that he ascertained that that was the homestead of this man on this particular quarter by abstracting the United States Land Office records and the field man then went upon the premises and took this photograph. Witness ascertained, or caused to be ascertained in the same way, the name of the so-called entryman and the description of his land and then the location of the land by his employes and these entries of settlers or entrymen were obtained from the United States Local Land Office records in each instance. These photographs give on the back the description of the particular land where the photograph was taken, or where it is shown in the picture. J. A. Kinser was one of the field agents and the photographs were taken under the immediate personal supervision of A. W. Rees and witness relied upon them as being correct.

Mr. Fenton: I offer these now, for the purpose of showing the general character of the improvements of the entrymen on the tracts described—general character of their improvements and general character of the land—under the promise, if required by the United States or counsel for the Government, to call the photographers and field examiners for further identification, if the defendants shall be so advised that it is necessary, and ask to have them marked collectively as "Defendants' Exhibit 273."

Mr. Townsend: The Government objects to this evidence, on the ground that it is immaterial and irrelevant; that the character of the intervening sections and the character of the improvments thereon is immaterial to any issue found in the case; and the Government expressly objects to the statement of fact as to the presence or absence of improvements, and other like notations appearing upon the back of these photographs, on the ground that it is incompetent and hearsay. As to the identification of the photographs themselves, the Government reserves the right to object to them upon the ground that they are not properly identified if it shall so appear.

Whereupon said "Defendants' Exhibit 273" was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified as such.

Whereupon witness further testified that these photographs purporting to show panoramic views of certain sections of the country marked "Defendants' Exhibit 274" were taken under his direction and show the general character of the country in the immediate vicinity of the points noted on the back of each photograph and all within the limits of the Oregon & California grants; that is they are within the indemnity limits of the grants and cover, in view not only lands claimed by the Oregon & California Railroad Company, but lands in the even sections. They are within the primary, as well as the indemnity, limits. They are intended to show the general character of the country within the exterior limits of the grant.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence said "Defendants' Exhibit 274" and the same was received and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified as such.

Whereupon witness testified that he had prepared a tabular statement marked "Defendants' Exhibit 276" and that it was compiled from the records of his office, the sources of which were the United States Local Land Office records, the General Land Office records and in part his attorney's records in Washington. These selection lists are made up in the first place and sent to the United States Local Land office. Two copies are retained by that office, one of which is transmitted to the General Land Office in Washington, the other retained in the Local office and two copies are returned to his office, certified by the Register and Receiver, one of which is retained in his office and the other one sent to his attorney in Washington. This tabular statement is made from these lists and from the ultimate action taken by the land office, local or general, and the ultimate action taken by the President of the United States in issuing patents. This "Defendants' Exhibit 276" correctly states the selection lists and all other matter found in this statement. The date certified, refers to the certification by the Local Land Office and this abbreviation

"O. C" refers to Oregon City, "Van." refers to Vancouver, "Ros." to Roseburg, "Port." to Portland, "L. V." to Lakeview, "Pat." means patented, "Resel." means reselected, "Rear." rearranged, "Rej." rejected, "Er. sel." erroneous selection and "Dup." duplicate.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence such tabulated statement as "Defendants' Exhibit 276" which was received and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified herein as such.

Witness understands that sales of granted lands were temporarily suspended pending examination that was being made into the condition of the land grants, records, etc., but there never was any order of withdrawal to his knowledge, and there was no formal order of restoration. Before he took charge of the land department at San Francisco he was advised by Judge Cornish, then Vice President of the Southern Pacific Company, that as soon as the records could be straightened out, after the fire, the intention was, as to these lands, in so far as they were not needed for company uses, to offer them for sale; referring by "not needed for company uses" to the lands described in Exhibits numbered 7 and 8 to the answer. Judge Cornish is William D. Cornish, who was the executive assistant to E. H. Harriman, President or an officer of the Oregon and California Railroad Company. The executive jurisdiction over these lands at this time was under Mr. Harriman, and Judge Cornish was his assistant and had special charge of this matter. Judge Cornish is dead. He had some correspondence with Cornish concerning matters relative to these lands, and thinks possibly some reference was made in that correspondence to the sale of these lands, other than the reserved portions. He had seen a telegram signed by Cornish to the predecessor of witness, Eberlein, which was part of the files of the office and preserved from the fire. There are two telegrams that relate to that land, which read:

"New York, April 5, '07.

C. W. Eberlein, (Received Apr. 5, 1907.)
(Land Dept. S. P. R. R. Co.)

San Francisco.

Please mail me report at convenience showing progress made in rehabilitating your office and also what extent you are receiving and handling applications for lands and especially lands other than timber and mineral.

W. D. Cornish. 3:50 P. M."

"New York, April 24, 1907.

C. W. Eberlein, (Received Apr. 24, 1907.)
(Land Dept. O. &. C. R. R. Co.)

San Francisco.

I have not yet received any report from you as to progress in selling lands.

W. D. Cornish. 12:23 P. M."

Counsel for complainant objects to the materiality and relevancy thereof. Witness further testified that Chas. W. Eberlein, mentioned, was the acting land commissioner of the Oregon and California Railroad Company and his predecessor as land commissioner. He resigned some months before witness took charge, and Eberlein was succeeded by Henry Conlin, who is not now in the service. Witness succeeded Conlin.

The list described in Exhibit No. 7 to the answer of the defendants, is a statement showing right of way and unsold East Side Grant lands acquired through Oregon and California Railroad Company, and is correct. This suit No. 8340, now on trial, was brought before he was appointed land commissioner September 21, 1908. The complaint was filed September 4, 1908. Exhibit No. 8 to the answer of the defendants is correct. The records of the department, when he took charge in September 1908, showed the reservations contained in Exhibit No. 8 to the answer, which purports to be a schedule of unsold lands under reservation from sale on account of timber, iron, coal or oil which they are known or supposed to contain. So far as he knows, the reservation was made on the new records after the fire on the strength of a list which Mr. O'Brien furnished as being the list furnished him previous to the fire, of lands reserved for these purposes, referring to the fire of April 18, 1906 in San Francisco which destroyed almost all of the records of the land department. O'Brien was then Vice President and General Manager of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and the operating official of the line of road from Portland to Ashland, and also an executive officer of the company. The record shows that these lands were reserved on account of being supposed or known to contain timber, coal, iron and oil, and his department did not undertake to determine that these substances which were supposed to be in these lands, were necessary to the railroad in its operation and maintenance; that was an operating department matter. They had been directed to be reserved by the operating department, and there have been no restorations of any kind with reference to these lands thus reserved, and no order of reservation made by the Board of Directors of the Oregon and California Railroad Company so far as he knows. He never received any formal order. These reservations are usually made on the request of some operating official who knows or thinks there may be something in the land. Since becoming Land Commissioner of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, the Department has at all times asserted ownership of the lands. As they examine the lands and find parties occupying them, the company asserts its ownership and insists that these parties take leases on the lands or vacate. The company has paid taxes on the lands—done whatever might be necessary to assert ownership. It has appeared in contests in the land office where the question of its right to claim has been raised, and it has defended its title of ownership. The company has sent field agents over about forty per cent of the entire grant, making examinations as to the character and value of the lands. The company maintains a force of fire wardens to patrol the lands and protect against fire during the summer. The examinations made by field agents cover forty per cent of the entire grant—78 per cent of the timber. The company has made a good many leases of lands for grazing purposes, and where it finds some one occupying a small piece of land, there may be a few acres in cultivation, or where an adjacent owner wants to use the lands for pasture purposes, the company has made leases in those cases. In a good many cases the reason for making the lease where there is an actual occupation, is to prevent the statute of limitations running against the company by the occupancy. The company has maintained quite a force of fire wardens in the State of Oregon, patrolling the lands during the dry season. The company has paid taxes on these lands. The counties of Oregon in which the lands are situated, through their county assessors, have continued their assessments, increased their valuations for assessment purposes, and made assessments upon these lands the same as other or similar lands that are privately owned, and without regard to this suit or the claim of the United States. The valuations have been raised, witness thinks, in all of the counties, certainly almost all of them. The company is at all times endeavoring to keep the assessments down as low as may be possible. It is a fact, within his knowledge, that some of the counties, through their county courts, have authorized the assessors to employ, or have directly employed timber cruisers, and have made cruises of substantially all these lands for assessment purposes, and made their assessments on the basis of the board measure reported by their cruisers, and witness thinks that this accounts in part for the increased assessment of a considerable portion of these grants. There are about 240 leases outstanding. He has prepared a statement showing the lease number, date of lease, when it expires and the number of acres, and the total acreage is 24,671.02. Whereupon witness produces Defendants Exhibit 278, and states that it is a correct statement of what it purports to show. Whereupon defendants offered said exhibit in evidence and the same was received and marked "Defendants' Exhibit 278," which exhibit is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified herein as "Defendants' Exhibit 278."

Whereupon the witness further testified that but for this suit, he should have proceeded to secure his examination of the land, determine valuations, and make sales of the land as opportunity offered. In so far as the lands were capable of settlement, the company would have preferred always to sell to a settler. Defendants Exhibit 279 shown witness, consists of advertisements published by his department, setting forth the facts that the lands of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Land Company now—formerly railroad company—are on the market for sale, and setting forth the natural resources of these lands. These advertisements show that they are specially addressed to farmers and others desiring to make settlement on these lands when purchased, which are capable of such settlement. The practice of publishing these advertisements was, generally speaking, commenced about July, 1911, when they actually had some lands ready for sale, and the advertisements had been spread broadcast over the Western half of the United States, with the result that there has been a sale of a very considerable area of land within the past year. If this suit had not been brought he would have pursued the same policy with reference to the lands in Oregon that were capable of settlement, or that could be disposed of, other than the lands described in Exhibits 7 and 8. Whereupon defendants offered in evidence said collection of advertisements, marked "Defendants' Exhibit 279." Whereupon, upon examination by counsel for the Government, the witness further testified that this advertising material had been prepared and circulated by him or under his direction, since he became Land Commissioner of the several companies named by him, and has been prepared and circulated since the institution of this suit. Whereupon counsel for complainant objected to the introduction of this Defendants' Exhibit 279 as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial. Whereupon said Defendants' Exhibit 279 was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit 279," which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence, and so identified herein.

Whereupon the witness further testified that Defendants' Exhibit 280 was in the files of his department when he took charge, that is, it was a part of the records of his office. Whereupon defendants offered in evidence Defendants' Exhibit 280, to which complainant objected as immaterial and irrelevant, which Defendants' Exhibit 280 is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence, and so identified herein.

Whereupon the witness, upon cross-examination, further testified that Defendants' Exhibit 278, containing statement of outstanding leases, represents as high an acreage as has ever been under lease, so far as he knows. There was very little correspondence in the files of the land department of the Oregon and California Railroad Company preserved from the San Francisco fire of 1906, but he can produce what was saved. The correspondence in the land department now is generally filed with relation to the land particularly referred to, and in so far as correspondence was saved from the fire and capable of being preserved, it has been filed in the same way, and may be scattered through a large number of files. It can all be produced.

This testimony is being taken in the Flood Building, at San Francisco. The greater portion of the offices of the Southern Pacific Company and its proprietary corporations are located in this building, so far as they have offices at San Francisco, but he could not say what the percentage is, he does not know; a very considerable portion of it is occupied by the offices of the Southern Pacific Company and its proprietary corporations, say six or eight floors, but does not know how many floors, or how much space they occupy. He has occupied his present offices since he became the Land Commissioner of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and his personal room is number 880. The main entrance is number 801, where the clerical force is at work. There is upon the door of room 801 these words "801 Southern Pacific Company—Land Department—B. A. McAl-laster, Land Commissioner—F. W. Houts, Assistant Land Commissioner." He has testified that the Southern Pacific Company never had a land department.

Whereupon, upon re-direct examination, witness further testified that that sign on the door of room 801 was put on the door about a year ago, excepting the words "Southern Pacific Company," and these words "Southern Pacific Company" were placed there within the last two months, and without his knowledge or direction, or permission being asked, or anything else, and he does not know who did it, or why it was done. The Southern Pacific Company has no land whatsoever. It has a few town lots, and has no occasion for a land department, nor has it a land department, and it has no records in the land department that are called Southern Pacific Company Land Department records, except the records of those few town lots about which he has testified, and for which he is land commissioner.

Whereupon the witness, upon re-cross examination, further testified that very likely he had stationery which was used for a number of years, which reads "Southern Pacific Company—Land Department," and which was used in correspondence referring to this grant. It also shows Oregon and California Railroad Company upon it, and Southern Pacific Railroad Company, as separate companies, but using a joint letter-head. Whereupon the witness produces, upon request of counsel for the complainant, Form 3311, and further testified that they used that form in conducting correspondence in relation to the affairs of any of the companies that they may be corresponding about. Sometimes—a great many times they do not use a letterhead at all in conducting the correspondence of the office. In purely office correspondence they do not use any letterhead. Sometimes this letterhead is used in carrying on the correspondence relating to the affairs of his office, and sometimes it is not. He does not know how long it had been in use. He does not remember now just what they were using when he came, or whether, so far as the printed matter is concerned, this is substantially the form in use when he came; that particular form was not in use when he came. No one printed the words "Southern Pacific Company —Land Department" on this letterhead without his knowledge or consent. He does not know who it was that put the words "Southern Pacific Company" on the entrance door of his office. It has been there two or three months, but he has made no complaint to any one about it. He assumes that these words were put on the door by some one's order, but he does not know whose. He has had no occasion to inquire, and it does not make any difference to him.

Whereupon complainant offered Form 3311 in evidence, marked "Government's Exhibit 112," to which counsel for defendants objected as immaterial and irrelevant, which was received and so marked, and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of evidence, and so identified herein.

Whereupon witness further testified that until the death of Judge Cornish in October or November, 1908, Judge Cornish had general charge of the land grant of the Oregon and California Railroad Company and other land grants mentioned. Cornish was Vice President of the Southern Pacific Company, but could not state whether he was an executive officer of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, but his impression now is that he was not. He took instructions from Judge Cornish without inquiring what his relationship was to the company, because he had been working under Judge Cornish's instructions for a good many years. At the time he took his instructions he had not inquired whether Judge Cornish had anything to do with the Oregon and California Railroad Company or not, but Cornish gave him instructions concerning the company and he took and followed them. No deeds had been signed under direction of witness at the time of the death of Judge Cornish. Cornish died very shortly after witness became Land Commissioner.

Whereupon witness, upon re-direct examination, further testified that he had produced and tendered to Government counsel all of the records of his office that were saved from the fire of April, 1906, and that his assistant and one of the assistants to counsel for the Government are in possession of these records now, going through them, and he has gathered together and delivered, as stated, all of the records of the land department which were saved from the fire, so far as he knows of such records. Referring to Government's Exhibit 112, being letterhead Form 3311, witness says that the words and figures "Standard 12-11-20,000" means, standard form, December 11, 20,000 printed, and the date when that supply of blanks was printed. The form was probably in use before that. Form 3311, with the words and figures "Standard 7-08-10,000" containing typewritten figures "March 23, 1909" is the form that was in use in the office when witness took charge of it in September 1908. This was clipped from a letter in his office files of date March 23, 1909, the date on which the particular letter was written. Government's Exhibit 112 was not in use when he came. That form is one that he prepared some time after he came, in consequence of consolidation of the three land departments into one office under his control, referring to the three land departments of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the Central Pacific Railway Company, and the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and the stamp on Government's Exhibit 112 "Southern Pacific Land Company" is a rubber stamp that has been placed on the form since the organization of the Southern Pacific Land Company, which is a part of this department. The Southern Pacific Land Company holds by purchase the residue of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company's land grants. Oregon & California Land Company is a company organized and holding title to lots in certain townsites in Oregon, and a few acreage tracts, generally called non-operating lands. He does not know as to how the stock is held, but assumes that it is a small corporation with a capital stock of about $5000.00—stock of which is held in trust for the Oregon and California Railroad Company.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence Form

3311, Standard 7-08-10,000, March 23, 1909, and the same was marked "Defendants' Exhibit 281," which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of evidence, and identified herein as such.

Whereupon the witness further testified that in speaking of the consolidation of the office, he referred to the fact that he was Land Commissioner of each one of these various companies, and as Land Commissioner had the records of all of these various companies under his control and in one office, or set of offices. There had been no legal consolidation of the land departments of these various companies. Their business is kept separate, and he is the one officer for all of them, and the records are kept in his offices under one control. Whereupon witness was shown a letterhead which was marked Defendants' Exhibit 282, and the witness testified that it is a letterhead that he found among his files and supplies, and the imprint "12-24-06" indicates that it was printed December 24, 1906, and the fact that Charles W. Eberlein's name is on there indicates that it was the form that he used while he was Acting Land Agent for the Oregon and California Railroad Company. The use of the form probably terminated about the time that Defendants' Exhibit 281 was printed in July 1908. Witness used the form of July 1908 for some time after he became Land Commissioner. He does not think that they used the other form, but thinks that they were practically all used up before that.

Whereupon defendants offered Defendants' Exhibit 282 in evidence, and the same was so received and marked "Defendants' Exhibit 282," and is hereinafter set out and described, and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and so identified herein. Whereupon the witness further testified that these defendants' Exhibits 281 and 282 are printed upon green paper, which was the standard color used prior to Government's Exhibit 112, for all the Oregon and California Railroad Company's supplies used in the land department. He made up a separate pay roll for the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and it passed through the Oregon and California Railroad Company's land accounts and was paid by check on the Oregon and California Railroad Company. The Southern Pacific Land Company and the Central Pacific Railway Company each has its own pay roll form, its own pay roll is made out, passed through its own books of account, and is paid by its own checks. His salary as Land Commissioner for these different companies is apportioned in part against the Central Pacific Railway Company, in part against the Southern Pacific Land Company, and in part against the Oregon and California Railroad Company. He does not know of his own knowledge how the account is kept, where the Oregon and California Railroad Company has no funds available for payment of its indebtedness on account of the operation of the land department—that is properly an accounting matter. He does not know exactly, not sufficiently to explain to the court, what the relations of the Southern Pacific Company as a clearing house are to the Oregon and California Railroad Company in respect to its financial matters. He thinks that the proceeds of the sales of lands, with reference to the Union Trust Company, are handled through the New York Office, but he does not know the details of it. Supposing that he should receive the proceeds of a sale of land, for which a deed is executed in which the Union Trust Company joins, the proceeds would go to the Assistant Treasurer from the Oregon and California Railroad Company at San Francisco. The Auditor does all the bookkeeping in connection with that money and the Assistant Treasurer makes disposition of it. Witness has nothing to do with that.

Whereupon, upon further cross-examination the witness testified that six letters shown him marked "Government's Exhibit 113," were found in the files of the land department of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, which survived the fire of April 18, 1906, and the letters written upon green paper are answers that were written by his predecessor Eberlein. Whereupon complainant offered these six letters in evidence as Government's Exhibit 113, which said Government's Exhibit 113 was received in evidence, and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified herein as such.

Whereupon witness further testified that the file which he had produced as requested, related to the years 1904 and 1905, and they were the only files which survived the fire. A very few boxes of letters, and just as they could take them out without reference to what they were or anything else, survived the fire, and the balance was destroyed. Whereupon the witness being shown some correspondence during February 1904, identified same as Government's Exhibit 114, and testified that that is a part of the correspondence that was saved. Whereupon complainant offered said correspondence in evidence and the same was received and marked "Government's Exhibit 114," which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified as such.

Whereupon witness further testified that Government's Exhibit 115 is also a part of the files of the Oregon and California Railroad Company Land Department that survived the fire. Whereupon complainant offered Government's Exhibit 115 in evidence, which was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified herein as such.

Whereupon the witness further testified upon redirect examination, that he had made additions to Defendants' Exhibit 257, and each of them had been certified by the county clerk or county recorder of the respective counties, showing the dates on which the various deeds were recorded in the county records. This is shown on the right hand margin of each page. The necessary corrections made in the book and page of record and each county statement has been certified by the county recorder or county clerk of the county.

Whereupon the defendants re-offered Defendants' Exhibit 257 heretofore received in evidence and so marked, and counsel for the Government making no objection that this is a summary from the public records certified by the county clerk, instead of a certified copy of each of the documents, and the same is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of the statement of the evidence and identified herein as such.

Whereupon the witness further testified that he had prepared a statement concerning the lands involved in certain suits pending in the then Circuit Court, now District Court of the United States for the District of Oregon, wherein the United States is complainant and the Oregon and California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, Stephen T. Gage, Union Trust Company, and other co-defendants named in the statement are parties defendant, showing the number of the suit, the number of the contract involved, the purchaser, the acres involved, the price per acre, the consideration, the number and date of each deed, the grantee, the date of contract, purporting to be a statement summarizing what are commonly called in this record Forty-five suits against so-called Innocent Purchasers and others. This statement is compiled from the bills of complaint in the various cases, and from his record of the sales that were made, and it is a correct statement. Whereupon defendants offered and the same was received in evidence as Defendants' Exhibit 294, which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified as such herein.

Witness further testified that he had prepared a map showing the location of the lands involved in the so-called Forty-five suits that are summarized in Defendants' Exhibit 294, and it shows in colors the lands involved in the various suits, and bears a legend showing the particular suit indicated by each color, the number of suit, acres involved, and upon the face of the map the name of the purchaser of the land who is the defendant in the suit. The lands are correctly shown on this map. The lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company that are involved in this pending case have not been colored on this map.

Whereupon defendants offered Defendants' Exhibit 295 in evidence and the same was received and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified herein as such.

Whereupon the witness further testified that he had prepared a statement showing the executory contracts outstanding January 1, 1908, covering the land sales of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, giving the number of the contract and date of the contract, the name of the contract holder and description of the land, the number of acres, the price per acre, the consideration, the amount unpaid when default occurred, the date of default, the date when payments were made after default occurred, the amount of such payment, if made, the date of closing account in consequence of the default, the date of final payment or deed, and the character of land as shown by the field agent's report where there were any reports, the name of the field agent and the date of examination where there were such field agents and examination, and showing the totals of these various matters. The statement was prepared from the land department records and is correct in so far as those records give the information. The figures 2110 under the heading "Contract number," means the number of contracts that were outstanding on that date. The figures 462,614.59 mean the total number of acres covered by those outstanding contracts, and under the column "Consideration" the figures $2,746,216.35 indicate the total purchase price for the lands covered by those contracts, that is, the purchase price agreed to be paid. The figures $207,614.14 represent the portion of the purchase price which was unpaid on contracts on which default had occurred prior to January 1, 1903, that is, the total amount of overdue payments, or total amount of payments where default had occurred necessary to take up the entire contract, that is, contracts that were in default, and the figures $9530.19 mean that that is the amount that was subsequently paid after January 1, 1903, of the total amount of $207,614.14 which was unpaid on that date on defaulted contracts. Whereupon defendants offered in evidence this statement marked "Defendants' Exhibit 296." Whereupon, upon examination by counsel for complainant, the witness further testified that as far as they had the information, under the heading "Name of contract holder," he has given the name of the assignee. In many cases they have neither the name of the assignee nor the original purchaser. This statement covers not only the contracts which were in default, but all pending contracts on January 1, 1903. Whereupon counsel for complainant objects to the last two columns of this statement as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and upon the specific ground heretofore urged as to the character of the lands.

Whereupon the witness further testified upon redirect examination, that he had the original reports from the men who made these reports in the records of his office, and this memorandum is made from these reports and is correct in accordance with these reports. These reports are part of the official records of the Company, and were acted upon by him, acting for the company as Land Commissioner, in handling these lands, and relied upon by him as accurate. They were made in the usual and ordinary course of business as conducted by field agents in this business. These examinations by field agents, being of lands under outstanding contracts, were made on a different form, and covered somewhat different information, that is, they covered practically the same information as to the character and topography of the land, but went more into the question of improvements, the whereabouts of contract holders, and like information, which was not necessary in connection with unsold lands.

Witness made another report or statement showing sales made during the year 1903, and it contains a complete statement of all contracts issued. Cash sales were not included in this statement, and the statement is correct. It is obtained from records of the sales made. Whereupon defendants offered and there was received in evidence this statement marked "Defendants' Exhibit 297" and also "Defendants' Exhibit 296," which are hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified herein as such.

Whereupon the witness further testified that the reports referred to by him are a part of the office files; that they were made in the ordinary course of business and there are no new names indicated other than those shown on Defendants' Exhibit 296; witness relied upon these reports as being correct in the administration of this grant and in the sale of these lands. Contract No. 6695, in favor of N. Rust, is still an outstanding contract and is not reported as defaulted, the payments due on it have not been paid and it is still a valid contract. Whereupon complainant interposed the same objection to Defendants' Exhibit 297 as was interposed to Defendants' Exhibit 296. Whereupon the witness further testified that Defendants' Exhibit 298 is a statement prepared from his office records and is correct; there are statements there for each year from 1903 down to 1912. These yearly statements, Defendants' Exhibits 297 and 298 supplement Defendants' Exhibits 296 and 297. By referring to Defendants' Exhibit 296 one can, wherever his records show, ascertain the name of the purchaser which is not included in these annual statements since January 1, 1903; there were no contracts issued after 1903. Whereupon defendants offered and there was received in evidence Defendants' Exhibit 298, which is hereinafter set out and described, and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified herein as such. Witness further testified that he had prepared statements showing "Defaulted contracts upon which accounts were closed during 1903," and "Contracts not in default January 1, 1903, upon which default occurred during 1903, but accounts not closed during 1903," and the contracts outstanding January 1, 1903, from the records of the Oregon and California Railroad Company Land Department, and these statements are correct. Whereupon defendants offered these statements in evidence and the same were received and marked Defendants' Exhibit 299, which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified herein as such. Witness further testified that he had prepared similar statements, marked Defendants' Exhibits 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307 and 308, covering the succeeding years and testified that these statements were prepared from the Land Department records of the Oregon and California Railroad Company and correctly show the facts. Whereupon defendants offered each of these statements in evidence and the same were received and marked respectively, Defendants' Exhibits 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307 and 308, which said several exhibits are hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified herein as such. Whereupon the witness upon further cross-examination testified that his experience in the handling of railroad lands, commenced in 1882 as a clerk in the office at Kansas City, which handled the Kansas Pacific and Denver Pacific grants; those roads were consolidated with the Union Pacific in 1880 and were consolidated at the time he entered the office; he served in that office until 1887 when it was consolidated with the Omaha office, which handled the grant of the Union Pacific proper. Mr. Harriman was not connected with the road at the time witness went to Omaha in 1887; Harriman's connection with the road began about 1899 or 1900. Witness knew Judge Cornish; Cornish's first connection with the Union Pacific was as special master in chancery during the receivership, which occurred about 1893, and Cornish was made special master shortly after that; the receivership continued until Mr. Harriman re-organized the properties in 1898 and until the reorganization became effective. Shortly after the road was reorganized Judge Cornish became connected with it as Vice President and held this position until his death. Judge Cornish was located at New York; he was one of the executive officers of the Union Pacific, having general supervision of the subject of its land grants and supervised the general handling of those grants by the land commissioner or other officer having direct charge of the subject. The policy of the Union Pacific at the time of the consolidation of the Kansas City office with the Omaha office in 1887, in regard to the handling of the land grants of the companies composing the Union Pacific System, was the same policy that had been in force for years before, generally speaking. The several grants were owned by the one company from 1880 on. The Union Pacific acquired the properties of the Kansas Pacific and the Denver Pacific by consolidation, and the Kansas Pacfiic and Denver Pacific corporations became extinct. So that selections and lists under the Denver Pacific and Kansas Pacific grants, after the consolidation, were made by the Union Pacific itself, and patents issued to the Union Pacific as the assignee or grantee of these other two corporations. In May, 1890, he became land commissioner of all these Union Pacific grants mentioned, and served in that capacity until 1908, when he came to San Francisco and entered upon his present employment. During that period from 1890 to 1908, a period of 18 years, or after Judge Cornish became connected with the Union Pacific' he supervised in a general way the work of witness as land commissioner of the Union Pacific. Judge Cornish was the man who in 1908 sent witness to San Francisco to enter upon his present employment; and after he entered upon his present employment his work was still supervised by Judge Cornish until his death. There was no real change in that respect as to the person who supervised his work after he came to San Francisco from what it had been when he served in Omaha as long as Judge Cornish remained alive. Judge Cornish died November 1, 1908. Judge Cornish was succeeded, temporarily, in his work at San Francisco, as land commissioner of these several companies, by R. S. Lovett and then by Mr. Herrin. Lovett supervised his work from about April or May, 1909, until March 1, 1910, since which latter date his work has been under the supervision of Mr. Herrin, general counsel of the Southern Pacific Company. Witness could not say positively as to whether Judge Cornish ever held any official position with reference to the Oregon and California Railroad Company and he never addressed him as such official as he recalls. He thinks that Judge Lovett was president of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, but not positive about that. Mr. Harriman was president of that company until he died, and thinks Lovett was president after Mr. Harriman died. His work as land commissioner of these several companies mentioned has to some extent been supervised by President Sproule. Mr. Kruttschnitt has not, since witness' connection with the land department at San Francisco, or with the Union Pacific Land Department, had any supervision of land grant matters pertaining to these railroads. The land department maintains a number of men as mineral field agents, and ordinary field agents, and timber cruisers, who are engaged in examining the lands under his jurisdiction, the lands of the Oregon and California, the lands of the Central Pacific, and the lands of the Southern Pacific Land Company. The Southern Pacific Company maintains a geological department, and it has been his practice to call upon the consulting geologist at the head of that department for information concerning mineral lands and at his request he has made examination of lands and charged the cost of that work against the land department, and witness charges it against the proper company. He has not done any work of that character in Oregon. He does not know why the Southern Pacific Company maintains a geological department, that company has always had it so far as he knows; but he does not know how it was instituted. He is familiar with the litigation involving the oil lands down in Elk Hills, which is now pending in the southern district of California, in a general way, but does not know that the Southern Pacific Railroad Company contends by way of a defense that Mr. Dumble, one of the geologists of the Southern Pacific Company, was not an employe of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and therefore the latter company is not bound by his knowledge, although witness is not fully familiar with that feature of the case. He knows Mr. Dumble, who is head of the geological department of the Southern Pacific Company; he is the consulting geologist and has an office at San Francisco and also one in Houston, Texas.

"Q. Now, Mr. McAllaster, the fact is that you are selected and employed by the Southern Pacific Company, without saying anything at the present as to how your salary is paid, but you were actually selected and employed by Southern Pacific officials for the Southern Pacific Company, were you not?

A. Well, that is not in accordance with my appointment. My appointment was by the Board of Directors of each company; and my appointment by the Board of Directors, or rather the executive committee of the Southern Pacific Company, was made some time after the other appointments, and for the limited purposes named in the appointment only.

Q. But at the time that Judge Cornish transferred you from Omaha to San Francisco, you had an understanding with him as to the terms of your employment, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The amount of your salary?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was afterwards apportioned among the companies the boards of directors of which appointed you land commissioner?

A. At the same time that the resolution of appointment was made by each board, the compensation to be paid by that company was also fixed by another resolution.

Q. I understand; but your total compensation was fixed by Judge Cornish at the time that he transferred you from Omaha to San Francisco, was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. And after you got to San Francisco, the several companies whose granted lands came under your management then divided the total that you were to receive among themselves by resolution of their board of directors?

A. Well, just as I hire a man today as a field agent, for instance, and he is to do work wherever I happen to send him for any one of the companies or all of them, as the case may be.

Q. That is another circumstance, is it not—that you hire men for work generally upon all of these land departments, and then charge for their services against the several companies as you may direct them to work from time to time?

A. Yes.

Q. The only difference in your own case being that yours is a fixed charge, apportioned arbitrarily among the several companies regardless of the amount of time that you may spend one month on one land grant or upon another?

A. Yes.

Whereupon the witness further testified that at the time that quit claim deeds were adopted by the Oregon and California Railroad Company, he was not in its employ and he has no way of testifying as to what the real reason for the change was, except as he might infer or may have been informed by others. He could tell in any particular individual case why a quit claim deed was given in that case, because the record will show the reason why. He has gathered from the office records and reports that these forms were used in connection with unpatented lands. He does not think quitclaim forms were used generally for patented lands. Since he became land commissioner he used a form which he thinks reads: "Grants and conveys all the right, title and interest the company has or may hereafter acquire." He does not consider that a quitclai mform of deed. And he makes this distinction in his answer that he does not consider a deed which grants and conveys the right, title and interest that the railroad company has or may hereafter acquire as a quitclaim form of deed; he means by the term quitclaim form of deed the old familiar form which simply quitclaims the present interest of the grantor. And this deed covering interest that may hereafter he acquired distinguishes it in his mind from the ordinary quitclaim deed and the fact that they used the word "grant" in there. No warranty forms of deed have been used as to patented or unpatented lands since he became land commissioner of the Oregon and California Railroad Company. He knows that generally on the Coast "bargain and sale" deed is used instead of a warranty for all land conveyances. There are comparatively very few warranty deeds used on the Pacific Coast by anybody. There is a limited implication of warranty in a "bargain and sale" deed, at least in California; he would not say as to the other states. He would not know and would not undertake to give the technical definition of what the implied warranty is. The only reason why the Oregon and California Railroad Company uses a form of deed which carries with it no warranties whatever when conveying lands that have been patented to it by the United States, that he knows of, is that it is practically the standard form for all of the several companies and generally the form that is used by individuals. Referring to these maps and statements and other compilations identified by witness, and received in evidence, witness testified that he has a good deal of personal knowledge as to the accuracy and details of them, in that he supervised the making of them, and to a considerable extent had personal knowledge of the details that go into them; but he would not admit that he had personal knowledge or information as to the details of the maps showing what lands of the even numbered sections intervening the lands involved in this suit were entered under settlement laws and what were entered under non-settlement laws, but would admit that the details of abstracting the records of the United States Land Office and county records were done by the employes of his department, the information they obtained was sent into the department and then under his direction it was transferred to these maps. He knows that the information which they sent in is correct, because they were sent out to get the correct information and he relied upon them to do so. This does not constitute personal knowledge upon his part as to the accuracy of those details and he disclaims in a way any personal knowledge of the abstract work, because that was all done by employes outside of the office and he did not see them do the work, and was not with them at the time they were doing it. The map was made in the office from the information they furnished and under his supervision. He did not check over all of the details of that map, but simply directed men upon whom he relied and upon whose competency and integrity he relied, and who were employed in his office to make the map as he instructed them to. He can say that if he was using the map for any purpose, he should rely upon it as being correct. He understands the distinction between the knowledge that a business man might rely upon and the knowledge which may be the basis of evidence in court as personal knowledge of the facts. He did not personally put the coloring on the map, but he did watch while the work was being done, looked at the map from time to time and saw that it was being correctly done and as he wanted it done. He did not check each individual tract to see that it was colored properly, but presumes that he checked some of the tracts to see that they were colored properly. He does not remember just what particular details he had to do with the map, but had the work done in such a way that he could ascertain that it was correct, by relying upon the accuracy of the men who were doing the work. That is not the sole basis of his knowledge of the accuracy of the map. He was looking at the map every few days, and seeing that they were proceeding along the lines of what was laid down for them to do, and doing the work as he wanted it done, and correctly, but he did not check each individual entry and showing on the map. If he discovered anything that was not right he had it corrected. There is not a piece of work that is done in his office that is not checked at least once, or perhaps two or three times before it is considered final, by the men under him. He does not undertake to do these things himself, there are so many of them. His general statement with reference to this map is also true of the others in a general way. And it is true with reference to these compilations that have been introduced in evidence, to a considerable extent; some of these compilations he did more detail work on than others. In each instance he relied on the records of the office, and a large part of this was done before he became connected with the office.

"Q. Now, take for example, that map which purports to show what lands are timbered and what lands are agricultural—defendants' exhibit 260—now all you know as to the accuracy of that map is that you had employed graders and examiners of land from time to time, and you found in the office reports of graders and examiners who were employed before you became connected with the office, and you directed that the reports of all of these examiners and graders be used for the purpose of compiling a map that would contain the information which their reports conveyed to the land department—isn't that true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As to the accuracy of the reports of these graders and examiners, you have no personal knowledge?

A. I have not.

Q. Other than your personal reliance upon those men?

A. That is all."

Whereupon the witness further testified that he realizes that men under certain circumstances might reasonably differ as to whether a given piece of land was susceptible to cultivation after the timber was removed. The differences in opinion of land examiners and land graders would not be very great, the character of the land is too well defined. Frequently he had land examined by more than one grader; sometimes intentionally and sometimes the work will overlap. Sometimes the work was done three or four years ago and he would want it done over again as of date. One piece of land may be timbered land three or four years ago and somebody cut the timber off in the mean time. There is nothing to show upon the map which of these lands, if any, would be suspectible to cultivation after the timber was removed. He does not remember that in the annual reports of the Southern Pacific Company each year that it is stated that it has a land department, and gives the officers thereof, but thinks his name is shown in the annual report of the Southern Pacific Company, but just how it is shown he does not remember. Defendants' exhibit 260 purports to give the character of the land in detail by sections. An individual examination of each section is not necessary in order to prepare such a plat. He has many reports in the office to show a particular district is all timbered, or a particular township, or a part of a particular township. Those were not taken into consideration in making up that detailed statement of forty per cent examined. They were taken into consideration in making Defendants' Exhibit 262, which simply goes into the general showing of what is timbered land and what is non-timbered land. There is nothing on the map to show what part of it is based upon detailed examination of the land, and what part is based upon general reports as to large areas, for instance a township or a half township. When a man reports as to an entire township instead of by sections, he has not made a close detailed examination of it, or he would have reported by sections. Very frequently they get what he calls recognaisance reports, which are intended to tell in a general way where the timber is and what part is non-timbered claims, or what part may be agricultural land. When land has timber on it, it is, generally speaking so classified by him and his graders, without reference to the question whether it could be used for agricultural purposes after the timber is removed; at the same time his reports show that the printed forms call for the information as to whether or not the land will be agricultural land after the timber is taken off. At the same time, for all present purposes they call that timber land. Defendants' Exhibit 262 does not show what is suitable for agriculture after the timber is logged off, and the stumps cleared out and the land leveled up and put in shape for farming. That has not been taken into consideration there. That is called timber land, because that is what it is valuable for now, and will be for a good many years to come. It will take a long time before the land will be worth the expense of removing the timber and grubbing out the stumps to make it agricultural. There is a very large part of the lands involved in this suit that never will be suitable for agriculture. There is another part that after the land is logged off, if developements in the way of transportation facilities and opening of the country are sufficient, or if they ever become sufficient to warrant the expense of grubbing out the stumps, the land might then be used for agriculture, but that will be years and years from now. There may be some tracts that might warrant that expense in the near future, but they are a very small proportion of the whole.

"Q. Now, from Albany in this state to the state line, there are no transportation facilities except those controlled by the Southern Pacific Company. Isn't that true?

Mr. Fenton: From Albany which way?

Mr. Townsend: South to the state line. I mean west of the Cascades.

Mr. Fenton: That projection of the line, about 25 miles of it built from Medford to the Rogue River, called the Medford and Eagle Point out from Medford; and then there is the Oregon and Southeastern for 18 miles into the Bohemia district, that we don't have anything to do with.

Mr. Townsend: Where is that?

Mr. Fenton: Cottage Grove to Bohemia. It is 18 or 20 miles.

A. And there is the whole Pacific Ocean with several streams extending up into this grant that can be utilized for transportation purposes.

Q. Particularly fish.

A. Particularly what?

Q. Particularly fish?

A. I am not a fisherman. I don't know.

Q. You don't know why those streams have not been utilized for transportation purposes, do you?

A. To some extent because the harbors are not as good as they might be, or as good as the population immediately surrounding those harbors hope to make them in the near future.

Q. But in a general way, it is a fact, is it not, that the Southern Pacific is the only means of transportation with reference to these lands, from Eugene, I will put it, south to the southern boundary line of the state?

A. No, because they can be transported out over the ocean, and have been—the products are being transported.

Q. How do they get to the harbor?

A. Down the rivers.

Q. What rivers?

A. The lower portions of the Rogue River, the Umpqua River and Siuslaw River.

Q. How long a distance from the harbor are those streams navigable?

A. Well, I cannot give you the distance in miles, but I do know that more or less lumber is taken out through those streams and through the bays at their mouths.

Q. Well, do you mean that there are mills situated upon the streams, and that the lumber is transported down the streams for any considerable distance to the harbor, or do you mean that the logs are floated down to the mills?

A. I don't know for what distance. I do know that lumber is—I say I know—it is my information from reliable sources that lumber is transported from the west coast of Oregon by water.

Q. Now, what companies, what mills do you refer to?

A. I cannot give you the names of any of them.

Q. Do you refer to the Smith mill on Coos Bay?

A. As I said, I cannot give you the names of any of them, but it is my general information that that is done.

Q. Well, do you know that there are any transportation facilities that would be available to the lands in this grant for agricultural products to be transported to the harbor and thence by sea.

A. I can judge from the fact that there have been a half dozen ports organized under the Oregon law for the purpose of developing that traffic, by water from the west coast of the State of Oregon. There is some traffic now, and they expect to develop more.

Q. You have not answered my question as to whether or not any of that is available with the present facilities to any of the lands involved in this suit.

A. Well, very little with the present facilities.

Q. So that, speaking with reference to the present facilities, it is a fact, is it not, that the Southern Pacific Company is the principal means of transportation with reference to that portion of the land involved in this suit that are situated from Eugene south to the southern boundary line of the state?

A. It is the principal means of transportation for that territory, yes."

Whereupon the witness further testified that he did not admit that a large quantity of this land would be available to settlement if it had improved transportation facilities. A small quantity might be made available for settlement with a great deal of expense. He does not classify as non-agricultural lands, lands which are not now available for settlement because of the lack of transportation facilities. They are classified as timber lands if they carry timber, or they are classified as grazing lands if they do not carry timber. That is all they are good for now, and all they will be good for for a good many years to come and until transportation facilities are afforded and until settlement within the Willamette and other valleys, has reached a point where there is no more room, and the settlers have been forced into the outlying districts. In other words one could not today, and witness is speaking now as a land man, sell those lands that witness is speaking of for agricultural purposes. No one would buy them for that purpose; meaning, generally speaking, the lands in this suit. He knows from 25 years experience in handling lands. Not handling these lands, but from handling lands of like character; he handled a lot of them in California during the last three or four years. He has had no experience whatever in handling these lands or offering them for sale upon the market. These have not been on the market. He has had eight or nine thousand applications to buy these lands at $2.50 per acre, which he has refused. Those applications did not contemplate buying them for farming purposes, because that is not what they are useful for and he assumes to speak for the purpose, the mental purpose, of eight thousand people that he has never seen, because he can read from the character of the land itself what they are buying it for. When a man applies to buy a quarter section at $2.50 an acre that carries fifty or a hundred thousand feet, board measure, of timber to the acre, it is absurd to suggest for a moment that he is buying that for agricultural purposes. He is buying it for the timber pure and simple. The mere fact that a man offered one hundred dollars an acre for the land would not make it agricultural land, it would make it timber land. He does not know that the price of $2.50 an acre has anything particularly to do with the character of the land. He has not seen any of this land applied for except from the railroad. He has not been over the land personally and he does not know from what he has seen from the railroad that he has seen any tract covered by these applications. Without seeing the lands or the persons who applied to purchase it, he would not assume to assure the court that none of them applied to purchase that land for the purpose of homes and there may be some tracts that homes might be made on, but speaking comparatively and taking into consideration all of the lands involved in this suit, the percentage is very small. So far as the settlement of these lands, using that word settlement in the sense of going upon them and living there and making homes on the tract, he does not think the suspension of sales has retarded the settlement of Oregon at all. It possibly has delayed somewhat the timber operations in Oregon. He does not know that settlers have gone upon the lands intervening those railroad lands, and have been compelled to abandon their homes because they were living in a checkerboard, where each section was separated from the other section by this railroad land that is withheld from sale. If a settler could get a quarter section on an even numbered section, and off that quarter section could make his living, it would not make any difference whether there was any other quarter section open for the entry of someone else or not. If he went on a quarter section and the surrounding land was withheld from the markets and the result was that he could not make a living, then the land that he went on was not suitable for his settlement. Lands otherwise suitable for settlement will not be rendered unsuitable for settlement in the sense that the settlement would be profitable by the withholding of the intervening lands from the market. The withholding of the intervening lands does not render the others unsuitable for settlement.

"Q. Does it not render them unsuitable for a home, in the sense that the surrounding lands cannot be settled up, roads cannot be opened, schools cannot be established.

A. But surrounding lands are settled up, roads are opened, and schools are established in this very land grant. You are outlining conditions that do not exist.

Q. Well, how do you know they do not exist?

A. From the reports that I have of conditions that do exist.

Q. Now, you have had some thirty or forty men employed in examining this grant for different purposes that you named in your direct examination, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever instruct one of them to ascertain whether any settlers had been compelled to abandon their settlement because of the retardation of development of the vicinity in which he lived, by the withholding of these railroad lands from sale?

A. I do not know that we ever instructed them to go into the reasons why the lands were abandoned. In fact, that would be a hard thing to do, when you go and find a quarter section with some battered down improvements on it, that show abandonment for years —it would be pretty hard to find the man that was there and abandoned it, and find out why he abandoned it. We have not undertaken to chase up that information.

Q. Because that would be adverse to you, wouldn't it?

A. No, because it would be of no earthly use to us or anybody else.

Q. You have not looked for any information that would be adverse to you, have you?

A. And I want to say further that my whole testimony has been based on the understanding that I was testifying from knowledge gained in my work, not from personal examination. I have stated that many a time. What I have said, I have said knowing it to be the fact from the information that I have gained, and necessarily gained in carrying on my office.

Q. But you have no personal knowledge of the accuracy of the information upon which you base your testimony?

A. Well, I have this personal knowledge, that if I find a field agent or other man don't accurately report the facts, he don't stay with me very long.

Q. How would you find it out?

A. In many ways."

Whereupon the witness further testified that they have many ways of finding out whether a man is doing his work right or not. If the company had occasion to have that particular piece of land re-examined by some other field agent, and the report was absolutely different, then they would undertake to have both reports verified and see which one was right. Witness is speaking now of an individual particular quarter section where, for some reason or other, the company thought here had been some mistake made. He has had many quarter sections re-examined because he thought there was some mistake made. He is speaking now of his entire experience and not particularly in this Oregon and California grant. The question necessarily goes into 25 years of experience in handling land grants, and one cannot be confined to any one particular quarter section, or any one particular land grant. If an examiner had been in his employ and he had found him accurate, he would rely upon his report being correct. He would not know if the report was correct except in so far as he relied upon that man.

Whereupon the witness upon re-direct examination further testified that he recognized "Defendants' Exhibit 366" as an official publication of the United States, which was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit 366" and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified herein as such.

Whereupon the witness recognized House Report No. 2215 House of Representatives, Fifty-first Congress, first session, as an official document published by the United States.

Whereupon defendants offered said report in evidence and asked leave to have the map read into the record, together with the amended bill accompanying the report, as a part of the same. Whereupon it was stipulated between counsel for the respective parties that all of the reports of the Committees of either House of Congress and the general debates upon the subject of the bill in both Houses of Congress, may be considered as having been reecived in evidence the same as if extended at length in the record. It being understood that such evidence shall be subject to the objection that the same is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and that the purpose of this stipulation is that the Court shall take Judicial notice of the official reports, the Congressional record containing these Committee reports, the Congressional debates and other proceedings without further identification. Counsel for the Government objected to the introduction of Report No. 2215 and the bill accompanying the same on the ground that the same is incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant and counsel for defendants objects to the admissibility of the debates in Congress or Committee reports generally as incompetent.

Whereupon said report No. 2215 and bill accompanying the same was received in evidence and is in words and figures as follows:

"The Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (S. No. 2781) 'An act to forfeit certain lands heretofore granted for the purpose of aiding in the construction of railroads and for other purposes,' having fully considered the same, would respectfully report:

"On April 1, 1890, this committee reported a bill on this subject (H. R. No. 8919), which bill has not yet been considered by the House.

"In some respects the two bills are in substance the same, and we recommend the amendment of the Senate bill No. 2781 as follows:

"Strike out all after the enacting clause, and insert—

"(1) Section 1 of the House bill as section 1. This is substantially the same as section 1 of the Senate bill.

"(2) Section 2 of the House bill as section 2.

"(3) Section 2 of the Senate bill as Section 3.

"(4) Section 4 of the House bill, which is identical with section 4 of the Senate bill.

"(5) Section 3 of the Senate bill as section 5.

"(6) Section 5 of the Senate bill with an addition as to the reduction in price of lands restored to $1.25 per acre, to stand as section 6.

"(7) Section 6 of the House bill to stand as section 7. This leaves of the Senate bill sections 7, 8, and 9.

"Section 7 would include the Tennessee and Coosa and the Mobile and Girard Railroads in Alabama, and extend the time for their completion one year.

"Section 8 applies to the Gulf and Ship Island Railroad in Mississippi.

"More than thirty years have elapsed since these grants were made by Congress in aid of these railroads, and not only has the policy of making such grants been long abandoned, but your committee think proposal to extend time for construction has not met with favor in the House. And so they do not include these sections in the amended bill.

"Nor do the committee recommend section 8.

"The committee has for several years recommended in forfeiture bills a prior right of purchase of a limited quantity not exceeding 320 acres of forfeited land to any one having a contract of purchase with the State or corporation under the grant.

"Section 8 proposes to give this privilege to holders of tax titles and to an unlimited amount of land.

"We do not give this our assent.

"We recommend that the Senate bill, amended as indicated, do pass.

"AMENDED BILL.

"AN ACT to forfeit certain lands heretofore granted for the purpose of aiding in the construction of railroads, and for other purposes.

"BE IT ENACTED BY THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA IN CONGRESS ASSEMBLED, That there is hereby forfeited to the United States, and the United States hereby resumes the title thereto, all lands heretofore granted to any State or to any corporation to aid in the construction of a railroad opposite to and coterminous with the portion of any such railroad not now completed, for the construction or benefit of which lands have heretofore been granted; and all such lands are declared to be a part of the public domain: PROVIDED, that this act shall not be construed as forfeiting the right of way or depot grounds of any railroad company heretofore granted, or lands included in any city, town or village site.

"Sec. 2. That all persons who, at the date of the passage of this act, are actual settlers in good faith on any of the lands hereby forfeited and are otherwise qualified, on making due claim on said lands under the homestead law within six months after the passage of this act, shall be entitled to a preference right to enter the same under the provisions of the homestead law and this act, and shall be regarded as such actual settlers from the date of actual settlement or occupation; and any person who has not heretofore had the benefit of the homestead or pre-emption law, or who has failed from any cause to perfect the title to a tract of land heretofore entered by him under either of said laws, may make a second homestead entry under the provisions of this act. The Secretary of the Interior will make such rules as will secure to such actual settlers these rights.

"Sec. 3. That in all cases where persons are in possession of any of the lands affected by any such grant and hereby resumed by and restored to the United States, under deed, written contract with, or license from, the State or corporation to which such grant was made, or its assignees, executed prior to January first, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, they shall be entitled to purchase the same from the United States, in quantities not exceeding three hundred and twenty acres to any one such person, at the rate of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, at any time within two years from the passage of this act, and on making said payment to receive patents therefor; PROVIDED, That in all cases where parties, persons, or corporations, with the permission of such State or corporation, or its assignees, are in the possession of and have made improvements upon any of the lands hereby resumed and restored, and are not entitled to enter the same under the provisions of this act, such parties, persons, or corporations shall have six months in which to remove any growing crop, and within which time they shall also be entitled to move all buildings and other movable improvements from said lands: PROVIDED FURTHER, That the provisions of this section shall not apply to any lands (situate in the State of Iowa) on which any person in good faith has made or asserted the right to make a pre-emption or homestead settlement: AND PROVIDED FURTHER, That nothing in this act contained shall be construed as limiting the rights granted to purchasers or settlers by 'An act to provide for the adjustment of land grants made by Congress to aid in the construction of railroads and for the forfeiture of unearned lands, and for other purposes,' approved March third, eighteen hundred and eighty-seven, or as repealing, altering, or amending said act, nor as in any manner affecting any cause of action existing in favor of any purchaser against his grantor for breach of any covenants of title.

"Sec. 4. That section five of an act entitled 'An act for a grant of lands to the State of Iowa in alternate sections to aid in the construction of a railroad in said State,' approved May seventeenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and section seven of an act entitled 'An act extending the time for the completion of certain land-grant railroads in the States of Minnesota and Iowa, and for other purposes,' approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and also section five of an act entitled 'An act making an additional grant of lands to the State of Minnesota in alternate sections to aid in the construction of railroads in said State,' approved July fourth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, so far as said sections are applicable to lands embraced within the indemnity limits of said grants, be, and the same are hereby, repealed; and so much of the provisions of section four of an act approved June second, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and entitled 'An act to amend an act entitled 'An act making a grant of lands to the State of Iowa in alternate sections to aid in the construction of certain railroads in said State,' approved May fifteenth, eighteen hundred and fifty-six, be, and the same are hereby, repealed so far as they require the Secretary of the Interior to reserve any lands but the odd sections within the primary or six miles granted limits of the roads mentioned in said act of June second, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, or the act to which the same is amendatory.

"Sec. 5. That if it shall be found that any lands heretofore granted to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company and so resumed by the United States and restored to the public domain lie north of the line known as the 'Harrison line,' being a line drawn from Wallula, Washington, easterly to the southeast corner of the northeast one-fourth of the southeast quarter of section twenty-seven, in township seven north, of range thirty-seven east, of the Willamette meridian, all persons who had acquired in good faith the title of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company to any portion of said lands prior to July first, eighteen hundred and eighty-five, or who at said date were in possession of any portion of said lands or had improved the same, claiming the same under written contract with said company, executed in good faith, or their heirs or assigns, as the case may be, shall be entitled to purchase the lands so acquired, possessed, or improved from the United States, at any time prior to the expiration of one year after it shall be finally determined that such lands are restored to the public domain by the provisions of this act, at the rate of two dollars and fifty cents per acre, and to receive patents therefor upon proof before the proper land office of the fact of such acquisition, possession, or improvement, and payment therefor without limitation as to quantity: PROVIDED, That the rights of way and riparian rights heretofore attempted to be conveyed to the city of Portland, in the State of Oregon, by the Northern Pacific Railroad Company and the Central Trust Company of New York, by deed of conveyance dated August eighth, eighteen hundred and eighty-six, and which are described as follows: A strip of land fifty feet in width, being twenty-five feet on each side of the center line of a water-pipe line, as the same is staked out and located, or as it shall be hereafter finally located according to the provisions of an act of the legislative assembly of the State of Oregon approved November twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and eighty-five, providing for the means to supply the city of Portland with an abundance of good, pure, and wholesome water over and across the following described tracts of land: Sections nineteen and thirty-one, in township one south, of range six east; sections twenty-five, thirty-one, thirty-three and thirty-five, in township one south, of range five east; sections three and five, in township two south, of range five east; section one, in township two south, of range four east; sections twenty-three, twenty-five, and thirty-five, in township one south, of range four east, of the Willamette meridian, in the State of Oregon, forfeited by this act, are hereby confirmed unto the said city of Portland, in the State of Oregon, its successors and assigns forever, with the right to enter on the hereinbefore-described strip of land, over and across the above-described sections for the purpose of constructing, maintaining, and repairing a water-pipe line as aforesaid.

"Sec. 6. That no lands declared forfeited to the United States by this act shall by reason of such forfeiture inure to the benefit of any State or corporation to which lands may have been granted by Congress, except as herein otherwise provided; nor shall this act be construed to enlarge the area of land originally covered by any such grant, or to confer any right upon any State, corporation, or person to lands which were excepted from such grant. Nor shall the moiety of the lands granted to any railroad company on account of a main and a branch line appertaining to uncompleted road and hereby forfeited, within the conflicting limits of the grants for such main and branch lines, when but one of such lines has been completed, inure, by virtue of the forfeiture hereby declared, to the benefit of the completed line; and the price of all lands affected hereby and hereby restored when in any way sold is hereby reduced to one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre.

"Sec. 7. That nothing in this act shall be construed to waive or release in any way any right of the United States to have any other lands granted by them, as recited in the first section, forfeited for any failure, past or future, to comply with the conditions of the grant."

Whereupon the witness upon cross-examination further testified that the various compilations and maps identified by him were all prepared, except one or two which may show the contrary on the face, since the institution of this suit, for the purpose of being used in this suit. They were compiled to show the facts as shown by the records of the office. Witness testified that the compilations themselves are not of any practical use, and were never of any practical use in the office. He does not remember anything that is especially part of the office records. "Defendants' Exhibit 263" purporting to show the disposition of the even numbered sections intervening the unsold portions of the land grant involved in this suit was prepared specially for use in this case and had no practical use in his office in the administration of the grant, and when he says that some of these documents, speaking generally, are relied upon by his office, he refers to the sources from which these maps and computations have been compiled rather than the maps and statements themselves, and it is largely true that his only knowledge as to the accuracy of these maps and compilations rests upon the fact that he directed how they should be compiled and prepared and knows that the men that did the work had before them the details from which they could have made them accurately, the witness supervising the work as much as he could. He attended to some of the detail work, but as a rule it was done by clerks in the office. It was not possible for him to give a close personal check. In "Defendants' Exhibit 263" he has included any form of selection or entry that did not require settlement on the land. It was not the intention to say that none of these lands may have been taken for settlement purposes, that was not within his knowledge. The records of his office disclose that quit claim deeds had been used by the Oregon & California Railroad Company in conveying lands that had not yet been patented and such instances of conveyance are not limited to cases where mineral claimants contested the Company's selections or lists and the contest was finally compromised between the mineral claimants and the Company. It is impossible for him to say, from recollection, how many instances he has found where the Company did issue deeds prior to patent outside of lands claimed by mineral claimants. The records show quite a number. The records show that the lands were sold in the ordinary course of events, the deed issued and the patent sometimes subsequently acquired and sometimes not yet acquired. He would not say that these were prior to the receivership in 1885, he does not recollect. Any lands lost by the Act of January 31, 1885, are not considered other than to show them as lost, if shown at all.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

"Q. Now, you recall that there was litigation instituted by the United States involving the northern four or five townships on the easterly side of the grant under the act of July 25, 1866, known as the Northern Pacific Overlap case. You recall the fact that there was such litigation?

A. I know there was such a case, yes.

Q. Now, do you not know that, when the Northern Pacific Overlap suit was instituted by the United States, the railroad company gave notice to all parties holding contracts for lands involved in that litigation that no further payments would be received under the contracts until the litigation was terminated?

A. I know only that some people have claimed to have received such notice. I don't know the facts as to the notice having been given.

Q. Well, now, do you not know that there are quite a number of outstanding contracts involving lands that were tied up in that litigation for some time, and which contracts have not been finally forfeited for failure on the part of the purchaser to comply with the conditions of the contracts, and at the same time that those lands are not included in the defendants' answer here as either sold or unsold lands?

A. I remember of a few cases,—I don't think there is quite a large number—where contracts are still open accounts on our books, and where parties claim that they were given some extensions of time on account of the Northern Pacific Overlap cases. Now, I do not recall that there is any showing in the answer of tracts of land that have been sold. The answer is confined to a showing of lands unsold, as I recollect it, and those contracted lands are not in the list of unsold lands."

tract has been cancelled on the books or not, and show in a column under the heading "Date of closing account in consequence of default" the dates when all contracts that have been closed for default were so closed. So far as these contracts are concerned, they have been forfeited and the lands may have been sold under another contract later on. So far as these contracts are concerned, the lands unless later sold, would appear in the statement of unsold lands. Under another column is shown "Dates of final payment or deed." These dates show that a deed had issued, or that the contracts had been paid in full. Where no date appears in either of these columns the contract is still outstanding, so far as the accounts and records show and the description of the land, contract number, name of contract holder, so far as the Company is advised, are shown in connection with the statements. He cannot tell without a very great deal of research the cases where the purchasers dispute the claim that the lands have reverted to the Railroad Company. On pending contracts that are in default, the exhibit shows which of these pending contracts is in default, where the account is still open on the books. Under the heading in the two columns "Amount unpaid when default occurred" and "Date of default" that information is given. Then under double column "Payments made after default occurred. Date—Amount" it shows what has been paid subsequent to the date shown in the column headed "Date of default." By taking this exhibit and referring to these items which show default and also the column showing date of final payment or deed, as well as "Date of closing account in consequence of default," one would have all contracts as to which default has occurred and where the rights of the purchaser and the Railroad Company have not yet been settled; that is, if there is no entry under the heading "Date of closing account in consequence of default" and likewise under the heading "Date of final payment or deed" then that means that the contracts are in default and if nothing appears under the heading "Payments made after default occurred" that means that the default is still continuing. None of these instances are included in the pleadings in this case as unsold lands. The donation land claims were taken up before this grant was made, and that is the reason for the resulting loss within place limits. Donation land claims were a matter of record in 1866.

Witness further testified that the records and letter files of the Oregon & California Railroad Company which survived the San Francisco fire of 1906, and heretofore produced at the request of counsel for the Government, were such records and files and were found in the form produced when he entered the office. That he was present when Mr. Eberlein testified and remembers that Eberlein explained that "Government's Exhibit 115," being correspondence in which the assignability of that entire grant, with right of lieu selection in favor of the assignee was discussed, belonged to other files than the Oregon & California Railroad Company. Witness did not intentionally put any of the files belonging to any other grant in the Oregon & California Railroad Company files. This exhibit had inadvertently gotten in there and was there when the files were gotten out and so far as he knows was there during all the time that he had had custody of those files. Witness does not recall definitely relating to the sale to Franklin Martin in December 1908 of 160 acres of the granted lands at $2.50 per acre. The case was terminated shortly after witness took charge of the office and his action in connection with the matter was largely in accordance with advice of the law department, which was thoroughly familiar with the facts. He does not recall where the land was situated and would have to refer to the files in the case in order to say much concerning it, beyond the fact, as he has heretofore testified, that that was a sale which had been entered into pursuant to settlement of a law suit. It is his recollection that these lands are involved in this suit now pending. Referring to the sale made in June 1910 to Roy Minkler of 80 acres at $22.00 per acre, that was a suit instituted for Minkler by A. W. Lafferty, in the Federal Court sitting at Tacoma and is the suit referred to in the bill of complaint in this case and that was the suit that was compromised. He admits that there is a small percentage of agricultural lands involved in this suit but does not remember whether his previous testimony was confined to a statement that he would have sold agricultural lands but for this suit. He presumes he would have sold timber lands had it not been for this pending suit.

Whereupon witness being recalled on behalf of defendants on direct examination testified as follows:

Mr. Fenton: Q. Mr. McAllaster, you may state, if you will, whether or not you have examined the corporate records of the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Salem, the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Portland and the Oregon and California Railroad Company in the custody of the secretary of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and as a result of such examination of these corporate records, you are able to state succinctly what you find with reference to the financial operations of these companies from the beginning down to the period covered by your investigation?

A. Yes, I made such examination of these corporate records while I was in Portland last October, and I found the result as follows:

"The Minute Books of the Oregon Central Rail"road Company (East Side) and the Oregon Central "Railroad Company (West Side), and the Oregon and "California Railroad Company show certain moneys to "have been obtained towards the construction of the "road, as follows:

"The East Side Company was incorporated April
"22, 1867, and immediately thereafter let a contract "to A. J. Cook & Company for construction of the "line for one hundred and fifty miles south from Port"land. Subsequently this contract was amended and "later another contract was entered into with Cook and "Company for construction from the 150th mile post
"south to the Oregon State line. All of these contracts "were eventually assigned by Cook & Company to Ben

"Holladay and Company, and from time to time cer"tain shares of capital stock and certain mortgage bonds
"were delivered to either Cook & Company or Ben Hol"laday and Company.

"On March 28, 1870, the East Side Minute Book
"shows a proposition from Ben Holladay and Com"pany to the effect that such Company would turn over "to the East Side Company all stocks and bonds it "held, all the completed and uncompleted railroad lines,
"all rolling stock and other property, all mills, ma"chine shops and their contents, all live stock, imple"ments and property owned by or standing in the name
"of Ben Holladay and Company which had been ac"quired or were intended for use in construction "and operation of the railroad, in consideration "of which the Railroad Company was, within "two years, to pay the full amount of money which Ben "Holladay and Company had expended, and to pay all "liabilities which had been incurred by Ben Holladay
"and Company in connection with the construction of "the road, or defending the corporate rights of that "railroad, which amounts were supposed to aggregate "between $800,000.00 and $1,000,000.00.

"Coincidentally there was received by the East Side
"Company from the Oregon and California Railroad "Company a proposition to purchase the entire prop"erty in consideration of the Oregon and California
"Railroad Company assuming the payment to Ben Hol"laday and Company of the $1,000,000.00, or there"abouts, above referred to.

"Wherfeore it appears that there had actually been "expended by Ben Holladay and Company about "$1,000,000.00, which had gone into the construction of "twenty miles of completed road, and of a considerable "grading and partial construction beyond the end of "the completed line, and in the purchase of equipment "for operating the completed twenty miles, and equip-"ment of all kinds for railroad construction.

"The Minute Books of the West Side Company "show that stock was authorized to be sold on certain "terms, and that from time to time calls were made up-"on stock subscribers for cash payment of percentages "of their subscriptions; also that subscriptions were re-"ceived of real estate, for aid in the construction of the "road; also that contracts were let with S. Coffin and "S. G. Reed & Co. for construction and that some pay-"ments were made on account of those contracts, but "the books are not clear as to the amounts paid; also "that on or about September 8, 1880, certain construc-"tion work had been done by the Northwestern Con-"struction Company, amounting in value to $20,893.92, "against which the West Side Company had an off-"setting bill for freight transportation amounting to "$7887.40, leaving $13,006.52 unpaid.

"From the West Side Company's Minute Book the "folloging statement has been compiled:

"In addition, the Oregon and California Railroad "Company, in taking over the West Side Company's "property, assumed the following liabilities:

"It is evident that the proposed arrangement had "been carried out and that therefore the holders of the "various items of indebtedness, who apparently were the "German bond holders and who were also apparently "the actual owners of all of the outstanding stock, had "in effect appropriated $1,759,200.00 of the amounts "coming to them in the payment of the indebtedness, "and used the same as their payment in full to the Rail-"road Company for that amount of capital stock.

"The same result as to outstanding indebtedness and "capital stock would have been obtained if the German "bond holders, being also the stockholders, had paid "in cash the $1,759,200.00 and the Railroad Company "had then used that money, together with the $1,700,- "000.00 of bonds and the $93,755.00 of cash to satisfy the "$3,552,877.49 of indebtedness. It is immaterial wheth- "er the German bond holders and stockholders, being "identical, were out of pocket by failing to receive $1,- "759,200.00 of the indebtedness due them, or by paying "into the Company's treasury that amount of money out "of their own pockets and subsequently receiving it back "again as payment of the indebtedness due them."

Whereupon witness further testified that from these books, or corporate records of these Companies he had prepared a statement showing in a general way the financial operations of the Oregon Central Railroad (East Side) and the Oregon Central Railroad (West Side) and the Oregon & California Railroad Company, as gathered from the records of the meetings of the stockholders and directors of the Company, and being shown "Defendants' Exhibit 380" testified that he prepared that statement and that it is an abstract from the records of the meetings of the directors and stockholders of the Companies named and is correct according to the records; that he has had experience as an accountant and bookkeeper sufficient to justify him to make this statement and compilation.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence "Defendants' Exhibit 280" which was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified herein as such.

Whereupon the witness produced a certified copy of the patent issued by the United States to the Oregon & California Railroad Company, which includes the lands described in contract 5394, being the third item of Exhibit No. 9 of the answer and by consent of the parties the same was read into the record, omitting descriptions and is as follows:

"The United States of America.
"To all to whom these presents shall come, Greeting:

"Whereas by the Acts of Congress approved July "25, 1866, June 25, 1868, and April 10, 1869, to aid in "the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from "Portland in Oregon, thence southerly through the Wil- "lamette, Umpqua and Rogue River Valleys to the "Southern boundary of Oregon. Authority is given to "the Oregon and California Railroad Company of Ore- "gon, a corporation existing under the laws of the State " 'to construct a railroad and telegraph line' under cer- "tain conditions and stipulations as expressed in said "Acts and provision is made for granting to the said "Company every alternate section of public land desig- "nated by odd numbers, to the amount of ten alternate "sections per mile on each side of the said railroad on "the line thereof and within the limits of twenty miles "on each side of said road, not sold, reserved or other- "wise disposed of by the United States, and to which a "pre-emption or homestead claim may not have attached "at the time, the line of said road is definitely fixed.

"And Whereas, it is further enacted in said section "that when any of said alternate sections or parts of "sections shall be found to have been granted, sold, re- "served, occupied by homestead settlers, pre-empted or "otherwise disposed of, other lands designated as afore- "said shall be selected by said Company in lieu thereof, "under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior in "alternate sections designated by odd numbers as afore- "said nearest to, and not more than ten miles beyond "the limits of said first named alternate sections.

"And Whereas, official statements from the Secre- "tary of the Interior have been filed in the General Land "Office, that Commissioners appointed by the President "under the provisions of the fourth section of said Act "of July 25, 1866, have reported to him that the said "Oregon and California Railroad and Telegraph Line "commencing at a point in East Portland in the County "of Multnomah, State of Oregon, and ending at a point "on the boundary between the States of Oregon and "California where it joined the California and Oregon "Railroad a distance of three hundred and sixty miles has "been constructed and fully completed and equipped in "the manner prescribed by said Act.

"And Whereas, that portion of said road lying be- "tween the city of Portland, Oregon, and the town of "Roseburg in Township 27 South, Range 5 West, a "distance of one hundred and ninety-seven miles was "completed within the time prescribed by the law, and "the balance of the road was completed after the expira- "tion of such time. And Whereas certain tracts of "land have been selected by the duly authorized agents "of the Oregon and California Railroad Company as "shown by such agent's original lists of selections ap- "proved by the local land officers and now on file in this "office. And Whereas said tracts of land lie within the "indemnity limits of said grant and are particularly de- "scribed as follows, to-wit:"

"The said tracts of land as described in the fore- "going make the aggregate area of ninety-seven thou- "sand nine hundred and twenty-nine acres and sixty- "seven hundredths of an acre (97,929.67).

"Now, Know Ye, that the United States of Amer- "ica in consideration of the premises and pursuant to "the said Acts of Congress have given and granted, and "by these presents do give and grant unto the said Ore- "gon and California Railroad Company of Oregon, and "to its assigns all the tracts of land selected as afore- "said and described in the foregoing, yet excluding and "excepting from the transfer by these presents 'All Min- "eral Lands' should any such be found to exist in the "tracts described in the foregoing but this exclusion and "exception according to the terms of the statute 'shall "not be construed to include coal and iron lands.'

"To have and to hold the said tracts with the appur- "tenances unto the said 'Oregon and California Rail- "road Company of Oregon, and to its assigns forever "with the exclusion and exception as aforesaid.

Whereupon on cross-examination witness further testified that this statement of the financial affairs of these Companies is based strictly upon what appears in the minute books and other books of these corporations; that the question whether Holladay had accepted $1,000,000 or $800,000, or any other particular sum is based upon the fact that he so contended in the reorganization of 1870, and that the Company, by accepting his proposition, virtually conceded it and it so appears in the minutes of the Company relating to that transaction, and he has no way of knowing from these books whether Holladay did actually advance that money himself or whether he had borrowed it and then repaid it out of the bond issue of 1870 and there is no way for him to know whether that did or did not occur, beyond what is set forth in the minute books and there is nothing in the minute books showing how Holladay expended the money that came into his hands, but simply the fact that the money did come into his hands and was exhausted and that is the only thing that the minute books show concerning it. The minute books do not show or for the main part, the books do not show how he expended the money, they do not show specifically that it was for the purpose of construction. They do not show it in detail.

Whereupon the defendants offered in evidence in connection with the testimony of witness the minute books referred to by him and asked leave to withdraw the same, which was assented to by the Government.

Whereupon, WILLIAM HOOD, called as a witness on behalf of defendants, being duly sworn, testified that he is Chief Engineer of the Southern Pacific Company and its leased lines; was educated as a civil and railroad engineer at Dartmouth College. He has been connected with the construction of all of the Southern Pacific Company lines between Ashland, Oregon, and San Antonio, Texas, and Ogden, Utah, excepting what was built prior to 1867, and has been continuously in the service of the Central Pacific Railway Company, Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and other lines now leased to and operated by the Southern Pacific Company, since May 3, 1867. He was assistant engineer for some time, then assistant chief engineer for a certain period, and then chief engineer for the Central Pacific Railway Company and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and as such Chief Engineer or otherwise of the Central Pacific Railway Company was intimately connected with the construction of the road between Roseville Junction and Ashland, known as the land grant road of the California and Oregon Railroad Company in California, under the Act of Congress of July 25, 1866, and known in Oregon as the Oregon and California Railroad Company, from the state line to Portland, under the same grant, from Marysville to Tehama, and somewhat connected with it from Tehama to Redding, and closely connected with it and actually in charge from Redding to Ashland, Oregon. He recalls an agreement of date October 11, 1886, between the Central Pacific Railroad Company, Pacific Improvement Company, and Southern Pacific Company, known as "Exhibit 1" to the printed joint and several answer of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company and Stephen T. Gage in this suit, and has seen a copy of same to refresh his memory recently. At the time this agreement was put in force it was handed to him to read for his guidance in connection with the construction of the railroad. He would not remember at this time its dates, or other matters of that description. His remembrance is that he saw a duplicate belonging to the Pacific Improvement Company, which was an executed document, as he remembers. He constructed that portion of the road between Delta and Ashland under this agreement. Roseville Junction to Lincoln is 10.4 miles; Lincoln to Wheatland, 11.1 miles; Wheatland to Yuba, which was then a local name on the railroad immediately south of the Yuba River at Marysville, 10.1 miles, and it should be understood that he had no connection with this construction, but he has compiled this from his office records, which office records he has renewed since the fire. The methods by which payments were made as the work of construction progressed on that portion of this line constructed by him, was that when a certain number of miles had been built, any convenient number of miles, a certificate would be issued signed by the President of the road and himself, certifying that the Pacific Improvement Company had completed a certain number of miles, and giving initial and terminal points of this certain number of miles—that was from Delta to Ashland, a distance of 132.387 miles. These certificates that Pacific Improvement Company had constructed certain mileage and was entitled to such and such compensation, were issued by the president or vice president in his absence, and by himself as chief engineer. He was an officer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company. The officers who signed these certificates were officers of the Central Pacific Railroad Company. He does not remember occupying at that time any position with reference to the Central Pacific Railroad Company other than chief engineer. As such officer, as its chief engineer, he constructed the road from Delta to Ashland. The company abandoned something like a mile and a half of track south of Ashland, which had been constructed by Oregon and California Railroad Company, and built an entirely new road to correspond, situated somewhat to the eastward of this abandoned road, so that the Central Pacific Railroad Company constructed beyond the Oregon line the distance from the State line between Oregon and California to Ashland, that is, the Pacific Improvement Company constructed, for the Railroad Company, between the State line and Ashland. Whether it was the Central Pacific Railroad or the Oregon and California Railroad Company, he could not tell. As Chief Engineer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company he had charge of all that construction, although the contract was in the name of the Pacific Improvement Company It was under this contract, said Exhibit No. 1, his position as Chief Engineer caused him to be in charge of the construction to see that it was done satisfactorily.

Whereupon, upon cross-examination, witness further testified that the Pacific Improvement Company was, in effect, the contractor, and he was in charge of their work in as intimate a degree as he would be in any case in charge of the work of a contractor, which would mean that he was responsible for the location of the road, its grade system, its curves, and every detail; the contractor, Pacific Improvement Company, building it as directed, and under his immediate supervision. He performed a similar service quite frequently where the Pacific Improvement Company was the contractor. He knows that Huntington, Crocker, Stanford and Hopkins, in a general way, had the reputation of controlling the Pacific Improvement Company, but he did not know. He knew that these were the men who directed and controlled its affairs—he having no personal knowledge of the stockholders. He knew in a general way that they controlled and directed the affairs of that corporation. A great deal of the contract work of the Southern Pacific Company and the so-called constituent companies of the Southern Pacific system, was done in the name of the Pacific Improvement Company. The cash payments to men on the pay rolls for the construction of the California Line from Delta to the northerly line of the state, were made by the Pacific Improvement Company, excepting his salary and expenses. The contract provided that his salary and expenses should be paid by the Central Pacific Railroad Company. He does not know how the Pacific Improvement Company was paid by the Central Pacific Railroad Company other than the contract, and he is not clear in his remembrance of that in detail. He knows that they were authorized to get paid by his certificate and the certificate of the president. He remembers in a general way that this contract provided that the Pacific Improvement Company should be paid for constructing the railroad from Delta to the northern boundary line by 80,000 shares of the capital stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and $4,500,000 of bonds. His certificates, however, did not take that into account, they simply certified to the completion of the road in sections, according to mileage. He does not know how they apportioned these payments. He does not remember in detail that a similar contract was entered into between Pacific Improvement Company and the Oregon and California Railroad Company for the construction of the road from Ashland to the southern boundary of Oregon, but he does remember clearly that he certified as to the completion of the road in that district, the same as he did south of the State line, and must have had authority for it. The certificate was made, as he remembers it, not addressed to any one, simply "The Pacific Improvement Company has completed," etc., etc., specifying the distances; was signed by the president and himself, and the Pacific Improvement Company presented that to the proper company for payment. He is not clear who was president of the Central Pacific at that time. It may have been Charles Crocker; he paid very little attention to those things. The executive officers of that company have changed a number of times in its history, and he could not remember as to the Oregon and California, who was president in 1887. He does not remember of being consulted by the president of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, or any of its officers, with reference to the Oregon and California Railroad property prior to this time, and he did not inspect the road, or its general properties, before the Central Pacific people became interested in the Oregon and California Railroad Company or entered into any contract with reference to it. He did not make any inspection of the Oregon and California railroad, or any part of its railroad, prior to the time that he performed this work in connection with construction. He does not know when the Pacific Improvement Company acquired its holding of the capital stock of the Southern Pacific Company, and has no knowledge whatever as to the ownership by the Pacific Improvement Company of Southern Pacific Company stock. He has no knowledge of the details of any common interest the Pacific Improvement Company, and the Southern Pacific Company, and the Central Pacific Company, or the other constituents of the so-called Southern Pacific Railroad System, or that they were closely related, or controlled by the same set of men, except such as any other citizen would have through newspapers, and his knowledge would be about as reliable as that of any other citizen in those respects. He had no occasion to know anything about who controlled or directed the affairs of the company, referring to Huntington, Crocker, Stanford and Hopkins. He would be notified that a road was to be constructed; he would see a contract, like the one testified to, to guide him; he would then direct the construction; he would not receive any instructions from any one; they never gave him any, and he controlled the engineers on construction, the same as if they were on his own road, although they were not. He was assistant engineer in 1867, and was not appointed to that place, but was employed. He was appointed assistant chief engineer of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and thereafter of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, by Charles Crocker. He was appointed or elected, which ever it was, chief engineer of the Southern Pacific Company, which covered everything, so to speak, ex-officio, on account of the lease, but does not remember whether it was an appointment or an election. If it was an appointment, it was by Charles Crocker, as he remembers that Crocker was active here at that time, whatever position he may have held. His relations with Charles Crocker and Leland Stanford, and C. P. Huntington, and Charles F. Crocker, and Mark Hopkins, and D. D. Colton, were entirely relations with them as railroad officers, that is, as president, vice president, etc., treasurer, and the like of that, directors of the railroad corporations and of the Southern Pacific Company. He had no relations whatever with these men concerning the Pacific Improvement Company, or any other company, excepting as officers of the railroad company. His relations with the Pacific Improvement Company were entirely through its secretary, who was an employe.

"Q. Yes, but you are now stating the nature of your relations with these men, Mr. Hood, whereas I want you to state whether or not the same men did not, in a general way, control and direct the affairs of one company that also did of the others—of one railroad company, of all railroad companies, and of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I knew that officially."

Whereupon the witness further testified that he did not know of his own knowledge, that these same men controlled and directed the affairs of the Pacific Improvement Company. He dealt with the secretary of the Pacific Improvement Company exclusively, frequently from 1888 on. If it had been a practical question in the administration of his affairs to go to the man who controlled and directed the affairs of the Pacific Improvement Company, he would have gone, and did go to the secretary of Pacific Improvement Company, who was a salaried employee, like almost any secretary. He would say that he was dealing exclusively with the secretary of the Pacific Improvement Company. He recalls at certain dates that for some time J. H. Strowbridge was president of the Pacific Improvement Company, and F. A. Douty was secretary, and he remembers that was the state of the case while the road was being built from Delta to Ashland, although he may be mistaken as to the president, but he does know that Strowbridge was for a considerable period president, and Douty was secretary of Pacific Improvement Company, and knows that he went to Douty on business between the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Pacific Improvement Company. It is difficult to remember specifically how many contracts there were between Pacific Improvement Company and any of the constituent companies of the Southern Pacific Company. He can remember in general what roads they built, but could not give the dates of contracts or terms. For instance, they built the road from Shingle Springs to Placerville, and he thinks the road from Mojave to Needles. He was not chief engineer of that road, and that is why he says he thinks so. He was assistant chief engineer of that road, it was the Southern Pacific Railroad. He thinks that the Pacific Improvement Company built from Indio to Yuma, and he could probably, if he took time, recall other construction. As he recalls, in all the contracts that he has examined for the construction of railroad by the Pacific Improvement Company, payment was to be made in either capital stock or bonds of some of the railroad companies now constituting the Southern Pacific System; the amount of capital stock or bonds was generally, but not always defined. When the amount was not defined, it was determined by the cost of the road, and a small percent, sometimes five, sometimes ten, for administration service and possibility of loss in marketing securities—that is, the contract would provide that the Pacific Improvement Company should construct the road and it should receive the actual cost, with five or ten per cent for administration. He thinks the contract provided that, but at any rate he remembers instances where that was the way that payments were actually made. This was a good while ago and he don't remember always in detail. He performed exactly the same service as to that part of the railroad situated in the State of Oregon south from Ashland, as he did to that part of the railroad in the State of California from Delta north—his action and certificates were identical. From Delta to Ashland, he was shown the agreement for his guidance, and instructions were given when to commence work. That was really all the instructions he got. As to that portion between the State line and Ashland, his recollection is not clear, except as to one point, and that is, he kept going on with his work. He did not build south from Ashland at the same time that he was building north from Delta. He built straight north through to Ashland continuously and laid track the same way. The last track laid was right in the north end of Ashland yards—in Ashland. That included a new line for a mile and a half south from Ashland, in place of that which had formerly been constructed and abandoned; instead of building to the south end of the line as originally constructed a mile and a half, or thereabouts, south of Ashland, he built to Ashland direct. He does not know, only in a general way, who built that mile and a half of track that was abandoned, or when it was built, but understood it was a portion of the construction to Ashland from the north. It was not a part of the construction that was commenced under the new management of 1887, and abandoned. To make it clear—in addition to building a mile and a half of track south of Ashland, the people who did that had also started isolated pieces of construction between Ashland and the State line. For instance, they had partially built a tunnel at a place known as Buck Rock. They had occasionally built a little piece of grade. They had commenced and built quite a little of the present Summit tunnel near Siskiyou station, which portion of the Summit tunnel he fixed up, and completed the tunnel. That portion of the Summit tunnel which he mentions at Siskiyou station, which was built by his predecessors, is the only part of their work south of Ashland which he utilized. He could give no details as to the organization which did this work. He did not certify in these certificates as to the amount of cash that should be paid. The certificates simply stated that the Pacific Improvement Company had completed so many additional miles of railroad, from survey station to survey station, blank miles; that is, it specified the miles. They were signed by the president of the road, or a vice president, and himself. That was the last he would see of it. They did not state the amount of money that the contractor was entitled to. He does not know what was the cost of construction of the railroad from Ashland to the southern boundary line of Oregon. He would be on the work during the period of construction from seven to ten days at a time; perhaps in the next week or ten days he would be as far south as San Diego, and would then swing back and stay there another week or ten days. He kept in very intimate touch with the actual work of construction. He commenced construction from Delta sometime after the spring of 1884. His remembrance is that the work commenced in this way, by spending a little money getting some bridge foundations excavated, and the masonry brought up above flood mark, and so on, ready for fast construction, and that construction went on that way for some little time, and then finally a real force was put to work. This was shortly after the summer of 1884, and he would think it was about the fall that they went to work more in earnest, that is, north from Delta. In addition, he would say that they had done previous to that time some isolated pieces of work north of Delta; he is speaking now of the way the work went on, not the continuous railroad. There was some work done in isolated places along the proposed line of railroad prior to the execution of this contract of October 11, 1886. There was some work done north of Delta in a small way, in advance of the track here and there, during the summer and fall of 1883. Then they stopped entirely the fall of 1883, at which time the track was at Delta. In fact, the track was a mile or two north of Delta, and they recommenced in a small way, with bridge foundations, he thinks, in the fall of 1884, and later commenced more vigoriously somewhere in the fall of 1884, or the spring of 1885. He is speaking now regardless of any documents. The Pacific Improvement Company was contructing this railroad at that time, that is, was actually doing the work, and his remembrance is that the final written agreement was made retroactive with respect to this work; that was his understanding at any rate. The Company was paid on that basis. The Pacific Improvement Company had, in any event, done some portion of this work of construction prior to October 11, 1886, and they are the ones who paid the bills. He could only state in a general way the amount of work that was done in that way prior to October 11, 1886. The track was laid a mile or two beyond Delta, north of it, in the summer of 1883, and up to Christmas or thereabouts, there was considerable work done north of Delta, in the way of grading at isolated spots. The work then stopped entirely for quite a period and was commenced again in isolated spots in a small way, he thinks in the spring of 1884, possibly in the next year, he could not be positive now; and the work then went on faster in 1885. The Pacific Improvement Company paid all money to the laborers and others, paid every one but him. There was a great deal of construction done in 1886 north of Delta, and the road was finally completed to Ashland in December, 1887. He thinks the road on January 1, 1887, had the end of the track somewhere near where Weed station is now, a little north of Mt. Shasta—a little north of the summit. The track was at Igerna, or thereabouts, on January 1, 1887. Igerna is about 57 miles from the State line, and it is about 26 miles from Ashland to the southern boundary of Oregon. As he remembers it, the railroad was constructed and completed during the year 1887 from Igerna to Ashland. His forces were scattered over the line from Igerna to and including Siskiyou Summit tunnel on the first day of January, 1887, and on that date the track had been completed to Igerna, but a very great amount of work had been done north, but he could not say what per cent or proportion of the total work had been done north of Ignera before January 1, 1887, but would simply say that the grading and masonry forces and tunneling force had been scattered over the distance from Igerna to Ager, which is about 40 miles, at off and on points, and forces were also at work or about to commence work on the Siskiyou Summit tunnel, and the tunnels north of that point. The Summit tunnel was situated in Oregon, and he is not clear whether he commenced or was about to commence work on it January 1, 1887, but his remembrance is that he was about to commence work on it. He remembers going up there and finding about four feet of snow about that time, along with Strowbridge, who was, he thinks, president of the Pacific Improvement Company, and a force was sent on there to the tunnel promptly thereafter. It is impossible for him to say whether it was before or after January 1, 1887, that the force actually commenced work on the Siskiyou Summit tunnel in Oregon. The first work that was done in Oregon by the Pacific Improvement Company forces, outside of engineering work, was on the Siskiyou Summit tunnel and its approaches, and that commenced, as nearly as he can recollect, somewhere about January 1, 1887.

Whereupon, upon redirect examination, the witness further testified:

Q. Mr. Hood, in order that you may refresh your memory and make any explanation you may desire, I call your attention to the fifth clause in this agreement of date October 11, 1886, being Exhibit 1 of the answer, and under which you, as chief engineer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company constructed the line from Delta to the State line between California and Oregon, which reads: "Fifth. That the said Pacific Improvement Company shall and will repay to the said Central Pacific Railroad Company within one hundred and twenty days from the date thereof all sums of money with interest thereon, at the rate of six per cent per annum heretofore by the said railroad company expended upon that portion of its aforesaid line of Railroad and Telegraph Line lying north of Delta, and that if said railroad company has not fully paid all the costs and expenses incurred as aforesaid, the said improvement company will assume the whole thereof and will upon demand pay off and discharge the same, or that if the said railroad company is compelled to pay the same or any part thereof the said Improvement Company will within one hundred and twenty days after notice thereof, repay to the said railroad company the full amount of any such payment or payments, with interest at the rate aforesaid." And referring to same now, isn't it true that, prior to the execution of this contract of October 11, 1886 (Exhibit 1 of the answer) the Central Pacific Railroad Company had done construction work from Delta north, under your supervision as chief engineer—you had done it yourself, in fact—for the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and that this fifth clause in this agreement was to cover that?

A. Well, that is my general remembrance of it. You understand that absolutely the Pacific Improvement Company organization paid out these moneys—these advance moneys that you speak of. Whether they did it acting, for instance, for convenience, for the Central Pacific Railroad Company or not, who had no such organization, I could not tell you at this late date. But, as a matter of fact, the Pacific Improvement Company paid the payrolls and the material bills. Now, if they did it for the Central Pacific Railroad Company and immediately were reimbursed therefor, as agents, I am simply in ignorance of it—don't know anything about it.

Q. You remember the fact, though, that physically there was construction north of Delta before the date of this agreement of October 11, 1886?

A. Yes, surely; and we all considered it retroactive; and I know that actually the Pacific Improvement Company organization paid the money, perhaps as agents of the Central Pacific—I am in ignorance of that; don't know anything about it.

Q. You constructed, as chief engineer or assistant chief engineer, roads for the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company long before there was any Pacific Improvement Company?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Or any Southern Pacific Company?

A. Yes.

RE-CROSS EXAMINATION.

Q. Well, now, prior to the organization of the Pacific Improvement Company, what company was the contractor that the Central Pacific Railroad Company dealt with, and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

Q. Well, I will say, what company or individual?

A. I think the Pacific Improvement Company was organized—

Q. Now, it is stipulated in this case that it was organized in November, 1878, Mr. Hood, and I assume that is the correct date.

A. Yes—I was trying to think when in the 70's it was. It was some time in the 70's—I remember that.

Q. I am stating that to refresh your recollection.

A. Yes, it was in the 70's—I remember that. There was a Contract and Finance Company that did work.

Q. What was the name of that company?

A. Contract & Finance Company.

Q. Oh, that is the corporate name?

A. Yes, Contract and Finance Company. And there was at one time a Southern Development Company, but I think that was subsequent to 1878. And there was a Western Development Company. My impressions are that the Western Development Company was just prior to the Pacific Improvement Company.

Q. Well, didn't the Pacific Improvement Company in effect succeed the Western Development Company?

A. That is my remembrance, without any specific knowledge. That is my impression.

Q. Now, in a general way, Mr. Hood, these various contracting companies were controlled by the same general interests, were they not?

A. Well, I cannot testify in any general way. I can testify only that I had relations of the kind I have described with the officers of the railroad company and with the officers of the sundry construction companies. I consider them as contractors.

Q. Yes, but there was some relation between the construction companies and the railroad companies?

A. I had no knowledge whatever of that kind, any more than any contractor.

Q. Well, was it not a matter of common history that those companies were companies controlled by Huntington, Crocker, Stanford and Hopkins?

A. No, nothing but hearsay—nothing but common talk. It was common talk. I knew nothing about it.

Q. That was the common talk, was it not?

A. Common newspaper talk.

Q. Did you ever see it denied?

A. I don't remember. Quite willing to testify to anything I know.

Q. I understand; but I think you are unduly conscientious about it. I think that your knowledge is sufficient to enable you to testify to some of the facts that I have asked you, and you are reluctant because you are too conscientious about it.

A. Not at all. I would be very glad to testify to anything that I know, but I am unwilling to testify to something that I never had any means of proving.

Q. Well, in your dealings with these various contracting companies, did you not learn who were the controlling factors of the company?

A. Ordinary talk—no specific knowledge. I knew only the officers of the contracting companies.

Q. State whether or not the contracts made with these other construction companies were carried on in the same general way as the contracts that were made with the Pacific Improvement Company.

A. I had no specific knowledge of the contracts until the time that we now have in hand; that is, the construction of the Central Pacific Railroad or California and Oregon Railroad. That was the first time that I was chief engineer of the Railroad Company and had to handle the contracting company. That is the first contract that I ever say. I have seen anything there was subsequent to that time, but never anything before. Previous to that time I was assistant chief engineer of the Central Pacific Railroad or Railway, which ever it might have been from time to time, and of the Southern Pacific Railroad of the sundry states and territories, actively in charge of work wherever work was going on the fastest, but not in charge of certificates as to what contractors had done.

Q. Well, now, in your entire experience from May 8, 1867, with these different companies that you have mentioned, did you ever know of an instance where the railroad company itself constructed the railroad, that is, without contract, you understand?

A. Well, a good many instances recently.

Q. Well, I will limit the question, then, to the year 1901?

A. I think that in some instances the Pacific Improvement Company did not have a contract, where they constructed the roads, but were paid cost and per cent; I think that was the case; but in general in years back the roads were built by contract with a construction company. It is impossible for me to be specific.

Q. I understand. Now, did the Central Pacific Railroad Company have any construction equipment? Did it own any construction equipment, other than the limited amount always carried by a railroad for the purposes of its repairs?

A. I don't know of any.

Q. And is that true of the other railroad companies with which you have been connected?

A. That is in general true, yes. It is true today where we let contracts to individuals.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION.

Q. Isn't it true, Mr. Hood, that nearly all construction today that is undertaken by railroad companies, is let to contractors, whether organized as corporations or as firms, or partnerships, or individuals; the railroad company protecting itself by written contracts and supervision, inspection, and approval of its chief engineer?

A. Almost universally true, so nearly so as to be stated as universally true.

RECROSS EXAMINATION.

Q. Is it usual for the railroad company to enter into its construction contracts with a corporation controlled and owned by a part of the stockholders and officers of the railroad company itself?

A. I have no information that I could testify on in that particular.

Q. Now, Mr. Hood—Mr. Huntington, Mr. Crocker, Mr. Stanford, and Mr. Hopkins were influential in the affairs of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the Central Pacific Railroad Company and these other companies that you have mentioned, were they not, down to the year 1901?

A. I knew them as officers of those companies—officers and directors.

Q. And you knew that they were influential in the management of the affairs of those corporations, did you not?

A. I so considered them.

Q. Now, did you not also know that they were influential in the affairs of the Pacific Improvement Company?

A. No knowledge of it definitely.

Q. Have you knowledge of it indefinitely?

A. I have no means of adding to my previous testimony on that subject.

Q. You dealt with the Pacific Improvement Company from 1878 until 1901, did you not, at various times?

A. Up to the time that I was chief engineer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and also the Southern Pacific Company, whenever I had any relations with the Pacific Improvement Company they paid my salary and I was working for them.

Q. Who employed you?

A. The Pacific Improvement Company.

Q. What individual?

A. According to contract. You will notice the contract provides for the payment by the Pacific Improvement Company of engineering salaries, except of the chief engineer, and I was not the chief engineer.

Q. But what individual employed you for the Pacific Improvement Company?

A. The chief engineer of the railroad companies, as, for instance, myself after I became chief engineer, employed all the engineers, in the way of engaging them, that the Pacific Improvement Company paid the salaries and expenses of.

Q. Well, then, the relations between the Pacific Improvement Company and the railroad company were so intimate that the railroad company actually designated the employees of the Pacific Improvement Company?

A. The Pacific Improvement Company had no power to employ engineers pertaining to these constructions, except those engineers were approved by the chief engineer of the railroad company. This was to enable the chief engineer of the railroad company to suitably protect the interests of the railroad company.

Q. Well, now, will you please examine Exhibit 1 attached to the answer, and tell me where the provision is to authorize the railroad company to designate the engineers that shall be employed by the Pacific Improvement Company?

A. The second clause on page 88: "Second. That the said Pacific Improvement Company, shall furnish and pay for all the engineer service necessary or requisite for the location and construction of said railroad and its appurtenances, such location and construction to be subject to the approval of the President or Chief Engineer of said Central Pacific Railroad Company, who may direct such changes to be made as they may deem proper; but, the salary of the Chief Engineer shall be paid by the said Central Pacific Railroad Company."

Q. Well, now, where is there anything in there that authorized the officers of the railroad company to designate the engineers that should be employed by the Pacific Improvement Company?

A. The fact that the location and construction of the railroad was to be subject to the approval of the President or Chief Engineer of the railroad company, and that approval was in fact delegated to the Chief Engineer, practically, implied that the engineering force should be to his satisfaction, and was always so construed, and was always so practically carried on.

Q. Well, this provision authorized the chief engineer of the railroad company to change the route of road as surveyed by the engineers of the Pacific Improvement Company?

A. Which meant that he could order the engineers of the Pacific Improvement Company to do anything he chose.

Q. Does that mean that the railroad company could designate the employees of the Pacific Improvement Company?

A. Absolutely; and they did so.

Q. So that the Pacific Improvement Company was entering into a contract with the railroad company to build the road for a certain specified price, and they had no means of knowing where the road would be located, or what would be the actual cost of construction?

A. Other than such information as might be given them by the chief engineer.

Q. Well, where is there anything in this contract that designates the location of the road?

A. I don't know of any place.

Q. Well, can you explain what relation existed between the Pacific Improvement Company and the Central Pacific Railroad Company that would induce the Pacific Improvement Company to construct a road of over 130 miles in length, or of over 100 miles in length, for a certain specified price, and leave it to the railroad company to afterwards determine where the railroad should be located, and how it should be constructed?

A. It was known, as it is always known, very closely where the railroad was going to be built. The terms of the act of the land grant, if I remember rightly, practically specified a general route in the way of where the railroad should go, up the Sacramento River, etc. And today, if we were to let a contract to an individual or a contracting firm, as is not unprecedented in railroad work, that they should build a certain distance of railroad for, for instance, a certain lump sum of money, we should unquestionably insist, even where they paid as a part of their work the salaries and expenses of the engineers on location and construction, that those engineers should be exclusively, in all essential matters, under the orders of the chief engineer of the railroad, and their personnel should be subject to his approval. We would not let a contract any other way to John Smith at this minute, under any circumstances, if we wished to protect the interests of the railroad company.

Q. I want to ask this witness, as a practical engineer, if he ever knew of a contract between strangers —I mean, where the contracting parties had no other relations—in which the contractor agreed to build a railroad between certain specified points for a certain lump sum, and leave to the railroad company the right to designate the location of the road afterwards?

A. The location of the road is generally approximately designated in advance, or no contractor or firm would make such a proposition.

Q. Don't the contracts provide expressly where the survey shall be, and don't the ordinary railroad construction contracts include profile maps and everything, showing the amount of grading, and the amount of tunneling, and all other general features of the proposed line of railroad?

A. Always subject to change.

Q. Certainly. But when they are subject to change, do they not always provide for a proportionate compensation to the contracting party?

A. Generally by the cubic yard, or lineal foot, or other function.

Q. But in this instance the Pacific Improvement Company agreed to take 80,000 shares of the capital stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and $4,500,000 of its bonds, and construct a railroad from Delta to the State line, upon such route as the railroad company might thereafter designate?

A. Unquestionably, except as generally outlined in the contract. But I am not clear as to the drift of your question. Is it that they made a bad trade?

Q. No, it is because the Pacific Improvement Company, and the Central Pacific, and the Southern Pacific were one concern, and it didn't make any difference to them what the terms were?

A. I know nothing about that.

A. I know nothing about the relations of the companies, other than as shown in the contract.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION.

Q. This is a land grant road that was under construction, and it had to be constructed on a line of definite location, did it not, under the requirements?

A. General route.

Q. Yes, under the requirements of the Act of Congress; and the first paragraph of Exhibit No. 1, page 87 of the printed answer of the defendants, uses this language: "That the said Pacific Improvement Company shall in a good workmanlike manner construct, finish, furnish and complete the railroad and telegraph line of the said Central Pacific Railroad Company, commencing at a point near the said town of Delta and running thence in a general northerly direction by the most practicable route to a point on the Southern boundary line of Oregon, there to connect with the road of the said Oregon and California Company a distance of one hundred and four miles, as near as may be, together with the rolling stock, buildings, instruments, and fixtures thereof," etc.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, that was the line upon which that railroad was proposed to be constructed, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at that time the Central Pacific Railroad Company, as you have testified, had already proceeded with considerable construction prior to the date of that agreement?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Townsend: This witness has said the Pacific Improvement Company did—the Pacific Improvement Company paid the bills?

A. Paid the bills.

Mr. Townsend: Well, the Pacific Improvement Company did the work, did they not?

A. Not of necessity; they might have been agents of the Central Pacific.

Q. The Central Pacific Railroad Company had theretofore located this line, and had done some general construction along between Delta and the State line, as you have heretofore testified?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But the bills for that work were either paid by the Pacific Improvement Company, excepting your own salary, or thereafter assumed?

A. Yes, sir; that was my understanding of it.

Q. The map of definite location of this line had been filed in the General Land Office as early as 1871, had it not?

A. Very early, before I had anything to do with it.

Q. And the road today is, substantially, constructed and operated where it was originally located?

A. Yes, sir, where it was originally filed.

Q. Yes, that is what I mean. So that, as a practical proposition, any contractor could, in advance of making his contract, ascertain substantially where the road was to be built, and its probable cost?

A. He could form an idea of the practicable final location of the road and its probable cost.

RECROSS EXAMINATION.

Q. Well, now, Mr. Hood, I don't want to have an extended argument with you about this, but there are many ways of building a railroad from Delta to the Northern boundary line of the State, along the identical route designated by the maps filed by the railroad company? Were there not?

A. You mean—

Q. I mean as to grades and curves?

A. You mean whether it would hit a point harder, or less, and so on?

Q. I mean, there could be many different plans of constructing it over that identical route?

A. In detail, yes.

Q. As to grades, and curves, and other detail?

A. Yes.

Q. And the ascertainment of those details would be essential to approximate the probable cost of construction, would it not?

A. Except in this way; that it was specified and understood that it should be located in a practicable and commonsense manner.

Q. Yes, but, for instance, it might cost twice as much to construct a railroad between those two points which at no place should have more than a two per cent grade than to construct one which might have four per cent grades?

A. It might cost a great deal more, yes.

Q. And those details are essential to know in order to approximate or estimate the probable cost of construction?

A. It might differ very materially with the grade system.

Whereupon, the witness, upon cross examination, further testified that he has no data of any kind and there is no record existing, by which he would know, or by reference to which he could approximate the cost of construction of the railroad from Delta to Ashland. He saw the contract of October 11, 1886, identified as Exhibit 1 of the answer, in executed form, at about that time. He drew the conclusion from the contract that he was to build the road properly and to his satisfaction, and to certify to its having been so completed from time to time, and he acted accordingly. He has no rememberance or knowledge that there may have been some other contract that succeeded the contract of October 11, 1886, which determined the price to be paid, and the other details of the transaction. He only recollects this one contract, and he supposes that the railroad was constructed by the Pacific Improvement Company for the Central Pacific Railroad Company pursuant to this contract, which is the only one that came to his attention. He acted according to that contract, certified the distances constructed, and saw that the road was built right. It was the custom to certify as to the completion of the road in sections, and he refers to the specification in the contract to that effect. He would say that that was the general provision that he referred to, and that his recollection is that he certified to the completion of the road in sections, as provided by this contract. He could not change his previous testimony, which was to the effect that, physically, he went right on and built the road in Oregon, and certified to its completion, and whether it was under this contract or another contract, he could not possibly tell.

Whereupon, upon redirect examination, the witness was shown an official volume, published by authority of the State of California, called the "Seventh Annual Report of the Board of Railroad Commissioners of the State of California, for the year ending December 31, 1886." Whereupon, there being no objection to the introduction of the portion of said volume hereinafter set out, the defendants offered in evidence the official report of the Central Pacific Railroad Company for the year ending December 31, 1885, printed therein, and the same was received in evidence and read into the record as follows:

CHAS. F. CROCKER,
E. H. MILLER, JR.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, this fourteenth day of July, 1886.

E. B. RYAN, Notary Public in and for the City and County of San Francisco, California."

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence in connection with the testimony of witness, a certified copy of a resolution of Board of Directors of the California and Oregon Railroad Company, adopted October 8, 1866, assenting to the Act of Congress of July 25, 1866, and the same was received in evidence, marked "Defendants' Exhibit 284," subject to the objection of the Government that the same was immaterial and irrevelent, which said Defendants' Exhibit 284 is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence as a part of the testimony of witness, a certified copy of the reports of the Commissioners to the President of the United States, approving and accepting the railroad constructed under the Act of July 25, 1866, from Roseville Junction northward 77.6 miles to a point near Chico, in California, of date August 9, 1870, with endorsements of approval and acceptance thereof by the Secretary of the Interior and the President of the United States, which reports were received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit 285," to which counsel for complainant objected as immaterial and irrelevent, which said Defendants' Exhibit 285 is hereinafter set out and described, and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon GEORGE M. CUMMING, called as a witness on behalf of defendants testified that he resides at San Francisco, is a civil engineer by profession, retired at the present time. He was shown what to the best of his recollection was a copy of the agreement of October 11, 1886, being Exhibit 1 to the answer of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company and Stephen T. Gage in this suit, and asked to see if he could locate the original. To the best of his recollection an executed copy of this instrument was at one time in the files of the Pacific Improvement Company, in whose employ he was for quite a number of years. He called at the office of the Pacific Improvement Company in this City sometime in the early part of 1912. He does not remember exactly the month, and made a search of their office and also of the warehouse over in Alameda, in which place was supposed to be all the papers that they had that they were not using at that time, papers that were taken away from their own vault at Fourth and Townsend and stored after the fire of April, 1906, in San Francisco. He examined all the papers in that storehouse, paper by paper and was unable to locate the original of that. He was given absolutely free access to all the papers of the Pacific Improvement Company and searched very carefully every place where the paper should possibly have been. This typewritten copy is the one which was handed to him by Judge Singer to guide him in looking for the original, and while he could not state positively, in a general way he thinks it is a correct copy of the original document which he saw while he was in the employ of the Pacific Improvement Company, in its office or in its possession. He had the handling at one time, as such employe, of a great many contracts the details of which he does not remember, but while he cannot positively swear to it, he is almost positive that he must have handled that document in the course of his employment and he would say that this is a copy of the document which he handled. He was assistant engineer on the construction of the line between Delta and Ashland and an employe of the Pacific Improvement Company. He took orders from Mr. Hood who was in charge of construction. Witness was the office engineer in charge of the office work representing the Pacific Improvement Company in the construction of that mileage. He was not aware at the time, that he was in charge of the office and engaged in construction under the supervision of Chief Engineer Hood, under this contract, but he presumed that he was; that is, at that time he was not aware personally of that contract excepting in a general way. They knew that they were working for the Pacific Improvement Company which was building the road under contract. They understood that the work was to the State line for the Central Pacific Railroad Company. He was in charge of the office under Mr. Hood but not in charge of construction and all of this time he was acting as an employe of and paid by the Pacific Improvement Company. All that he knew as to whether or not that railroad from Delta north to the State line was constructed by the Pacific Improvement Company under its contract said Exhibit 1, is that he was an employe of the Pacific Improvement Company and they were building the road for these different companies, but as to the existence of that specific contract at that time, he was not aware of it; that is, he was in a subordinate capacity. He does not know of his own knowledge who paid for the construction of that part of the railroad, what Company received the pay, excepting that he knows as an office engineer he made estimates and was an employe of the Pacific Improvement Company and they as contractors had at least one subcontract for masonry. The Pacific Improvement Company had no outfit for building masonry and that contract was sublet. He prepared the estimates at the end of the month for the masonry on the different 20 mile sections as they went along and turned this in to the Pacific Improvement Company. He knows that the Pacific Improvement Company paid these bills to the masonry contractor James Scobey. Witness was personally on the construction work from Delta to Ashland from June, 1886, to sometime in the fall of 1887. When he started in they were camped at a place called Mears Creek, in Shasta County, California, north of Delta on the first 20 mile section. They always counted by 20 mile sections north of Delta. That was

June, 1886. He started in at Mears Creek in June, 1886. The work had been progressing some time before that. He had been employed in the office in San Francisco for a time and had gone up on this construction work in 1886 in June, and they were there until some time in July when they moved their camp to a point just above Dunsmuir, they were there until sometime in August or September, 1886, when they moved to Sisson Station; they then moved from there and held a Thanksgiving Day celebration when the camp was at Edgewood, in Siskiyou County. They moved from there to what was the Salt Works on the Shasta River, several miles this side of the station which is called Montague. In January he came to San Francisco, just after the new year of 1887. They celebrated Christmas by going into Yreka from this place at the Salt Works and along in February, 1887, they moved to a point about 3 or 4 miles south of the Klamath River opposite Laird's ranch and on the first of June, 1887, they were camped right at the State line. In June or July they moved from the Siskiyou Mountains and camped on the land of Dollarhide who owned the toll road. That was the last camp that they had that he was in. That was the main office camp, besides that they had other smaller camps where an assistant engineer having a party in charge, or four or five men, was either ahead or behind the main office. They had small parties a great many miles ahead of them, but he is speaking now of the general office force, the headquarters. He left somewhere in the fall before the last spike was driven and does not recollect now the exact date that he left. He quit about a month or two before the construction was completed in December, 1887. The work was well on to Ashland, as far as grading was concerned. He had been to Ashland and was familiar with the work going on, but did not stay until the end. Towards the end work slackened up, the number of men employed became gradually less as they got towards the finish, but he remembers as a matter of historical fact that the last spike was driven in December or before Christmas, 1887, from the fact of the return of some of the men from up there.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence the typewritten copy of this document of date October 11, 1886, being Exhibit 1 of the answer.

Whereupon witness further testified that to the best of his recollection he was sufficiently familiar with the general records of the Pacific Improvement Company and made such a search based upon his familiarity with such records that he can assure the Court that the executed copy of this contract "Defendants Exhibit 283" was once in existence among the records and files of the Pacific Improvement Company, that it has since been lost and that it cannot now be found or produced and that "Defendants' Exhibit 283" is, according to his recollection, a copy of that lost instrument.

Whereupon counsel for complainant objected to said evidence as immaterial and irrelevant.

Whereupon said "Defendants' Exhibit 283" was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit 283" and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified herein as such.

Whereupon witness further testified that he first entered the employ of the Pacific Improvement Company in 1881, some little time after he graduated from the University of California. He was first in its employ in Monterey, making surveys around Hotel del Monte and Pacific Grove, and in 1882 was in the employ of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, under S. S. Montague, chief engineer and continued in his employ until along in 1883 or '4 or '5. He was in the employ of the Pacific Improvement Company from 1885 until the fall of 1887, the time of the completion of this road. He entered the employ of the Southern Pacific Company and was in their employ until 1890. He re-entered the employ of the Pacific Improvement Company, in its office, from 1890 to 1902. After 1902 he was employed by the Southern Pacific Company up to 1910 and resigned from the employment of the Southern Pacific Company, December 31st, 1910. The president of the Pacific Improvement Company in the early days, along about 1883, '4, '5 and '6 was J. H. Strowbridge, but as he understood it, according to the by-laws of the Company, the secretary, F. S. Douty, was the executive officer and he knows that he was authorized to perform many acts as such executive officer. All of his business was done wth Frank S. Douty. He was supposed to be the executive officer of the Company. So far as his own employment was concerned with regard to the Pacific Improvement Company, Douty was the man with whom he had to do. Witness was of course a subordinate employe and not an officer. The Pacific Improvement as far as he was concerned was a separate entity or corporation and was always looked upon as such, as having no connection with any of the others. Mr. Douty himself used to impress that upon his employes. Some of them, whether joking or in earnest, would ask the relationship to the Central Pacific Railroad Company and later to the Southern Pacific Company and Douty always insisted that they were absolutely separate corporations and had no connection one with the other. The Southern Pacific Company was incorporated in 1884. He did not personally know, while he was an employe of the Pacific Improvement Company, anything about the holdings of the stock or the control of the Pacific Improvement Company by any of these railroad companies. He had no access to the stock books whatever. So far as he knew no one directed Douty what to do or what not to do. He took orders himself from Douty and understood, and from his recollection of the by-laws, Douty was authorized and empowered to do a great many things. For instance, to sell land, execute deeds and contracts. The Southern Pacific Company, so far as he knew never undertook to make any direction or supervision or any orders directing or controlling the Pacific Improvement Company or its employes. There was an incident when they were in the same building at Fourth and Townsend when the Southern Pacific Company issued a set of rules for the guidance of the employes of the company and for the tenants of the building. These rules were framed under glass and sent around to the different departments and one was sent in to the office of the Pacific Improvement Company. Douty called one of the clerks in the office, presented him with these and told him that he wanted these rules carried out. The clerk said that he would see that they were carried out. Douty said, "Excuse me, you don't understand what I mean. I want you to take these rules and carry them out and throw them in the ash heap. The Southern Pacific Company has nothing to do with us. We don't take orders from them." That was the general tenor of the two companies as far as the employes knew. He knows that there were quite a number of contracts where the Pacific Improvement Company constructed railroads or had contracts for the construction of other roads, or other properties other than this particular one of October 11, 1886. They were all kept in a box called "Contracts" that is, contracts for the construction of different lines. There was one for the Southern Pacific branch railway, one for the line from Collis to Fresno, one from Shingle Springs to Placerville, a lot of small roads that were built, and that the Pacific Improvement Company built under contract with these different roads. These roads were all subsequently incorporated either into the Central Pacific Railroad Company or the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, but he could not say who owned them all at the time they were built. He knows that they were small companies, separate corporations, and had separate directors. The Pacific Improvement Company, during the time it was engaged in the construction of railroads, always had a construction outfit up to a certain time, but somewhere late in the 1890's the Pacific Improvement Company sublet its contracts to other contractors and did not actually perform the work themselves. Charles Crocker, the father of Charles F. Crocker, was the actual railroad builder. He was the man out in the field himself. He died in 1888. Crocker was present when the spike was driven. He was specially requested to come up there. C. P. Huntington, Leland Stanford, and T. R. Judah are dead. S. S. Montague, former chief engineer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, died in 1884. Mark Hopkins died in 1887, F. S. Douty died April 11, 1900. J. H. Strowbridge is still alive, but he has not seen him for a great many years. He must be an old man well on to 90. He lives in Alameda County, but has not heard of him for a long time. Witness is informed that the Pacific Improvement Company still owns Del Monte and the property at Pacific Grove,—he has never heard of its parting with the title.

Whereupon upon cross examination, witness further testified that he graduated from the University of California in 1881, and shortly afterwards entered the employ of the Pacific Improvement Company, making application for the position to F. S. Douty.

"Q. Now, you have known, during all of your experience with the Pacific Improvement Company, the general historical fact that C. P. Huntington, Leland Stanford, Charles Crocker and Mark Hopkins or their respective estates after they died, controlled and virtually owned the Pacific Improvement Company, did you not?

A. Well, I personally, of course, did not know that, but it was so stated in the papers and public prints many times.

Q. I don't mean, now, Mr. Cumming, to ask you to state as to the actual ownership of stock, but this general historical fact is what I wish to bring out. That is true, is it not?

A. That was generally believed in California.

Q. Do you know whether Mr. Douty owned any of the capital stock of the Pacific Improvement Company, other than a few qualifying shares to act as a director?

A. Well, I don't think he did. I don't know, though.

Q. What I mean is this, Mr. Cumming: In the same general way that you know that Mr. Harriman was the controlling spirit of the so-called Harriman lines, and Mr. Hill is the controlling spirit of the so-called Hill lines, you do know the historical fact that these four gentlemen who were associated in business, and were sometimes called the "Big Four" of California, did control the affairs of the Pacific Improvement Company?

A. Well, as I say, it was generally believed in California that that was so.

Q. Well, that has been believed so long that it has become an historical fact, has it not?

A. Well, I don't know whether I am competent to say that or not. I presume it has.

Q. Now, the same gentlemen also controlled the affairs of the Central Pacific Company, did they not?

A. The same answer to that. That is, it was generally believed in California that that was so.

Q. And also the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the several constituent companies, these other companies that I have mentioned, as rapidly as they were acquired?

A. That was generally believed, yes. Whether it was so or not, of course, I do not know.

Q. Of course, I do not refer now to a time after any of them died, but I mean down to the time that they died, and then their estates, of course, succeeded them. Do you know what the general business was of the Pacific Improvement Company?

A. Well, I know, as a matter of fact, that they were incorporated to do almost anything in the world, whether it was banking business, building railroads, buying and selling lands, loaning money, and everything else.

Q. Well, you know that they lived up to their articles of incorporation, too, don't you? They did engage in almost all kinds of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Whereupon witness further testified that he worked for the Pacific Improvement Company from 1881 to 1882. In 1882, he entered the employ of the Central Pacific Railroad Company under Montague, Chief Engineer, and afterwards in 1885 entered the employ of the Pacific Improvement Company again, serving until towards the fall of 1887, when he went into the employ of the Southern Pacific Company and was in its employ until 1890, when he went back into the employ of the Pacific Improvement Company and continued in its employ until 1902, and then returned to the employ of the Southern Pacific Company, remaining until December 31, 1910. Nearly half of the time since 1881, he has been in the employ of the Pacific Improvement Company and became acquainted with its general affairs in a general way and knows that it was the owner of a number of town sites along the lines of the Central Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, also owned and leased some terminal facilities but does not think it operated any but presumes that the Railroad Companies themselves operated the terminal facilities but does not know. He does not remember and does not know that the Company owned and leased bridges at different points along the lines of the railroad. The Pacific Improvement Company sold terminal facilities and right of way to the Railroad Company which were acquired in course of construction. The Pacific Improvement Company from 1881, down, did most of the construction of these railroads he has mentioned and under the terms of the contracts, as he remembers them, the Pacific Improvement Company was required to furnish right of way and depot grounds for the Railroad Company. He does not recall that that is not true in the case of contract Exhibit 1 attached to the defendants' answer. In most contracts the Pacific Improvement Company was authorized to use the name of the corporations for condemnation purposes. Sometimes the Pacific Improvement Company received in payment for constructing these lines of railroad, different portions of them, capital stock and bonds or other corporate securities and sometimes it was cost and a percentage. In some instances the Pacific Improvement Company constructed the railroad and the railroad merely paid it a percentage profit on the work. It was quite a common practice, during his experience, for employes of the Pacific Improvement Company, Southern Pacific Railroad Company and Central Pacific Railroad Company and afterwards the Southern Pacific Company to be interchanged. That is, for a man to be employed for part of his time by the Pacific Improvement Company and part of his time by these railroad companies. They shifted them from one to the other, from the payroll of one company to the payroll of another, as they would in any other business. The Pacific Improvement Company constructed street railroads for the Oakland Railroad Company and for the Market Street Railway Company in San Francisco and Oakland. These are entirely independent companies and not subsidiary companies of the Southern Pacific Company, that is they are now, and he thinks they had no connection with the Southern Pacific Company at any time, so far as he knows. He believes also that the Pacific Improvement Company constructed a line in Washington, now a portion of the Northern Pacific—a coal road at Carbonado. The Pacific Improvement Company built up to 1902, or somewhere along there, most of the railroads that at that time constituted, or at least not most of them but a great many, that constituted, the Southern Pacific system at that time and that represented a very large proportion of the business done by the Pacific Improvement Company.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

"Q. Now, there was such a co-operation between the Pacific Improvement Company and these other railroad companies, of which Mr. Huntington, Mr. Hopkins, Mr. Crocker and Mr. Stanford were the principal stockholders—I say, there was such a co-operation between those companies that it became a matter of common rumor about the Pacific Improvement Company's office that they were virtually one enterprise?

A. Well, no, not as far as the secretary was concerned. He always insisted quite to the contrary. In fact, he was a crank on that subject, as to the separation of the two companies.

Q. I understand, but I say that the business was so carried on as to lead to general rumors of that kind among the employees of the Pacific Improvement Company, with the exception of the secretary?

A. Well, I don't know whether that is so or not. The secretary insisted that the two companies, or the different railroad companies and the Southern Pacific Company were not in any way part of the Pacific Improvement Company, and employees were instructed —in fact, when it came down to that, there was, as a matter of fact, you might say, a great deal of feeling between the employees of the Pacific Improvement Company and the employees of the Southern Pacific Company. They didn't consider themselves of the same outfit at all.

Q. There was considerable jealousy between them, was there not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The same as there has developed a jealousy between the officers and employees of the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company and the Southern Pacific Company since they were absorbed by the Harriman lines?

A. I don't know anything about that. I never was up on that road at all.

Q. Well, now, you say that Secretary Douty was constantly insisting that there was no identity between the Pacific Improvement Company and these railroad companies?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, why did he have to keep warning the employees of the Pacific Improvement Company of that fact?

A. I don't know, excepting he used to say it was merely the truth, that was all, that it was so, and he was simply trying to correct, as he used to say, a popular error.

Q. Well, he never issued any statements, or made any statements to indicate that the Pacific Improvement Company was not connected with the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, did he?

A. Well, I don't know whether he ever made any such statement as that or not. It probably never was called to his attention.

Q. None that you know of?

A. None that I know of.

Q. Or as to the Great Northern Railway Company?

A. No.

Q. Well, now, why was it that it was necessary for him to be constantly warning his employees that there was no connection between the Pacific Improvement Company and the Southern Pacific Company, or its constituent companies?

A. Well, I don't know his mental processes at all, excepting what he said, that it was practically to disabuse their minds of any idea that they would get from anything they saw in the newspapers, or, as he put it, "popular error."

Q. Well, did you not testify on direct examination that it was common rumor among the employees of the office that they were virtually one and the same thing?

A. Well, no, I don't think I testified to that.

Q. Did you not say that there was a rumor to that effect, and that Mr. Douty used to make these statements to correct what he termed an error?

A. No. As I said, there might have been talk—I don't believe that I actually said that; that is, you asked me if it was not an historical fact that they were the same parties that owned both companies, and I answered that, as far as I knew, that that was commonly believed, yes.

Q. Well, now, did you know the historical fact that the Pacific Improvement Company owned virtually a controlling interest of the capital stock of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I say that was generally believed, yes, but I didn't know it.

Q. You know the general historical fact, do you not, that the Southern Pacific Company was organized by Mr. Huntington and his associates whom I have heretofore mentioned, and became the general operating company for these constituent companies of the Southern Pacific system?

A. That is, the Southern Pacific Company?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. And did you not know that at the time, or shortly after the Southern Pacific Company was organized, Mr. Huntington and his associates of whom I have spoken before, placed their Southern Pacific Company stock-holdings in the Pacific Improvement Company?

A. Well, I don't know that, no.

Q. You do not know that general historical fact?

A. Well, I have known quite a few historical facts in my time, which were subsequently ascertained not to be facts.

Q. Well, I am not asking for any historical facts that you have ascertained not to be facts. I am asking you for historical facts that you have not ascertained to be untrue.

A. Well, I don't know whether that was so or not —whether it was true or untrue.

Q. But you know that general historical fact, do you not?

Mr. Fenton: I object to the use of the word "historical" fact as misleading. A fact is a fact, and a rumor or report, or common rumor would be a different thing. It might be true or might not be true. And I make the further objection that all of this inquiry has no relevancy to the question as to whether or not the lands involved in suit are subject to forfeiture for violation of the land grant made July 25, 1866, or any amendments thereto, or the act of May 4, 1870; and, of course is not cross-examination.

Q. I refer to the general historical fact that Mr. Huntington and his associates organized the Southern Pacific Company, under the laws of the State of Kentucky, as an operating company to take over under leases the several railroads constituting the present Southern Pacific Railroad System, and that they pooled their holdings of the Southern Pacific Company's stock in this Pacific Improvement Company?

A. That was a thing a great many people generally believed; but I don't know it.

Q. The Pacific Improvement Company had its offices in the same building as the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and Central Pacific Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All of the constituent companies of the Southern Pacific Railroad System had their offices in the same building?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Pacific Improvement Company also had offices in that building.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When the rules promulgated by the Southern Pacific Company were delivered in the office of the Pacific Improvement Company, do you know who it was that made the mistake that you have referred to? Who was it that delivered the rules there?

A. Who delivered them?

Q. Yes.

A. They were brought into the Pacific Improvement Company by a porter in the employ of the Southern Pacific Company, as I remember it.

Q. You don't know why this employee of the Southern Pacific Company made the mistake of considering the Pacific Improvement Company as virtually identical with the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I don't know whether he thought he made a mistake or anything. He probably was acting under orders from his superior officer, who was a Southern Pacific official.

Q. You never knew of the rules and regulations of any other railroad company being delivered in the offices of the Pacific Improvement Company, did you?

A. No, it didn't come to my knowledge. Possibly the Market Street Railway Company may have issued some rules of that kind, but I don't know anything about it.

Q. But you don't know of any of the rules of another railroad company having been delivered in the offices of the Pacific Improvement Company?

A. Not to my knowledge, no, sir.

Q. With the exception of these street railways that you have mentioned, it is a fact, is it not, that all of the railroads that were constructed by the Pacific Improvement Company for these various small railroad companies that you have mentioned, shortly after construction became merged into the Southern Pacific System?

A. Oh, I wouldn't say shortly afterwards. Some were shortly afterwards, and some some time afterwards.

Q. That may be because the fact was not brought to your attention until some time after it occurred?

A. Oh, excuse me, I misunderstood your question. Yes, that is a fact, yes. I thought you said it became incorporated in the Central or Southern. It was some time after they were constructed, in some cases quite a number of years, before they were consolidated into the Central or Southern Pacific Railroad Company.

Q. That is, as the Pacific Improvement Company constructed these lines of railroad, the general practice was for the Pacific Improvement Company to receive the corporate securities of the railroad company as the consideration for construction?

A. Yes.

Q. And then subsequently the lines of railroad would be merged into the Southern Pacific Railroad System?

A. Yes, they became part of the Southern Pacific Railroad System afterwards, yes, sir.

Q. Now, you don't deny the general fact that there was obviously complete co-operation between the Pacific Improvement Company and these various constituent companies of the Southern Pacific System, do you?

A. I don't deny or affirm anything of that kind. I don't know.

Q. Well, what is the fact?

A. I don't know.

Q. You do not know whether there was co-operation between those companies?

A. Well, co-operation in what way?

Q. Well, in all substantial ways that affected the interests of those companies?

A. Well, all I know is, the Pacific Improvement Company built the road and turned it over—built these different roads and turned them over.

Q. Well, have you any way to account for the coincidence that, every time they constructed a railroad and took the corporate securities of the railroad in payment for construction, the Southern Pacific System subsequently absorbed those railroads?

A. Well, no, I don't know why they did it. All I know, the Pacific Improvement Company built the roads and received their pay for them, and they became part of the Southern Pacific System after they were built.

Q. But they were constructed originally as independent companies?

A. Yes, they were all separate corporations, all these small companies you speak of—separate corporations.

Q. And invariably, they afterwards went into the Southern Pacific System?

A. They all are in there now, yes.

Q. Did you know to what extent the Pacific Improvement Company was a stockholder of the Southern Pacific Company at any time in its history?

A. No, sir, I never knew that definitely.

Q. Therefore it necessarily follows that you know nothing of the circumstances under which it disposed of any of its holdings that it might have had?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, as to the construction of this railroad north from Delta to Ashland, you were asked whether that railroad, or at least that part of it that is situated in California, was constructed under this Exhibit 1 annexed to the answer, which is identical with "Defendants' Exhibit 283," which you have identified?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, isn't this the fact, Mr. Cumming; that you simply recollect that there was such a contract at one time, of which you saw a duplicate original, but as to whether it was superseded during the progress of this work of construction, you have no knowledge yourself?

A. No, sir.

Q. So you would not assume the responsibility of testifying to the conclusion that, in a legal sense, the road was constructed under this contract or any other particular contract?

A. Oh, no, sir; I couldn't draw any such conclusion as that.

Q. And you have no knowledge as to the contract under which the railroad was constructed in the State of Oregon?

A. No, sir.

Whereupon witness further testified that the Strowbridge referred to as president of the Pacific Improvement Company was generally in charge of all the grading forces in the construction work, he was not an engineer but was a practical railroad builder, he was the original—what we would call riding boss—on the old Central Pacific when that was constructed. Charles Crocker was the head pioneer in the field work. Originally Strowbridge was an employe or superintendent under Crocker, away back before the time of witness, that is what he heard, he does not know that of his own knowledge. Crocker died in 1888, Hopkins in 1877. Crocker returned from active work in the field after the completion of the Central Pacific sometime before 1870. The Central Pacific was completed May 10, 1869. Strowbridge did not have any other business than that of construction work, of course he was president of the Pacific Improvement Company, but witness means active physical work in the field in the construction of railroads. Strowbridge was a masterful big man in his way, but he does not know that he would be termed a man of executive ability so far as office work goes. He was in and out of the field and in and out of the City, that is his work carried him over a great deal of territory and in the course of that migration he was passing in and out of San Francisco just the same as the chief engineer of the road was passing in and out. He was president of the Pacific Improvement Company, but the executive officer of that Company, under its by-laws, as he understood it, was its secretary. There were separate boards of directors of these various Companies, there may have been duplications of some or all of them, but he does not remember and does not know whether these separate boards of directors were identified in any way. His work with the Pacific Improvement Company was that of an engineer in charge of the office records of the Company, with reference to construction, and also other matters with regard to land, that is when he was in the San Francisco office. Out in the field, he was just simply on regular construction work in charge of the office, calculating estimates, figuring out quantities and work of that character. In the San Francisco office, he was there as an engineer and in charge of different branches of work, did almost anything besides engineering work that came up. He was, in a general way, familiar with different branches of the business. When he was out in the field he was engaged in making estimates, requisitions for necessary supplies, etc., figuring quantities on Southern Pacific contracts, in fact doing all the ordinary office work that an engineer would do on construction, making drawings of masonry plans and things of that kind. He could not say exactly when the Pacific Improvement Company started to construct the railroad north from Delta, but knows work was going on in 1885 when he was there. Whether it was Pacific Improvement Company or the Railroad Company he does not know. He was not engaged on it himself. He was working for the Pacific Improvement Company, but not in that neighborhood. He was out on some surveying work that had no connection with that work at that time —it was on another line of railroad. He was making preliminary surveys in Southern Oregon on a line from Ashland south to the state line to connect with the southern end of the railroad when it finally reached the State line and his recollection is that he was employed and paid, at that time, by the Pacific Improvement Company. This was a preliminary survey that he made, practically a reconnaissance. He does not think that they followed the general line of survey for the location of that railroad, they made several surveys and he thinks part of it was finally adopted, approximately, portions of it were adopted. There was construction work going on then north of Delta, and the men strung out for some little distance beyond, maybe twenty to forty miles, that was in 1885. In 1886, he actively went up on that work and they were then some twenty miles north of Delta with finished line. He does not know under what arrangement if any, the Pacific Improvement Company was extending this survey or making this survey from

Ashland to the southern boundary line of the State of Oregon during the year 1885. He never knew the history of that at all, the work was done under Hood's direction. Witness does not remember what official of the Pacific Improvement Company directed him to engage in the work, he was in a very subordinate capacity on that work and did not come in contact with anybody other than the immediate man that was running the party who was an assistant engineer. He was merely doing what they called topographical work on that survey and he does not know whether the assistant engineer that was in charge of the party was an assistant engineer of the Central Pacific Railroad Company or whether he was a Pacific Improvement Company employe. It is in part true that a great deal of that work was done under such circumstances that it was difficult for him to say whether it was done by the Pacific Improvement Company or by the Central Pacific Railroad Company, that is this first part, but he remembers positively they were paid on the construction work, he was an employe of the Pacific Improvement Company, and was paid by that Company. The chief engineer engaged on this work was paid by the Central Pacific Railroad Company so they have always heard him state. He cannot say or recall whether the assistant engineer was paid by the Pacific Improvement Company or the Central Pacific Railroad Company and does not know where the Pacific Improvement Company secured the funds used in the construction of this railroad, and he has no idea of the approximate cost of the construction of this railroad from Delta to the northern boundary line of the State of California and from the northern boundary line of the State of California northerly to Ashland. He knew, in a general way at the time, possibly in a specific way, but it passed from his recollection. These estimates that he made had reference to sub-contracts rather than the general work itself. Undoubtedly there was an estimate made of the entire cost of construction from Delta north to Ashland, this being the usual custom in advance of construction. He knows that he personally estimated quantities on surveys on the California and Oregon, that is on surveys, if he recollects rightly, between or through the Sacramento canyon as far as Sisson. His recollection is that he calculated the quantities in the earth work on that part before construction. This is situated north of Delta. He does not remember when he made the calculations excepting that it was sometime before its construction and after its location, in fact in his time, he calculated a great many estimates of quantities after the survey was made, preceding construction and he cannot recall any specific piece or time, except in a general way. He knew it was the general practice, he would not swear positively as to any piece except that he recalls some work in the vicinity of Sisson, south of that, probably in his general duties work of making estimates and calculating probable cost of construction during the years 1886 and 1887, would come up. The actual final location of the railroad in the State of Oregon between Ashland and the southern boundary line of the State was run on the ground by stakes, the location was actually finished in 1887 antedating construction. Actual location of a portion of the line was antedated, as he remembers it, the actual construction probably a short time, how short he could not say, he knows the locating party was, in 1887, making final location quite frequently at the last moment the actual location had been changed as they would put in what they called a "D" line, that is some little change to lessen a cut, or go around a rock point, or something of that kind. He has no personal recollection of the market value of the capital stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company during the year 1887, knows nothing about it. He does not know in detail concerning the ownership by the Pacific Improvement Company of the capital stock of any other corporation, and does not know what constituted the general assets of the Pacific Improvement Company during this time.

Whereupon on re-direct examination the witness further testified that he knows in a general way that the Pacific Improvement Company was interested in and became a purchaser of large bodies of land adjacent to or through which these railroads would be subsequently constructed during a period of time before construction, out of which they made town sites and conveyed rights of way to the Railroad Company and in that way they would convey a right of way through these lands and the Railroad Company and the Pacific Improvement Company would be interested in the town sites that would be subsequently developed by reason of the construction of the railroad. Occasionally the Pacific Improvement Company, in order to get right of way, would have to buy a whole ranch; that is unless they condemned the right of way, occasionally they would buy the whole ranch, deed the right of way and depot grounds to the Railroad Company and keep the remainder. He could not say how large an acreage the Pacific Improvement Company owns at the present time at Del Monte and Pacific Grove, it was several thousand acres the last he knew of it. He knows they owned the Point Pinos, Pescadero and Laureles ranches and the Del Monte grounds and that they had built a tourist hotel of large proportions at Del Monte and have maintained and operated that for a good many years and that they owned practically all the lands on the peninsula where Pacific Grove was laid out, and sold practically all the town lots in the town of Pacific Grove; that they have a 17-mile drive through their forest to Cypress Point on the ocean, leading off from Del Monte and have other lands throughout the State. The railroad never had any connection with these properties that he knew of. Since the Pacific Improvement Company moved its offices from Fourth and Townsend January 1st, 1895, they occupied some rooms in the Union Trust and some rooms in the Crocker Building, but a few years after that their offices were entirely in the Crocker Building, apart from the Union Trust Company building and apart from any building that had any connection with the Southern Pacific Company offices. Horace G. Platt became president of the Pacific Improvement Company, with offices in the Crocker Building, and Richard Derby was manager of the Pacific Improvement Company, succeeding Douty and after the death of Derby A. D. Shepard became and still is manager. Neither of these gentlemen had any connection with any of these railroads. The Pacific Improvement Company removed its offices from the building at Fourth and Townsend on the first day of January, 1895. The Pacific Improvement Company and the Southern Pacific Company were in the same building afterwards, that is in the Union Trust Building, situated at the corner of Market, Montgomery and Post, and they were there until 1898, when the Pacific Improvement Company moved across to the Crocker Building. The Railroad Company, at a later period moved as an entirety to the Merchants Exchange Building on California Street in San Francisco and had offices in the Hobart Building and in the Wells Fargo Building previous to that time and at these times the Pacific Improvement Company had no offices in these buildings, after 1898 when the Pacific Improvement Company moved into the Crocker Building. From 1894 to 1898 part of the offices of the Pacific Improvement Company were in the Union Trust Building and part of the offices of the Southern Pacific Company were in the same building but after 1898 they did not occupy the same building, that is his recollection. The offices of the Pacific Improvement Company at the present time (August, 1912) are in the Crocker Building, San Francisco, and have been since 1894 in part and entirely since 1898.

Whereupon upon re-cross examination the witness further testified that the Pacific Improvement Company acquired in a number of instances tracts of land along the proposed lines of railroad of these Southern Pacific constituent companies and afterwards platted them into town sites and handled them as such. The Central Pacific Railroad Company did not own townsites along its line nor did he know of the California and Oregon Railroad Company, afterwards consolidated with the Central Pacific Railroad Company, owning any townsites on the line. He presumes that the Railroad Company had the right to designate where townsites should be located along the line of railroad. Explaining why the Pacific Improvement Company was permitted by the Railroad Company to acquire the townsites and then subsequently give it the benefit of these townsites, witness testified that the Pacific Improvement Company bought the land and deeded the right of way to the Railroad Company, laid out the land into townsites which it had purchased and sold it. The Railroad Company could have located the townsites where it saw fit, or individuals could have gone and bought a piece of land and if it was a natural site for a town, built a town on it and got a side track put in by the railroad company, and got a townsite the same as the Pacific Improvement Company, which was done in different parts of the State of California. Down in the San Joaquin Valley, there are towns other than the railroad towns. That is true in the construction of any new line of railroad.

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

"Q. But insofar as the railroad company itself might have availed itself of its opportunity to acquire townsites and secure the profit that would result from the sale of townsite lots, it did not do it, but the Pacific Improvement Company did it? Isn't that true?

A. I don't know of the Central Pacific Company engaging in any townsite business. In fact, I know there was one townsite proposition they had over in Alameda County.

Q. That antedated the organization of the Pacific Improvement Company, which was organized in 1878?

A. No, that was subsequent that they subdivided that—subsequent to the organization of the Pacific Improvement Company.

Q. Do you know whether the townsites along these railroads were all located on even numbered sections or not?

A. They were located on odd numbered sections and even numbered sections.

Q. Well, the Pacific Improvement Company had to acquire the odd numbered sections, if they hadn't been previously entered, from the railroad company, did it not?

A. It would have to acquire the odd sections, provided it was going through territory in which the land had been unsold.

Q. I say, which had not been previously entered?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Now, you know the fact to be, do you not, that the Pacific Improvement Company actually took deeds for some of these townsites, if not several of them, from the railroad company itself, and afterwards platted the townsites, and made the profits that resulted from the sale of the town lots?

A. Yes, in some cases they got them from the railroad company, and others from other private proprietors.

Q. Now, can you explain the relation that existed between the Pacific Improvement Company and the railroad company, that induced the railroad company to turn over its own lands to the Pacific Improvement Company, to enable it to enjoy the profits resulting from the platting of townsites and the sale of town lots?

A. Why, they sold the land to the P. I. Company the same as they would sell it to any one else. The P. I. Company frequently paid large prices to the Central Pacific Railroad Company for the land.

Q. But the fact is that, not only the Central Pacific Company, but the other constituent companies of the Southern Pacific Railroad System, as it constructed its road under contract with the Pacific Improvement Company, instead of platting the townsites along the line, sold the lands to the Pacific Improvement Company, and the latter company handled the townsites?

A. Well, that is, of course, where it fell upon a railroad section. There are a great many cases—for instance, the townsite of Sisson, townsite of Smithson, and other townsites on this particular California and Oregon line—where the Pacific Improvement Company acquired the land and laid out the townsite itself—bought the land. That is true of Montague, and Sisson, Delta and Smithson. The only townsite that that applied to was the townsite of Dunsmuir on that line—that is the only case. All the others were acquired by the Pacific Improvement Company by purchase, or by an agreement with the owner, who entered into an agreement with the Pacific Improvement Company in consideration of their putting a townsite on his land—they gave a deed to the Pacific Improvement Company, and took back an agreement by which they were to receive one-half of the net proceeds of the sales of the town lots. That was the general method with the Pacific Improvement Company. Most of their townsites were acquired in that way.

Q. Well, then, the Pacific Improvement Company was permitted by the railroad company to enter into contracts that would locate the townsites along the railroad?

A. Well, any person could have started a townsite as well as the P. I. Company.

Q. But they had to be located where the stations were established on the line of the railroad, didn't they?

A. Yes.

Q. So that it rested with the railroad company to designate where the townsite should be situated, governed, of course, by general considerations of the topography of the country?

A. Yes.

Q. But it was always optional with the railroad company to change the location of the townsite?

A. Oh, the railroad, of course, could change the townsite if it pleased anywhere—put it on top of a mountain or down in a swamp—but there were certain physical conditions, of course, which they could not get away from, and frequently that land was owned by a private individual, who entered into a contract with the P. I. Company, or started a townsite of his own."

STIPULATION.

Whereupon it was stipulated between the parties that other witnesses, employes, officers or custodians of the records of the Southern Pacific Company and Central Pacific Railroad Company, parties to the agreement Exhibit No. 1 of the answer, would, if called, corroborate the testimony of the witness Cumming that they had made a search and had been unable to find the original of said Exhibit No. 1 to the answer and such search would show that the original could not be found.

Whereupon C. P. LINCOLN, called as a witness on behalf of defendants, and being duly sworn testified, that he is head clerk in the Auditor's office and as such has custody of the corporate accounts of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, which he received from the Secretary George H. Adams through J. L. Wilcutt in September, 1904; from that time Wilcutt has had the custody; witness was in direct charge of the books from September, 1904, until August, 1912, but until May 10, 1910, they were in the custody of Mr. Wilcutt, when they were transferred to Auditor McDonald. Witness has kept the books posted, making monthly statements therefrom personally. That balance sheet, Defendant's Exhibit 286, as of February 11, 1912, shows the outstanding bonds under the mortgage to the Union Trust Company of July 1, 1887, and also the capital stock. They aggregate thirty-six million dollars practically and that bears a close relation to the cost of the properties. There are four million dollars additions and betterments, making forty million dollars that is shown. The four million dollars is not capitalized. But this thirty-six million dollars, the cost of the property, is practically the face amount of the stocks and bonds outstanding as shown on this exhibit. This exhibit, which is a correct reproduction of the books of corporate accounts of the Oregon and California Railroad Company for the eleven months ending May 31, 1912, has been verified and found to be correct by him from the books of the company. Whereupon defendants offered this balance sheet, marked Defendants' Exhibit 286, in evidence, whereupon the following colloquy occurred between counsel for the parties:

"Mr. Townsend: Government objects to the introduction of Defendants' Exhibit 286, upon the ground that the same is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial. It is merely a copy of the records carried by the company, and does not import any verity. The item as to cost of constructing the railroad is in no way vouched for, and the cost of construction is not an asset in any event. This document is purely hearsay and secondary evidence, and no foundation has been laid for the introduction thereof. This latter objection does not go to the question whether Exhibit 286 is a correct copy of the original of which it purports to be a copy, but does go to the question that the original itself is but a compilation of deductions and computations, and is therefore hearsay and not the best evidence.

Mr. Fenton: Would you require the company to produce the original blotters and the original vouchers that enter into these balance sheets?

Mr. Townsend: Well, I cannot concede the accuracy of that item "Cost and construction" unless I see upon what it is based.

Mr. Fenton: Counsel for the defendants desire to state at this time that, if the original blotters, vouchers and other documents upon which the corporate records of the Oregon and California Railroad Company are based, showing this Balance Sheet of General Ledger for eleven months ending May 31, 1912, are required to be produced or accounted for, the defendants would be able to prove that all the originals were destroyed in the fire of April 18, 1906, and that the re-establishment of these corporate accounts is based upon official reports made to the Interstate Commerce Commission required by law, to the Oregon Railroad Commission at various times required by law, and copies saved in the New York Office, and that since April 18, 1906, the records have been carried forward in the same manner in original books of entry based upon actual transactions from time to time, and that the witness, if required or permitted, would so testify, and vouchers for which are in existence since April 18, 1906. Now, I ask the Government whether counsel would require us to go into this vast mass of testimony in detail, for the purpose of showing a summary of what the books now show, as evidence by this Balance Sheet 'Defendants' Exhibit 286?'

Mr. Townsend: I am willing to admit that this statement is a correct statement of the corporate assets and liabilities of this company as they have been carried in the books of the company from time to time; but I do not admit the accuracy of the items.

Mr. Fenton: That is to say, that the items represent money actually received or disbursed?

Mr. Townsend: Yes. I don't admit that the balance sheet of the corporation as to its asests and liabilities is competent evidence of the facts which it purports to state. I do not admit that as a matter of law, and I reserve my objection to the competency and relevancy and materiality of the statement upon that ground. But I do admit that this exhibit, 'Defendants' Exhibit 286,' is a correct statement of the continued balance sheet as appears on the books of this corporation from the beginning down to the time that this purports to have been made.

Mr. Fenton: You dispense with the production of such books as we may have—they are here for your inspection—and to our accounting for the destruction of those prior to the fire of April 18, 1906?

Mr. Townsend: There is no necessity for proof on that point. I may want to examine the books personally."

Whereupon said Defendants' Exhibit 286 was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the Evidence and identified as such. Witness further testified that Defendants' Exhibit 286 was prepared about the first or second of July, 1912, that he prepared one of these statements every month and sent two copies to the New York office and one to the auditor. One copy is kept by witness in the Corporate Accounts Bureau. This exhibit is a correct summary from the original books of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and correctly shows what it purports to show.

"Q. Now, if the $17,745,000 worth of bonds issued and outstanding had inured to the benefit of the Southern Pacific Company, would that balance sheet show what it does?

Mr. Townsend: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, calling for a mere conclusion or opinion upon a matter that is not properly the subject of expert testimony.

A. That balance sheet would not show that.

Q. That is to say, if the $17,745,000 had been received by the Southern Pacific Company, this balance sheet would be entirely different?

Same objection.

A. Now, those bonds, the proceeds of the bonds were paid to some one for constructing a road, the balance sheet indicates. Whether the proceeds were paid to the Southern Pacific Company or not, that balance sheet does not show. They might have been paid to John Smith, if John Smith built the road, you see.

Mr. Townsend: That answer is objected to, upon the ground that the exhibit itself is the best evidence of what it purports to show, and the answer is but a mere conclusion upon a subject that cannot be proven by expert testimony."

Whereupon the witness further testified that Defendants' Exhibit 287 is correct according to the books of the company in the auditor's office. Whereupon defendants offered Defendants' Exhibit 287 in evidence, and in connection therewith offered to prove, if required, loss of the records prior to April, 1906, and their re-establishment from the best sources available, and their actual record since that date based upon vouchers of actual daily transactions in the custody of the auditor, and verified by the witness, and that the witness would so testify, if necessary or required by the Government. Whereupon the following occurred:

"Mr. Townsend: This statement—this covers only transactions during April, 1911, is misleading.

A. This is April, 1911, but here is where it is carried forward right to since the beginning on this balance sheet. The balance sheet is a sumamry right from the beginning.

Mr. Fenton: Those statements or balance sheets are made every month, are they?

A. Made monthly.

Q. And what do you do with these monthly statements?

A. They are distributed to various officials—one to the deputy comptroller, one to the auditor, and several other officials receive them.

Mr. Townsend: The Government does not object to the introduction of Defendants' Exhibit 287 upon any ground relating to the question whether this is a correct copy of the balance sheet as it has been maintained from time to time by the railroad company; but it does object to the document on the grounds of its competency, immateriality and irrelevancy, and particularly on the ground that the balance sheet does not import verity.

Mr. Fenton: You don't require us to account for the loss of the original books or material upon which the balance sheet is based, or to produce the original books and offer them in evidence, do you?

Mr. Townsend: There are some accounts that I wish to have examined; for instance, the account of taxes—I think that should be itemized by year, so that we may see how much taxes were paid at the time this suit was instituted.

Mr. Fenton: Counsel for defendants offer to produce and furnish for Government counsel, if not to offer in direct evidence on behalf of defendants' case, at Portland, an itemized statement showing the taxes paid each year, as far as it is possible to do so from the records that have been preserved from the fire, bringing the showing down to and including March 15, 1912, the date when the last payment of taxes was required to be made, under the laws of the State of Oregon.

Mr. Townsend: I also wish the same itemization as to the accounts of examination and appraisal of lands, salaries and expenses—general offices, salaries and expenses—miscellaneous, and law expenses.

Mr. Fenton: That can be made since 1906. The disbursements prior to that date I do not believe can be itemized, as the books containing the items have been destroyed. But since that date we will undertake to comply with the request of the Government's counsel, and have them ready at the Portland hearing.

Mr. Townsend: I also would like these itemized accounts by years to state with more particularity what expenses enter into these general items. I do not ask for each specific item, but to classify the items with more particularity than appears here, so we may know.

Mr. Fenton: We will offer to do that from the books since April 18, 1906. I will have the transcript of your requests furnished to Mr. Lincoln, account officer, and try to produce this at the hearing at Portland.

Mr. Townsend: Now, with that general understanding, the Government will reserve the question of requiring the production of the books and vouchers upon which this statement is based until the compilation just requested is furnished to counsel for the Government. I assume that it will cover it.

Mr. Fenton: Defendants' counsel desire the record to show that all the books of the Oregon and California Railroad Company now in the offices of the auditor in relation to this matter are open to examination of any representative of the Government, and the books are in part now present, and counsel is at liberty to avail himself, by himself in person or by his representative, of the inspection of these books for any purpose, at his convenience between now and the Portland hearing." Whereupon said Defendants' Exhibit 287 was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified as such.

Whereupon the witness further testified that he had checked up Defendant's Exhibit 288 and verified the same with the records of the auditor of the company and the figures shown in that exhibit are correct according to these records. Whereupon counsel for complainant objected to the same as immaterial and irrelevant, which said Defendants' Exhibit 288 was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified herein as such. Whereupon the witness upon cross examination testified as follows:

"Q. Mr. Lincoln, there are a number of items in this balance sheet, such as law expenses, examinations and appraisals, and other items which were incurred by the company because they were endeavoring to sell the lands other than "to actual settlers in quantities not exceeding one quarter section and for a price not exceeding $2.50 an acre," are they not?

Mr. Fenton: Object to that, for the reason that there is nothing in the account to show anything about sales at $2.50 an acre, or in excess of that, or in excess of 160 acres, and no segregation.

A. I cannot say. I cannot answer it.

Q. Well, can you explain why there should have been any expenses for examination and appraisals of the lands if the company had obeyed the law, and simply endeavored to sell them to actual settlers, in quantities not greater than one-quarter section, and for a price not exceeding $2.50 per acre?

Mr. Fenton: Objected to as an argument on behalf of the United States, and not an inquiry into the facts, and a matter about which the witness could have no knowledge.

A. I cannot answer that.

Q. You cannot explain why examinations and appraisals of the lands were necessary if the railroad company had kept within the restrictions imposed by the granting act?

Mr. Fenton: Objected to as calling for a conclusion of law to be tried in the case, and the witness cannot testify as to the conclusions of law.

A. I cannot, no, sir."

Whereupon witness further testified that he does not know what the assessed valuation for taxes was based on and has no personal knowledge as to the accuracy of the items contained in Defendants' Exhibit 286, except that he found them upon the books of the company. Witness did not state that this statement shows that the bonds issued by the Oregon and California Railroad Company, secured by the mortgage of July 1, 1887, did not inure to the benefit of the Southern Pacific Company. The balance sheet does not show to whom the bonds were paid. They may have been paid to any one who built the road. Witness is not familiar with the contract of March 28, 1887, entered into between the Southern Pacific Company, the Pacific Improvement Company, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, the Union Trust Company, and the so-called London Bondholders' Committee, and Frankfort Bondholders' Committee. Witness does not know whether the bond issue under the mortgage of July 1, 1887, and payment of which was guaranteed by the Southern Pacific Company inured to the benefit of that company or not. There is nothing to show that they did or did not inure to the benefit of the Southern Pacific Company, according to that balance sheet. It does not indicate whether the bond issue of July 1, 1887, was used by the Southern Pacific Company to buy a former bond issue. It shows four million dollars expended for additions and betterments that have not been capitalized yet, in other words that the road cost over forty millions of dollars and they have only got about thirty-six million dollars for the capital liabilities, which shows it paid for those betterments, if not out of earnings, that they advanced the money for those betterments, and that they were essential and necessary, and that the Oregon and California Railroad Company has never capitalized that at all. The money for those betterments and additions has been advanced by the Southern Pacific Company to the Oregon and California Railroad Company to pay for those betterments and additions in accordance with the terms of the lease. He does not mean to testify that the lease provides that the Southern Pacific Company shall advance money to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, or that the Southern Pacific Company itself shall make the additions and betterments. It is in the third paragraph of Exhibit "G," at the bottom of page 147 of Government's Exhibit "G" in the bill. When it comes to settlement, "Provided, however, that if at the time, viz.: Such 1st day of May when such balance of such income or rental is provided to be paid to the party of the first part, there shall be any such sum due or owing from the party of the first part to the party of the second part, for or in respect of advances or payments theretofore made by the party of the second part, or for new additions or improvements to the demised premises, or any part thereof," that covers it, the Southern Pacific Company deducts that advance before it makes the settlement with the Oregon and California Railroad Company, indicating that the Oregon and California Railroad Company pays the betterments. The second item in Defendants' Exhibit 286 reads: "Additions and betterments $4,131,296.40 represents money expended by the Southern Pacific Company for additions and betterments under the terms of the leases set forth in the bill of complaint in this case."

Whereupon ROBERT ADAMS, called as a witness on behalf of defendants, and being duly sworn, testified, that he is Assistant Auditor of the Southern Pacific Company, and resides in Oakland, California. That the Defendants' Exhibit 269 is a correct summary taken from the books of the company. Whereupon defendants offered said Exhibit in evidence, to which counsel for complainant objected as immaterial and irrelevant, upon the theory that the amount of money received by the railroad company from the sale of lands, and its expenditures, is not material to the issues in this case, but the Government did not object that Defendants' Exhibit 289 is a correct transcript of the books of the company, but does object to general compilations and balance sheets as evidence, but admits the loss of documents heretofore referred to as similar evidence, which said Defendants' Exhibit 289 was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified as such. Whereupon witness further testified that statements of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, Forms 77 and 78, for the month of March, 1906, had been sent to the Eastern offices. These statements showed the transactions for the month of March, and cumulative from these statements the records of the company were started; that is to say, the statements that had been made from the books of the Oregon and California Railroad Company which were in existence prior to April 18, 1906, had been forwarded to the offices of the company at Omaha and New York, and these statements were based upon the books of the Oregon and California Railroad Company that were destroyed, and that is why the statement "Defendants' Exhibit 289," since April 1906, is made up from the records of the Oregon and California Railroad Company that are now in the custody of the Auditor and kept here. Defendants' Exhibit 288 is a correct statement of the transportation of Government freight and passengers for the five years 1906 to 1910, inclusive.

Whereupon, on cross examination, witness further testified that Defendants' Exhibit 289 is made up in the following manner: It has been the custom to render monthly reports, showing a general balance sheet of the Land Department business, at the end of each month, and which reports were cumulative, showing all transactions down to the date of the report; that report was compiled from the detailed records of his office, and the report of March 31, 1906, was sent to the New York office and the Omaha office, and after the destruction of his other records, these reports were used for the purpose of continuing that balance sheet, and the only possibility of error is between the first day of April and the 18th day of April, 1906, the day of the fire, and with that exception he feels confident to vouch for the general accuracy of this present balance sheet, Defendants' Exhibit 289, and the statement is correct.

Whereupon Defendants' Exhibit 289 was received in evidence and marked "Defendant's Exhibit 289" and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified as such.

Whereupon, on redirect examination, witness further testified that he had prepared a statement, Defendant's Exhibit 290, showing the financial account between the Southern Pacific Company and the Oregon and California Railroad Company under the lease of July 1, 1887, and the succeeding lease of August 1, 1893, showing receipts and disbursements by fiscal years down to and including June 30, 1912; that the statement was prepared from the general books of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, starting with the balance as of June 30, 1905, and then gives in detail all entries on the books from that date to June 30, 1912. Whereupon defendants offered said exhibit in evidence, to which counsel for complainant objected upon the same grounds as were urged as to Defendants' Exhibits 286 and 287, but no objection was made because of the failure to produce the original books from which said exhibit was transcribed, the Government admitting that this is a correct copy of these books. Whereupon said statement was received in evidence, marked "Defendants' Exhibit 290," and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified as such.

Whereupon, the witness further testified that he had prepared a financial statement showing the account between the Oregon and California Railroad Company and the Union Trust Company from July 1, 1887, under the mortgage of that date, showing receipts and disbursements on account of land sales so as to show the actual disposition of the proceeds of sales of lands and the income from lands, and this statement is prepared from the books of original entry of the company, and is a correct statement from July 1, 1887, to the close of June, 1912, showing all transactions.

Whereupon defendants offered said statement in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit 291."

Whereupon witness further testified that he knows that the statement from the trustee shows the payment of the sum of $300 marked as "Paid to John M. Gearin," and $713.41 "Paid to Dolph, Mallory, Simon & Gearin" for expenses in connection with this litigation, which said Defendants' Exhibit 291 was received in evidence and so marked, and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon witness further testified that the item of $3,062,364.80 is in the statement as of June 30, 1912, but the details of the expenses and taxes are shown in the exhibits more in detail. They will not check with this, for the reason that these statements are of April, while this statement—Defendants' Exhibit 291—has been brought down to June, 1912, but the expenses for the subsequent months are similar to those as shown in detail on those statements. From that statement—Defendants' Exhibit 291—the Oregon and California Railroad Company had paid to the Trustee, Union Trust Company, up to June 30, 1912, $2,497,713.01, as shown in the second part of the statement, "cash paid over to Trustee as per previous statement." That statement means that the Oregon and California Railroad Company had paid over to the Trustee, the Union Trust Company, the amount of $2,497,713.01. The lower part of the statement, "Statement of application of cash receipts by Trustee to date," shows again the amount paid over, the "interest allowed by Trustee on cash deposits, $51,523.87," and then the use of that fund—"Paid for 2255 called bonds, $2,245,075. Paid for accrued interest on called bonds, $51,175." Certain other expense, and the "cash in hands of trustee unapplied," as of June 30, 1912, $242,859.76. The statement of $3,062,364.80, in the upper part of this Defendants' Exhibit 291, showing a total of $4,603,250.82, means that during the period of this litigation, or for the past three years or more, that the company, Oregon and California Railroad Company, has paid taxes and other expenses; that is, that the sum of $4,603,250.82 represents the total cash received by the Oregon and California Railroad Company from May 13, 1887, to June 30, 1912, from all sources, as shown by the first part of the statement. Of that amount it paid to the trustee $2,497,713.01, and the balance is the amount that has been paid for expenses and taxes during the period of the last three or four years—how long, he does not remember. The lower part of the statement shows that the advances by the Oregon and California Railroad Company for expenses and taxes were $956,826.99, and according to this statement this item of $956,826.99 represents advances by the Oregon and California Railroad Company for expenses and taxes; that is, the Oregon and California Railroad Company would still owe the Union Trust Company under this mortgage $1,540,886.02; that is to say, the Oregon and California Railroad Company has received from all sources on account of the trust fund from May 13, 1887 to June 30, 1912, $4,603,250.82, $1,540,886.02 is really reduced by the amount $956,826.99 advanced by the Oregon and California Railroad Company, as shown in the lower part of the statement. He has brought with him samples of the blanks, showing the transaction as it is handled through the accounts and reports made to the trustee.

Form 215 O. & C., which is a statement made to the Union Trust Company of New York, is prepared monthly, shows the contract number, name of purchaser, description of land sold, number of acres, price per acre, and the consideration, and is signed by the land agent of the Oregon and California Railroad Company and the Vice-President of that company. Form 216 O. & C. is the memorandum of contract made for sale of land, shows the date of contract, name of purchaser, residence, description of tract, the number of acres, and price per acre, and the amount, and the terms of payment under the contract. This is certified as correct by the land agent of the Oregon and California Railroad Company. Form 217 O. &. C. is statement made to the Union Trust Company of New York, of land sales and collections, monthly statement showing the date, name of purchaser, contract number, and the principal and interest, and new sales during the month.

218 O. & C. This is made to Union Trust Company of New York, Trustee under Indenture dated July 1, 1887. This shows the date of the collection, contract number, whom it is collected from, stumpage and depredations, land leases, expenses and taxes refunded, and other collections—what for and the amount, and to what account credited. Form 219 O. &. C. is statement of land contracts cancelled. This is made to the Union Trust Company of New York, monthly, shows the contract number, name of purchaser, description of land, and amount of principal cancelled, and the amount of interest cancelled during the current month and from May 13, 1887, to the beginning of current month, and total cancellations from May 13, 1887, to end of current month. This is certified as correct by the Land Commissioner. Form 220 O. & C. is an abstract of disbursements made monthly to the Union Trust Company of New York, shows the date of voucher, voucher number, issued to, what for, and the amount. It is signed by the Land Commissioner and vice-president, subscribed and sworn to before a Notary Public for California and for Oregon. Form 221 O. &. Form 222 O. & C. is monthly statement to the Union Trust Company of deeds authorized for execution by Board of Directors, showing the deed number, contract number, issued to, date of final payment, principal, interest, interest cancelled on anticipated payments, net interest collected on contracts, interest collected on overdue payments, total. This is signed by the Land Commissioner and subscribed and sworn to before a Notary Public for California. Form 223 O. & C., certified copy of resolution of Board of Directors. This is a statement to the Union Trust Company of New York, being certified copy of resolution of Board of Directors authorizing the execution of deeds on the part of the Oregon and California Railroad Company; shows deed number, grantee, description of land, and the consideration. It is signed by the Secretary of the Oregon and California Railroad Company.

to by complainant as immaterial, and the same was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit 292," and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified as such. Whereupon witness further testified that he had prepared another table or statement outlining the manner of handling cash receipts and the movement through the records, and refreshing his memory from this memorandum which he had made, stated the course of business as follows: The application to purchase, with the remittance, is sent to the assistant treasurer in San Francisco. The same report, or application to purchase as it is known, is then sent to the auditor, and the money received thereon is reported. Third, the application to purchase is entered in the record of contracts and record of land sales books, and then sent to the Land Commissioner to have the contract prepared. Fourth, the remittance reported by the assistant treasurer is applied to the purchase account in the record of contracts book, and receipt therefor issued. Fifth, auditor advises land commissioner when contract is paid in full. Sixth, land commissioner prepares deed for contract. Seventh, deed is sent for execution and release by the trustee. Eighth, deed when returned from trustee is delivered to the grantee. Ninth, sales and income from lands are credited to an account styled "Proceeds from Sales of Granted Lands." That is the bookkeeping course. That this was the bookkeeping process, and that these receipts as the proceeds of sales, income account, are credited on the auditor's books of the company. They are first entered on the treasurer's books, and the postings made to the auditor's books from the treasurer's cash record, and that covers the total. The net amount is what has always been paid to the Union Trust Company, that is, the receipts less expenses and taxes. Instead of sending the gross receipts to the Union Trust Company, out of the gross receipts is paid the expenses and taxes, and the net amount is sent. The trust fund is charged with these expenses and taxes. The relations of the United States and the company in the transportation of freight and passengers between Roseville Junction, in the State of California, and Portland, Oregon, on the line of this road constructed under the Act of July 25, 1866, as to Government transportation of property and passengers, are, that such property and passengers are handled free to the Government over that part of the line, and it is known in the requisitions made by the United States, and called "Free Land Grant Road." This free movement applies to all shipments from any part of the United States that may be received and carried over that portion of the mileage, except United States mails. Witness thinks there is no other exception. It would and does apply to transportation of troops of the United States. He knows that from August 1, 1902, freight and passengers have been handled without cost to the Government, or free, over that line, and from his recollection of the records of what was done prior to that time, and from information furnished by men who have been in the office for a great many years and handled that line of business continuously for thirty-five or forty years, during the earlier years, the business was very heavy. He says the earlier years—for a period, he thinks it was during the Spanish-American-Cuban war, it was very heavy over that line, but what is the practice now has existed during the life of the entire operation of the property, and he would say that it was understood that a statement had been filed in an Oregon case at one time which showed a very large volume of business handled over that line during the early days, but he has not been able to duplicate that statement in the office. It was thought possibly it was at Portland or at Salem. He refers to a statement from the Auditor's office prior to the fire, and thinks it was in 1904, as recollected by Mr. Sherburne, who has handled the business for years, that he had had the statement prepared. He tried to refresh his memory, but could not. In regard to the freight matters, there is an exhibit in the case covering the transportation subsequent to the fire, but prior to the fire it is a matter of recollection.

Whereupon, on cross examination, witness testified that he was assistant auditor for Southern Pacific Company; had been with that company for ten years last past, but assistant auditor for about three years; before that, auditor of disbursements. He was promoted from disbursements department to assistant auditor. He commenced work with the Southern Pacific Company in 1902. Prior to that time he had never been employed by the Southern Pacific Company or any of its allied or subsidiary corporations, or by the Union Pacific. He was employed on the Chicago & Alton Railroad, which is not considered a Harriman line. He was first employed by the Chicago & Alton, then by the Southern Pacific Company. He was with the Illinois Central for about two years. The auditor's office is located in San Francisco, as is also that of the general auditor of the Southern Pacific Company. While the Southern Pacific Company is a Kentucky corporation, its operating and administrative offices are at San Francisco. The chief executive office is located at San Francisco; that is, the President of the road, and the other officers are located there. It has also an office at New York. It is a fact that the Southern Pacific Company operates a number of companies under lease, and he thinks it is the principal stockholder of these companies from which it holds leases, and believes that the Southern Pacific Company practically owns all of the stock of the Oregon and California Railroad Company. His duties relate to the accounting department of the Southern Pacific Company, and that includes the operation of all these roads that comprise the system of roads operated by the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Now, have any of these companies from which the Southern Pacific Company holds a lease, a separate accounting division, or does it all pass through the one accounting division?

A. No, the accounting organization would take care of the corporate accounts of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, for instance.

Q. Yes, but it is all one general accounting division, with separate books for each of the companies whose accounts you keep? Isn't that true?

A. Well, no, not that way; I think I can clear that up; that each company keeps its own books, that is, its corporate accounts, from which this statement, for instance, is prepared, of the Oregon and California Company. But the operating accounts, revenues and expenses, from the operation of the Oregon and California, or the Central Pacific, or the other companies, are all handled in the one office and by the same force of men—of course, distributing the earnings and expenses to each company—which could not be handled otherwise very well.

Q. Well now, you said that where lands were sold, for instance, the moneys received were paid to an assistant treasurer?

A. Yes.

Q. What is his name?

A. The present treasurer is H. A. Jones, assistant treasurer.

Q. He is assistant treasurer of what?

A. He is assistant treasurer of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Now, is it not true that all of the constituent companies of the Southern Pacific system, their funds are paid in to that same man, this same assistant treasurer?

A. That is correct.

Q. And the Southern Pacific organization there acts as a sort of a clearing house for all of the constituent companies of this railroad system?

A. The Southern Pacific Company handles the accounts and the affairs of the other companies, and distributes through their accounts to each corporate company the revenues and the expenses. You might call it a clearing house.

Q. That is only by way of analogy. I do not mean it is technically correct.

A. Yes, that follows the idea.

Q. So that the receipt of moneys from the sale of the lands which were granted by these two acts of Congress involved in this case, is by the assistant treasurer of the Southern Pacific Company, and then the accounting department of the Southern Pacific Company disburses it, and credits it, and charges it where it belongs?

A. The assistant treasurer shows on his books that the amount was received from a certain source, and to be applied to a certain source—his records show that; and the accounting department abstracts his records distributing the amount accordingly.

Q. Now, from whom do you get instructions as to the distribution of these moneys—these receipts and disbursements?

A. The statement that is received with the receipt will show that it is to be applied on the sale of a certain piece of land, for instance, land of the Oregon and California Company, or the Central Pacific Company, or what not, and that amount is checked, of course, and the credit applied accordingly.

Q. Well, the Southern Pacific Company acts as a sort of a banker for all of these constituent companies, doesn't it, receiving the moneys of the various companies, and disbursing them?

A. That is correct. It receives the money, and disburses it or accounts for it.

Q. Now, the moneys of these constituent companies are disbursed upon the authority of what office?

A. On the authority of the officers of the Southern Pacific Company; or in the case of the land department, on authority of the land commissioner—the Oregon and California land commissioner.

Q. Well, there is one officer who acts as land commissioner for all of the constituent companies, too, is there not?

A. I would not be positive as to that, whether he is land commissioner of all or not. I think at the present time that Mr. McAllaster is land commissioner of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, yes.

Q. And of the Central Pacific?

A. I could not say as to that. I believe that he is, but I would not be positive as to that.

Q. Well, that is already in the record, so if you have no personal knowledge, I will not question you about it.

A. No, I don't know.

Q. Then, it is a fact, is it not, that the Southern Pacific Company determines what shall be done with the moneys received from the sale of Oregon and California Railroad Company lands?

A. I would say no, that the Southern Pacific Company does not; that it is disbursed in accordance with the terms of the agreement.

Q. I will ask you to examine defendants' exhibit 290. State if that does not show that the Southern Pacific Company does disburse the moneys and renders monthly accounts showing how it has disbursed it.

A. No, this statement is prepared from the books of the Oregon and California Railroad Company that are kept by the accountant who has charge of the corporate accounts of the Oregon and California Company.

Q. Well, isn't this also kept in the books of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. No. No, this is taken from the books of the Oregon and California Railroad Company.

Q. Do you mean that the Southern Pacific Company has received and disbursed these many millions of dollars, and has never kept any record of it?

A. No, I don't mean that, no. Of course the Southern Pacific Company keeps records of all receipts and disbursements. But this statement which we have here is a statement prepared from the books of the Oregon and California Railroad Company. The Southern Pacific Company books will show the same information, of course.

Q. Well, that is just what I am getting at. These same items appear in the books of the Southern Pacific Company, do they not?

A. Why, most of them, yes; most of these items; yes, most of them. For instance, I find here, showing the earnings and expenses of the Oregon and California Railroad Company for this period to June 30th, that these earnings come from the operation of that railroad, and they will appear in the Southern Pacific accounts.

Q. That is, the totals, or in detail?

A. They will appear there in detail, and of course in a great deal more detail than on the Oregon and California books.

Q. Because the Southern Pacific Company is the operating company?

A. The Southern Pacific Company is the operating company, yes.

Q. Now, by this it appears that the Southern Pacific Company carries a general cash account with the Oregon and California Railway Company, in which is charged all moneys received by the Southern Pacific Company on account of land sales, receipts from transportation, and from all other sources, in one general cash account, and in the same account there is credited to the Southern Pacific Company the amounts that it has expended?

A. Just a moment, please—in one general cash account. I don't grant that.

Q. Well, one general account? Eliminate the word cash—one general account between the Southern Pacific Company and the Oregon and California Railroad Company? Well, I will use your own language, "In general account." That is correct the way you drew this up, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. There is such an account, "Southern Pacific Company in General Account with the Oregon and California Railroad Company?"

A. Covering everying, the entire transactions between them.

Q. Yes. And the Southern Pacific Company receives all the cash and disburses all of the cash, charging itself with what it receives and crediting itself with what it disburses? Isn't that true?

A. That is correct, yes, sir.

Q. Now, do you know whether, when the Southern Pacific Company makes an expenditure, for instance, for taxes on these Oregon lands, whether it receives any authorization from the Oregon and California Railroad Company officers to make that disbursement?

A. Taxes on the Oregon land?

Q. Yes.

A. Why, those taxes are taken care of by the Oregon and California Land Department.

Q. You say is taken care of?

A. Yes. They would check up, prepare the voucher and everything for payment.

Q. That is simply to convey to the officers of the Southern Pacific Company the information as to the amount of taxes, isn't it?

A. Why, it is to pass it through the accounts and through the treasurer for payment, but the entire work and everything in connection with it is done by the Oregon and California Land Department, not by the tax agent of the Southern Pacific Company. He knows little or nothing about it.

Q. Are you sure about that?

A. Why, I would be quite sure of it, because he does not handle such matters. If he does, why, I don't know anything about it.

Q. The tax agent of the Southern Pacific Company in the Wells Fargo Building here at Portland does not handle the subject of taxes?

A. I was thinking of the tax agent in San Francisco. I do not know what Mr. Eddy does up here.

Q. You would not deny the tax agent of the Southern Pacific Company located here in Portland does not attend to these tax matters here in Oregon?

A. I do not know as to that. No, I would not deny it.

Q. Do you know who it was that determined that the Southern Pacific Company should deduct the amount that it paid for taxes on account of these Oregon lands from the receipts from the sales of the lands?

A. No, I don't know, but I understood that was in accordance with the terms of the mortgage.

Q. Are you familiar also with the terms of the lease?

A. No, I cannot say that I am.

A. No, I am not familiar enough with that to answer any questions in regard to it.

Q. You cannot explain upon whose authority the expenses of maintaining the land department, and the taxes paid upon these lands, were deducted from the amounts that were turned over to the Union Trust Company?

A. No, I am not familiar with that at all.

Q. This exhibit 290 is not a detailed statement of the account but simply the monthly totals of the several items? Isn't that true?

A. Not altogether. If you will notice, we have given the items in considerable detail. For instance, there is sundry disbursements by San Francisco office during July, 1905, $4,454.82; land department, $4,382.99; director's fees, $65.00; stationery, $6.83—$71.83 total. We have given enough of it all through all of these items, we have endeavored to make sufficient segregation to make the matter clear.

Q. But they are compiled by month, I say, rather than by individual item.

A. Yes, they are compiled by monthly entries, and where segregation was necessary to make clear, why, we have done that. For instance, there is July 31, "Coupons and Registered Bonds Interest paid by New York office during July, 1903, $422,050." Nothing more is necessary there to make that clear. But where it was, where the amount was made up of several items, we have divided it to give complete information. But when you take gross receipts, for instance, the amount there is gross receipts for the period—of course, there is no detail except showing the class—mail, express, freights, etc.

Q. Exhibit G of the bill of complaint, which is admitted to be correct by the answer, is the supplemental lease of August 1, 1893, between the Oregon and California Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Company, which it is admitted by the pleadings is still in full force and effect, and has been since that date. This lease provides that the Southern Pacific Company shall pay, among other things, the interest upon the bonded indebtedness of the Oregon and California Railroad Company. Now, if that be true, why does the Southern Pacific Company charge the Oregon and California Railroad Company with the amount that it pays pursuant to this lease?

A. I know nothing about it. It is a matter I have nothing to do with—I am not called upon to handle at all.

Q. Well, then, there is no way that you can assure us that any of the items of this exhibit 290 is correct, in the sense that it was an indebtedness owing by the one company to the other?

A. Oh, this is the record of actual transactions as handled through the books. There is no doubt that the statement is correct. But just why they do that, or the terms of the lease pertaining to the bond interest, I know nothing about that. I am not required to handle it, and do not handle it.

Q. Do you know whether there is charged in here $5,000 a year that is paid to the Oregon and California Railroad Company under the terms of the lease?

A. No, I don't find that in here.

Q. There is included, however, in this statement all items of construction and improvement, including new mileage, new railroad—isn't that true?

A. Yes; yes, the operating revenues and expenses and charges for the betterment and addition of the line of the Oregon and California Railroad Company.

Q. And this account starts out on June 30, 1905, with a balance in favor of the Southern Pacific Company of over six millions of dollars? That is true, is it not?

A. $6,338,936.79. And it closes on June 30, 1912, with that balance reduced to $2,542,721.18?

A. That is correct.

Q. And in addition to that reduction in the cash balance claimed by the Southern Pacific Company on June 30, 1905, there is the amount that has been invested in new railroad between those two dates as the net result?

A. In addition to that, you say?

Q. Yes.

A. No.

Q. What I mean is that the so-called deficit of over six million dollars has been reduced to a little over two million, and a large amount of money has at the same time been invested in new railroads and betterments and improvements?

A. Everything that has been invested in new railroads, betterments or improvements of the Oregon and California Railroad Company are in these figures.

Q. Yes, but what I am getting at is this: That the operation of this railroad and the receipts from the sale of lands, and the amounts that the railroad company has paid out, results in the reduction of a deficit of six million and a little over to a little over two million, and at the same time in the increasing of the total amount of the property as disclosed by your statement of assets—you have withdrawn that for the purpose of being corrected—but of several million dollars between those dates—that itemized statement you had there; it had the word "Grants" instead of "Railroads."

A. No, this doesn't show that part of it.

A. In this statement?

Q. Yes.

A. Where do you find that?

A. Yes.

Mr. Tonwsend: You mean there has been no new mileage constructed since 1905 in the State of Oregon?

Mr. Fenton: That is included in this account.

A. Let's see. I wouldn't be sure about that.

Mr. Townsend: What about that, Mr. Koehler?

Mr. Koehler: Not that I know of.

Mr. Townsend: No new mileage since 1905?

A. It is possible that there have been some extensions of the line up there.

Mr. Koehler: That is not the O. & C.

Mr. Fenton: There has been no Oregon and California mileage constructed since 1905.

Mr. Koehler: I was thinking of that extension from Natron, but that is not O. & C.

A. That is from Natron down to Klamath.

Mr. Koehler: Yes.

A. That is separately incorporated. Yes, that is separately incorporated. But this shows, of course, that the deficit of six million dollars has been decreased to two million five hundred and forty-two thousand.

Q. Take the item under date of August 31, 1905: "Sundry Disbursements by San Francisco Office during August, 1905, namely: Land Department $62,873.55." Do you know what that was for?

A. You mean generally what that was for, or the specific items? Of course, I haven't a statement.

Q. No, I mean specifically, why was that month so much larger than the others?

A. I don't know. I couldn't state as to that. I don't know why August is heavier than the other months —August 31, 1905, no, I cannot explain it.

Q. Has the Oregon and California Railroad Company a treasurer?

A. Mr. Jones, assistant treasurer, is treasurer for all these companies, handles the funds of the companies; he is treasurer of the Southern Pacific, the Oregon and California, the Central Pacific, the S. P. R. R.

Q. Did you ever see a check drawn on the bank account of the Oregon and California Railroad Company?

A. Never have.

Q. Has there ever been one that you know of?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Mr. Adams, I notice in the statement of assets and liabilities of the Oregon and California Railroad Company no reference to the land grant. Point out to me, if it be a fact, where it is listed there as one of the assets of the company. I refer to Defendants' Exhibit 286.

A. Nothing in here refers to the land grant specifically.

Q. Well, or otherwise.

A. Let us see. Land grant accounts and land trust fund. This covers the entire account of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, including the land matters.

Q. Where is there anything in here showing the lands listed as an asset of this Oregon and California Railroad Company?

A. This is a balance sheet.

Q. Doesn't this purport to be a statement of assets and liabilities?

A. Oregon and California Railroad Company balance sheet as of May 31, 1912, showing the capital expenditures and other matters pertaining to the accounts for that period.

Q. I said, does it not purport to be a statement of the assets and liabilities of the Oregon and California Railroad Company?

A. Yes, balance sheet.

Q. Now, the assets are made up of the items stated here, none of which include any of the lands still held by the Railroad Company or claimed by the Railroad Company? Isn't that true?

A. Let me look at that again.

A. This is a balance sheet of the Oregon and California Railroad Company for the eleven months ending May 31, 1912, which shows the capital expenditures, cost of road and franchises, $36,791,228.12; additions and betterments $4,131,296.46; equipment $95,918.00.

Q. I ask the specific question whether there is any item there that includes the unsold granted lands still claimed by the railroad company, and which are involved in this matter?

Mr. Fenton: The defendants will admit that it does not include the railroad land grant, the acreage, or any valuation of that acreage. It does not purport to show it.

Q. That is true, isn't it?

A. There is nothing in this statement, no. This shows the capital expenditures and the current assets and liabilities referred to.

Q. Now, among the liabilities are included the outstanding bonds secured by the mortgage of July 1, 1887, stated here to be $17,734,000. That is one item of the liabilities, is it not?

A. That is first mortgage five per cent bonds of 1887. That is correct.

Q. And it also includes nineteen million dollars of capital stock?

A. That is correct.

Q. So that this statement shows the assets of the company to be $43,807,385.36?

A. The assets of the company as capital and—

Q. Well, that is the assets?

A. That is correct, yes.

Q. And the liabilities to be $44,143,631.93?

A. That is correct.

Q. So that, deducting the capital stock it shows the liabilities to be $25,143,631.93, and the assets to be as heretofore stated?

A. I don't get that. The capital stock is $19,000,000. Deducting that, I think you have the answer.

Q. Do you know where, if any place, in the books of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, or of the Southern Pacific Company, if at all, these unsold granted lands that are involved in this suit are inventoried or carried as an asset?

A. No, I do not.

Q. The railroad is carried as an asset at its cost, is it not?

A. At its cost, yes.

Q. Yes, but it is carried as an asset?

A. Yes.

Q. The only question is whether it should be carried at a valuation independent of its actual cost.

Q. You carry it at its actual cost in your books?

A. Yes, the books show the amount that was put into the railroad—the cost of construction.

Whereupon the witness further testified that he could not say in what form money is remitted to the Union Trust Company. That is handled through the New York office. The New York office conducts the transactions with the Union Trust Company and reports to him the payments made to the Trust Company, and these are entered upon his books. He does not know anything about the manner in which the prices for which the lands are sold are determined, but accepts the price approved by the land department. Part of his salary is apportioned to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, the same as the other officers who act for more than one company; their salaries and general office expenses are apportioned among the several companies which they represent. The leases of the companies provide for that. These expenses are all in the first instance paid by the Southern Pacific Company out of its funds, and charged against the company in the proportion which is agreed upon. The rules determine what proportion shall be charged against each company. These rules that are laid down by the commissions, vary. Train mileage, car mileage, road mileage, locomotive mileage, or some other basis is used which determines the value of the service to each company. The expenses of station agents and other employes located on the line of the Oregon and California Railroad Company are charged to that company. The expenses of officers whose services and jurisdiction extend over more than one corporate property are distributed on the basis that will nearest cover the actual services performed for each. The passenger officials are distributed over corporate properties on a passenger train or car mileage; freight officials on a freight train or car mileage. The Commission of the State of Oregon have prescribed rules for apportioning salaries of officers whose jurisdiction extends over more than one state, and these rules are followed in distributing salaries and expenses in the State of Oregon. They state that the salary of an official whose services extend into some state other than Oregon shall be distributed on a mileage basis, or whatever other basis that in their judgment is considered just and equitable. The distribution of his own salary so far as the State of Oregon is concerned, is determined by the Railroad Commission of that state. The question of service performed for the land department is decided by the officials of the Southern Pacific Company. The accounting department would probably say to Mr. McAllaster, "How much of your services are chargeable to this company or to the Oregon and California Land Department, and how much to the C. P. Land Department?" That would receive consideration and very likely his recommendation would be considered. The auditor of disbursements considers the apportionment recommended by the man in charge. If Mr. McAllaster of the land department, recommends certain apportionment should be made of the salaries, that receives consideration and final approval until such time as it is considered that there should be a change made in it. This auditor of disbursements is the auditor of the Southern Pacific Company. He performs services for all of the companies, and his salary is charged just the same as that of witness, to all of the other companies. He is subject to the general auditor of the Southern Pacific Company, who is subject to the President of the Southern Pacific Company. This distribution is determined by the executive officers of the Southern Pacific Company. Payments by the New York office and similar items are in this statement, and the item under August 31st, "Coupons paid by New York office during August, 1905, $30,625," is for interest coupons on the bonds. These items of payments by the New York office and similar items are the disbursements referred to by him as made direct by the New York office as distinguished from the other items in the statement. Explaining the statement—Exhibit 290—showing payments made to the Union Trust Company on account of land sales,—there is an item under January 31st on the first page, 1906, "Union Trust Company of New York, Trustee Mortgage, 1887, amount collected on Ida M. Eaton note and paid to Union Trust Company of New York by the New York office, $1,193.53," and on the next page under date of March 31st, an item "Payment by the New York office during March, 1906, (additional) $34,657.47, which is itemized as "Union Trust Company of New York, Trustee Mortgage of 1887, amount due from April-

October 31, 1905, $9,467.29. Amount due for November, 1905, $19,415.18;" that represents the monthly collections from the sales of land that were paid over to the Union Trust Company. That is taken up in the account of the month of March, 1906, and means that the actual turning over of the money was deferred these few months, so that while the money was paid in March, the item here shows that it was for the preceding months.

Q. Well now, dropping down to the bottom of that same page, under date of June 30th I find expenditures for the year ending June 30, 1906, as follows: "Construction, Henderson to Springfield $120,049.94; Construction and Improvement $537,649.67." Do you know whether that is new construction or simply reconstruction or betterment of the existing road?

A. Why, I could not be positive as to that, but I believe from the reading of it that it is what is known as additions and betterments to the existing line, although the first item, "Construction Henderson to Springfield $120,049," looks as if it was construction of a new line from Henderson to Springfield. The other item "Construction and Improvement $537,649," I think is improvements to existing property, for the reason that there are no other items in here.

Mr. Fenton: What is the date of that? I can tell you.

Mr. Townsend: It says for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1906. It does not give it any more specifically.

Mr. Fenton: There was a link between the Natron branch and the main line from Henderson over to Springfield that might be called new construction. I don't remember the date. It connected the two lines. That is, the Woodburn-Springfield branch and the main line, Henderson being at a point near Engene.

A. I find on the statement for the year 1907 as follows: It reads, "Construction and improvements" and there it is divided between the betterments and additions, which satisfies me that this item in 1906, "Construction and improvements," is construction of additions and betterments to the operated line rather than new construction; that during the year 1906 we had some difficulty in dividing our new work between additions and betterments because of the records destroyed in the fire, so in some cases we had to lump them.

Q. Under date of June 30, 1907, I find the following items going into construction and improvement. The first item that you have just referred to "Account Construction Henderson to Springfield," $39,150.57 with an interest charge added amounting to $841.75, and then these other two items, namely, "Account betterments $621,580.83, account additions $277,625.50." What were those additions, if you know?

A. Those were additions made to the operated line. I can speak positively as to that, because all charges to these accounts additions and betterments are made in accordance with the classification as prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Q. Would you include in additions additional terminal facilities, switches or sidetracks?

A. Yes, or increased weight of rail, and there are a great many things. There is a classification prescribed that includes additions.

Q. How would you distinguish betterments from additions? Now, for instance, the laying of new rails, would you call that a betterment or an addition?

A. That is done for us by the Commission. The Interstate Commerce Commission prescribe rules stating what shall be an addition and what shall be a betterment to the property. But you and I, I think, will understand it if we say that it is an improvement to the operated lines. In one case it is considered an addition and in another a betterment. Just how I can explain that, it is not clear in my mind now. In fact, it it pretty hard for any one to understand just where they draw the line between an addition and a betterment; but it is an improvement to an existing property. An addition is a new building where none existed before; a betterment is enlarging that building or structure.

Q. The renewal of rails and ties as they are worn out is not put in as a cost of operation?

A. Yes; oh, yes.

Q. The replacing of worn out material then, is a cost of operation?

A. That is correct, yes, sir.

Q. That would be included in this general amount which I find at the end of each year for the total of the fiscal year?

A. Operating expenses, yes, sir, except that the Interstate Commerce Commission have prescribed rules governing as to what shall be considered an operating expense and what shall be considered an addition or betterment to the property, so that the rules of the Commission have been strictly observed, of course, in arriving at these figures.

Q. That is true with reference to this particular statement, exhibit 290, is it?

A. Everything, yes.

Q. That the distribution of those items has been as nearly as you could in accordance with the rules of the Interstate Commerce Commission?

A. Yes, just as closely as we could follow it.

Q. On page 12, under date of June 30, 1911, you will see also charged $33,080.22 for construction of motor car line—Ashland, Oregon. That of course is new construction.

Mr. Fenton: No.

Q. Do you find it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It says, "Expenditures during year ending June 30, 1911, motor car line—Ashland, Oregon, construction."

A. I don't know what that item is, whether that is a new line or whether it is reconstruction of an old line. We have done a great deal of that work in Oregon and California.

Q. Under date of June 30, 1911, on page 12, the second item "Interest on open account with Southern Pacific Company for year ending June 30, 1911, $310,-892.40." What is that?

A. That is interest on cash advanced to the Oregon and California Railroad Company that year.

Q. Well, that is this balance of credit that is carried in favor of the Southern Pacific Company on this statement from time to time, isn't it? For instance, it starts out with a cash credit at the very beginning of the statement, $6,338,000.

A. Oh, no, no. The Southern Pacific Company advanced money, you will find down here. Take this year, that motor car line Ashland construction, addition and betterment $378,032.25. To betterments $206,-011.82, and other amounts that have been advanced to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and the interest is computed on those advances.

Q. Well, then, you mean that every investment that the Southern Pacific Company makes of its moneys, in betterments and improvements on the Oregon and California Railroads, carried as a continuing indebtedness by the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and interest is charged upon it?

A. Interest is charged, yes. Interest is charged on all amounts advanced the Oregon and California Railroad Company for additions, betterments and new construction work, just as is common between any companies.

Q. But the Southern Pacific Company gets the benefit of those additions, because it operates the line, does it not? Let me ask you a question: Is that done under the lease, or because of any agreement outside of the lease, so far as you know?

A. Really, I never considered that. It is so common that you get interest on money that you loan or advance to another concern.

Q. Or that you build a railroad to operate for yourself?

A. Yes.

Q. The Southern Pacific Company spends money to build a railroad to operate itself, and charges somebody else interest on it?

A. It is operating the Oregon and California Railroad under a lease.

Q. Yes, but it gets all of the proceeds from the operation, doesn't it?

A. No, I don't think it does. I don't remember just what the terms of the lease are now. The facts are, though, that the Southern Pacific Company charge and collect interest on cash advanced these other companies—the Oregon and California or whatever company it advances money to.

Mr. Fenton: Defendants will admit, that is, defendants for whom we speak, that under the lease the Southern Pacific Company operates the Oregon and California Railroad, collects its entire income from operation, and accounts for it and charges that company with any advances that it may have made over and above what it has received, and that that was the reason why this deficit appears; that there has been a deficit from the beginning of the lease down to the present time.

Q. You have nothing in your office, so far as you know, that would show who actually advanced the money that was used in the construction of this railroad from Ashland southerly to the State line, have you?

A. No.

Q. Nor from Delta in California northerly to the State line?

A. No. Our records—

Q. Nothing from which you could send any statement after you return to San Francisco upon that point?

A. As to who advanced the cash?

Q. Yes, who actually advanced the cash.

A. No, only from the records as they now exist showing that the cash was advanced.

Q. That the cash was expended, you mean; but as to whether it was advanced by one company to another, there is nothing in your records here to show, is there?

A. The cash was expended but not advanced—I don't quite understand.

Q. I say your record here shows simply so much cash expended in construction, but it does not show where the money came from?

A. No. No, it shows the cost of the property there as about forty million dollars.

Q. What rate of interest is charged by the Southern Pacific Company on these advances?

A. I could not say. I cannot answer that.

Q. Look on page 8, the last item under date of June 30, or the next to the last item under date of June 30th, it says: "Difference in rate of interest from 4 per cent to 6 per cent on open account with S. P. Co., year ending June 30, 1909." Now, what does that mean?

A. That would indicate that there was an adjustment in the accounts as between the two roads of interest charged.

Q. Well, that the rate was raised to six or reduced to four?

A. Raised to six.

Q. It indicated it formerly had been charged at four per cent, and the difference was now charged?

A. Two per cent more.

Q. To raise it to six per cent?

A. Yes. That is year ending June 30, 1909.

Q. It is possibly the result of an erroneous computation.

A. Pretty low rate of interest that year.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION.

Q. I now show you a statement which for the purpose of identification may be marked "Defendants' Exhibit 293," and ask you to explain where you obtained that statement and what you understand it represents.

A. This statement represents the cost of the road and equipment of the Oregon and California Railroad Company at the close of each of the years named in the statement—December 31, 1888, $30,927,000,—and June 30, 1912—

Q. You need not read the statement.

A. The first year in the statement is December 31, 1888, $30,927,000; June 30, 1912, $41,147,417.58.

Q. Now, from what sources did you obtain the figures for the years ending December 31, 1888, and down to and including December 31, 1895?

A. The figures for those years were taken from the annual reports of the Southern Pacific Company forwarded to its directors.

Q. Do you recall, Mr. Adams, whether those reports are made to the Interstate Commerce Commission in the name of the Oregon and California Railroad Company as well as in the name of the Southern Pacific Company, as to this particular mileage, or as to each so-called leased company?

A. There are two reports made. One is by the Southern Pacific Company—the operating company, and the other by the Oregon and California Railroad Company.

Q. They are both required to be made to the Interstate Commerce Commission?

A. Yes. They require a different form of report for an operating company and a leased company; but the reports are rendered in accordance with the requirements of the commission.

Q. And these, then, are official figures taken from those reports?

A. Oh, yes, yes.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence Defendants' Exhibit 293, to which complainant objected on the ground made to Defendants' Exhibit 286. Whereupon said Defendants' Exhibit 293 was received in evidence and marked "Defendants' Exhibit 293" and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified as such.

Whereupon the witness further testified:

Q. Do you know why it was there was a change in the fiscal year from December 31st to June 30th, or do you have any knowledge on that subject?

A. Why, yes, it was made to conform with the reports that were made by railroad companies generally to the Interstate Commerce Commission. Their fiscal year ends June 30th.

Q. That is, the fiscal year of the Interstate Commerce Commission?

A. Yes, the fiscal year; and usually a railroad company's fiscal year ends June 30th to conform with the Commission's year.

RECROSS EXAMINATION.

Q. Now, by process of subtraction you can determine from this defendants' exhibit 293 the amount expended in any given fiscal year that is covered by the report for betterments and improvements and additions?

A. That is correct.

Q. And construction? That is all included of course?

A. Yes.

Q. That is, it would include new construction and betterments and additions as well?

A. It would include—no, new construction. Construction of a new line would not be included in there. I mean by that that that does not include the entire construction of lines in Oregon. It would include any new work on the Oregon and California Railroad.

Q. Or any new construction by that company or in the name of that company?

A. Yes.

Q. But not any new Southern Pacific Company lines in the name of some other corporation?

A. Yes, that is it.

Q. I understand.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION.

Q. Mr. Adams, I wish you would refer to defendants' exhibit 291, and make such explanation of that exhibit as you think will show what is the status of this $956,826.99.

A. On the right hand side of the statement we find cash receipts from May 13, 1887, to end of current month, $4,603,250.82. We find on the middle part of that statement advances by O. & C. railroad $956,826.99, making a total of $5,560,077.81, which was disposed of as follows: Expenses and taxes (left hand side of the statement) $3,062,364.80; cash paid over to trustee $2,497,713.01, making the total of the receipts $5,560,077.81.

Q. Then somebody must have advanced $956,826.99 for expenses and taxes more than the total receipts on account of this trust fund?

A. The expenditures for that amount in excess of the receipts, which amount was advanced by the Oregon and California Railroad Company as shown by the statement.

RECROSS EXAMINATION.

Q. Is that item included in the expenses and taxes account of $3,062,364.80?

A. The item of advances by O. & C.?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir.

Q. Then this statement shows the expenses and taxes of this land grant, or these land grants, from May 13, 1887, to June 30, 1912, to be over $4,000,000.00?

A. No, sir. It shows them to be $3,062,364.80.

Q. Well, I ask you if that item of expense that is designated as advances by O. & C. R. R. Co. for expenses and taxes—$956,826.99, is a part of the $3,062,364.80, or whether it should be added to it to get the total expenses and taxes.

A. No, no, not at all. The item of expenses and taxes, the $3,062,364.80 is fixed—that is an expense. That is nothing else. That is expenses incurred. Now, to meet the expenses incurred and the amount paid to the trustee required over and above the receipts some one to advance some money, namely $956,826.99, which was advanced by the Oregon and California Railroad Company.

Q. I am going to get to that part in a moment, but you don't understand me. I say, that that is not an expense in addition to this $3,062,364.80, but is included in that amount.

A. No, it is not an expense in addition, nor is it included in the amount.

Q. Why is it designated for expenses and taxes?

A. Where is it designated?

Q. Why is it designated for expenses and taxes?

A. It is not designated for expenses and taxes. The expenses and taxes are as shown—$3,062,364.80, you see. That is expenses and taxes. Now then, paid to trustee $2,497,713.01, making the total of $5,560,-077.81. Now, the receipts were short of that amount $956,826.99. Some one put up that cash—the Oregon and California Railroad Company.

Q. That is exactly the point. But I am trying to get you to explain that that is not an added expense. If it had just read, "Cash advanced," it would have been just as intelligible as it is now.

A. Excuse me, but it is not an added expense. If I did not state that, it is not.

Q. That is what I am trying to develop—that should not be added to the other.

A. No, you are right.

Q. It is just cash advanced?

A. Yes.

Q. You say that is advanced by the Oregon and California Railroad Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, where do they get the money?

A. Why, the Oregon and California Railroad Company—where did they get that money? Presumably from the Southern Pacific Company. But whether they got this money, or what money they got, the Southern Pacific Company advanced them money and have advanced money to them all through the year and years.

Q. Do you keep a cash account for the Oregon and California Railroad Company?

A. In that way—credit their account with the credit, and charge their account with the cash received and with the cash disbursed on account of the land accounts, speaking of Oregon and California land accounts.

Q. You mean, as you testified this morning, that you keep an account of the cash that the Southern Pacific Company receives and that it disburses?

A. Yes.

Q. But you do not mean that the Oregon and California Railroad Company actually receives or disburses any cash?

A. No. No, I don't mean that at all.

Q. And this $956,826.99 was obviously advanced by the Southern Pacific Company, but in its account with the Oregon and California Railroad Company it was charged against the Oregon and California Railroad Company.

A. That is what it amounts to.

Q. That is all there is to it?

A. Yes; there cannot be anything else.

Q. You don't understand that to be an advance in one sum, but the total of perhaps several items?

A. They paid the bills as they came along.

Q. It is probably the total of a number of items rather than a single item?

A. That is right.

Q. And I presume those same items, or at least a part of them, would be found in this more detailed statement, defendants' exhibit 290, as having been advanced by the New York office, or the San Francisco office for that matter, and charged against the O. &. C.?

A. Yes, they will appear in there as the transactions occurred, but as to detail more particularly in the statement of expenses and receipts as shown by this. This is the analysis always.

Mr. Fenton: Referring to what exhibit now?

A. 287, I guess that is called. That form is the class of expenditures, you know. But your statement is correct that they will be found in that form.

Q. That is, for the years that are covered by exhibit 290?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. This may include additions prior to the year 1905? This item of $956,826.99 appearing in defendants' exhibit 291 may include items antedating this exhibit 290, for all you know?

A. Possibly, but I think not. I think there is nothing there prior to 1908. I think it is all since that time.

Q. You think the items could be ascertained more specifically, then, in this exhibit 290?

A. Oh, no; you could not find the item in there, no. You could not get that out. It simply means that the Southern Pacific Company has paid those bills, and that is the amount that they have advanced to them.

Q. They must appear in this?

A. They do appear in there, but you would not recognize them from that statement, nor no one else. I mean that you could not locate an expenditure with cash as you find it in there. Now, I wanted to make this clear, and I hope that I have. The statement seems to be left handed till you look at it closely.

Whereupon J. H. SHARP, called as a witness on behalf of the defendants being first duly sworn, testified that he is tax clerk in the Land Department and commenced employment with the Company in 1883, under William H. Mills, then land agent for the Central Pacific Railroad Company. He became a deputy under Mills in 1885, and continued such deputy for William H. Mills, land agent of the Central Pacific Railroad Company until the death of Mills in May, 1907. Mills was appointed land agent of the Oregon and California Railroad Company in 1888 and until his death occupied that position; his position as deputy did not apply to the Oregon and California; he had no formal appointment, but had charge just the same. "Defendants' Exhibit 255" being deed form 3332, form 4501 and form 4502, purporting to be forms of deeds of the Central Pacific Railway Company are the same forms in general use by the Central Pacific Land Department at the time Mills was appointed land agent of the Oregon and California Railroad Company. These forms were drafted by William Singer, Jr. Mills was never at any time land agent of the Southern Pacific Company. The Southern Pacific Company did not, to his knowledge, have a land department in San Francisco. Prior to the time that Charles W. Eberlein succeeded George H. Andrews as acting land agent, the land department of the Oregon and California Railroad Company was maintained and operated at Portland. Andrews reported any matters of that kind to Mills under whose direction he was acting.

Whereupon on cross-examination witness further testified that Mills was land agent of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, which included not only the grant to the Central Pacific under the Act of July 1, 1862, but the grant to the California & Oregon Railroad Company under the Act of July 25, 1866. His title was land agent. Shortly after the Oregon and California Railroad Company became a part of the system of railroads operated by the Southern Pacific Company. Mills then became land agent of the Oregon and California Railway Company and George H. Andrews at Portland acted under the direction of Mills. He means to say that the Southern Pacific Company itself did not have anything to say as to the policies to be pursued in the disposition of the lands of its constituent companies, and that it did not influence under the administration of Mills the policies pursued by the Central Pacific Railroad Company as to its original grant or as to the grant to the California & Oregon Railroad Company, or as to the grants in the State of Oregon involved in this case. He believes Huntington was president of the Southern Pacific Company during that time, but could not say whether or not Mills was responsible to Huntington for the discharge of his duties. He supposes Mills took his instructions from the Board of Directors of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, but he never knew Mills to have any practical instructions or suggestions from time to time while Mills was engaged in that work. He does not know that Mills was subject to instructions of Huntington as to land matters, but thinks Mills was given free range by the Board of Directors. He does not know anything about any other duties of Mills, but only knows that his duties related to land matters. The connection of Mills with the Company related to these land grants and land matters and not to operation or anything of that kind. He believes that Judge Cornish was at the head of the land department after the Southern Pacific Company became a part of the so-called Harriman lines —he so understood it. In that way he may have at that time had general supervision of the policies of all these land departments, but he does not know anything about that himself. He took his instructions from Mills, and he does not feel competent to say from whom Mills took his instructions, outside of the instructions that Mills got from the Board of Directors of the Central Pacific Railroad Company in his appointment.

Whereupon DAVID LORING, called as a witness on behalf of defendants and being first duly sworn, testified that he resides at Portland, Oregon, and is at present a civil engineer and surveyor and is not in the employ of the Southern Pacific Company or the Oregon and California Railroad Company, or any of the parties to this suit. He entered the employ of the Oregon and California Railroad Company March 1, 1882, as engineer on location and construction during a portion of that year. Later on he was for a short time in charge of the taxes of the land department and immediately after that was right of way agent, obtaining the right of way on the southern extension from Roseburg to the State line of Oregon, to the southern State line. After that was finished he went into the land department of the Company as chief clerk, that was sometime in 1884, and he remained there as such until October 1, 1904. During the last two years, or about that length of time, he was assistant treasurer to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, his immediate superior, while he was in the land department was George H. Andrews, who was first secretary and treasurer of the Company and supervised the operation of the land department and who later on became acting land agent and remained such until October 1st, 1904. Andrews was succeeded as acting land agent of the Oregon and California Railroad Company by Charles W. Eberlein, who took charge as he understands. He has no personal knowledge what his position was. The land department of the Oregon and California Railroad Company during the time he was connected with the Company was maintained, located and operated at Portland, Oregon, and he served as chief clerk from early in 1884.

Whereupon over the objection of counsel for complainant that the same was immaterial and irrelevant and that the witness was incompetent to testify as to the policy of the corporation, witness further testified that when he went into the office the land agent I. R. Moores had just lately died and he was put in charge of the office, subject to the supervision of Mr. Andrews, whose office was on the lower floor while theirs was on the upper floor of the building. He found a form of contract in force requiring payments annually with interest and deeds to cover the same when paid up in full and collections were made on these contracts according to the form required. The tract books, meaning the plat books, showing the land, had prices marked on them by their predecessors, and where he thought the land was not priced high enough, he changed the prices to conform to what in his judgment they should be sold at, and in cases where those lands were sold the contracts were made out in conformity with those prices, subject to Mr. Andrews' revision. In some cases Andrews changed the prices and in some he did not. They had a book which had been made up before the time of witness from examinations made by field agents of the property with the appraised prices on them, varying from 25 cents to $10.00 or $12.00 an acre. These prices were not marked on the plats, but in selling any of the land included in these examinations they were guided by them in the price.

Some years afterwards they started examining lands on their own behalf and the appraised values as given by the examiners were entered with the description of the property in the same book up to a certain length of time. Then he made a set of books which each field agent should have covering a whole township of odd numbered sections and his descriptions were all written in those with his appraisement of value, and filed, and were used thereafter. When contracts which had been made were paid up, the proper deed was filled out to conform to the conditions in the contract, and a list of the same was made up monthly or periodically, and executed by the president and secretary and he as notary executed nearly all of these deeds with the exception of when he might have been away on a vacation or sick. The deeds provided a release of the mortgage given to the Union Trust Company of July 1, 1887, for that particular tract of land and after the deeds were executed at Portland they were sent to the trustees to be released there. A list of the lands with a full statement of the amounts received was sent with them and in due time they came back and were delivered to the owners, if they could find them. They could not always find them. That is to say that the deeds were so drawn that the Union Trust Company joined in releasing that particular tract.

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

Q. Now, what was done, if anything, about observing in any way the Act of April 10, 1869, attempting to modify or limit the price and quantity at which the lands granted by the Act of July 25, 1866, should be sold, and the provision of the Act of May 4, 1870, upon the same subject, during the time that you had official connection with this land department?

A. I don't think that I was governed at all by the Act, only by instructions from my superior as to what I should do in the office.

Q. And in placing the prices and in estimating the quantities of land which should be sold or included in any contract of sale or deed, did the Company in the administration of this grant while you were in the office or connected with the land department, pay any attention to those statutes?

A. In respect of settlers on railroad land, odd sections, they made a point of selling to them at the appraised value of the land without considering the improvements that there might be on it.

Q. By what appraised value do you mean?

A. By our field agent's, or such information as we could otherwise gather.

Q. Now did that appraised value have any reference to the two dollars and a half an acre?

A. I don't know that it did; not in my instructions.

Q. Now those so-called settlers that might be on an odd section within the limits of the grant, were there many of them in the latter part of your administration or were these principally during the very early part?

A. They were nearly all south of Roseburg, who had settled on the land prior to the construction and withdrawal of the land south of Roseburg, before my time.

Q. That is to say, when the Company came to the administration of the grant after the withdrawal of the lands and the construction of the road it was found that there were some people actually on odd sections within the limits of the grant that had gone there prior to the withdrawal and that as to these you recognized their applications to purchase and sold it to them at the appraisal prices fixed by your cruisers; is that the way I understand it?

A. That is the fact.

Q. And that is the way that that was handled?

A. That is the fact.

Q. Could you, roughly speaking, give any estimate as to the number of such so-called settlers or cases where persons had gone upon the lands and had made some improvements and were in possession when the Company undertook to administer the grant?

A. I could not give any estimate of amount or number of people. There was a book kept, called Railroad Pre-emptions.

Q. Railroad Pre-emptions?

A. A railroad pre-emption book; and that was the list I referred to. It was written out in the handwriting of our predecessors almost entirely, and when the withdrawals were made so that it made the grant effective to us we sent them proper notices, and I think that out of the whole amount on that list not over five per cent responded. We sent them regular notices, and then after a length of time we sent them a registered letter stating that if they did not buy within a certain time we should cancel that old filing and sell to anyone else. Some responded and we sold to them at the appraised value after we had examined it. When they answered we sent out some one to look at it, and then from his report we fixed the price.

Q. Were these so-called settlers that were in that situation persons who had entered upon the lands supposing or believing that they were public lands?

A. I could not say.

Q. And had undertaken to make settlements at one hundred and sixty acres or less?

A. I could not say. I know positively, though, that a great many of them were old donation settlers having donations and having other lands adjoining.

Q. Well, had they moved off of their donation claims on to these railroad lands, or simply enclosed them?

A. I can't remember about that.

Q. In making these appraisals and selling these lands to those people, did you, or did you not, estimate the value of any of their improvements and charge them for them, or did you just estimate the value of the land?

A. Estimated the value of the land.

Q. Do you recall whether there was ever any conflict or contest between any of these so-called settlers and the Company with reference to any of these lands?

A. I don't remember now.

Q. Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that there were never any contests with reference to these lands that were settled upon under these circumstances during the time you had charge?

A. Not to my knowledge or remembrance.

Q. There were none to your knowledge?

A. Not to my knowledge or remembrance.

Q. What became of that book which you called the Pre-emption Book, do you know?

A. It was, with all papers, turned over to Mr. Eberlein.

Q. And could you give the Court any idea of about the number of entries, I mean claims or pre-emption claimants approximately that that book would have in it?

A. I could give you approximately the number, but a great many of them were by different parties for the same land, or a portion of the same land overlapping, so that it would not be the actual number of say one hundred and sixty acres each.

Q. Can you give the Court any idea of the probable acreage of land that might have been affected or that was affected by these so-called pre-emption filings, as you call them?

A. My remembrance is that there were in the neighborhood of four hundred odd filings; but that would not represent one hundred and sixty acres to each, as I say, because what proportion were duplicated or partially duplicated I can't tell.

Q. Now, as I understand you, Mr. Loring, the Company undertook to recognize these people when they were actual settlers on odd sections and to adjust the prices to let them have the lands if they desired them?

A. We did; and we sent notices to every one of them.

Q. Without regard to the $2.50 an acre clause, or without regard to their improvements?

A. Without regard to their improvements or any price except what our field agents placed on it. If we had an answer from a man that we sent to, then we examined the land. If we had no answer, we didn't examine the land.

Q. About what proportion of these pre-emption entries in this book were put there by the predecessor of Mr. Andrews, Mr. I. R. Moores?

A. Nearly all of them. There may have been a few in the first two or three years of Mr. Andrews' and my supervision.

Q. Now what was the policy, if you know, of the Company during this time that you were in the administration of this grant with reference to encouragement of the sales of these lands to persons who would settle or cultivate the same or establish homes upon them?

A. The preference right was always given to them as against anyone else.

Q. Do you recall, Mr. Loring, about when it was that these lands that were remote from the foothills and remote from the Willamette Valley and from the Rogue River Valley and the Umpqua Valley, and the other agricultural portions of Western Oregon, and that were situated in the Coast Mountains and in the Cascade Mountains, began to have an inquirng or general market value for timber purposes? Do you remember about when that was?

A. No, I don't think I do.

Q. Well, was there a time during your connection with the Company when there began an inquiry for these outlying lands that had hitherto had no market value and the inquiry was on account of their timber values?

A. My impression is it was after 1894, the high-water; scarcely much of anything before that.

Q. Well now, was this inquiry all at once or was it gradual?

A. It was gradual and increased as the Michigan and Wisconsin and Minnesota timber men came out here.

Q. Now that, as you remember, was not earlier than 1894?

A. I think not. There may have been a few scattering cases.

Q. These timber lands about which these inquiries were made and about which I have inquired were not in the valleys that I have mentioned, were they?

A. No.

Q. They were in the Cascade Mountains and in the Coast Mountains, were they not, chiefly?

A. Yes.

Whereupon witness further testified that William H. Mills became connected with the land department about 1888. Andrews consulted Mills, advised and reported to him as to the land sales, prices or anything of that kind. Mills made several trips to Portland after he became officially connected with the administration of the land department of the Oregon and California Railroad Company in 1888, supervising the land department, but witness thinks that Judge Singer came for Mills before Mills came. The land department continued to remain at Portland and to be administered there until the 1st of October, 1904.

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

"Q. During all of that time and during the time you were connected with it did you have any knowledge of any land department of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. I knew that there was a land department in San Francisco, but what it represented I didn't know.

Q. Well, was there any land department of the Southern Pacific Company here?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. And was there any land department maintained by the Southern Pacific Company at Portland?

A. Not in our offices."

Whereupon witness further testified that during the year 1888, respecting the grading of land or the cruising of timber lands after Mills came into connection with it, they put on larger forces of men in cruising the land, that is, one man went out in charge of the grading of land, cruising and getting a description of it; this man usually took from one to three men with him and in some cases had what they called a crew of three or four parties and had a general camp and cook and pack animals and the man in charge did cruising himself and had subordinates under him who did it and made out their own reports, but subject to his instructions. In 1891 and from time to time thereafter, approximately there were four parties in the employ of the Company of two or three men each, these men were instructed to examine certain districts or certain townships or portions of townships. He furnished them with the books to make their reports in and the books came back and were filed, and in a great many instances he or some assistant in the office made tabular lists of the amount of timber of different varieties on these lands. The lands were nearly always examined for timber. The books referred to were about six inches by four and a half square, about three-quarters of an inch thick. On the left hand side of the page would be lines and the initails northeast, and part way down northwest, and then southeast and then southwest, for the quarter sections, and space enough on that page to write in those descriptions of the land. On the opposite page facing it was shown the quarter sections, subdivided into forty-acre tracts, so that the topography of the country could be put in there and that went all through the book by quarter sections, so that each book covered a whole township. The topography of these lands examined, was shown, on that quarter section diagram, on the opposite page from the writings, they were not put in by gradients. By topography he means showing the lands where the streams ran across the different lines of the forties or through them, and showed, where the man was able to do it, the hatching, as they called it, showing the hills or the valleys, as they might be; and in some instances they had barometers, in most cases they did, and they put down the barometer reading of the elevations of the different points. These books were printed and furnishd by the Company through him in the shape of small octavos of about seventy-two pages, practically. There were 18 sections to a township and four pages to each section and the books were three-quarters of an inch thick. When they were completed by the field men, they were filed away in the Company's office. He does not recall or state how much of these grants involved in this suit, including the unpatented lands, was cruised in the field and reported upon in this way before he left the Company in October, 1904, but would say that it was considerably more than half. Richard Koehler was the excutive officer of the Oregon and California Railroad Company that resided at Portland at the tme and had general supervision over the land department and was in charge of the operation of the road. His position as related to the Oregon and California Railroad Company was that of second vice-president and manager, as he understood it. Koehler was also a director of the Company.

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

Q. What is the fact, Mr. Loring, if you know, as to whether some of these lands in these early days that were sold were sold at a price less than two and a half an acre?

A. I don't think any were in our time, but my remembrance is that there were some few cases showing on the contracts as sold less than that before our time.

Q. You say "our time"; you mean from the time you came into connection with the Company?

A. Prior to 1884.

Q. Yes.

Mr. Townsend: Now you mean subsequent to 1884.

Mr. Fenton: When he said prior to his time he meant prior to 1884.

Q. Were you yourself over a considerable portion of these lands during the time you were connected with the Company in any way?

A. Yes, quite a considerable.

Q. What would be your knowledge as to whether or not these parcels of land that were susceptible of actual settlement or the establishment of homes were large or small tracts contiguous to each other, or whether they were large or small tracts that were widely separated from each other and with other lands between that were either timber or incapable of actual settlement? What is your recollection and knowledge on that subject, based upon your personal knowledge from being over these lands, and based upon your knowledge of these field reports, these books that were returned to you, and the official knowledge that you obtained in that way from the records of the Company?

Mr. Townsend: The question is objected to in so far as it relates to the knowledge of the witness based upon field reports and any other source of information than personal observation, as incompetent, hearsay and irrelevant and immaterial. There is so much evidence concerning the character of this land and its susceptibility to settlement that I have not incumbered the record by interposing an objection every time the subject is touched in the examination of the witnesses, and I therefore ask counsel to stipulate at this point that all testimany heretofore taken or hereafter taken concerning the character of the land and its susceptibility to settlement shall be received subject to the objection by the Government that it is immaterial and irrelevant, the character of the lands in no way excusing breaches of the condition as to quantity of lands to be sold to any one purchaser or as to the price at which the same should be sold, and the character of the land or its susceptibility to settlement, therefore, being in no way at issue, directly or indirectly, in this case.

Mr. Fenton: It may be understood, and the defendants so stipulate, that the Government may save its objection and exception to all testimony of this character heretofore taken or all that may be taken hereafter, tending to show the character or kind of land, or its capabilities, as stated by counsel.

A. I had occasion to go over the greater part of the lands south of Roseburg during my term as right of way agent. Also after that every year I took two weeks in the mountains hunting, and at a different locality every year, for upwards of fifteen years, and I that way became very conversant with the country and the nature of the land. I can't remember any large tracts which were remote from the immediate valley which would be easily settled and upon which a man could make a living. There were some small places which would make a very good residence and perhaps could make a garden, but he would have to clear the heavy timber to do anything further, and they were not very near together.

Q. Were these parcels that were capable of being occupied for a home site, for a garden and dwelling, small tracts generally?

A. Almost always.

Q. And were they or not widely separated from each other?

A. Almost invariably.

Q. And were these not chiefly such lands as had been entered upon or claimed by these so-called pre-emption claimants during construction or prior to the completion at that time?

A. I am not referring to those; I am referring to entirely different lands.

Q. Now what is your knowledge as to whether or not the Oregon and California Railroad Company has at all times since 1884 when you came to have knowledge of the Company's affairs, up to October 1st, 1904, when you discontinued your relation, been in the possession of these lands, how did the Company evidence this claim to possession, in what different ways, if you know?

A. Approved selection lists were on file in the office, patents issued by the Government to the Railroad Company were in the office and such patents had been recorded in the various counties in which the land represented in them lay; they issued deeds for lands embraced in the patents and sometimes otherwise; and they paid the taxes on the lands, which was sufficient evidence to me that they owned the land.

Q. What did they do, if anything, about protecting the lands from fires and trespassers and persons who might take possession of them by sending field agents or other persons over them?

A. They had inspections made where it was heard that men were trespassing on the land; agents were, at times, sent to them to see by what right they were there, and, if they had none, to make them either purchase or get off; and I think we had a suit in ejectment to eject one party from the land, if I remember right. We also protected some of the land by stretching a wire all around it, and during the last ten or twelve years of my service we had fire wardens during the hot weather all through the timbered tracts protecting them, making reports monthly and looking after the fires.

Q. What efforts, if any, did the Company make to prevent depredations or destruction or waste of the land by persons who were not entitled to take the timber or trespass upon the same?

A. I can't remember any individual instance, but they attempted to stop anything of the kind that they heard of or could see.

Q. What, if anything, did the company do towards leasing the grazing lands, any lands that were suitable for grazing purposes or purposes of that character, during the time that you were there?

A. There was some leasing of lands during the latter part of my term with the Company, but my remembrance of it is not very distinct, as I had nothing to do with that. It was all done by instructions from Mr. Andrews personally.

Q. Was this claim of the Company to ownership one that was open and generally known to everybody, if you know?

Mr. Townsend: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and assuming a state of facts not shown to exist, and calling for a conclusion of the witness upon a question of fact and also a question of law as to the character of the so-called claim of ownership.

A. It was so understood through the country, commonly.

Q. What is the fact, if you know, as to whether prior to the completion of the railroad from Roseburg south to the California state line, the timber lands, that is such lands as were chiefly valuable for timber and were not available or susceptible of settlement or the establishment of homes, had any market or other value? That is, the road was completed over the territory I have mentioned in December, 1887. I refer to the time prior to that time as to whether these timber lands so-called had any market value.

Mr. Townsend: That is objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and assuming that some of the lands were not susceptible to settlement.

Witness: Will you state in what part of the grant?

Mr. Fenton: Read the question and that will indicate it. I say the timber lands, prior to 1887.

(Last question read.)

A. There was no demand on our office for any of the land as timber land. The only land I ever heard of prior to that date as having a market value was the Government even section lands south of the Siskiyou Mountains and east of the Cascades known as the Jenny Creek district, which was bought up by cash entry, a great deal of it, and some by timber claims for timber.

Q. Was that in the eastern part of Jackson County, Oregon?

A. The southeastern and partly in Klamath.

Q. And in the State of Oregon or in the State of California?

A. Oregon.

Q. Then you did hear that some of these lands were entered under the pre-emption law, I mean the even sections in the southeastern part of Jackson County and the western part of Klamath County, known as the Jenny Creek country?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you know what became of those lands? Did you follow it up?

A. They were bought by speculators.

Q. Timber investors?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now were these lands prior to December, 1887, and commonly called timber lands, applied for by any persons desiring to settle upon them the same so far as you know? I mean to the Company.

A. If they applied for the lands we didn't know that they wanted to settle on them. The application didn't have to so state.

Q. I understand, but from your knowledge of the administration of the grant aren't you able to say whether people applied for any of these timber lands for the purpose of going in there and making homes on them or settling?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. As a matter of fact, was there prior to 1887 any movement in these Company lands on the part of the Company or any applicants to purchase for any purpose of any considerable amount?

A. No, except there was a slight movement in the eastern part of Clackamas County.

Q. Clackamas County?

A. Yes, which was nearby here.

Q. That is south of Portland here?

A. And the timber being susceptible, being easily gotten to market; they would go in there and cut that off and could utilize it nearby.

Q. Well, these people that would apply for the purchase of these lands in Clackamas County, were they applying for it or buying it for the timber that was on it, or buying it for the land to make homes?

A. Some of them made homes on it after they cut the timber off, but whether they stayed there any length of time I could not say. They had their homes there at the time, a few of the purchasers. They were purchasers from us.

Q. But you don't know whether these purchasers in a short time sold the lands to mill men and afterwards moved away? You don't know?

A. I have no knowledge of that.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge of any of these people that bought a quarter section from the Company in the eastern part of Clackamas County that removed all the timber from any of those quarter sections that were timbeerd lands when they bought them?

A. No.

Q. As a matter of fact, a few German settlers bought some of these lands in the eastern part of Clackamas County and made small clearings and lived on these lands and sold timber from these lands to the saw mill men while they were living there?

A. Yes.

Q. Isn't that about the way that that was done in small quantities?

A. To my personal knowledge it was done in some few cases. I was on the ground and saw the places.

Q. Was there any considerable number of those instances, or only a few?

A. Not many.

Q. What do you mean by not many, as many as twenty or thirty, or how many?

A. Well, of the lands which we sold in that locality I should not suppose there was more than five per cent of them that did that.

Q. Five per cent of the sales which the Company made?

A. Yes.

Q. Now what is the fact, Mr. Loring, as to whether or not during all the time you were connected with the Company in its land department the Company did not undertake to sell its lands that it did sell at the best price that it could obtain to anyone who wanted to buy without regard to two and a half an acre, or without regard to the area, other than these cases where these pre-emption people had, as you say, in the early days gone upon some of these lands where the Company preferred them? What is the fact as to how that was done?

A. We always got the best price we could.

Q. And did you, or not, sell more or less than one hundred and sixty acres, as the circumstances seemed favorable to the Company?

A. We sold as much as the man was willing to buy.

Q. Is it or not true that the land sales at prices exceeding two and a half an acre and in quantities exceeding one hundred and sixty acres to a single person were generally unknown and kept secret by the Company? Did the Company maintain, or attempt to maintain, any secrecy as to its conduct of its business in this respect?

A. I never knew there was any particular secrecy maintained, otherwise than if an outside party who was not purchasing should inquire what land we had sold and how much to any particular person, we refused to give him information, as it was none of his business.

Q. Well, why did you do that?

A. Simply because it was a matter between us and the purchaser.

Q. If you had other lands for sale in the same vicinity and had sold to John Smith, for instance, one eighty in the same section and John Jones would come in and want to buy an eighty alongside of him and should ask you what John Smith paid for the eighty, would you refuse to tell him?

A. I don't remember, but I don't think I should tell him. I should tell him the price of the land we wanted, but it didn't matter—

Q (Interrupting) Now did you give any instructions to these people who took these contracts for the purchase and sale of the property that were payable in installments, that they should keep still and never show their contracts to anybody, or keep it away from the public?

A. No.

Q. Now, if you had been handling this same body of land and had not obtained the title under these acts of Congress but had bought them yourself without regard to any of the terms of any statute, had a fee simple title, would you have maintained the same policy of telling an inquirer who asked about the price at which somebody else had bought a piece of land, that you could not tell him what it was, or you didn't want to, or you would not tell him? Would you have pursued the same policy with reference to that kind of land as you did with reference to this land grant?

A. I don't know but what I should have.

Q. State to the court whether or not, Mr. Loring, the company, or any of your officers over you and giving you directions, at any time withheld from the public or secreted from the public, as charged in the bill of complaint in this case, in substance, so as to conceal the fact that some of these lands were sold and most of them were sold in excess of two and a half an acre, and some of them in quantities in excess of one hundred and sixty acres?

A. No.

Q. Did the Company, or you, or anyone connected with the Company, withhold from the public records any of these contracts if the parties desired to have them recorded?

A. No.

Mr. Townsend: Were any of these contracts acknowledged?

A. No.

Mr. Townsend: Were any of them entitled to record under the laws of this state?

A. They were recorded, some were.

Witness: I said some were recorded.

Mr. Townsend: Were any of them entitled to record under the laws of this state?

Witness: I don't know."

Whereupon the witness on cross-examination further testified that he has lived in Portland continuously since he severed his connection with the Oregon and California Railroad Company on October 1, 1904, and he was living in Portland during the year 1907 and recalls meeting Mr. Townsend, counsel for the complainant, on August 23, 1907, or about that time and discussed the general subject of his knowledge concerning this land grant with him. The conversation took place in the old grand jury room of the Post Office Building and in the northwest corner thereof at Portland, Oregon. He could not say that Mr. Fulkerson as stenographer took down in short hand the information which witness gave Townsend. His impression is that the stenographer was a woman but he would not say that Mr. Fulkerson was not the person, he does not know. He remembers that the statement was taken down in short hand and that he gave the information from time to time as Mr. Townsend dictated the substance of it to the stenographer in his presence, and that afterwards when the statement was completed, a copy was given to him for inspection in Mr. Townsend's office and he read it over and corrected it.

Whereupon witness examined "Government's Exhibit 116" and further interrogated in reference thereto testified that Mr. Townsend, after discussing one subject with him would then dictate the substance of it consisting of a few lines or in some instances a paragraph and in that way they went through the subject and Mr. Townsend and he did not talk the entire subject first and then dictate the entire statement afterwards. He corrected Townsend, if the latter made an erroneous statement as he dictated. He did not intend to make any statement to Townsend but intended to assent to what Townsend might make if it was correct. Witness gave Townsend the information first and then Townsend attempted to dictate to the stenographer the information which he gave to Townsend and as Townsend dictated witness corrected it from time to time if Townsend made any error. Referring to this statement "Government's Exhibit 116" witness says that it is not the statement which he made for the reason that he swore to and signed two statements under promise that he would have one of them which was never given to him—this statement is not signed.

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

"Q. Now, you have examined this document Government's Exhibit 116; you have read it, have you, Mr. Loring?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have just called my attention to one portion of it which you say you do not recollect of having stated. Please underscore that part, and then I will read it into the record. I erased your crosses, but you know where it is.

(The witness here underscored portions of said document, as requested.)

Q. Now you have indicated that on page 5 of this statement the words "and it was the policy of the Company to avoid selecting as long as possible in order to keep them off the tax rolls," and also the words occurring four lines beyond, "and second, to avoid taxes," were not included in the oral statement which you made to me and that you do not recall that it was included in the statement that I dictated?

A. It should not have been, because it was not a fact and I would not have made any such statement unless it were a fact.

Q. So that your recollection is that you did not make those statements and that those expressions and words were not in the statement that you made to me and which I dictated?

A. They were not intended to be.

Q. I say that is your recollection, that they were not?

A. Yes, because I would not have assented to anything of the kind if I had known that it was there.

Q. With that exception do you say that the balance of the statement is correct, in substance, as the statement that you made to me at that time?

A. As near as I can remember.

Q. You would not now deny any of the balance of the statement?

A. I don't think I should, no.

Mr. Townsend: I now offer—

Witness (interrupting): One minute, Mr. Townsend, further on there, there are some statements relating to mineral examinations and sales which are rather obscure in the wording. I can understand what is meant there, but perhaps someone else might not.

Q. Well, I will give you an opportunity to explain what you meant by that, and that will clear it up. That is not probably material at this time, because not covered by your present examination, but so that you may not be misunderstood you are entitled to explain it, and I will give you an opportunity to, and I don't know any better time than right now. Please indicate the part that you refer to, designating it by page, and make any explanation that you think proper.

A. Mr. Townsend, this is what I referred to. The clause here reads, "It is also a fact that afterwards minerals were discovered, and such lands were sold as mineral lands after being patented." That is not what I would have intended to say. I should have intended to say, "It is also a fact that where mineral lands were discovered such lands were sold as mineral lands after being patented."

Mr. Townsend: I will state that I had that same understanding.

Witness: That I have just stated?

Mr. Townsend: Yes; and the awkward phraseology of it in this statement was mere carelessness in dictating.

Witness: That is the way it looked to me.

Mr. Townsend: I did not understand that you meant to say that they found where there were mineral lands and then got them patented.

Witness: That is the way it reads there.

Mr. Townsend: Well, it is susceptible, possibly, to that construction.

Witness: Yes.

Mr. Townsend: But that is not the way it was intended.

Witness: No.

Whereupon complainant offered and there was received in evidence "Government's Exhibit 116" to which defendants objected as incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant and not competent particularly by way of impeachment, which exhibit is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of Evidence and identified as such.

Whereupon witness further testified that when he became chief clerk of the Land Department in 1884 he found the records of the office were kept at least in part upon plats and part upon tract books and that some of the patented lands had been appraised and prices had been fixed upon the lands and these prices noted only on the plats. They also included lands not patented but no indemnity lands that had not been patented and they related more to the northerly part of the grant than to the southerly part. He has no personal knowledge of the method pursued by his predecessors in that work arriving at these prices except from the books of reports of field examiners. There were some small packages in the office when he went there but most of these had been rewritten into the book to which he has referred, but there was a great deal more examination and appraisal of the lands and fixing prices after he came into the office than before. When he and Andrews were of the opinion that the price which he found in the office, as to any particular piece of land, was insufficient he raised it to its real market value, according to his judgment. He fixed these prices subject to the approval of Andrews for the first year or two, and after that either Andrews did it or he and Andrews did it jointly, after Andrews moved up into their office. That practice continued as to fixing the price of these railroad lands more or less until he severed his connection on October 1, 1904. Andrews practically did it all the last ten years of their connection. No one supervised Mr. Andrews' work and Mills did not give his personal attention to the fixing of the prices of these lands unless Andrews asked his advice and that was not as to all of the lands but as to some particular parcel of land, nor did Andrews ever consult anyone else besides Mills to the knowledge of witness. Witness did not to his knowledge consult anyone except Andrews or Mills, at least he has no personal recollection of doing so and never to his knowledge, after July 1, 1887, did the Union Trust Company take any part whatever in fixing the price at which these lands should be sold. The matter was determined, so far as he knew, by the employes of the Railroad Company and the Trust Company's connection with the sales of the land was limited to receiving the money and joining in the deeds.

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

"Q. Now, I did not quite understand what you meant by this class of pre-emptioners who were listed in this book which you found, and I think you said perhaps some additions were made to it after you came into the office. Let me ask you rather an involved question, but please follow it closely so that I can see what you mean. Do you mean that this book contained a list of those people who settled upon the land before the filing of the map of definite location and before the withdrawal of the lands of the Department of the Interior?

A. I don't know that they settled on it. They made their filings with us prior to that time. I have stated that I don't know if any of them were actual settlers on the land, in direct-examination.

Q. I understand, but they purported to be and filed some sort of a claim to that effect with you; is that it?

A. Yes.

Q. Now did you have regular blanks for them to make those claims upon, to make those filings?

A. I don't remember.

Q. You don't know whether it was a uniform form of blank, or whether they came in in different forms?

A. I can't remember that. They were all entered in this book in somebody's handwriting but ours; whether they were in regular formal application blanks or otherwise I don't now remember.

Q. Well, the substance of them was that they represented that they had settled upon the lands before the lands had been withdrawn, and that they desired to purchase them from the Railroad Company? Was that the substance of it? Or did they claim some right to purchase?

A. I don't know that they claimed any right. I think that they claimed that they were settlers on the land.

Q. And desired to purchase?

A. And desired to purchase.

Q. When you say that they were given preference to purchase, Mr. Loring, isn't this the fact: That at that time there was not a very large demand for those lands, and they were the most likely purchasers and therefore you were naturally brought into negotiation with them first as to the sale of those lands?

A. I don't know about that. All that southern country from Roseburg south, before the maps of definite location and withdrawal nearly all of that land could have been bought and was bought around there for a dollar and a quarter an acre. It was then offered land and it could be bought cheaply, and they did buy it all through there for that.

Q. You mean from the Government?

A. From the Government. You could go into the Land Office at Roseburg and buy day after day; one person could buy as much as he wanted to.

Q. Well then, you do not remember, do you, of there being any contests or any competition between these so-called settlers who wanted to purchase and persons who did not claim to be settlers?

A. Not at that time.

Q. As a matter of fact, if a person who had not claimed to be a settler had offered you more for the land you would have sold to him, wouldn't you?

A. Not if it had this filing on it. When we commenced selling south of Roseburg, which we didn't do until after the maps of definite location and withdrawal, and I think still later than that, when anyone made an application for land we always referred to this old pre-emption book to see if it conflicted with any of those applications before we sold to the one that was a new applicant.

Q. If the so-called pre-emption claimant, which is sufficiently accurate for the purpose of our examination here, if he would give the same price as anyone else you gave him preference, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. Now if he would not give as much as another applicant to purchase, would you still give him the preference?

A. There never was such an instance.

Q. Well, that is what I meant before, that there never was a time when you really had an opportunity to demonstrate whether you would give the settler the preference if somebody else would have offered a greater price. There never was such a time, was there?

A. I don't know of any such instance.

Q. So that you do not mean that you gave these settlers a preference in that sense that you would sell to them for less than you would to anyone else?

A. Not unless they had refused to purchase at the price we offered.

Q. Not unless who had refused?

A. You see, we notified all those parties to purchase when we were ready to sell; all of them; and then afterwards, whether we got replies, or if we did not get replies we sent registered notices to see if we could get answers, and where we got answers we then had the land examined and gave them a price at which we would sell to them. In almost all cases where we had answers they purchased, and some they didn't. But I don't remember of any case where anyone who was not one of these pre-emptors offered to buy any land that a pre-emptor had applied for and had answered those letters which we sent out.

Q. So that this competition between the settlers and the non-settlers never took place during that time?

A. Not as regards those pre-emptors south of Roseburg.

Q. Now Mr. Loring, speaking generally the Company never to your knowledge made any effort to confine themselves, or, rather, to keep within the restrictions of these two grants as to the sale of the lands? I think you testified on your direct-examination to that effect.

A. In what respect?

Q. As to the sale to actual settlers only in quantities not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres to one purchaser and for a price not exceeding two dollars and a half an acre.

A. Only in relation to these pre-emption claimants I have just lately referred to.

Q. Well, did you understand that that was in obedience to these provisions of the grant?

A. No.

Q. So that that was a mere business policy of the company rather than responsive to these provisions of the grant?

A. That is all; thinking that they were there they had the best right if they had made the improvements which they claimed in their applications, we always gave them the preference right; or any settler at any time when he came up and claimed that he had a claim out in the mountains anywhere and he wanted to buy, we sold to him, rather, as against a large timber purchaser.

Q. Was there ever a time when you refused to sell to anybody that came to purchase and would pay the price that you asked?

A. I don't know any case.

Q. You don't know of a single instance during your twenty years' experience when they ever refused to sell to anybody when they came there and applied to purchase and would pay the price that the Company asked for the land?

A. I haven't any remembrance now, if there was any such.

Q. So that, if a man came into the office and applied to purchase a tract of land and offered to pay your price, he did not have to state whether he was a settler or not in order to negotiate a purchase of the land?

A. No.

Q. Do you not remember the fact to be that after Mr. Mills became land agent, and commencing with the years, speaking generally now, from 1890 to 1894, without confining it to any one of those years but at that general time, that the Company, acting through its land graders and timber curisers, and particularly Mr. Britt and Mr. Elliott, went out and blocked out timber lands and rather encouraged the sale of the lands to the purchasers of timber lands?

A. I don't know that that was done, no.

Q. It is a fact, is it not, that during all that time the Company was endeavoring to sell all of the lands it could and for the best price it could; that is true, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. And when this demand for timber lands began the Company encouraged it and promoted the sale to the timber land buyers, did it not?

A. That is the fact.

Q. And with that end in view they employed experienced timber cruisers, like Mr. Britt and Mr. Elliott, and had them go out and block out timber properties that could be operated as one body and then negotiated sales of those large bodies of timber lands?

A. I don't know that they blocked it out especially. When any of those principal examiners went out they would examine a township, or a certain number of townships, but if some of the land was over a different watershed or different drain to that they were not so particular in examining that as they were the main body, but they would complete the township over that divide if they could do so in that season or in that trip.

Q. Well, that is what I meant. You have expressed it more clearly than I did in my question; that they would examine the land with reference to the watershed so that they could report the bodies of timber that could be operated together.

A. That was part of their business; what they went for, in any event, anyhow.

Q. Now do you not remember that one of the first large timber sales that was made was in the Mohawk Valley to the Boothe-Kelly Company, where Mr. Britt went out and examined a body of land there in a given watershed and reported it and through his efforts in connection with yours, perhaps, and the other employes of your office, that sale was negotiated to the Boothe-Kelly Company?

A. Well, he didn't examine that for any one particular watershed. He was directed, if I remember right, to examine all the lands in that locality that he could that season. I don't think he did it in one season; I think he took parts of two seasons to examine that tract in there, and later on it took other parties' time to examine the balance that was further back.

Q. Now, after that body of timber was examined and the practicability of operating it as a lumbering concern was determined, do you not remember that negotiations were entered into which resulted in the sale of a large body of land in that vicinity to the Boothe-Kelly Lumber Company?

A. The Boothe-Kelly Lumber Company,—John Kelly applied at the office and went into the matter with Mr. Andrews and eventually bought a large tract of the land and at another time later on bought some more.

Q. But you do not remember personally whether Mr. Britt at the time he cruised it and examined it had in mind a prospective sale to the Boothe-Kelly people?

A. No, I haven't the slightest idea.

Q. You don't remember? You don't know?

A. Oh, no, I don't know what he had in mind at all.

Q. Now Mr. Loring, your recollection is that the substantial demand for timber lands began in 1894, or about that time?

A. Somewhere after 1894; about that.

Q. There were a few scattering sales, you said, before, but the substantial part of the sales of timber lands in large quantities took place after that?

A. Yes, except this large sale in eastern Multnomah, which was made before our time.

Q. To whom?

A. Neppach, I think.

Q. Oh, yes; and then there was that sale to the Gardiner Mill Company, too, that was made before your time?

A. Yes.

Q. So that down to that time, speaking generally, the conditions of the market was such that there was not much demand for these lands, except by settlers and in small quantities and for a small price? That is true in a general way, is it not?

A. Yes, generally.

Q. And the greater part of the large sales, that is sales of large quantities to single purchasers and for a price considerably in excess of two dollars and a half an acre, took place after this demand for timber land arose which you describe as having occurred about 1894, or a little afterward?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did you ever hear while you were in the office any discussion of these provisions of the grants relating to the sale of the lands other than the discussion with reference to the Eaton case over here in Clarke county, Washington?

A. No; it would not be discussed except between Mr. Andrews and myself and Mr. Ewald, the old assistant treasurer, and the question did not arise except in that Eaton case.

Q. Down to that time it had never been discussed even between yourselves?

A. Not between Mr. Andrews and myself?

Q. Well, between yourself and anybody else?

A. No.

Q. That is what I meant.

A. Not with me; I hadn't.

Q. Then there was no discussion of it to your knowledge?

A. No.

Q. Now is it not true that there had been no public discussion of the question that came to your knowledge?

A. I haven't any knowledge of that.

Q. What I mean is, you knew of none?

A. I hadn't heard any.

Q. Now you do not know why this subject was not discussed, do you?

A. Not the slightest idea.

Q. Have you any other explanation other than that it had not been brought to the attention of the public?

A. I haven't any knowledge why it wasn't brought to the attention of the public.

Q. But it was not brought to the attention of the public, so far as you know?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Did you find in the office any correspondence with reference to these provisions of the grant and the question whether they were enforcible or not?

A. Not that I know of. If there was I didn't search back through anything. I had enough troubles of my own without looking for back records.

Q. Well, of course in your work you would sometimes have occasion to refer to the back records, but at no time did you run across any correspondence of that kind, as you now recollect? Is that true?

A. So far as I know. We had a good many papers in the files and correspondence with the Registers and Receivers of the various land offices, and that matter so far as I saw in those files and looking for information relating to different cases, never was touched on.

Q. Did you personally know of these restrictions of the grant at the time that you entered the office?

A. No.

Q. It was some time afterwards that you learned of it yourself?

A. A long time afterwards.

Q. Did you learn of it before the Eaton case?

A. No, it wasn't called to my attention.

Q. Nothing arose then, either publicly here in Oregon or in connection with the discharge of your own duties down there in the office, which called your attention to these provisions of the grants?

A. No.

Whereupon defendants moved to strike out "Government's Exhibit 116" and the whole thereof as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and as hearsay and as shown to be a narrative of a past transaction and a good deal of such narrative as hearsay.

Whereupon CHARLES W. EBERLEIN, called as a witness on behalf of defendants, being first duly sworn testified that he resides at San Francisco. Was appointed acting land agent of the Oregon and California Railroad Company in the fall of 1904, resigned as such June 1, 1908. Before that time he reorganized all the land grants of the Harriman System of roads, Union Pacific, the several grants in Texas, Central Pacific, Southern Pacific—Southern Pacific Railroad Company and Oregon and California Railroad Company. When he refers to the Harriman System of railroads, he alludes to the Union Pacific, Southern Pacific Company and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, all of these constituent companies. He made a quick trip to the Pacific Coast in 1902, as near as he can place it now, took a glance at things generally in the Portland and San Francisco offices and returned to New York. Later, about the first of January, 1903, he came to Portland and entered into a thorough examination of all the affairs of the Oregon and California Railroad Company land grants and went to California about June 1st and there took charge of land affairs. Subsequent to January 1, 1903, the Oregon and California Railroad Company land grants and Southern Pacific Company land grant and the Central Pacific Railway grant came under his supervision and examination. One of his chief reasons for coming to the coast was to examine into the affairs of these different land grants from a business point of view to see if they could be handled more economically and with greater facility and ease. There were three complete organizations at that time and all of them running on different plans—plans that had been the growth of a great many years. Their books and their blanks, their method of doing business and methods of accounting were all different. Each land department was handling cash and doing an accounting business, and for general purposes it was thought to be wasteful and cumbersome, difficult to understand by people at a distance. It was for the purpose of consolidation and simplification that the work was done, as much as for anything else. On an examination of records at San Francisco he found complications arising from a divided control. William H. Mills who was land agent of the Central Pacific Railway Company, held the title of land agent of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and had a set of tract books in the office at San Francisco. George H. Andrews held the title of acting land agent of the Oregon and California Railroad Company and was loaded with the care and all the work practically of the Oregon and California Railroad Company grants. The divided control, the continued interference by Mills in things he did not know anything about, led to a condition, necessarily, of confusion in the records, and it was necessary in order to get any understanding, and particularly to reform the records, to suspend temporarily the business of the department, and that was done on his order, referring to suspension of business, he means the sale of land, which temporary suspension he ordered in the spring of 1903. There was no regular order of withdrawal, he simply told them to hold up sales while they wrote up new tract books. In furtherance of his general plan to reorganize the land department of the Oregon and California

Railroad Company and to ascertain the status of these grants, the financial situation of the sales and the condition of the taxes, he found out by a pretty extended examination made by himself individually, that a great many errors and omissions had taken place in the tract books of the Company and from any data in possession of the road that he could find, it could not be supplied. Deeds had been issued, warranty deeds in some cases, the consideration taken and accepted and the lands afterwards lost. Very often there had been sales, in a number of instances enough to put him on inquiry, lands had been sold before patents had been issued and afterwards patents had been denied. The whole condition was such that any business man reducing his affairs to order, would have called a halt. He devised a tract book that would serve for all land grants, meaning the three land grants, speaking of the Oregon and California grants as one, Southern Pacific Railroad Company grant as another and Central Pacific Railway grant as another. The same form of tract book was devised to meet all these cases, so that one set of men could keep these different books, that there should be system and order in all these land grants. The condition of the Oregon grants—he does not wish to reflect on Mr. Andrews, who is dead—the control of the grant was not in his sole control, he was subject to very vexatious limitations—the condition that had grown up called for a change of system, which should have been made before it was, to take care of complications in title. For instance, the preparation of that general printed map of

June 1, 1907, was started long before that date, that is the date when it was printed, but in the preparation of that map, his recollection is now, that many thousands of donation land claims, about 10,000, are found within the limits of that grant. There were a large number unsettled and complications arising from resurveys. These donation land claims had been taken up during the fifties and their exterior boundaries did not coincide at all times, leaving a small triangular strip of ground in a great many cases—islands in the Willamette River and elsewhere—a large amount of land which, in the condition of these grants down to very recent times, was not considered worth anything; but it was his business to see that every particle of property that belonged to the road should be gathered up and a record made of it. That was the general condition that existed and had he not come upon the ground at that time, some one would have had to take up that work and prosecute it, simply by reason of the changed land conditions, which were then becoming acute, as they have since become acute. It became necessary to practically examine in detail every single section of land that originally fell to the two roads, to follow the title first through the land offices, and they were abstracted and all the data collated and transferred to new tract books. They made examinations, took the plats—United States Surveyor General's plats,—and in a number of cases those plats have been succeeded by others. There have been innumerable changes in these land grants. These donation land claims were necessarily irregular and there were many thousands of them. There were no quadrangular surveys at the time those lands were taken in Oregon. The donation land claims were not taken according to legal subdivisions. There were no legal sub-divisions at the time they were taken. The lands were settled upon as the records apparently indicate and enclosures made, or temporary surveys made, by settlers under the Donation Act, and afterwards surveys were run out by the Surveyor General to conform to the notification made by the donation claimant. In doing so, donation land claims were taken so as to include the best available land at the time, and they would run the lines up the little valleys of small streams. At the time he took charge of the lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company they were not all surveyed, a large body is unsurveyed. Speaking in a general way without reference to particular detail and referring to "Defendants' Exhibit 259," that is a fair representation of the record title as reflected by the records of the Surveyor General's office and of the United States Land Offices and in checking up the lands that are covered by the act of July 25, 1866, and the act of May 4, 1870, he found that it required, and became necessary in his judgment, to go through all of these public records. He thinks the records of the county were examined at that time for taxes and that they relied upon the deed records of the Company. They did not examine for deeds until at a subsequent time. The work of reorganization and checking up, was begun in the late spring of 1903 and was practically completed in the fall of 1904. The work was pushed to the utmost. Worked as many people as they could. The work was jammed through pretty hard. It was desirable, in his opinion, that there should be a careful examination of the lands lying along the railroad lines by operating officials and traffic officials, to determine what lands the railroad company should reserve for its own operating and traffic purposes. As to that, he means that it was simply good business that at this time the operating officials should say what lands they were going to need for extension of yards, for water supply for engine, for fuel supply. At that time engines were burning wood on some of these divisions south. As to traffic, his experience on the Union Pacific and in the east had shown him that with the filling up of the country, the extension of traffic would call for grounds at central shipping points for stockyards and things of that kind. He turned over to the operating and traffic officials a list of lands which he had prepared co-ordinately with this other work, lands classified by section, township and range and also by counties, and they entered opposite the specific tracts what the land was to be reserved for and such reservations were entered on the tract book. In the fall of 1904 the work had practically been finished, excepting some general cleaning up, and he removed all the records, files and property of the land department to San Francisco and consolidated it there with the Southern Pacific Railroad Company. He does not mean consolidation in a legal sense of the term, but simpy it was kept in the same office, under his supervision as land officer, and the books and records of the two grants, that is the Southern Pacific Railroad grant and these two grants of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, were kept by the same set of men and the records were kept separately. There could be no consolidation of records. He removed the physical custody of these records of the Oregon and California Railroad Company appertaining to the land department to the same set of offices in which he was also placing the records of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, having charge of the grants in California, and he allowed the same staff of clerks to work upon the respective books of these land departments. Everything was kept entirely separate. The blanks and correspondence of the Oregon and California Railroad Company were even printed on green paper to distinguish at all times and keep from confusion. The Southern Pacific was on yellow paper. The reservation of 100,000 acres of timber lands for the future use of the Companies, in the operation of the Oregon and California railroad was made around near the railroad, convenient to transportation, such as for the manufacture of ties and bridge timbers and things of that kind, for the purpose of protecting the railroad against any possible contingency that might arise and to prevent the railroad, and incidentally the public, from extortion on the part of large timber interests; and that was afterwards found to be most necessary. These 100,000 acres were down around the Umpqua River, he cannot give the exact boundaries, though the lands were reserved and the plats thereof were all filed in the New York office when he left there.

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

Q. Now, what, if anything, did you do after you had thus re-established the records according to your plans, re-established the tract books according to your plans, and removed the offices of the land department of the Oregon and California Railroad Company to San Francisco, towards the restoration of the lands to sale in the usual and ordinary way, and why was that not consummated prior to April 18, 1906, when the fire in San Francisco occurred? State fully and generally, in your own way.

A. I notified my superiors in 1904, I think before I took the property, the books and records away from Portland, that we were ready; that the affairs of these two grants had been thoroughly reorganized and placed in a condition, a statement of the condition of the grants, the acres patented and unsold, and unpatented and unsurveyed, the whole thing was sent on, with the information that we were—I was ready at least, to proceed with the sales, or turn the grants over to a successor, which was the agreement with me when I consented to take the acting land agency, that I was to be relieved just as soon as this thing could be brought about. Now, as to the rest of your inquiry, in the fall of that year, I think it was the winter of that year 1904-5, before the first of January, though, because I fix the first of January by a forestry congress held in Washington, to which I was the delegate from the Southern Pacific Railroad Company. I was there at that time, so it was before that time that I fix it. I was called to Portland—I don't know now just how or why, or whether it was on a request from Mr. Cotton—but at any rate Mr. Cotton surprised me by telling me that he had understood that I had given out that the road was going to resume sales, and was ready to, and I told him that I had, and as far as I knew, there was no reason why they should not go on at that time. "Well," he said, "you can't do it. The taxes have not been paid for years on some of it, and there are tax complications there. The records are in such shape that you could not go on and sell land, because you don't know but what a large part of this grant has been lost."

Q. Who was and is Mr. Cotton?

A. W. W. Cotton is, I think, he was in those days the attorney of the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company.

Q. Was he or not also the adviser of the general officers that were in charge of the operation of these railroads in Oregon?

A. Why, as I understood it, you were the counsel and adviser for the Southern Pacific lines in Oregon; but as an explanation, as near as I can place it, how Mr. Cotton came to interest himself in this matter, was that there had been about that time, I think before that time a change in the tax management of these properties, both the O. R. & N. and the Southern Pacific lines in Oregon, and Mr. Morrow, J. W. Morrow, I think his name is—

Q. Yes.

A. Was appointed the tax agent or commissioner of all of these properties, the Harriman properties in Oregon.

Q. Isn't it a fact, Mr. Eberlein, that J. W. Morrow, who had been the tax agent of the O.-W. R. & N. Company, or the O. R. and N. Company it was then, was placed in charge of the tax matters of the Oregon and California Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific lines in Oregon, as a joint officer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that Mr. Cotton was the legal adviser of the O. R. & N. Company, and in that way came into official relation with the tax department, or with the officer handling the tax department of the Oregon and California Railroad Company and its properties in Oregon?

A. Mr. Morrow, as I recollect, I understood had for years, or for some time at least, been the tax officer of the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company, reporting directly to Mr. Cotton, and that when a change was made in the tax matters of the Southern Pacific lines his jurisdiction was extended to cover, and he still reported to Mr. Cotton.

Q. Now, then, at that point, after you had received this advice from Mr. Cotton with reference to the state of the tax affairs, tax matters, or tax titles affecting these land grants in Oregon, what, if anything, did you do towards investigating this matter, and what attorneys did you employ, and for how long did this work continue?

A. The tax situation had not been considered by me as important, as I understood that the taxes had been paid on all patented lands. I had, in entering the data, looked into that matter somewhat, but not at all carefully, because I assumed that that had been done. Mr. Cotton informed me that that condition was very bad; that undoubtedly a lot of lands had been lost. How Mr. Cotton knew I never have been informed. At his request I had employed his uncle, who is since dead, to assist in this reorganization here, and he was representing me while I was necessarily absent below, as I was a great deal of the time.

Q. You refer to Mr. William Wick?

A. W. W. Wick. Now, Mr. Cotton made it appear to me that the situation was very bad.

Q. What was the title of Mr. Wick's employment? What was he called?

A. Oh, he was a clerk; that was all. He had no title at all.

Q. But when you were absent, he was your representative?

A. He was here, not in charge, but simply in the reorganization of the records doing the record work and following up these matters of title in the different offices, and collating the stuff and putting it in shape that it might be entered in the tract books. And Mr. Cotton then advised me that it would be necessary, by reason of the peculiarity, as I recollect his advice, the peculiarity in the laws of Oregon, that there should be an examination of the tax records of all the assessors' offices in every county in which the grant lay in Oregon, for a period of fifteen years, as to each tract of land, and he advised the appointment of W. C. Bristol to take charge of that, and to organize a force to go on and make this examination, and that was done.

Q. Now, this reference to the tax laws of Oregon, at that time do you recall whether it referred to the fact, that under the laws of Oregon, then and now, lands were required to be assessed in legal subdivisions, or by proper descriptions, and that they might be assessed to the owner, if known, or if not known, to an unknown owner?

A. Yes, sir. We found that there was a large amount of land assessed to unknown owner. Some of it had gotten away.

Q. How long were your attorneys and tax agents and special employes in that work, engaged in this work of going through the assessment rolls and the tax matters for the purpose of removing any delinquent tax sales, or clearing up the title that might be involved by reason of anything of that kind over the period of fifteen years?

A. I can only speak for the work that was done under my own jurisdiction, for which I was responsible.

Q. Well, that is what I mean.

A. That investigation was a very long-winded affair—necessarily so by reason of the condition of tax records in some of these outlying counties, which was exceedingly bad, and it took over a year. My report, as I refresh my recollection from some correspondence I saved from the fire, shows that I turned over the results of that investigation to Mr. O'Brien on, I believe, the 30th of March, 1906. I think it appears in there, just prior to the fire, with a request that he should take it up and place it in the hands of attorneys to be cleaned up.

Q. Now, did you also cause to be employed Angell and Fisher, attorneys and searchers of records, and competent men of this city, in connection with this work?

A. Yes, sir. Angell and Fisher were employed by me, and they reported first to Mr. Bristol; and afterwards Mr. Bristol dropped out, and they reported to me as long as that investigation was in effect.

Q. Now, as a matter of fact, Mr. Eberlein, after your attorneys and your special representatives had made this investigation of these tax matters, you found that there wasn't very much trouble with the lands on account of tax matters, didn't you?

A. I paid very little attention to it after that; it dragged along, as I was informed from time to time—it dragged along for several years in the hands of Mr. Cotton, through a man by the name of Kollock, I believe.

Q. J. K. Kollock?

A. Yes. But the final outcome of it all was that a very small amount of land—some land was lost by that, and there was a considerable body of land that was subject to small—oh, unpaid taxes in some cases, tax title which were redeemed, and all that; but take it altogether, for the amount of time involved and the amount of money spent, if we had known what the land was, we would very much better have let it go.

Q. Now, as the result of that investigation, you found that, on account of the peculiar assessment laws, that is, assessing lands perhaps to a man who had purchased the lands under contract—

A. Yes, that is what I mean.

Q. And he had neglected to pay the taxes as required by his contract, that these lands had become delinquent, and that when the contract was forfeited, the company had overlooked the payment of taxes until probably tax sales had resulted, which required redemption? You found some instances of that kind, didn't you?

A. Oh, there were a number of instances of that kind. There were also instances of where land was deeded and the company continued to pay taxes.

Q. That is to say, where lands had been deeded away by the company, and the company's tax list had included those in a few instances, and they were being carried on the tax roll of the company?

A. Yes. Things had been run in that respect very lax in the department. For instance, the land agent would send out a list to a county, a list of lands, and ask for extension of the current taxes, and the county officer in charge would find himself too busy, or otherwise engaged, to comply, and he would simply send back the list with a memorandum of the total amount; and instead of following the thing up, Mr.Andrews, who was then in charge, and a good man, but inclined to give everybody the benefit of the doubt, in his good intentions, he would simply make up his voucher for the full amount, and send it down; and so we found, in a number of cases, they had the receipt for taxes in a county for a year that didn't specify a single description of land and in that case there were sales made out of that surreptitiously; and by your advice, I know I made a redemption in a case of that kind.

Q. You refer to the Garbutt matter?

A. The Garbutt matter?

Q. Over in Curry County?

A. Yes.

Q. We redeemed in that case by paying the penalty and the purchase price and interest and a small consideration above, did we not?

A. Yes, sir. We paid enough.

Q. Now, didn't you find also this situation: that many times, or in some instances, if not many, the county assessors would assess the entire reported area of lands owned by the company in his county, in bulk?

A. Yes.

Q. As so many acres, say 200,000 acres, and it would be assessed in bulk, without any particular description of any particular quarter section on the assessment roll, and the taxes would be charged against the entire valuation, and when the company came to pay it, it paid it in bulk? You found that in some instances?

A. That followed. There was every kind of a variation of unbusinesslike methods that appeared in that investigation.

Q. That was the result of the improper assessment by the assessor, in the first instance?

A. Yes, sir. It seemed to be impossible to control the situation.

Q. In the later years, however, the lands were carefully listed and assessed by legal subdivisions, as I understand?

A. Oh, yes, I think so. It took some time to get them into businesslike shape.

Q. Now, you say that you reported the completion of this matter about March?

A. May I refer to this correspondence here to clear up that date?

Q. Well, just refresh your memory by looking at that correspondence. About March, 1906?

A. Well, I find that this was being done all through March. For instance, I find here a letter to Mr. J.

Kruttschnitt, who was director of maintenance and operation, advising him that I had sent to Mr. O'Brien, the Vice-President of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, a list of Congressional lands in Douglas County, Oregon, which has been corrected to date. That is the list I told you I had made contemporaneously with that map.

Q. That was reservation for railroad purposes?

A. No—well, that as for general purposes. In this case I sent it to him showing the tax situation. It was all printed, and we had a large number of copies, and we sent them out. I have also sent him a summary of the tax investigation, for use of the tax commissioners and attorneys employed to clear the company's title to these lands from tax complication.

Q. What is the date of that letter?

A. That is March 30, 1906. There are other letters, though, that appear a little earlier than that. They were sent in as fast as they were completed, each county by itself. Here is one in Lincoln and Washington counties. Here is a letter to Mr. O'Brien of January 26, 1906. There is one for Multnomah and Marion Counties, of January 10, 1906. I think the last went in about the 30th of March, 1906. We kept them going. There are some in December, 1905—December 26, 1905; December 13—and some even earlier than that. Anyhow, it shows that the utmost dispatch was had, and nothing was held up.

Q. Now, Mr. Eberlein, before this tax investigation was entered upon in this specific and general way, at the suggestion of Mr. Cotton, by reason of his belief that the records were in such shape as to justify the detailed tax search that you have referred to, had you taken any steps to announce the resumption of sale of these lands that were to be sold, and, if so, what notice or publication did you cause to be made?

A. Why, the first intimation I gave out that they would be for sale was in 1904.

Q. Yes, I understand, but you afterwards, in a talk with Mr. Cotton, found that you should make search. Now, did you give any notice of intention to resume sale in 1904, in the latter part of that year?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do in that respect?

A. Mr. A. L. Craig was at that time the general passenger agent of the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company. Mr. Craig was interested in the settlement, of course, of all this territory, and we had frequent talks about the condition, and he was urging very strongly that lands that could be settled upon should be thrown open to settlement, and while there was very little land in this grant that would be available, still any movement at all would probably stimulate people to come in and buy land here, and settle.

Q. You mean lands outside of the grant?

A. Oh, yes, outside of the grant, in private ownership. So in 1904, right in that winter, that fall rather,

I inserted a page advertisement in a pamphlet in which this matter was called attention to.

Q. Do you remember what that pamphlet was or what its uses were?

A. Well, it was one of these highly colored flamboyant pieces of railroad literature. I don't remmeber its title. Lurid colors and lots of adjectives, I remember, that is about all.

Q. Sending out to eastern people?

A. Yes, all over, for general distribution everywhere.

Q. Advertising the promotion of immigration, etc., in this territory?

A. In this territory.

Q. That was published about what time?

A. In the fall of 1904 is my recollection.

Q. Then after this tax matter went under way, did you take any steps to discontinue your advertisements to sell?

A. Well, that had gone in. Mr. Cotton called my attention to that, and considered it a very grave mistake, and it did embarrrass me a great deal. There was no definite offer made in it, but it was calling attention to the conditions here, and that the sales would be resumed in the near future. Of course, the resumption of sales rested upon orders from elsewhere.

Q. Now, what happened shortly after March 30, 1906, when you say you had completed practically your reports on tax matters?

A. On the 18th of April, 1906, the earthquake and fire in San Francisco occurred, which destroyed everything that the land department owned in the way of records and correspondence. The only correspondence saved, I think, was about ten boxes of files like those you see here, partially charred and of very little value.

Q. Now, what happened to the tract books that you had prepared?

A. They were destroyed—had to be entirely renewed.

Q. What other records were destroyed, now? Just state, in a general way, what other records were destroyed belonging to the operation of the land department of the Oregon and California Railroad Company.

A. The tract books, deed records, sales records—every book and scrap of paper, the whole of its contracts, I think, none of the outstanding contracts, executory contracts which the company held at that time numbering several hundred—they were entirely destroyed, and the record had to be renewed.

Q. I will ask you to state, Mr. Eberlein, whether or not the company, by its acting land agent, Mr. Andrews, and his predecessors in office, and you as his successor, kept large leather bound books, in which were extended the duplicate of every executory contract made by the company, and upon which a marginal reference was made to assignments that might be made from time to time, and whether, when you came into the possession of these records, you did not find several volumes of those which had been kept in due course, showing the duplicate contract retained by the company of all these sales?

A. You mean the record of it?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir, there were such records. It was part of the record of the office to keep a sales record.

Q. Do you remember how many volumes there were from the earliest date down to the time you took charge in October, 1904?

A. No; but I remember that there were about seven thousand contracts issued up to that time.

Q. Do you recall the fact that one volume of these records, or two of them, were used and produced in court, and went to the supreme court of the state of Oregon in the case of Neppach against the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and that this large volume was filed as an exhibit in that cause, and was in the supreme court of the state of Oregon, and that it contained several hundred of these contracts at the time this Neppach contract was recorded and entered.

A. I remember very well, now that you recall it to my mind, of that record being taken from the office to be introduced as testimony, as an exhibit in that Neppach case.

Q. And do you recall that Mr. O. F. Paxton, who was the attorney for Mr. Neppach at that time, had access to all these records, and that this volume was in the circuit court here, and also in the supreme court of the state of Oregon, and afterwards returned to you with the file marks of J. J. Murphy, Clerk, by A. S. Benson?

A. I remember the return and the file marks very well.

Q. Now, didn't that contract book contain several hundred contracts in addition to the old Neppach contract upon which that suit was based?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Now, what became of all those record books?

A. Every record book of every description that was in the department on the 17th of April, 1906, was destroyed. That is my information in regard to it, or so badly charred as to be of no value at all as a record.

Q. Well, now, how did you restore these contracts and get any trace of them, and how long a time and what amount of work was it to do that? What difficulties did you surmount?

A. That makes the back of my head ache to think about it.

Q. State in your own way.

A. We found ourselves, the week following the fire, without any records, without any means of doing business. The contracts were gone. It was not expected that they would be recorded. The company never recorded duplicate originals, unless it were for the purpose of a suit, or something of that kind.

Q. Executory contracts for the sale of land in this state are not required to be put on record, are they?

A. No, so I understand.

Q. Never have been?

A. Never have been. Nor were they in California.

Q. Recurring again to the employment of Mr. W. C. Bristol, was he not also employed to take over from my office at that time the collection and adjustment of delinquent contracts upon which there had been payments in default for a number of years?

A. Oh, yes—tried to make Billy earn his pay.

Q. Do you recall—in fairness to Mr. Cotton and to yourself—the fact that in September, 1904, Mr. Fenton was seriously ill?

A. I remember it very well.

Q. And that he was temporarily absent from his office for a period of about two months?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you recall the fact that he did not actively resume business until about the first of May, 1905?

A. Well, I remember that he was absent for some time, and was reported seriously ill.

Q. And was absent by permission of his superior officers?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Do you recall also the fact that Mr. A. L. Craig, who was general passenger agent of the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company, was the joint general passenger agent of the Southern Pacific line in Oregon at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now just state to the court in your own way, in a general way, how you succeeded, if you did succeed, in finally reproducing the record evidence, or some record evidence, of some records upon which the company could safely proceed to administer these grants, and collect its outstanding executory contracts, and proceed with the performance of the same by making deeds from time to time as they were discharged or paid.

A. As I have already testified, in the making of these new tract books and records, I at the same time made up a classified list of all the lands of the company in these grants, and that list, in the case of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, was printed on green paper, long sheets, classified by section, town and range, and also by counties. It made a pile of paper comething like three feet high. That list I had sent to Mr. O'Brien to assist him, to give him information as he might want it of what lands the company owned.

Q. He was then vice-president of the Oregon and California Railroad Company?

A. He was then vice-president, and that list was classified as to patented, unpatented, selected, unselected, unsurveyed lands, and was a transcript of the books, at the time that it was made. It of course changed every day. In the office that list was kept even with the record every day, changes made, as they were made in the record they were also made in this list; but of course in the case of a list being sent, as this was to Mr. O'Brien, no change was possible. He was not advised when we made a deed or took patent, or lost land, or anything of that kind. That list also had a classification by counties, and by section, town and range, of all sold lands subject to unpaid contracts, and opposite, as I recollect it, the description the number of the contract was given, but that was all the data there was. Now, when the fire came along, Mr. O'Brien notified me that he had the list.

Q. Where was Mr. O'Brien's office at that time?

A. Here in Portland.

Q. Had been all the time?

A. Had been all the time. And to that one circumstance alone, we owe that we were able to begin operations within six months from the time that the fire took place, and give notice of the sale of such lands as we were able to sell at that time, which would be agricultural or grazing lands. We could not sell timber land, because our cruising reports for about forty years had been entirely wiped out by the fire.

Q. Now, these contract numbers shown on this list would give you, you say, the number of the contract.

Would it also give you the name of the vendee?

A. Gave no other information except the description of the land covered and number of the contract. Of course, if we had anticipated any such thing as occurred, why, we would have put more information, but all we could do in that case was to examine the records of the counties. The examination was made—had to be made again of the United States Land Office records. They had to be abstracted again so as to show the change of land between the date of this list and the date of the fire, at the time the examination was made, to show the changes in regard to patent or loss of land, or other complication—governmental complication. Then we had to examine every recorder's office in every county in which any of the grant lay, in Washington and Oregon; and then we also examined the deed records and the contract records for every year since 1866 in all those counties. In that way we were able to supply a lot of missing information. For instance, we reorganized or restored our deed record for one thing, but it so happened that, in a very large number of instances, the deeds given in years past had not been recorded. In a great many cases it arose from ignorance, and in a great many cases from intention.

Q. You mean people who had obtained deeds from the company would retain them off the records?

A. Keep them off the records, yes. And from the currency that was given to the catastrophe that had happened to us, a search began to be made by the people among their papers, and very often they found that they had mislaid them, very often they had been lost, and there was an immediate demand, and a very insistent one, for deeds, which we were wholly unable to act upon, and it took months to make these examinations of county records. In that way we found that in some cases an inconsiderable number, but still it all helped, that the vendees had recorded contracts, which, of course, were not entitled to record, but still had been accepted and recorded. Well, that helped us somewhat. But the struggle to restore missing information took us all over the United States and down into Canada, and we had to send everywhere. The people holding contracts, in the vast majority of instances were very kind and agreeable, and sent their contracts in.

Q. Allowed you to make copies of them?

A. To allow us to make copies of them and restore our records. And only in a very few instances was any attempt made to take advantage of our condition. In some cases it became known that we had lost our duplicate contracts, and the vendees holding them committed the offense of altering the provisions in some cases—very few, though.

Q. Well, in fairness to the public generally, you would say that there were only a few rascals like that?

A. But very few. The public generally responded, and did everything they could to assist us.

Q. Now, about how many would you say were there of those unrecorded deeds, which happened to go upon the record after the fire, just roughly speaking?

A. I couldn't make a guess.

Q. You recall there were some instances?

A. Oh, there were a number of instances; they kept cropping up for several years—demands for deeds on the claim that they had lost.

Q. I understand, but you spoke about some deeds being in existence after the fire, in the custody of the grantee after the fire, that found their way to the record. Now, there were not very many, were there, of that kind?

A. I cannot say. Of course, they would slip their deeds on the records of the county where they were and that would not become known to us, nor would we be posted. We probably caught them when we made our abstracts from the county records.

Q. Now, as to the deeds which were lost, and for which they desired new deeds, in those instances, where the grantee made a bona fide showing and submitted an abstract of title showing that he was entitled to a new deed, did the company regularly execute deeds of further assurance?

A. Why, that is a matter that I left entirely in the hands of the law department for the grant, and took the advice of the attorneys. In those cases they satisfied themselves as to the bona fide character of the applicant, and as to whether he was entitled or not. In some cases I understand the suggestion was made of a friendly action, and an order of court that would protect the company.

Q. Yes, in some instances they brought a suit to restore their title or establish the existence of the muniment of title that had been lost, and in other instances the company made quitclaim deeds.

A. I believe at the time I left all connection with the land grant in 1908, I think in all the grants that were under my control something like 20 tracts of land remained which we had been unable to discover the grantee.

Q. Yes, to discover who was the grantee.

A. Yes, who was the grantee.

Q. Now, this brings the matter down to what period of time? About when did you succeed in getting your records restored, and to be in condition for a second resumption of sales of these lands?

A. There was an immediate and fierce onslaught on the office before the remains of the city was cool, for a sale of lands—timber lands.

Q. By whom were these applications? What class of lands were applied for? Who were the people that were wanting these lands?

A. Well, the Booth-Kelly Company was extremely active and insistent. Weyerhauser Timber Company wanted land right off quick.

Q. Well, were these people that were applicants for the purchase of lands intending settlers, or were they timber investors?

A. Oh, just investors in timber—speculators.

Q. Now, when were you, with your records thus destroyed and finally restored, in condtiion to proceed with sales in the regular and orderly course, outside of timber lands, I will say, if there were any such lands?

A. The fall of that year the rumpus and noise had grown to such an extent—

Q. 1906?

A. 1906, the summer of that year, that in the latter part of August, I think, I notified my superiors that we could act upon such applications, as we had information or could get it quickly, and we also gave notice at that time by circulars to all that we would sell agricultural lands such as we might have, or grazing land, just as soon as the application could be examined; and as to timber land we were not in a position to sell timber land until such time as we could restore the necessary data upon which to act intelligently, and that was being done as quickly as possible.

Q. You refer to the cruising of the timber lands?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, pursuant to this notice that you were prepared to receive applications from persons desiring to purchase any of such agricultural lands or grazing lands as the company might have, and that upon investigation of these tracts, if they were found to be such, that a price would be given, could you say to the court approximately about how many such bona fide applications were received and acted upon before you left the company's service in 1908?

A. I don't remember any that were acted upon.

Q. I mean that were received of this class that intended to apply for agricultural or grazing lands, excluding now timber.

A. I don't remember any.

Q. Now, isn't it true, or is it true, Mr. Eberlein, that whatever applications were made for the purchase of lands, were applications to purchase lands that were chiefly valuable for timber, or in some instances, in Jackson and Josephine counties, lands that were thought to contain mineral prospects, by miners and others of that type?

A. On examination of these so-called agricultural applications, they were found to be in cases mineral; in almost all cases—in the vast majority of cases, simply timber, and in the remainder of the cases water power.

Q. Now, isn't it true, or is it true, Mr. Eberlein—you may state in your own way—that the agitation for a forced sale, or to force this land on to the market, began in the preliminary campaign for the election of the legislative assembly of 1907, which took place the first Monday in June, 1906?

A. Yes, sir, it began in the summer of 1906, and the fact that we were helpless was disregarded, and brutally so, by a great many people down in these valleys.

Q. Do you recall the fact that in Jackson county, the campaign in that county was made by the two political parties, from which Senator Mulit was a state senator who afterwards introduced and secured passage of senate joint memorial 3 in the legislative assembly of 1907; that the canvass in that county took the form of an agitation against the Oregon and California Railroad Company because it would not restore to sale these so-called agricultural lands—mineral lands in Jackson county? Do you recall that agitation?

A. I recall that agitation you refer to, and I also recall the fact that this agitation was made the basis of a congressional campaign—as to whether that year or later, I do not know—in which one Hawley campaigned on the basis of this agitation.

Q. Do you remember that there was some action obtained from chambers of commerce and commercial bodies, and other influential bodies, calculated to—calling upon the legislative assembly or congress to take action?

A. As near as I could get at the facts, and I believe they are true, the threats that emanated from particularly Booth-Kelly Lumber Company that we would be forced to let go, and all that sort of thing—the agitation started, I believe, at Eugene, the headquarters of that concern, and was regularly worked up among these commercial bodies all down through the valley, and I remember having correspondence with a man by the name of Eggleston, I believe, who was secretary of the Rogue River Valley something or other association, demanding immediate restoration to sale of all the lands in the grant, and I simply wrote him, and gave him the exact facts and conditions as they were.

Q. Do you remember that Mr. A. C. Dixon, represting the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, was an active promoter of this agitation in 1906 and 1907?

A. Yes, sir. He also came to San Francisco and made demands to see records and all such things that did not exist at that time, and did a good deal of talking. He was also present at the hearing of the land committee of the house of representatives at Washington, held, I think, in 1907, and was present there with Mr. John W. Blodgett and Arthur C. Hill.

Q. Who were they?

A. They were officers and large owners of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, and Mr. Dixon was there representing, and did a great deal of talking, and as I recollect it admitted openly before the committee of the house that his concern had taken the lead, and had secured and fomented this agitation, and that was the understanding conveyed by him to that committee and all before it.

Q. He made a statement, did he not, before the committee that was published as an official document?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, who were the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company? That is, what interest had they in all this matter?

A. The Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, when I first began to examine into the affairs of this land grant, were very active in the manufacture of lumber, and they had mills—large mills, I believe, at Eugene and at Springfield, and Wendling, I believe at that time. I may be mistaken as to just those names, but that is my recollection. They were also acquiring very largely timber down through their section of the country, and they had acquired, as I discovered at that time, directly from the railroad company about 70,000 acres.

Q. That is from the Oregon and California Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir. The reason for my examination into their affairs particularly was the bitter complaints that were made by other large timber buyers and owners, of the favoritism which they claimed was extended by the railroad company to Booth-Kelly Lumber Company. They certainly did have some exceedingly favorable contracts. They bought land with timber on time, with very little cash payment, and at such prices which even at that time created a credit upon which they could raise money. All those things were known all throughout the lumbering circles on this coast and in the East, and many complaints were made in regard to it; and it is their large holdings, and their determination to get the inside track and keep it (as they had it at that time so far as railroad lands were concerned) that made them very insistent, and so much so that they rather assumed to dictate the affairs of the Land Department.

Q. Did they or did they not insist to you upon sales of further lands to them, to fill out their holdings in Lane County and elsewhere?

A. Yes. Their purchases from the railroad company had been made in such a way that I thought it necessary to call the attention of my superiors in New York to the system which they had pursued. For instance, in sales of 20,000 acres, they would go through three townships, and take a string of forties down through the center, in some cases, of a section, take a piece off another section, and so on down through the entire purchase, and in that way they beat down the value of the remaining timber, and they then came in immediately on the heels of it, and would say, "Now, here is the rest of the timber in these townships, and nobody will want it, nobody can use it but ourselves. We will give you $2.00, or some such price, an acre for it."

Q. Were those applications favorably entertained by you?

A. No, sir. I believed that the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company had all the timber at that time that was necessary to a profitable operation for a great many years to come, and that disposing to them would only foster a monopoly, and that in the end it would result in curtailment of product, and it would be an injury both to the state and the railroad.

Q. There has been some complaint made here that the Oregon and California Railroad Company, through the dominance of the Southern Pacific Company or otherwise, had created a land monopoly here, and that this land monopoly had interfered with the development of Western Oregon. Now, referring to the timber lands, Mr. Eberlein, I would like you to state to the court, from your knowledge and experience and observation, and from actual transactions, why it was desirable and necessary for this company to reserve about 100,000 acres of these timber lands for its own use, for ties, bridge timbers, etc.?

A. I believed that the railroad company should protect itself while it could in regard to necessary supplies of timbers and ties. It had this considerable body of timber, which was fast disappearing from its ownership, and that I could see, from having run out the purchases that, for instance, the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company had made, and the Hammond & Winton purchases, that were afterwards crystalllized under the Weyerhauser interest and some other interests that I could mention, and having followed the thing out through county records to see whether these same large interests were not consolidating the even numbered sections in their holdings, I found that to be the case. That was my own investigation, and in that way it appeared to me that the timber of Western Oregon was gradually becoming consolidated into a few large holdings; that the result might be very detrimental to the railroad company, and of course to the people of Western Oregon, by reason of increase of rates which must necessarily follow increas of operation cost; and for that reason that 100,000 acres of timber was set aside to be a perpetual reserve for the protection of the railroad company from extortion. Now, that was the reason for that reservation, and that reservation itself for that purpose is evidence of the intention of the railroad company to depend on that, but not to retain the ownership of the remaining timber land.

Q. Now do you recall the circumstance following the fire where ties were one price, and where the tie was immediately advanced by timber manufacturers in Western Oregon?

A. They were jumped, as I recollect it, from about 22 or 23 cents to 63 1/3 cents over night, and the threat was that they would go to a dollar.

Q. Who were the large timber holders? I mean, who were manufacturing railroad material in Western Oregon at that time?

A. Largely Booth-Kelly Lumber Company; and the railroad depended upon them largely—had to—for its supplies.

Q. Did you ever examine the rating of Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, to ascertain their financial rating, and what it was?

A. I don't recollect of having made any examination of that kind, though I think that the ownership—the control, I should say, passed from the individuals who were in control when I first came here, to this Bay City or Menominee crowd, of Blodgett and Hill, Michigan operators.

Q. That is to say, the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company stock, and the control of that was disposed of by John F. Kelly and R. A. Booth, or a majority of it, and passed to Michigan timber investors, who now own the property?

A. Yes, sir, I think so.

Q. Do you recall the fact that Mr. Hawley, that you referred to, was Honorable W. C. Hawley, a professor in the Willamette University at Salem, when he was elected to Congress from that district?

A. Why I don't remember. I thought he was a preacher or something of that kind.

Q. No, he was Professor of History in the Willamette University, a Methodist institution at the capital of the state, and was elected to Congress from that district.

A. He was elected to Congress, I know. I believe he is still an incumbent.

Q. Do you know, or can you say whether or not he was affiliated with and a political associate of Senator Booth, who was one of the controlling men in the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, about this time?

A. I understood that he and Mr. Booth were very friendly. They were both of the same faith, and prominent in those circles.

Q. The same political party?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Hawley is the present Congressman who has been rather active in the procurement of the passage of the resolution of April 30, 1908, under which this suit is being prosecuted?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And also somewhat active in securing the passage of what is called the "innocent purchasers" bill, by which a million acres of these lands that have been passed to these large holdings, have been confirmed in these holdings upon payment of $2.50 an acre, by stipulation of the attorney general?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You speak of the number of acres approximately that the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company acquired from the Oregon and California Railroad Company. How early were these first contracts made, in a rough way, would you say?

A. Subsequent to 1898, I should say. That is my recollection.

Q. And how late would you say was the last contract? I am not asking you to give an accurate time, but approximately and as your memory serves you?

A. The last contract made directly by the company, it seems to me was made about 1902.

Q. Do you recall, Mr. Eberlein, about the total holdings of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company of timber lands outside of the 70,000 acres which they acquired from the Oregon and California Railroad Company in that vicinity?

A. I had an examination made of the records of those central counties there—Marion and Douglas and Lane, and probably as far down as Jackson and Josephine, to find out what they had acquired. I knew what they had from the Railroad Company, which amounted to about 70,000 acres at that time. I found a large number of assignments of small contracts—railroad contracts, contracts to individuals or small concerns—and I found also the transfer to them of a large number—I say a large number—a considerable number, as I remember it, of timber entries that had ripened into titles—understand I don't mean that there was any collusion, or to suggest anything of the kind, but what on the record appeared to be perfectly proper purchases by them from individual holders who had taken title directly from the Government, or from the railroad of such, and it amounted to about 100,000 acres, as I remember.

Q. That is including the 70,000 acres?

A. Yes, including the 70,000 acres.

Q. Now, you found, did you or did you not, by this investigation, that the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company had succeeded in obtaining title to numerous or several homesteads down in these timber belts?

A. Yes, sir, I think so.

Q. And others were under the Timber and Stone Act, do you think?

A. I think so. I had them, I remember, platted in different colors to show the different class.

Q. Now, I wish you would state to the court whether there is any other, or was during that time any other large manufacturing timber company in Western Oregon south of Salem, other than the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company?

A. I don't remember of any.

Q. I mean outside of the mills on the coast.

A. Yes. So far as mills within this grant are concerned, I do not think there were any of any size. There were a few that had bought timber, a small amount of timber, but they were inconsiderable in size. My recollection is that Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, in their operation, had taken up, bought the lands of some small mill proprietors, and shut down the mills, consolidated in their large milling operations at these different places on the Willamette River—the upper river, at the head waters. And I don't think there were any. The railroad company depended largely, had to depend largely on them for its supplies, and at the time of the fire they immediately shut off those supplies and forced the railroad company to establish mills of its own.

Q. Where were those mills established?

A. Those were established at different points—I cannot tell you just now, but in the neighborhood south of Eugene.

Q. At Marcola, in Lane county?

A. Marcola, yes, that is one place, Lane county. I think that was run by Fisher Brothers. We established mills at different points down throughout the grant, for the purpose of supplying ties and timbers.

Q. They were not commercial mills, were they, at all?

A. Not at all. The operation of lumber business is ultravires, as I understand, and not possible for a railroad company; and those mills are operated at a serious loss, simply because the railroad company could not take advantage of the market—could not sell its seconds and stuff of that kind, which make a margin of profit in commercial mills. And those mills were established and operated simply because Booth-Kelly and other operators refused at once to furnish the railroad company with necessary supplies to keep its lines open, except at most ruinous prices, which could not be considered.

Q. That is to say, the mills on these lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company were operated for railroad purposes, to manufacture ties, bridge timbers, and other material necessary for renewals and betterments of the lines, and were not operated for commercial purposes.

A. They were not operated for commercial purposes at all, and were operated simply by reason of the company being forced to operate them, by the action of Booth-Kelly largely, and other mills too; but Booth-Kelly was the principal supply, and it was immediately cut off.

Q. Now, you spoke something about Mr. Dixon being at Washington at this particular time. Have you any personal knowledge of his being active before the legislature of the State of Oregon for 1907, or do you know anything about that?

A. Only by hearsay. That is all.

Mr. Townsend: The Government objects to all of the testimony of this witness as to the circumstances leading to the adoption of the Joint Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Oregon in February, 1907, addressed to Congress and the Executive Officers of the United States, and also leading to the adoption of the Joint Resolution of Congress, approved April 30, 1908, directing and authorizing the institution of this suit, and also the recent act of Congress authorizing a compromise of the so-called purchaser suits; also all testimony relating to the action of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company and other lumber companies with reference to the sale of ties and other building material to the Railroad Company; also the efforts on the part of these lumber companies and timbermen to purchase lands from the defendant Oregon and California Railroad Company; also all other testimony implying that the agitation resulting in the institution of the present suit was brought about by or on behalf of these timber men and mill operators by Congressman Hawley, Senator Mulit, or anyone else, for the purpose of enabling these timber men and mill operators to acquire a monopoly of the manufacture or sale of lumber in Western Oregon or any part thereof, upon the ground that the same is hearsay, incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and was elicited from the witness by questions calling for mere conclusions and arguments and not for facts within the knowledge of the witness. For the purpose of avoiding the incumbering of the record objection was not made specifically to these questions at the time they were propounded, under agreement with counsel that the general objection could be made at the conclusion of this line of testimony as to the whole thereof and it being understood that the same shall be considered as having been interposed as to each question and answer as well as to the whole thereof. Unless you have some objection I am going to adopt that general objection to avoid the incumbering of this record.

Mr. Fenton: None at all. I was going to say that counsel for the defendants desires to say that the defendants do not admit that the statement by Government Counsel is a fair statement of the facts as testified to by the witness, and that the objection made by counsel is in a sense argumentative, and the defendants desire the record to show that they object to the statement as not in accordance with the testimony disclosed by the record, the record showing that the witness was present and participated personally in many of the matters about which he testified and that the record will speak for itself. We make no objection that counsel reserved his right to object at this time.

Mr. Townsend: Yes, but I want the record to show that this objection shall be considered as being addressed to each question specifically.

Mr. Fenton: Oh, yes; it may be so understood.

Mr. Townsend: And each answer.

Mr. Fenton: It may be so understood.

Whereupon witness further testified that as to the sources of his information, or information received from others as to the general character of the unsold portions of these grants involved in this suit, he would just say generally in the beginning that a large part of the grant had been cruised and examined and reported on and the reports covered not only the character and the amount, the condition of the timber, but also the character of the land. They attempted to report upon the general character of the land as land. These reports were made during a period of time from 1870 down to the time of the fire (April 18, 1906) and so far as he could judge from the character of the reports that were on file when he took possession, the reports were made by men who were in the employ of the Company in the capacity of cruisers for years together, which would argue that they were well made and consecutively made in a great many cases. As to the cruisings done under his own control and direction, he could speak of those. As to his personal examination of the grant he cannot say that he has been over the entire grants, but has been through the grants in different places at different times from 1902 down. In February and March, 1903, he made a trip through the upper part of the grant, Clackamas, the upper part of the country below, back through the grant, back out of the valley; that is where the lands of the company are. He had been across the grant, across the Cascade Forest Reserve through the Company's lands on horse back where there were no trails, looking after the character of the timber and the land, everything connected with it. He has been in different parts of the heavily timbered part of the grant, the valuable part of the grant, repeatedly through it; that is, in the southern part of the State. He has been a land owner and a rancher down in Klamath County adjoining the grant for the last seven years. He knew something about the character of land and what it will produce and its capacity for production. He has dealt in land for a good many years in one way or another. He is not a timber cruiser, but has been through these grants in different places to examine the stand of timber and the character of it. The cruising done during his control of the grant was by men formerly in the employ of the Company when he came there and they had been for years in that particular branch of the business. N. E. Britt was the chief cruiser and F. A. Elliott was under him. Both left the service while he was still in control, several years after he came here. A. W. Rees, he believes is still in that capacity with the Company, and then there were quite a number of others whose names he does not remember, who were taken on or off just as the occasion would require. He has been through the timber lands in the grant owned by the Company in the eastern half or part of Jackson County, Oregon, and in the western part of Klamath County, Oregon, known generally as the Jenny Creek country. He made reconnoissance of the Klamath River Country once and reported on it from Klamath Falls down Klamath River. He has never been to Coos Bay. Never in that part of the grant and has not been on the water shed west of the Coast Range. In California he has been immediately below the line and knows the general character of the country. He has been in the Cascade Forest Reserve in the eastern part of Multnomah and Clackamas Counties and went through that property and the intermediate lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company pretty thoroughly once with Mr. Pinchot. He has been in the Cascade Forest Reserve clear down to 48 south, somewhere down in there, very near the State line; that is, to fractional section 41, which is the Oregon boundary. He has been through the southern or lower end of the Cascade Forest Reserve and the lands of the Company within the indemnity limits and abutting on the west of the indemnity limits on the east side of the grant adjacent to the Forest Reserve and through that country repeatedly. He is not familiar with the western side of that part of the grants. He has not been in Yaquina Bay through Lincoln and Benton Counties. These are not very valuable lands and he never took the time to go near them. Has not been on the granted lands of the West Side land grant. Does not know those lands (Referring to grant of May 4, 1870). The general character of the land that he has been over in the grant of July 25, 1866, the northern part of that grant, the extreme northern end of that grant, that is about east and southeast of Portland, there is some very heavy timber. It is rough country and no large agricultural possibilities at all. As to the south end of that grant the land—practically all the unsold land—lies in the mountainous country or rough country, very much broken. The best part of the timber lies in the extreme southern end of the grant; that is the sugar pine country in Jackson and Klamath counties, but that country lies high, very dry and is cold. There are practically no possibilities in there, for extensive cultivation, because the land is not suited for it, the character of the land is thin and sandy. It will be a forest country always, and in his opinion it would not be susceptible to cultivation on account of the climatic conditions and soil, rock, etc., even if the timber were removed. He cannot speak, except in a general way, of the lands in the eastern part of Josephine County, east of the railroad and immediately north of Jackson county, having skirted that country east of the range. The general character of this land is timber and wood land very rough and broken. The land in the eastern part of Douglas County on the Umpqua River and the streams that lead into the North and South Umpqua, is a good timber country. It is all timber, practically. The valleys are narrow and it is valuable chiefly for timber, so held to be now. The timber lands in Lane County on the head waters of the Willamette River, Coast Fork, Middle Fork and the McKenzie are good timber lands, but in a rough country. what there remains. There are small patches of land all through the country, isolated tracts here and there, where, if the timber was removed, the land would be susceptible to agricultural purposes, but the country is full of land, the Willamette Valley is full of land, covered with brush now, that is very much better for cultivation than any lands that he knows of, in this grant and more accessible to transportation.

If for no other reason the stumps would be prohibitive to the adaptability of this land for agricultural purposes, because of the character of the growth, especially the fir growth which is the principal growth of the country tributary on the slopes into these interior valleys on the west of the summit of the Cascades and that by its resinous character, its long tap roots, as everybody knows in this part of the country, are exceedingly hard to extract, and it costs from fifty to one hundred and fifty dollars, that has always been his information, to clear the land of stumps and there is plenty of land to be had in these interior valleys for less than that price. Well on toward 200,000 acres of this grant is rough, is absolutely barren, rock slopes, without any possibility of growth of any kind. He would call it chaparral down in the lower country. The land that he speaks of has not even chaparral growth and would not even be goat pasture and there is no value at all to that land that he knows of. You could not settle a colony of flies on there and get sustenance for them. He thinks it would not be valuable for a homestead or preemption if it were to become public land. It is just waste land, that is all. He can give only a general description of that land. He cannot give the particular section, township and range descriptions. He can only give the general locations. The company is still paying taxes on this land, they were when he was there, such as have been surveyed. Shortly after the fire, the Weyerhauser Timber Company made an application to purchase all the timber in certain townships, he cannot name them now but they are in the townships from the state boundary north, part lying particularly around Pokegama, which is their center. They own about 12,000 acres of land there, which was originally purchased from the Railroad Company by a man by the name of Cook, he believes, which passed to Hervey Lindley, who built that little line of road from Thrall Junction on the Southern Pacific main line north into and across the state line into Oregon, with a terminus at Pokegama, where Lindley had some kind of a mill operation; and before this time the Weyerhausers had acquired that little railroad and that timber holding of Lindley. They made an application for all the land in these townships, aggregating about 50,000 acres, as he now recollects, and they wanted to buy it right off, and his belief is that they offered about $5.00 an acre for it. Their application was entertained and it was pushed very vigorously by the Weyerhauser people. This came to him through Mr. Calvin; then there was a great deal of correspondence back and forth between himself and Mr. Kruttschnitt, who took a hand in it and Judge Cornish. Witness protested against taking any action at that time, because the company was wholly unprepared. The company had no cruisings of that country at all and could not act intelligently, and it was the heaviest timber in the grant; being the sugar pine belt and practically the only body of sugar pine that the Railroad Company had. The pressure was very heavy, and finally he got an order to have the land cruised and have it done with the greatest possible dispatch, which he did. He ordered Mr. Rees down there and the company got as many cruisers, that it could depend upon, as possible. They established two, probably three, camps in that district and cruised it that summer and late in the fall of the same year, 1906. He found that they had asked for just the nucleus of that country; with the 50,000 acres that they wanted, there was tributary and depending upon it, about 70,000 acres more than would either have to go with that sale or else become of very little value, because it would be worthless to anybody except the Weyerhausers; that is it could be sold for very little. So that was included. He submitted the results of that report and the whole negotiation flattened out and was never resumed. That is to say, when his final report was turned in, the application to purchase by the Weyerhousers, was denied. There never was any negotiation for the sale of the grant entire, to any one that he knows of, but he cannot say that there were no negotiations with Weyerhausers or any one else during his time, that he was not cognizant of, but he believes that he knew everything of the kind that was going on. The company never made any attempt to sell the grant as a whole to anybody, and there never was any application that he knows of, to buy it as a whole. He does not recall anyone who ever applied to purchase so large a body of land as 50,000 acres, other than the Weyerhauser Timber Company referred to. There were some small sales made after the discontinuance of sales in 1904, up to the time he retired from the management and control of the companies—to timber people. Some small sales were made to timber people. He refers to some small timber sales that were made subsequent to April, 1906. These were sold to the Southern Pacific and by that Company were sold, he thinks, to Cole Brothers, and to Fisher Brothers, at Marcola, and other small mill men. The sale of these lands to these parties in connection with the mill manufacture of lumber for ties and bridge material, was part of the means the company was obliged to resort to, to keep the lines open during that period of the rebuilding of San Francisco. Those mills were entirely additional, to the mills that the Southern Pacific Company itself established. These small sales referred to represent just a few sections; a half dozen sections would cover it. The letter of August 16, 1905, addressed by him to Peter F. Dunne, General Attorney, Southern Pacific Company, being Government's Exhibit 115, had nothing to do with this case. This is the letter that was published and it has nothing to do with the Oregon and California lands even remotely. That letter and the correspondence going before and after between himself and Mr. Dunne and other officers related entirely to a proposal at that time to transfer the lands unsold of the Southern Pacific Railroad grants in California to a land company and the occasion for that suggestion at that particular time was the fact, that the issue of bonds of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California, dated in 1875, matured, he thinks, the 1st of April, 1905; at any rate they matured that year. A refunding issue was in process of being put out to refund these matured obligations. The old issue of 1875 was a lien upon all the lands of the Company, that is the Southern Pacific Railroad Company. It had nothing to do with this company in suit, and it became necessary in drawing the new deed of trust to secure refunding bonds to include the usual provisions in regard to the security, the land grant security for these bonds and the manner in which it should be handled, the same thing that is usual and customary in such instruments. During the discussion of the deed of trust the suggestion originated, to divorce entirely these lands from this refunding issue, to turn the lands over when they were relieved from the lien of the old issue into a land company. It had no relation whatever to the Oregon and California Railroad Company grants in Oregon. Something is said in that letter, which stated that, "Mr. Chambers has undoubtedly looked this matter up. He makes no citation to Department Decisions but I think this matter can be brought about by conference with the officials at Washington, who are just now inclined to be friendly to us." D. A. Chambers was an attorney of the Southern Pacific at Washington, attended to all departmental matters referred to him by the land department and other departments. The whole question involved and the one that was submitted to Mr. Dunne and myself, was a practical one as to how or whether these grants could be transferred by the Railroad Company, the original grantee, to a grantee of the Railroad Company, and whether such grantee of an entire grant would be subrogated to all the powers and privileges as to the selection of indemnity for lost lands enjoyed by the original grantee under the acts of Congress. The question was a complicated one, necessarily for one reason, because of the intense complication that had arisen in that particular grant, those two particular grants to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, out of suits brought by the United States, a number of them, in what is known as the Overlap Litigation. The United States had made an alternative grant to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and to the old Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company. That was one suit out of which, or one condition of facts, out of which, grew several suits. In that case the lines of general location of those two roads when first projected were very near coterminous; they crossed and recrossed; and although the Atlantic and Pacific never did construct a foot of road in California, still some of those old alternative rights survived and were cut off finally by action of Congress in 1886, he believes. However, the Government of the United States set up the most unusual charge that notwithstanding the grant was forfeited, the Southern Pacific had constructed and had earned its grant, the United States insisted that it step into the shoes of the old Atlantic and Pacific grant which never constructed, and therefore brought a suit and finally prevailed. He merely cites this to give an instance of the character of the complication that existed at this time and that is referred to in this letter. That involved the practical question whether or not an assignee of a grant under one of these acts of Congress would be recognized as the beneficiary of the grant in the readjustment of claims in relation to the payment of fees for lands, selection of indemnity, and so on and so on, and obtaining patents to lands that were not patented, and whether they could surrender base lands lost and take indemnity, the same as the grantee company. By the term "friendly" he did not mean anything improper. He never was mixed up in anything improper that he knows of, certainly not with the United States in regard to land matters. The question there involved was simply this: The facts mentioned were notorious throughout all the departments, beginning late in 1904 and from that on during the whole Roosevelt administration, and he thinks, the present administration has inherited that tendency. The Departments at Washington were exceedingly hard to deal with. He means that when one would go to talk with the head of a department about the ordinary business of the department—he knew it was so in his case—before he could get a hearing, the attorney for the department and two or three witnesses, had to be brought in to hear what you had to say. He thinks —the suggestion seemed to him that being an official of the Harriman lines, one was under suspicion, and the heads of the department evidently thought that somebody might report it to the head "Bull Moose" and he would go and toss them. The whole air was charged with suspicion. It was hard to deal with them. It was hard to get anything through the departments. He does not care to go into details very much except to clarify the statement. The condition of affairs existed that he speaks of. In January, 1905, the first Forestry Congress was called in Washington and the railroads were all invited to send delegates, and they represented a large, as they did in these grants, a very large interest in forestry matters, but in that case there was not a single representative of any of the Harriman lines that was asked to participate; they were shut out and snubbed in every way; and it only emphasizes the unfriendly situation in which he found the affairs at Washington—the Government officers at Washington. During 1905, the Reclamation Service, in January, 1905, and the head of the Geological Survey made very insistent appeals to him for assistance, in getting certain things through the Oregon and California legislatures in regard to the Klamath Irrigation project. They had spent $90,000 in making surveys and examinations, and had to get the co-operation of the states of California and Oregon in releasing and conveying such rights as the states had, in these interstate lakes to the United States before that project could be put on its feet. That is one of the things. This finally resulted in the passing of acts by both California and Oregon, granting the rights of the states to the United States. They did everything they could to assist them at that time, and it was to the work done by the Railroad Company that the Reclamation Service and Geological Survey owe their success in that matter wholly. During that year Mr. Pinchot came to California, just about this time, just before the time this letter was written, and he made a formal request, that the Oregon and California Railroad Company should deed by absolute conveyance to the United States all of the lands granted or claimed by the Railroad Company in the southern end of the Cascade Forest Reserve in Jackson and Klamath Counties, Oregon; embracing probably 400,000 acres of the very best timber land in the grant, carrying all the sugar pine, the best belt of sugar pine there is, in Oregon today, and that was to be turned over, and the consideration offered to the Railroad Company for such a proposed transfer, was the privilege of cutting off its own timber on those lands whenever and subject to such conditions and regulations as the Forestry Bureau of the United States might impose. The object of Mr. Pinchot, as Chief Forester, in securing this land, was to make a permanent forest reserve, and when the timber was cut off it would be valuable for reforesting. The elevation of these lands is 5,000 feet and over, and agricultural crops would be very limited in that region and he doubts very much whether one could raise profitably any crops in that particular country. That proposal was made to him verbally by Mr. Pinchot in San Francisco and was afterwards renewed by him in New York, and was afterwards renewed in writing to him, and he supposes the papers are in the department now. It was renewed by Mr. Pinchot and made by him, as an official of the United States, as he was then Forester of the Department of Agriculture, formerly of the Department of the Interior. But what he had reference to in that case was simply, that the friendly disposition of these gentlemen was so much in contrast with the notoriously unfriendly attitude, not of the gentlemen personally because they are very courteous gentlemen, and he has had the very most pleasant social relations with them, but as officials they were very, very hard to deal with, and their attitude at that time was such a strong contrast to the atmosphere in which they lived in Washington that it was worthy of comment. He alluded to the changed situation when he used the word "friendly," and if they wanted something out of the Company, why that was the time to get what the Company needed. At that time the Company wanted to have recognition of the department that this grant would be assignable and that the holding company would have the same rights that the land grant company had as to selections and obtaining patents, and things of that kind; perfectly proper in every way and a business proposition. Referring to Government's Exhibit 113, the Company was not in a position to entertain applications to purchase from any of these gentlemen, and he has explained heretofore the reasons why the Company was in no position to offer these lands for sale, or to sell them. These letters, Government's Exhibit 113, are all requests for transportation, trip passes and things of that kind. They are just the common run of stuff, of that kind, with which the departments are always flooded. When he received these applications, he notified them that their applications would be examined as soon as possible, and they generally were examined at once and if found to be agricultural or grazing, as they were in a few cases specified to be, he notified them, the Company would enter into negotiations with them for sale. Upon investigations of the applications to purchase these particular lands, they were usually found to be timber, sometimes water power, sometimes mineral, but mostly water power and timber.

"Q. It is alleged in the Answer that 'Said Oregon and California Railroad Company has at all times openly and notoriously claimed,' and so forth, to be the owner of the lands in this suit, has at all times caused the said lands to be protected by field agents who traveled over and protected the same against depredation and waste, has at all times paid the taxes levied and assessed upon and against the said lands, and in divers other ways openly and notoriously proclaimed and asserted and has been in possession of the said lands, and that large and different portions of said lands were reduced to possession and improved from year to year by persons holding leases thereof for grazing and other purposes from the Company, and other portions of lands were reduced to possession as right of way, station ground, depot ground, and the like for railroad purposes of the Company. Now what would you say as to the facts in respect to that matter? What was done, or did you do, towards carrying out and protecting the possession of these lands during the time you had charge or control of the same?

Mr. Townsend: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and assuming that the lands were reduced to possession of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, which is not disclosed by the evidence.

A. The lands were absolutely owned and controlled, and so always understood to be, and we paid our money, protected it at great expense against fire and depredation, paid the taxes, an increasing burden of taxes, exercised every incident of ownership in regard to real property.

Mr. Townsend: The answer is also objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and consisting of mere conclusions of fact and law and not a statement of facts from which the ultimate facts of possession may be deduced.

Q. State to the Court whether or not the Company while you were in charge took such possession of these lands as their nature and character permitted?

Mr. Townsend: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and calling for a mere conclusion and an opinion of the witness as to what constitutes possession, and a conclusion of the witness upon the question of fact as to what extent the lands could be reduced to possession and in no way establishing the rule as to actual possession within the meaning of the Oregon statute relating to suits to determine adverse claims to real property.

A. We took possession; we had possession, continuous possession, during my time.

Mr. Fenton: Just read the question. I don't think you got the question, Mr. Eberlein.

(Question read)

A. Yes."

Witness further testified that his official relations with the Oregon and California Railroad Company were discontinued June 1, 1908. He made an official report or statement of facts relating to the land grants of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, the successor in interest of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, East Side, and the Oregon Central Railroad Company, West Side, on or about that time. On one of those pages he gives a list of the authorities, sources of information. It is a bald statement of facts, reproduces the acts of Congress and the legislature, the correspondence of the Interior Department and other sources, reproduces the articles of incorporation of the different railroad companies, and was intended to be a full statement of all the facts bearing upon the case. The facts concerning the physical character of the grant were from all reports and from his own knowledge, the number of acres, the acreage and condition thereof, from the letters of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, reproduced in full in that compilation. The letter of Binger Herman adjusting and settling the grant is reproduced in full. This report is based upon the records of examinations of the lands in the grant by particular tracts made during all the years prior to April 18, 1901. All the information that was in the department or could be gathered was summarized in the facts given.

"Q. Well, I notice at page 70 of this report, which I will show you presently and which I will offer for identification, a statement that the report of your field agents shows 1,496,640 acres covered with timber and unsuitable for agriculture, and 703,652 acres of grazing land unsuitable for agriculture, and 7,320 acres that might be used for agricultural purposes at the present time but which acreage consists of small isolated tracts, many of them remote from transportation and settlements and scattered in small bodies in different places throughout the whole extent of the grant along creek bottoms and on hill sides. Now from what sources of information outside of your personal knowledge did you obtain that information?

Mr. Townsend: That is objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and being an attempt to introduce in the record this self-serving statement of the witness while an officer of the defendant and obviously made after the passage of the Act of April 30, 1908, as a part of the preparation of the defense in this case.

Mr. Fenton: No; it was made May 1st, 1908.

Mr. Townsend: Well, the Act was passed April 30th, and had been pending six months before and Mr. Eberlein was there. I know; I saw him myself.

Mr. Fenton: You don't think he made it that night?

Mr. Townsend: No; I think he made it anticipating that the act would go through.

A. From the field force of the department, men employed who had long familiarity with the grant having reported on the grant for a great many years.

Mr. Townsend: The answer is also objected to upon the ground that it now appears that the statement was made upon hearsay of others.

Q. Were these reports reports of your employes?

A. Yes sir.

Q. And were the reports made in the usual and ordinary course of business by your men in the field, thus employed, on which you relied as an official of the company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you act upon them as correct?

A. I did.

Q. I notice on page 69 of this official report of yours of May 1st, 1908, statement of lands in various counties, embracing Oregon and California Railroad Company land grant assessed for taxation as shown by record of county assessors for year 1906, and showing assessors' classification of Oregon and California Railroad Company lands as tillable and non-tillable. From what sources was that table prepared?

A. From the official statement of the officers of the various counties. I think the sheriffs make those statements in this state, do they not?

Q. The Assessor.

A. The Assessor?

Q. Yes.

A. Anyhow, the official whose business it was; in his official statement. I think they are on file in the department still.

Q. I notice in this statement that the acreage of patented unsold lands of Oregon and California Railroad Company assessed as tillable is only fifteen acres and the balance all assessed as non-tillable?

A. That is the fact.

Q. For that year?

A. For that year.

Q. That was 1906?

A. That is the assessment of 1906.

Q. That was about two years before the resolution of April 30th, 1908?

A. Yes sir.

Q. Now I notice a map attached to this report of yours of reduced size. What do you have to say about the accuracy of that map, if you know?

A. Well, the map was made up under my order and shows the amount of land that was excepted from the grant by process of law.

Q. What it purports to show is a correct delineation of the grant?

A. Of the grant and the character as to certain things.

Q. Now to whom were these reports submitted?

A. To the different officers of the company, primarily to Judge Cornish. I left for Europe immediately, severed my connection entirely with the road, and that was the last work of any magnitude I did for the Company, and I think copies of it were sent to different—

Q. (Interrupting) To the officers of the Oregon and California Railroad Company?

A. Yes, sir, I think so; to the attorneys.

Q. What have you to say as to the correctness of that report in the statement of ultimate facts based upon your knowledge and the knowledge of the records upon which it is based?

Mr. Townsend: That is objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and a mere conclusion of both law and fact, and necessarily hearsay.

A. The report as it stands is all but a very small part official records, as to which there can be no question.

Q. As to the balance?

A. As to the balance it is simply bald statement of actual facts and figures; there can be no other deduction —there are no deductions in that report; it is simply a statement of actual figures and facts.

Q. Well, such of the facts as are stated and such of the figures here as relate to the acreage of grant, and such matters as that, upon what are they based?

A. They are based upon the actual books of the Company and they are corroborated by the official statement and settlement of the grant by the Honorable Binger Herman officially, and his letter, his official communication is reproduced in full in that.

Q. As to the sales and matters of that kind that would appear in the records of the Company and as to the reports of cruisers and things of that kind upon which you base the acreage of timber and of grazing and of non-agricultural lands, as I understand that is based upon the official reports made to you by these cruisers and others?

A. That is true.

Q. Do you recognize this document which I now hand you as your official report made May 1st, 1908, as identified, and about which you have been testifying?

A. This is one of the copies, one of the duplicates or triplicates, or quadruplicate copies; I don't know; and it is exactly the same as the original, excepting my signature which appears to be omitted from this copy.

Q. It is a typewritten duplicate of the original which you signed, and is an original in itself, excepting that your signature is not on it?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Townsend: That is objected to as calling for a conclusion of the witness on a question of law and evidence.

Witness: That is my copy that has been in my possession ever since it was made."

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence said report prepared by the witness and marked Defendants' Exhibit 309, to which counsel for complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, based upon hearsay, and a mere statement of conclusions of fact and law, and is a self-serving declaration, prepared by one of the officers of the company for the purpose of this defense and that there is no evidence accounting for the loss of the original documents upon which the statement is based. Whereupon the same was received in evidence and was marked Defandants' Exhibit 309 and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified herein as such. Whereupon the witness further testified, referring to the number of outstanding contracts, in giving the name of the grantee or vendee, that the names of the vendees were practically unknown the morning after the fire, and it was very difficult and a long drawn out operation to ascertain the addresses and names of the vendees of a number of these sales. He took a man to New York in May, 1906, and put him to work in the office of the Union Trust Company making abstracts of all data that the Union Trust Company had regarding sales and collections from 1887, the date of their mortgage down. He went further than that and made arrangements with the officers of the Farmers Loan and Trust Company, which was the trustee under former instruments, and got what information it had, and he scraped New York clean so far as he could find anything that was there and he discovered a great deal of information in that way. Whereupon the witness upon cross-examination further testified that he has none of the files of the Oregon and California Railroad Company relating to these land grants,—nothing relating to the Oregon and California Railroad grants. He has this statement of his and if there is anything that he has, of course he will go through it and let counsel for the Government have it. He formerly lived at St. Paul in Minnesota and became acquainted with and knew Judge Cornish a great many years. Judge Cornish was appointed by Judge Sanborn as Master in Chancery in the receivership proceedings involving the Union Pacific Railroad about 1893, and that receivership continued about five years until about 1898, and in the discharge of his duties Judge Cornish naturally became familiar with Union Pacific affairs. Cornish became vice president on the reorganization of the Union Pacific by Mr. E. H. Harriman and served in that capacity until his death. Witness resided at St. Paul about 15 years, until about July 1, 1901, when he entered some form of employment in connection with the Harriman lines. His original employment was assisting the Vice President in regard to land affairs of the Union Pacific. His first employment was to assist Judge Cornish in connection with the administration of the land department of the Union Pacific, and that was his first official connection with railroad land grants. He had more or less to do with the lands of the old St. Paul and Sioux City grant in the matter of handling them as the trust officer of the old St. Paul Trust Company. When he first became associated with Judge Cornish his official residence was at St. Paul. He was then employed on some special work by Cornish in connection with the Union Pacific land grants. He had several different employments practically at the same time, but it had to do with lands largely, referring to his employment beginning July 1, 1901, which included the Union Pacific land grants. Most of his work was done there outside of just digressions when he would be sent out to make special reports or something else, like the irrigation possibilities of the Snake River Valley. He made a long examination and report on that in the winter of 1901 and 1902, but returned to the land grant business. Judge Cornish was then stationed at New York City, but rarely visited St. Paul after 1901, he was there occasionally but not very often. He had conferences with him almost always at New York. Sometimes he met him on his way west, or when he came to Omaha, but that was very rarely. He left St. Paul when he went to the Union Pacific employment. On July 1, 1901, he went to Omaha. He was confidential adviser of Judge Cornish and the New York office and his work there in a general way was the same as his subsequent work in the west. That is, to make recommendations as to the reorganization of the land department and the reformation of some of the methods of handling its business, and that was the general character of his work at Omaha, making reports and recommendations. He remained at Omaha from July 1st, 1901, until some time in 1902, when he first came to the Coast. But this trip was one for the purpose of general observation, and he returned to Omaha after that trip. He returned to New York, but didn't have much to do. He was detailed on his return from that trip to Omaha to take up and examine into the affairs of the Union Pacific Coal Company, and barely got started on that work when he was sent for, to be consulted about coming out here. That was some time in 1902. He had practically finished the work he was sent there to do with the Union Pacific land grant. It was sometime in 1901, or 1902 that the ownership and control of the Southern Pacific was acquired by the group of financiers known as the Harriman System, and the same group became interested in the affairs of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and Mr. Harriman became president of the Oregon and California Railroad Company. Harriman became president of some of the constituent lines of the so-called Southern Pacific System, but he does not know as to all; he was president of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, he does not know as to the Central Pacific, but understands that he became president of the Oregon and California Railroad Company. Judge Cornish was never an officer of the Oregon and California Railroad Company to his knowledge, but Judge Cornish gave attention to the work which witness was doing and witness reported to him. Whether Judge Cornish had official connection or not with all of the land grants constituting the so-called Harriman lines, he does not know or remember as to some of them, but as to having immediate supervision and being the man between witness and Harriman and to whom the reports went and someone to whom he reported in New York on these special missions and which he was sent out to fulfill, Judge Cornish was that man. That included work with reference to the Union Pacific grant, the Kansas Pacific grant, the Denver Pacific grant, the Central Pacific grant, the Southern Pacific Railroad grant, and California and Oregon grant and Oregon and California grants; and he may say the grants in Texas. But there is a distinction to be made as to the Union Pacific proper land grant, Union Pacific Railroad land grant, Kansas Pacific grant, and Denver Pacific. In that case Judge Cornish was the vice-president of the Union Pacific Railroad, in direct charge officially. He was president of the Union Pacific Land Company, which took over and held title and managed and disposed of all of the lands of the Kansas Pacific and Denver Pacific grants. In these other cases, he was not officially connected with the subordinate companies, to his knowledge. But waiving the question of his official authority, Judge Cornish actually supervised the work of all the grants in substantially the same manner. Supervision is the right word, because he did not exercise the same authority by any means over these grants here on the Pacific Coast that he did over the Union Pacific grants. Judge Cornish did control the actions of witness upon questions of policy, and did give witness instructions on the Union Pacific, but he never thought he had the same amount of authority on these grants on the Coast, including the land grants involved in this suit and he, Cornish, never exercised it. Judge Cornish always waited to hear what Mr. Harriman had to say about it. So really Mr. Harriman was the man who directed it. That accounts for long delays that were suffered here in the rehabilitation and other things, because there was no one who would act offhand as they did on the Union Pacific. Judge Cornish acted as a sort of go-between for witness and Mr. Harriman. There was no practical purpose served in this roundabout way of getting his recommendations to Mr. Harriman. It was an unfortunate occurrence, that was all. He does not mean to be understood that Judge Cornish did not exercise any authority at all, but he does say that Judge Cornish did not have and did not attempt to exercise, the same authority on these grants on the Pacific Coast that he did on the other grants, for the reason of lack of official connection. It seemed to witness that almost any specific question that he presented to Judge Cornish in connection with the Oregon and California Railroad grant as to which he deferred action until Judge Cornish consulted with Mr. Harriman, was about everything that amounted to anything of any importance; that Judge Cornish was a great fellow to sidestep things; in this connection it may be well to say that Mr. Kruttschnitt exercised or assumed to exercise about as much authority over these land affairs as Judge Cornish did, and it was the practice of witness,—he was very often at a loss to know how to proceed and he made reports, as will be found, to Mr. Kruttschnitt at the same time that he made them to Judge Cornish,—and between the two stools he generally fell down between them and affairs were hung up here for that reason. Now as to particular instances of this, he does not call to mind any particular one at present. There was a reason why Judge Cornish should not sidestep as to the Union Pacific grant the same as he did with reference to the grants in question. Judge Cornish was the vice president and by direction of the board in charge of land affairs of the Union Pacifc Railroad Company, and was also the president of the Union Pacific Land Company. He was the man that was vested with absolute and final authority in those matters and he acted promptly in those cases; so much so that in a little over a year's time they thoroughly reorganized these grants and put them on the market, and in three years' time they were practically sold out, referring to the Union Pacific grant. On these grants in question the trouble was, from the very start, to get authority for anything. If there was anything that looked as though anybody had to have authority, why, it would go to Judge Cornish and he would discus it with Mr. Kruttschnitt and the latter would pass it back and then sometimes they would jointly go to Mr. Harriman and have a talk. Harriman was president of the Union Pacific at the time Judge Cornish was appointed to this office. He does not think that Mr. Harriman disturbed himself very much about the Oregon and California grant, that he ever heard of; that is, not to his knowledge. Harriman really depended upon somebody to look after these affairs for him, but the fact remains that they did not act on that but felt as though these matters on the Pacifc Coast were large and complicated, and they wanted some more direct authority, as he supposes. Judge Cornish had no authority from any board of directors that he ever heard of; and the only authority Judge Cornish had was by letter from Mr. Harriman. Witness got his authority from Judge Cornish, who had authority enough to give him authority. Everything witness did in connection with these grants on the Pacific Coast was under the authority of Judge Cornish, except what Mr. Harriman gave himself. Practically he was just as much under the supervision of Judge Cornish after he was formally appointed acting land agent as he was before; at least he assumed that he was. That is, in the actual practical carrying out of his work, he consulted with Judge Cornish just the same after his appointment on October 1, 1904, as he did before, but he also consulted with Mr. Kruttschnitt and others. There was a divided control out here all the time. His appointment as acting land agent made no change in that respect. He came from New York and reported back to New York right along. In connection with his work, that is the result of his work relating to these several land grants, he observed a general policy that was pursued by Mr. Harriman and Judge Cornish with reference to the administration of these land grants. They attempted to consolidate and standardize all their activities, and they also attempted to administer the land grants with reference to one another to serve the common interests of the constituent companies and also of the parent companies, and it never got beyond the stage of reorganization with him. Ties were bought here in Oregon, not only for the lines in Oregon, but for other Southern Pacific lines, and Union Pacific lines. The reservation of 100,000 acres of timber lands never got so far as to serve all of the constituent lines of the Harriman lines, so far as he knew. The intention as to that reservation was, so far as he was concerned, simply with the road which he was interested in. But he assumes of course that those timbers and ties cut from that land might be used and probably would be used by other lines and paid for by them. He does not know how many ties could be cut from the 100,000 acres that were reserved, nor how many miles of railroad it would supply with ties and bridge timbers, but generally speaking, if properly administered and reforested, it would supply a large one. Whether the entire Harriman System he would not say, because the entire Harriman System would not come here for ties. They would not want to come here for ties, because the freight would eat them up. That 100,000 acres of timber lands there, would supply the lines on this coast, he presumes; though of that he does not claim to be qualified to speak. The number of acres that should be reserved was, he thinks, determined in conference with Mr. Kruttschnitt, who was the general manager and vice president of the Southern Pacific Company, and he thinks on the board of all of the original companies on this coast. He knows he was a director, probably an officer, of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and believes he was a director and probably an officer of the Oregon and California Railroad Company and was vice president of the Southern Pacific Company; but he thinks he was not an officer of the Union Pacific, or the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company, or the Short Line. He thinks that the quantity of timber lands that should be reserved was determined in that conference with Kruttschnitt. He does not think Judge Cornish passed upon them, because that was something outside of his knowledge. Cornish would necessarily have to depend upon recommendation. As to the fact of the advisability of making the reservation and setting aside the lands he does not think that Judge Cornish would attempt to pass on the question. He does not think that he knew anything about it.

"Q. Now, Mr. Eberlein, it was one of the policies of Judge Cornish and yourself and, I may say, Mr. Harriman and the other officers of any of these companies who assumed or exercised any authority with reference to the subject, that the land grants should be administered with a view to promoting the general financial interests of these companies; isn't that true?

A. Well, if you mean by the general financial interests the managing of them in a careful, conservative, economical way in which they would produce the greatest results, both in money and in other ways for the roads, yes.

Q. That is what I mean; that the administration of these land grants was conducted along lines of policy that included other questions than the mere money that might be derived from the sale of the lands?

A. Well, that was always my idea.

Q. And you got that idea as the result of your connection, consultation and work with the other officers that you have mentioned, as well as your own initiative?

A. My own study of the case.

Q. And you found that that general view was shared by the others with whom you came in contact, including your superiors?

A. I believe so.

Q. Now when you came to Oregon or to the Pacific Coast in 1903 and entered upon the work of straightening out the affairs of the land grants involved in this case as well as the other land grants upon the Coast, you made your office where? Your headquarters, I mean.

A. The headquarters were San Francisco.

Q. You had offices elsewhere where your work was carried on, but your personal headquarters were San Francisco, were they?

A. Yes. I kept an office in New York and was called there frequently, but I was in San Francisco most of the time. But it must be understood that I didn't come here to run any land grants.

Q. I said to straighten out the affairs.

A. Just the matter of reorganization, the examination and reporting. The other was an afterthought and was to be temporary. That was the agreement with me, that I would not be required to administer details only for a short time to relieve a difficulty.

Q. You came here with the understanding that your work here should involve substantially the same scope as it had on the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Straighten out the affairs of these land departments and put them upon a more economical and more practical basis and start it along the lines of the new policies and then that you would be succeeded by some one else?

A. Yes, sir; relieved.

Q. Now, Mr. Eberlein, you know as a practical fact, do you not, that the Southern Pacific Company virtually controls transportations affairs, speaking in the broad sense now, in western Oregon west of the Cascades and particularly from say Albany to the southern boundary line of the state?

A. I believe it is the only rail line between those points.

Q. There are some small—

A. (Interrupting) I mean through.

Q. (Continued) —transportation facilities in addition to that, but in a general way the Southern Pacific lines constitute substantially all of the available means of transportation of the products of the State of Oregon west of the Cascade Mountains and particularly south of Albany?

A. Yes.

Q. And that was true during all of the time of your work out here?

A. Yes, sir."

Whereupon defendants objected to this character of testimony as immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant and it is stipulated between counsel that this objection may go and is understood as reserved to all this class of testimony.

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

"Q. Now, Mr. Eberlein, Mr. Harriman was really the dominant factor in all of these companies, was he not?

A. In everything he had anything to do with I think he was the dominant spirit.

Q. That was owing not only to his peculiar and wonderful genius in affairs of this kind, but also to the natural disposition of the man?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it is entirely correct to say that after the Union Pacific acquired the controlling interest in the Southern Pacific lines that you have mentioned that the affairs of all of these constituent companies were conducted with reference to the will of Mr. Harriman in so far as he exercised it?

A. That is generally true, I believe.

Q. Now reverting again to the fact that the Southern Pacific Company, as the operating company of these constituent lines, including the Oregon and California Railroad, controlled virtually all of the transportation facilities in western Oregon in the district that I have indicated in a previous question, it is also a fact, is it not, Mr. Eberlein, that at the time you entered upon your work in connection with these land grants and even to the present day the Oregon and California Railroad Company, subject to the rights asserted by the Government in this suit, owned and still owns between one-third and one-half of all of the lands tributary to the line of its railroad here in Oregon? I refer now to the main line extending from Portland south through Salem, Albany, Eugene, Roseburg, Medford, from say Eugene southerly to the southern boundary line of the state and by tributary to its line of railroad I mean within the limits of its land grant, both primary and indemnity, as exemplified on the maps that have been introduced in evidence here?

A. I should judge that the statement of about one-third within the limits fixed by you would be—

Q. (Interrupting) Substantially correct?

A. About correct as between the exterior boundaries of the grant. However, I never understood that the ownership was subject to any claim of the United States,—not while I had anything to do with it.

Q. I say, subject to the rights asserted in this suit?

A. Well, that I could not pass upon. I am speaking of the thing I always understood and so held it to be in absolute ownership in the railroad.

Q. I understand that.

A. Yes.

Q. But you do not deny—

A. (Interrupting) That there is a suit.

Q. That the ownership is subject to any rights that the United States may have, without conceding that they have any?

A. Without conceding they have any, certainly.

Q. But you do not deny they are subject to any rights the United States may have, though?

A. If the United States can prove any rights, yes.

Q. So that in the discharge of your duties in connection with this land grant in Oregon you found the Southern Pacific in control of the transportation in western Oregon and particularly southerly from Eugene, and also in control through its stock ownership of the Oregon and California Railroad Company of virtually one-third of the lands tributary to that line of railroad?

A. Within the limits of the grant?

Q. Yes.

A. I won't say outside of that, because there may be a large body of land outside to the west that would be tributary and perhaps is tributary, that I would not know enough about to testify to.

Q. Well, as I explained before, by tributary to the line, I mean within the limits of the grant?

A. Yes; yes. Very well.

Q. Now in your work in connection with this grant and in devising the plans for the reorganization of the land department and the adoption of new policies for the handling or use of these lands, did it ever occur to you that the lands controlled to a certain extent the subject of transportation in future years?

A. Why, I don't know that I thought of it in exactly that angle. The matter had a great deal of thought on my part, all that I could give to it. The principal thing in my mind was the divesting of the Railroad Company of this large body of lands. I didn't think that it was to the best interests of the road that it should retain these lands. It was a burden.

Q. It was your opinion that the best policy was to pass these lands on into independent proprietorships?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To become an instrument of production to aid in transportation?

A. Population and industry. That was the whole idea. There was no advantage to this line of road, or any line of road, to have a contiguous land grant without settlers, without people on it.

Q. Well, if a line of railroad has virtual control of the subject of transportation in a given community and owns virtually one-third or more of the lands tributary to the line of road, and by that I mean as I have explained before within thirty or forty miles of the railroad, and specifically speaking within the limits of this land grant, it also controls to a very marked extent the production of the territory tributary to that line of railroad, does it not?

A. Not necessarily.

Q. Well, it can control it?

A. It might; if it wished to pursue a suicidal policy it might do so. But I don't understand that that has ever been the policy of the Southern Pacific.

Q. But you realize, do you not, the difficulties that a competing line of railroad would encounter if it attempted to invade a field where its competitor owned one-third of the lands tributary to the line?

A. It might be, as you say, something that a competitor would have to consider. On the other hand, it would be unfair to the line of road, the pioneer, that its property should be used to induce a competitor.

Q. In other words, you feel that it would be unfair for the pioneer road, as you describe it—and by that you mean the Oregon and California Railroad in this case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To so dispose of its lands that it might attract a competing line of railroad?

A. Yes, sir; that is my idea.

Q. And that was your idea during the time that you were engaged in the work in connection with these land grants that you have described?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now what plan or policy, if any, did you discuss or attempt to evolve or devise that would secure to the Southern Pacific Company and its constituent company, the Oregon and California Railroad Company, the benefits of the transportation of the products of this land included in this land grant?

A. My plan, which was simply a recommendation, originated with me, never had any active recognition that I know of from the general officers of the road, was that that land grant should be sold out reserving only so much of it as was necessary to the operation and to the traffic of the road, in exactly the manner testified to by me yesterday. That would mean simply reservation for stations and rights of way for various purposes, stock yards for traffic, and land that had water for engine supply, gravel banks, and things of that kind, which were of more value to the road than to anybody else and which the road would have to acquire from some one else if it disposed of them; and after those reservations had been made, to sell that grant in such a manner as to produce the best business results for the Railroad Company and by doing so it would produce the very best results for the community. And my idea was, and I believe it is correct economically, the land belongs to the road; they paid for it by the construction of the road, earned it. If it owns the land it owns the product of the land, as the timber, I recommended the land should be sold at a very reasonable price to responsible people who would within a reasonable time develop, that is by the establishment of mills, develop the product, and when so developed that all the Railroad Company reserved would be the right when so developed to carry the product, the lumber product, at the rates then current as to which any other line would carry the product; otherwise, to have the right of the shipment and the routing of the product of the land.

Q. So that your plan was to sell the lands by such a method and upon such terms to be inserted in the conveyance as to create covenants running with the land that would guarantee to the railroad the transportation of the product of the land?

A. Exactly, subject only to such further reservation as would protect the shipper; and that is, he would not have to pay any more for the transport of that over the Southern Pacific lines and its connections than he would over any other competing line at the time of shipment.

Q. Well, do you honestly think if all of the lands marked in black upon any one of those maps were passed into private proprietorships under conditions which required that the product of those lands should be shipped over the Southern Pacific line, that there would ever be any competing line?

A. Certainly.

Q. You think there would be?

A. Certainly. It is the history of all railroads that where you have an industrial community growing, that a single line will not carry the product, and that the very fact Congress of the United States established that grant in the form that it established it as well as every other land grant established by Congress—and I have reorganized several now—in the way it did, to prevent a monopoly, and it does prevent a monopoly. There is one-half of all the land that is in there—yes; there is more than that; there is the entire body of the Willamette Valley, as you will see from those maps.

Q. I refer now southerly from Eugene.

A. Well, take it southerly from Eugene; you have got the Umpqua Valley, the entire body of that valley is in private ownership and has been since before the time this road was established, and it is open to any competing line who will come in; and it must be remembered that a competing line has actually paralleled that line that you have reference to east of the mountains, throwing feeders across the mountains into the Rogue River Valley, for instance. There is not anything to prevent another line, notwithstanding that land grant. The Southern Pacific, according to my view of the case, was simply holding what belonged to it of right, and it should have.

Q. Do you mean to say that, referring now to Defendant's Exhibit 259 and pointing to the City of Eugene, if the Southern Pacific Company had the right guaranteed by covenants running with the land, to transport the product of all of the railroad lands appearing upon this map from Eugene southerly to the state line, that it would have no advantage over a competing transportation line that would attempt to enter that field?

A. Certainly.

Q. It would have?

A. It would. But you must remember that the timbered land in your district you have just indicated has been culled over and the best of it has gone into ownership other than the Oregon and California. They are there; you can see them on that map.

Q. They are not indicated on that map. Here is the map they are indicated upon. Now if you will eaxmine it you will find but a very small proportion of it has passed into other ownership.

A. As I say, it is the best part of it.

Mr. Fenton: About four hundred thousand acres, Mr. Townsend.

A. You go down into the sugar pine belt and you will find that the heart of that was disposed of. The best of the timber of that grant was, as I say, culled, and has been since 1898, and the culling process was simply stopped when the lands were, or the business of the grant was suspended necessarily.

Q. But you considered it substantial enough to recommend it, didn't you?

A. Certainly.

Q. And your recommendation was considered and entertained by Judge Cornish, was it not?

A. I don't know whether by Judge Cornish, it was by others.

Q. Did they ever go so far as to consider the form of deeds that should be executed that would contain covenants of the character I have described?

A. I believe that Judge Singer drew a clause; whether in form of deed, I don't know that it ever got that far.

Q. Do you know of any instance in the industrial history of this country, or any other country, when a transportation line had a legal right to the transportation, exclusive legal right to the transportation of the products of virtually one-third of the land tributary to the line?

A. Well now, south of Eugene?

Q. No; I am referring to any railroad, now, for any district.

A. I am not familiar enough with the transportation history of the world to know. You could find such examples in Europe, I have no doubt, but all I am interested in was what was for the best interests of this strip of country and what it needs is industries. It is of no advantage to this state, or certainly not to the road, the condition in which I found this grant.

Q. It is not yet, is it?

A. That is not the fault of the road.

Q. It doesn't make any difference—

A. It is the fault of the United States.

Q. It doesn't make any difference, the fact is that the present condition is detrimental to the commercial and industrial interests of this state, is it not?

A. Certainly, by reason of the suit of the United States which prevents any sale or disposition, that has prevented men from even milling the timber that they own.

Q. Who?

A. The men who have bought timber from the Railroad.

Q. Well, who has been prevented from cutting it?

A. Anybody.

Q. Well, name one.

A. Anyone who has bought that timber, until the passage of this act which galvanizes their title; they were not safe in cutting any timber that was on land bought from the Railroad Company.

Q. I am not talking about whether it was safe, or not. Tell me one company that quit?

A. I don't know that they quit, but they must have cut under—unless they had some agreement with the United States they were not safe.

Q. Well, did the suit of the United States in any way interrupt the operation of a single industrial plant in Oregon?

A. I believe it has.

Q. What one?

A. I can't name them, but the impression that I gained from being in this state is that it has. From the talk that I have had with the timber men themselves I believe it has.

Q. What timber men have you talked with who expressed that?

A. Oh, I have talked with Mr. Hammond; I have talked with Mr. Blodgett; I have talked with a number of them at different times; and the consensus of opinion of those who were milling was that they didn't know where they were.

Q. Well, did any of them say that they had arrested for a moment the turning of a single wheel?

A. No, I don't suppose they did, because they were in a position where they had to go ahead in order to keep their plants open.

Q. Well, how did the suit in any way interfere with the operation of existing industrial plants?

A. Simply by clouding titles and making it a very dangerous performance for any man to proceed.

Q. Well, however dangerous it might have been they did proceed, didn't they?

A. I can't say as to whether they did or not. My impression is they did not run to their full capacity in the way they were before.

Q. Well now, where did you get that impression?

A. My impression gathered from my familiarity with conditions in this state, living in the state as I do most of the time and in the southern part of it which is a timber country.

Q. Well, can you tell me one mill that has reduced its products because of the pendency of this litigation?

A. Now I am not familiar with the inside operations of these milling companies. I am testifying generally to the general expressed opinion, the fact that the lumber industry, whether entirely due to that cause or not, has suffered prostration in that lower part of the state. Whether that extends all over I do not know.

Q. Well, you know, don't you, that the Southern Pacific Company tried to nearly double the cost of transportation on timber from that part of the state to San Francisco?

A. I am not familiar with that fact.

Q. They tried to raise it from $3.20 a ton to over $5.00 a ton, didn't they?

A. Well, that is information to me. I didn't know it.

I don't know it. It may be the fact, but I don't know it.

Q. Now have you ever considered the question whether the milling industry in Oregon, and particularly western Oregon, has been in any way stifled by the service and rates of transportation put in force by the Railroad Company?

A. That might be.

Q. I say you have never studied that?

A. That was never a part of my business to study that.

Q. Mr. Eberlein, this proposition or suggestion, however you may describe it, of selling the lands upon such terms as to guarantee to the Railroad Company the transportation of the product of the lands, was under discussion and consideration at about what time?

A. I think that suggestion was made by me about 1904. Anyhow, it was when I was actively at work making a report on the conditions here as I found them.

Q. It was after your appointment as acting land agent?

A. I think before.

Q. And how long was it under discussion and consideration?

A. I don't know as to that. It cropped up again. I renewed that recommendation as late as 1906.

Q. Now your testimony upon direct examination indicates the fact to be, and I therefore ask you if it is not a fact, that when in the fall of 1904 you contemplated the resumption of the sale of the lands, and which purpose was abandoned as you have described because of the objections urged by Mr. Cotton, and when you again formed the purpose in 1906 of resuming the sale of lands, which purpose was again interrupted as you have described by the loss of your records in the San Francisco fire—

A. (Interrupting) That is, as to the sale of timber lands only.

Q. Yes, but what I am getting at is that at those times you intended to put on sale only the agricultural lands, did you not?

A. That is all that it was possible to put on at that time.

Q. It was not intended to put on sale any of the timber lands?

A. Just as fast as it could be cruised and we were justified by information in making the sale.

Q. Well now, you don't mean that they were to have been put on sale until the question of the manner of selling them and whether this condition that you have referred to should be imposed upon sales, had been determined, do you?

A. No. It was not in my province; I wasn't an operating official nor a high official of any kind. That was largely a traffic matter, beyond my province entirely, and I merely made that suggestion. It was for others to act upon it. But I will say that I never had any orders to incorporate that suggestion. I believed in it thoroughly myself and I renewed it, I remember, in 1906.

Q. What I mean is this: That when the time would have finally arrived when you would recommend that the sale of timber lands be resumed, you would have renewed the same recommendation, wouldn't you.

A. I did. I will say that. I did.

Q. And the question was never definitely decided, so far as you know, was it?

A. It never was during my time.

Q. Now you say that in 1906 if a party would have applied to purchase agricultural lands you would have entertained the application and sent out a person to examine the lands and fix a price?

A. I did just that.

Q. Why couldn't you send out a person to examine any particular timber lands that were applied for and examine them?

A. I did, just that,

Q. Did you make any sales?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why not?

A. Because they would not take them.

Q. At the price you fixed?

A. I suppose so. I refer now to the application of the Weyerhauser Timber Company.

Q. But to no other?

A. I don't recall any other, because we did cruise some timber which we sold to the Southern Pacific Company, but that was under the necessities created by the fire; and as to others, I was in the East largely in 1907, I think pretty nearly the whole year, so that what was done here was done during my absence and I can't say, only that I know that cruising went on.

Q. Well now, when the Weyerhauser people applied to purchase this large body of timber land you had it cruised and fixed a price?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, when the Booth-Kelly Company applied to purchase some timber lands in 1906 why didn't you have that cruised and fix the price?

A. I don't recollect the specific application of Booth-Kelly Lumber Company in 1906.

Q. Well, I understood you to say that they applied to purchase land from you in 1906, and because they could not purchase it that they started this entire agitation?

A. I think they did.

Q. Well, what land did they apply to purchase?

A. Probably that that lay contiguous to their purchases down there. I can't give you the facts because I have no papers before me.

Q. Well, did they apply to purchase any?

A. I think they did.

Q. Well, why didn't you have it examined and give them a price?

A. Possibly did.

Q. Well now, please do not deal in possibilities. If you have no recollection please say so.

A. I can say I have no recollection of particular facts.

Q. Well, have you any recollection of having had the lands cruised that they wanted to purchase, and submitting to them a price?

A. No, I have not.

Q. But you do recollect very clearly having done so with reference to the application of the Weyerhauser Company?

A. Certainly.

Q. Now with reference to the purpose of resuming the sale of these lands after clearing the records, in the first place, and then renewing the records after the San Francisco fire, you of course can only speak for yourself; isn't that true, Mr. Eberlein?

A. Yes.

Q. That is as to what the real purpose of Mr. Harriman was, or his intent, or that of Mr. Cornish, you cannot assume to speak?

A. I don't assume to speak for anyone but myself.

Q. Do you remember when Mr. Harriman visited Oregon and California and the Pacific Coast generally, in September, 1907?

A. September, 1907? I didn't know—I don't remember of his being here at that time.

Q. Do you remember that he was here in September, 1907, at Portland, and went south to San Francisco and Sacramento and addressed a conservation congress at Sacramento in the early part of September, 1907?

A. I may have known it at the time, but I have no recollection now.

Q. Do you remember that Mr. Harriman, on September 2nd, 1907, at Portland, gave out an interview, which was published in the Evening Telegram of Portland, Oregon?

A. I don't remember of any such article.

Q. (Interrupting) Wait a minute; let me finish the question. In which he stated that it was his policy to put on sale the agricultural lands but that the timber lands should be reserved by the Railroad Company? Do you recollect it?

A. No, I don't recollect it; nor do I believe that he ever said it.

Q. Do you recollect that at Sacramneto in his speech there he stated that the timber lands in Oregon would not be sold but would be reserved by the Railroad Company?

Mr. Fenton: The same objection. What date, Mr. Townsend?

Mr. Townsend: That was in the fore part of September, 1907.

Mr. Fenton: At Sacramento?

Witness: Now, let me just qualify my testimony that has gone before. I do recollect now that you call it to mind, of being at Sacramento and of being one night at, I believe it was the Irrigation Congress.

Q. It might have been the Irrigation Congress instead of a conservation congress.

A. I think it was an irrigation congress, and I was there and I met Mr. Harriman there, and I don't recall at this time having heard any such remark made by him.

Q. Well, did you hear his speech before the congress?

A. I think I did. He was there for that purpose that night. He would not be there for any other purpose. The record of the congress, though, will be conclusive on that, of course. Let me suggest something to you. The record of the proceedings of the National Irrigation Congress of that date are to be had. I believe they can be found in the city.

Q. Do you know where we could get a copy without too much delay?

A. Any of these libraries.

Mr. Fenton: Would that contain the speech?

A. It contains verbatim reports of all speeches and all proceedings.

Mr. Fenton: Would it contain Mr. Harriman's speech that night?

A. If he made that speech it was reported. I was an officer of the Congress one time when it was here in Portland, and I know that all speeches, all proceedings are reported verbatim.

Q. Well, you have no reason to doubt the accuracy of the Associated Press records of that subject, have you?

A. Why certainly.

Q. What is it?

A. Why, of course.

Q. Now, is it not a fact, Mr. Eberlein, that in 1906 and 1907 it was your purpose to resume the sale of agricultural lands only but not timber lands at that time?

A. Now, so far as I controlled it myself, and speak for myself, it was my desire and my recommendation; whatever was the determination of my superiors I can't speak for, but my recommendation was to resume the sales of timber as fast as they could.

Q. I direct your attention to Defendants' Exhibit 277, consisting of two telegrams addressed to you by W. D. Cornish, the first bearing date New York, April 5, 1907, and the second bearing date New York, April 24, 1907, and ask you to read those, please, not aloud but for your own information.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You observe that in his first telegram Judge Cornish said as follows: "Please mail me report at convenience showing progress made in rehabilitating your office and also what extent you are receiving and handling applications for lands and especially lands other than timber and mineral." You observed that language, did you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well now, is it not a fact that at that time, without referring now to your own individual judgment as to what should be done, that it was the purpose and intent of Judge Cornish as expressed to you, not to resume the sale of timber and mineral lands?

A. That is not what that means.

Q. What is it?

A. That is not what that means. It might bear that construction from your point of view, but the fact is that the reference to timber land there had reference to the impossibility of our making any general sales at that time.

Q. What do you mean by general sales?

A. I mean throw the thing open to everybody to come in.

Q. Well, can you explain why you could not have sold any timber lands in the year 1907, if you had wanted to?

A. Because you can't do a thing piece-meal, not timber; that is, if you have any consideration at all for what you are doing. There are one or two reasons why it was not practical. In the first place, my recommendation was to cruise the grant generally and classify it and group it before resuming sales.

Q. Well, was there any reason why if a man wanted to buy a particular piece of land in a locality which had been completely cruised and classified and graded, that you could not entertain his application without waiting until the entire grant was cruised?

A. That may be, but there were no conditions of that kind.

Q. Did you have any applications to buy timber during the year 1907?

A. I think so.

Q. Other than the Weyerhauser Company?

A. I think so.

Q. Did you sell any?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you quote a price to any of the applicants to purchase?

A. I think not.

Q. Did you send anyone out to cruise the land which they applied to purchase?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did not quote a price?

A. I don't recollect of any prices being quoted. I recollect of sending applications with the information and everything to Cornish at New York. I didn't assume to sell, you understand. The matter was referred to him, the matter of all sales. Had he ordered the sales made they would have been made.

Q. Then the reason that they were not sold was because Judge Cornish did not authorize the sales?

A. Neither he nor anyone else.

Q. Now that is also true during the year 1908 down to the time that you severed your connection with the road?

A. I was in New York the entire time, almost the entire time of 1907. I was here only a few weeks.

Q. How about 1908?

A. I was not here at all, except to pack up some goods, some household goods and go back to New York.

Q. You were in New York then in 1908 until May 1st?

A. Until June 1st.

Q. Until June 1st?

A. Yes.

Q. Well now, during that time were there any applications for the purchase of timber lands?

A. I think there were applications. No; I wont be sure about that. It was about that time that, after the excitement here, as you know, started, it had a very quieting effect on everybody.

Mr. Fenton: What do you mean by excitement?

A. Oh, I mean the excitement that was fomented against the Railroad Company and the land grant.

Q. Well now, without speaking with any feeling in the matter, you mean that when the question of the right of the Railroad Company to convey the lands in quantities exceeding one hundred and sixty acres and for a price exceeding two dollars and a half an acre, and to other than actual settlers, that then there were not very many people who cared to risk the title and therefore there were few applications to purchase? Is that what you mean?

A. My recollection is just this: As to 1907, in fact, subsequent to the Weyerhauser Timber application, which was disposed of in Decemebr of that year 1906, it is my recollection and I believe I am correct that there were no applications, bona fide applications to buy. There were a number of cases where people asked that an application be filed; and I will say they went so far in, I think a number of instances, a great many, probably, to say that there was no immediate desire for it but that whenever the Company was in a position to sell, that they understood there was to be some litigation, that they wanted to be in a position to have their application recognized and considered.

Q. Now, so that the examination may not be misleading, I will state that I do not include in the scope of any of my questions at the present time the so-called applications to purchase by those who claim the right under these acts of Congress to buy at two and a half an acre.

A. No, I don't refer to that class at all. I refer to those simply making application to buy tracts of land and asking that their applications might be filed so that they be recognized in order.

Q. Now you were authorized by Judge Cornish to sell strictly agricultural lands, were you not?

A. Yes; subject to his approval in each case.

Q. But you were not authorized by him to sell timber lands?

A. None. He did not authorize, and so did Mr. Kruttschnitt authorize the cruising of the Weyerhauser timber.

Q. But that was an exception that was made, wasn't it, Mr. Eberlein, and over your protest?

A. Well, it would appear so.

Q. And really against your advice, wasn't it?

A. Against my advice.

Q. Your advice was not to entertain that application to purchase?

A. I would not.

Q. I say that was your advice?

A. That was my advice.

Q. Now with that exception you were not authorized to entertain any application to sell timber lands during the years 1906 and 1907 or 1908?

A. I think not, so far as I know.

Q. But you were authorized to entertain applications and sell agricultural lands, subject to the approval of Judge Cornish?

A. And grazing lands.

Q. And grazing lands?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But even those had to be referred to Judge

Cornish?

A. Yes, sir, that is true.

Q. And at that very time, Mr. Eberlein, as your report shows which you made to Mr. Cornish, you believed that there was but fifteen acres of agricultural lands in this grant?

A. No, I won't say that I believed there were only fifteen acres.

Q. Well, you so reported, did you not?

A. Oh, no.

Q. Based upon the Assessors' reports?

A. I put in the table the official returns of those Assessors to show what the Assessors themselves thought.

Q. Well, did you think that the Assessors' returns were correct?

A. No, I do not think they are correct, not when they assess railroad lands ever, or railroad property.

Q. Well, did you think the Assessors' returns were correct as to what quantity of these railroad lands were agricultural in character?

A. No, sir.

Q. You thought that there were more agricultural lands?

A. There were more, and that report states the fact to be what I did think there was.

Q. You thought there were about seven thousand acres?

A. About seven thousand acres.

Q. So that it is a fact, is it not, that during the years 1906, 1907 and 1908 until you severed your connection with the Railroad on June 1st, 1908, you were authorized only to sell agricultural and grazing lands and no timber lands?

A. That is true.

Q. And it is also a fact, is it not, as disclosed by your report, that out of the two million three hundred thousand acres involved in this suit over two million acres were considered as timber lands?

A. No, not two million acres. I think there was about a million and a half acres considered as timber and wood land. That is my recollection.

Q. Your report here states that your information from the reports of your graders and land examiners is that of the patented lands 1,496,640 acres were covered with timber and unsuitable for agriculture?

A. Yes, that is right.

Q. Were you on the Coast in September, 1907?

A. Yes, sir. I was here and left here in October, 1907, to New York, and was practically not here again during my incumbency, except about a week, leaving on the 22nd of Februaary, 1908. My work was practically finished in September, 1907, and I resigned at that time, though my resignation was not accepted until the following June.

Q. Do you remember whether you were in Oregon in September?

A. I don't think I was.

Q. You now recollect that you did see Mr. Harriman at the time that he visited the Coast during that month, but you think that it was in California that you saw him?

A. I saw him in Sacramento. I went up to Sacramento to the Irrigation Congress and was there the night that he addressed the convention.

Q. Do you recollect of learning that on September 2nd, 1907, when Mr. Harriman visited Portland, he was reported in the newspapers as having said to the reporter of the Evening Telegram, of Portland, as follows:

Mr. Fenton: We object to that as purely hearsay, of about the third degree. Go on.

Q. (Continued) "What conditions did you find in the interior?" "Sparsely settled regions. You go miles and miles before you see a face or a habitation. I traveled vast stretches and saw nothing but chipmunks. The country is undeveloped. Oregon needs more people. I passed forest reserves and timber land granted to military wagon road companies. The reserves and the military road companies control too much land. This should be remedied. The reserve policy requires changing and the military company should be made to dispose of holdings." Next question: "Then, Mr. Harriman, your contention is that Oregon cannot be properly nor speedily developed until the corporations which have vast holdings are forced to open the country to dispose of the lands?" Answer: "Yes." Question: "And does this include the lands granted to the Southern Pacific?" Answer: "Yes, the Southern Pacific, too. But the Southern Pacific hasn't much land. You see, before we came into the Southern Pacific the Company was pressed for money and was disposing of lands and giving options to syndicates and speculators, and we didn't know how much land we had so we stopped until options expired to ascertain just what we had in land. The Southern Pacific will sell land to settlers but not to speculators. We can tell a speculator from a settler as well as anyone. The agricultural land we will sell, but the timber land we will retain because we must have ties and bridge timbers and we must retain our timber lands for future supply. The Southern Pacific has an insufficient amount of timber now, and we have had to buy large tracts looking to the future supply of ties and materials. Yes, we will sell to settlers, but speculators will get none." Do you remember of such an interview having been brought to your attention?

A. I may have read the stuff at the time; probably did, because it was in the line of my work. It made no impression. It is gospel, though.

Q. It is what?

A. It is gospel; it is good sense.

Q. What do you mean is good sense?

A. Oh, I mean to say that if he said as is reported, with the emphasis on the "if," that the Company would not sell any more timber to speculators, he said a very wise thing and the only wise thing for this state. That is the trouble with the conditions down there now.

Q. He says he would not sell agricultural lands to speculators and would not sell timber lands to anybody, speculators or otherwise?

A. Well, I didn't understand the reading, if that is the case. It is just as well not to sell land to speculators, though. That is, as I say, what the road and the country have suffered from. You take the Weyerhauser timber interests, for one thing; they have an enormous investment in this state in timber but not to my knowledge have they ever milled a foot.

Q. And yet the Weyerhauser Company was the only company whose application the Railroad Company would entertain?

A. Oh, no.

Q. In 1906?

A. Oh, no; no, I think not.

Q. What other application was entertained?

A. Now, let's see ——

A. Now, if you want to know about that, I can tell you a little incident that only goes to show, that I made a call once with Mr. Harriman on Mrs. Potter Palmer at the Waldorf in New York; I made more than one call. That was in response to an application which she made about in 1907, and she was very insistent upon it. I had that land cruised.

Q. How much land was it?

A. Oh, several thousand acres; I forget how much. That is immaterial. It is the fact that you are after whether these applications were considered.

Q. Well, where was that land situated?

A. That land was situated in the grant.

Q. I understand, but where?

A. Well, I am coming to that. Don't get impatient with me. I am kind of slow. That, as I recollect, was southwest of Eugene, somewhere in the neighborhood of the McKenzie River, somewhere where some sons of hers were interested, and she referred to friends of hers who bought very largely, Michigan interests, Michigan people. I believe she referred to the interests now in control of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company. While she made a great fuss about that timber that was for speculation, not for any immediate use at all, and that fell through. It must be remembered that in the fall of 1907—meanwhile the work of getting records together and keeping up field work had been going on ever since the fire. In the fall of 1907 the great crisis struck New York, and, as you may remember that, it put a pretty effectual stop to every kind of industry, speculation in timber land and everything else as well. People didn't have the money to buy, and my recollection is that the effort to acquire timber land when the Railroad Company was in no position to sell it stopped about that time as everything else did, and I think that it was pretty effectually stopped until some time in 1908 or 1909. Meanwhile the suit had intervened and that stopped things. I don't think anything was done in 1908 that I remember of.

Q. How many times did you see Mrs. Potter Palmer?

A. I think twice.

Q. I thought you said several times?

A. Twice, I think.

Q. Did Mr. Harriman go with you, did you say?

A. He did. He did.

Q. Did she designate the lands that she wished to buy?

A. She did, and, as I have testified, I had them examined.

Q. Why did you have them examined?

A. Because they were applied for.

Q. Well, I thought you said she was a speculator and you would not sell to her?

A. We didn't sell to her.

Q. You didn't have to have the lands examined to determine whether she was a speculator or not, did you?

A. Oh, possibly.

Q. You did?

A. Certainly.

Q. You had to have the lands examined to determine whether Mrs. Potter Palmer was a speculator in these lands?

A. Whether she intended to speculate in these lands, yes.

Q. Well, how could you tell from an examination of the lands?

A. Well, you can tell sometimes from the location of the land. It is queer but it is the fact. And you can tell very frequently by your conversations, your conferences with people, what they propose to do with land. That might not have appeared in the first instance. The first instance was that there was an application came out to me and the cruising was done as rapidly as possible and the papers went on to New York about the time that I went down there, and Mrs. Palmer came there about that time.

Q. Well, you knew who Mrs. Potter Palmer was when the application came in, didn't you?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. You knew she had some interests near Eugene?

A. I didn't at the time when the application came in; I knew it afterward.

Q. But then you knew her general history as Mrs. Potter Palmer of Chicago?

A. Oh, I knew she was financially responsible, I suppose.

Q. And you knew who she was?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. In a general way?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. When her application to buy these lands came in you sent a cruiser out to have them cruised?

A. Yes.

Q. And the report of the cruiser was sent East?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember whether the report of the cruisers included anything other than the general character of land and an estimate of the amount of timber?

A. Just the usual data that a cruiser turns in, the character of the land, the character of the timber, the classification of it, and the——

Q. (Interrupting) Value of it?

A. The value of it.

Q. Well then, you and Mr. Harriman went and called upon Mrs. Palmer?

A. At her request.

Q. Did you ask her whether she wanted the lands for speculation?

A. Well now, to go into that, the incidents of that call, the last call developed the fact that Mrs. Palmer not only wanted that timber but she wanted to buy all the timber in about six townships down the east side of the grant, along about I think opposite or in the neighborhood of the Booth-Kelly holdings. There was no immediate intention on her part to make use of them. The first application she made was for a comparatively small body of timber that might have been, though it was not immediately tributary it might possibly have been used for some small milling operation, but when we got down to talk about it she had made up her mind, or changed her mind, rather, that she wanted a vast deal more, and the thing fell right there. We didn't cruise that timber; we didn't go on with it in my time. I think she abandoned the project.

Q. Now, do you recall any other applications to purchase during that year?

A. I might if I had time to think it over, but I never charged my mind with things of that kind, though other applications were undoubtedly made and probably other cruisings made. As I have already testified that in 1907 my work proper was finished in the summer of 1907, and early in September, 1907, I resigned, sent my resignation to Mr. Harriman, and instead of accepting it he ordered me to New York and my office was there during the remainder of the time in which I was connected with the road. I was here for about one week after that. That was all.

Q. Was there any policy adopted at that time not to sell timber lands to speculators?

A. I don't remember of any such policy being definitely enunciated. No orders given, if you mean that. I don't know of anything of that kind being done. But it had been my recommendation long before not to do it.

Q. Well, you mean then that the application of Mrs. Palmer was turned down because she was a speculator?

A. I can't say so in terms.

Q. Well, what has her being a speculator got to do with it? That is what I am trying to get at.

A. It has a very great deal to do with it, in tying up timber land for an indefinite time, just as has been done here. A very, very small fraction of the timber that the Southern Pacific, or the Oregon and California has sold since 1898 has ever been milled. It has just been held for the rise.

Q. Held for the what?

A. Held for the rise.

Q. Oh, yes.

A. Just the increase in board measure per annum in these large purchases is more than interest and taxes, and that is why they can carry it and why they do carry it. The Oregon and California Railroad has sold the most valuable timber in all this holding, allowed them to cull it and sold it at less than twenty cents a thousand feet board measure.

Q. Now, your idea is that the Railroad Company should hold it and get the benefit of the rise?

A. Not at all; it never has been; but—

Q. Well, how does it help the state industrially to have these lands held by Mrs. Potter Palmer? I mean by the Railroad Company instead of Mrs. Potter Palmer?

A. It helps it to this extent: That the Railroad Company has no intention of holding it in mort main.

Q. Oh; and Mrs. Potter Palmer has?

A. Yes, undoubtedly. Anybody that comes in and wants to buy all the timber in six townships of land, you can take it right straight that they have no immediate intention of doing anything with it. And that is borne out in the case of every large purchase, and I don't except any, because of the purchases made by the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, even, of seventy thousand acres, probably more than that with what they acquired indirectly from the railroad, of that very, very little has been cut. They bought it so cheap that it is more profitable for them to hold it, and that is why Mrs. Palmer and everybody else wanted to buy very cheap and of the Railroad Company. So far as my connection with the Railroad Company goes and my suggestion to it was that you could afford to proceed with your sales of timber at these very low prices but you must provide for some kind of use being made of it industrially and not allow it to be tied up, because in that way it is simply strangling industry, and, by the way, prevents that competing road you were talking about a while ago.

Q. So that your idea was that the Railroad Company should hold this land so as to prevent somebody else from strangling industry?

A. No, no, not at all. The Railroad Company could not do so. That is self evident from the map. You cannot tie up the country with a checkerboard map. You can't do it. You can by selling to these large holders, because they can and they do body up their timber, and they can make a complete monopoly and they can limit output. They may do about anything they please. The Railroad Company can't, you could not tie up—you can't make a monopoly of a single section, nor of a dozen sections, nor of a hundred sections, if you have got the same amount of land of the same character intervening which may go into private ownership; but the minute you turn it over to a single individual who can and who does body the country up, as the Weyerhauser Timber Company has done, you are simply tying up that country and you await their good pleasure; that is all.

Q. Do you mean that the Booth-Kelly Company and the Weyerhauser Company and these other large purchasers after acquiring the railroad lands bottled up the even numbered sections?

A. Certainly. That is what the Railroad Company never did, never intended to do, never could do.

Q. So that the ownership of the odd numbered sections by the Booth-Kelly Company, or the Railroad Company, or anybody else, is necessarily a leverage which will control the even numbered sections, isn't it?

A. Not at all, not in the hands of the Railroad Company.

Q. Why not?

A. Because, as I have said, the Railroad Company has not, cannot and will not if it could, body up the timber. It never has attempted to, never intends to do so, and could not do so.

Q. Why couldn't it?

A. In the first place, it is not transportation business. I believe, as you gentlemen would all call it, it is ultra vires. They are not authorized to go into the timber business. They would have no object in bodying up timber if they were not.

Q. Now the Southern Pacific Raliroad Company in California was not authorized to go into the oil business, was it?

A. It may not have been, but——

Q. (Interrupting) I say it was not, was it?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. But it had no difficulty in organizing a subsidiary corporation called the Kern Trading & Oil Company and engaging in the oil business, did it?

Mr. Fenton: We object to that as wholly irrelevant, and, as I am informed by Judge Singer, not the fact in the case, and a matter about which the witness would have no knowledge.

Mr. Townsend: Well, the witness approved the lease.

Mr. Fenton: And wholly irrelevant in this case.

Witness: I approved the lease?

Mr. Townsend: You approved it or disapproved it. You know the fact.

Witness: Well, you know the difference between approving and disapproving it.

Mr. Townsend: Well, it doesn't make any difference, you are acquainted with the fact.

Witness: It makes a great deal of difference, going into this record at this time. I never approved any lease.

Q. You know that the Kern Trading & Oil Company was organized in California as a subsidiary organization of the Southern Pacific to operate its oil lands, don't you?

A. The Kern Trading and Oil Company is a corporation organized I believe under the laws of California, and more than that I don't believe I know much about it, as my evidence involuntarily and otherwise in this Elk Hill suit will show that I didn't know what the purposes of that Company were, and I don't now.

Q. Do you mean to say if the Oregon and California Railroad Company here in Oregon wished to block out these timber lands that you do not know that they could organize a land company and do it, and no question of ultra vires would intervene?

A. I don't believe that is a supposable case between us.

Q. It could not be done?

A. I don't believe it would be done.

Q. I am not asking whether it would be done, but is there any legal obstacle in the way of it?

A. I can't say.

Q. "Do you mean to say if the Oregon and California Railroad Company here in Oregon wished to block out these timebr lands that you do not know that they could organize a land company and do it, and no question of ultra vires would intervene?"

A. So far as that calls for a legal conclusion I must decline to answer, because I don't know. As to the practical question, which I take to be the only question here, it is that such a thing is not a supposable case even.

Q. Well now, you had no difficulty in answering a similar question when it was addressed to you by the Southern Pacific people in May, 1905, concerning which you testified yesterday, did you?

A. May, 1905? I don't recollect what you refer to.

Q. Do you remember that you testified that the letter that you wrote to Mr. Dunne with reference to the transfer of an entire grant was with reference to the question of organizing a land company and transferring the entire grant to that company?

A. That had reference to the transfer of a land grant to a land company operating not as a usual land company does for the purpose of acquiring property, but for the purpose of merely selling the rest of that grant.

Q. Well, do you mean to say that you don't know whether a land company so operated, so organized, could acquire other land?

A. I do not know. It would depend entirely upon its articles of association.

Q. Well, couldn't its articles of association so be drawn that it could?

A. I haven't any doubt that it might be.

Q. But you see in the fact that the Booth-Kelly Company has acquired over seventy thousand acres of this land an industrial menace that you do not see in the holding of two million three hundred thousand acres by the Railroad Company?

A. They are entirely different cases. In one case the lands were acquired for a certain purpose. They were acquired by reason of certain acts which the Railroad Company had consummated. In the other case this property was acquired from the Railroad Company presumably for industrial purposes. The Railroad Company is not authorized, as I understand it, to go into any manufacturing business. If it has this land, which it got honestly and openly, it certainly has the right to dispose of that land in such a way as will do to the railroad the most good, and you can't do the railroad any good without doing this whole body politic in here the same measure of good. There can be no throttling of industry that does not injure the railroad, and there can be no expansion of industry without benefiting both the state and the railroad. Those are self-evident, hardly worth mentioning but I just set them down.

Q. Well, then, it necessarily follows that the logical thing would be to transfer all the lands in the state to the railroad?

A. No, not at all.

Q. Why, if you think that the industrial interests of the railroad and the industrial interests of the state and the interests of the railroad as the proprietor of the lands are identical, then you mean to say that there would be no industrial injury if the Railroad Company owned all the lands, do you not?

A. No, I can scarcely agree with the logic. It seems to me faulty. This is a case where the railroad finds itself possessed of certain property, with certain industrial capabilities. As I have testified over and over again, so far as I am concerned,—and my acts, reports, everything, speak for themselves,—the Railroad Company tried this experiment for years of disposing of timber lands to whoever would come for them and let them cut out what they wanted and practically at their own price. As I have said heretofore, the net result of that was that the Railroad Company sold timber, standing timber, merchantable timber, for less than twenty cents a thousand feet on the average. I believed, and so recommended, that the selling of timber at such very low prices up to the present time had but one effect. That was to tie the timber up. It was more profitable to hold it than it was to manufacture it. Now the only suggestion that has been put to the railroad by me has been that the timber land should be sold, but it should not go to augment any more large holdings, because there is no reason for doing so, no commercial reason for doing so. It limits the number of operators in the state. My recommendation was specific to the point that the small mill men should have a chance and not be compelled to go to these large holders and get at a large price what they needed for their mills. I believe that is the proper policy. Anyhow, it is what I recommended.

Q. Now you say it was more profitable to hold these timber lands than to mill the timber off of them?

A. It was in the hands of these people who bought at that price.

Q. Well, do you suppose that they have not been aware of that fact the same as you?

A. Oh, undoubtedly.

Q. The truth of the matter is that the price of lumber and other commercial conditions have rendered milling enterprises unprofitable for the last few years; isn't that so?

A. I am not familiar with prices of lumber or building conditions. I have not followed them since I was in the Railroad Company. I do know, however, and I know from talking with the people who are interested, that the whole northeastern end of California—I say the whole; a large part of it; Modoc, Shasta, Lassen counties—is owned by the T. B. Walker interests, and they began to acquire those interests in 1889. They bought out timber concerns and mills and shut them down and they have existed all this time simply upon the increase in the growth of the timber which, as I have told you, is large enough in timber of certain age to more than equal the taxes and interest on the investment; and in this particular case it must be remembered that this timber was sold by the Railroad on conditions that never were duplicated that I know of in this country. Take the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, for instance; it bought tract after tract and gave contracts which required practically no payment of money, which created at once a credit by which they could borrow money, and the Railroad Company got no benefit from it.

Q. Well, you know that the Northern Pacific sold all of their timber lands to the Weyerhausers, substantially, don't you?

A. Yes, they did, and they were sorry for it afterward.

Q. I know, but why are you picking out the Booth-Kelly Company as the great depredator in all these transactions?

A. Because it was.

Q. What is it?

A. Because it was, certainly.

Q. Yes, you have personal feeling against Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, haven't you?

A. Absolutely none whatever.

Q. When you came out here you suspected that there had been some improper influence by which they had obtained exceptional terms from the Railroad Company, did you not?

A. When I came out here I had never heard of them.

Q. After you came out here and learned of these sales you did, did you not?

A. When I became aware of what was done and became aware and received their calls and their demands, and when I had their depredations reported every week and knew the unusual terms that had been granted to them, I saw by looking into those affairs that that kind of business was not good for the railroad and was good for nobody but the people interested in that enterprise; that is all.

Q. You even went so far as suspecting some of the Southern Pacific officials with having been in collusion with the Booth-Kelly Company, didn't you?

A. I didn't suspect.

Q. You didn't suspect it?

A. No.

Q. You knew it?

A. I knew that they were interested with them in certain purchases.

Q. Who?

A. Oh, is it necessary to go into those old things?

Q. I want to know why you have such a feeling against the Booth-Kelly Company.

A. So far as Booth-Kelly is concerned, I have mentioned Booth-Kelly for the reason that they were the largest purchasers, individual purchasers, I believe. They were the most active, and it was a typical case and it is a typical case in regard to this grant. Now it don't make any difference to me who has the Booth-Kelly, who is interested in it, but when you are discussing this grant you will sooner or later come right back to that. How did it work in those cases? They had the largest number of contracts. They had the most unusual contracts granted, and their whole connection brought out a great many protests from other timber buyers, and large ones, wanting to know why they should have these special privileges, and all that sort of thing, and I could not—

Q. (Interrupting) Now, just a moment right there. Who made those protests?

A. Well now, let's see. Those protests were made by different lumbermen in the East for instance. I have a recollection of one man, whose name I can't recall, who was a large timberman in the East whom I met on Mr. Kruttschnitt's private car on a trip East in 1904, who asked me the direct question why they and why other large timber operators could not get the same privileges and the same terms as Booth-Kelly. I had to disclaim, because so far as I knew there was no reason; the only fact was that they had it; they were on the ground; they were the most active, energetic, and they were conducting mills.

Q. Now I want you to put into the record the contracts that you say constituted special privileges to the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company.

A. Well, do you expect me to give them by number and description of the land?

Q. No; I want to know it so I can trace it up and see whether you are correct.

A. You can just call for the record of those contracts.

Q. They are here in evidence. You can look them through.

A. Show them to me.

Mr. Townsend: Where is that exhibit of defendants' contracts of January 1st, 1903? (Counsel here refers to exhibit.) Now I want you to point out the contracts.

Witness: What is it you want?

Mr. Townsend: I want the contracts that the Booth-Kelly Company had when you came here and that you found and which you criticise as having extended to them special privileges that were not extended to other purchasers of timber land?

A. You can't show that by that record.

Q. Why not?

A. Why, because it don't show the terms.

Mr. Fenton: Those are the outstanding contracts.

Q. I don't ask you to find the terms in this record, but I ask you to designate the contracts.

A. Well, anything you find in there that is Booth-Kelly, or John F. Kelly, Trustee; and I think a large number of those shows no assignments. There are a great many that were acquired; and, as I have testified, that they bought directly seventy thousand acres and acquired about thirty thousand more, which makes a hundred thousand acres of timber, and they claim by their advertisements and published stuff to control and have an ownership of about ten billion feet of standing timber. I don't vouch for that fact; that is their own statement.

Q. Now any contracts that they bought by way of assignment, certainly they got no concession from the Railroad Company as to them, did they?

A. No, not at all.

Q. Now the principal contract that you have in mind, and to be frank with you, which I thought you would refer to, was the contract for about twenty thousand acres to John F. Kelly as trustee?

A. No.

Q. Is it not?

A. I didn't have that in mind.

Q. You didn't have that contract in mind?

A. No, I didn't have that in mind.

Q. They then didn't get special privileges as to that contract, did they?

A. The Booth-Kelly Lumber Company?

Q. Yes.

A. As assignee, yes.

Q. Well, how did they get it as assignee when the Railroad Company sold it to someone else? and they had to buy it from that other person?

A. I am merely stating the fact as I believe it is and has been reported. John F. Kelly was a member of the firm. George H. Kelly was. Booth was, J. H. Booth and R. A. Booth, and that contract was, I believe, though not in my time that I know of, assigned to the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company.

Q. Well, how does that show that the Railroad Company extended special privileges to the Booth-Kelly Company in the sale of that land?

A. Well, you are talking about all the contracts, aren't you?

Q. I am speaking about that particular contract. Let's get through with that one.

A. Well, suppose we talk about the contracts made directly to the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company. Wouldn't that be within the purview of your inquiry?

Q. No; I want to finish with reference to that contract with John F. Kelly, Trustee, first.

A. Yes.

Q. Now in what respect did the Booth-Kelly Company get any special concession or privilege with reference to that contract?

A. Well, I will tell you, that contract covers about three townships of land, as I recollect it. Now, mind you, this is a good many years old.

Q. Well, your recollection is correct.

A. Very well.

Q. It is townships twenty, twenty-one and twenty-two south, range one west.

A. I compliment you on your ability to remember the location. I could not. That contract was made in such a way, and the privilege granted was of this character: Pieces of timber were taken out of a whole section, the whole thing was riddled up and down one side and another, so that the remainder of the timber on that purchase must come to the holder of that contract at practically his own price. Now I say that constitutes a special privilege. It ought not to have been sold that way.

Q. Well now, Mr. Eberlein, isn't it possible that you are mistaken about that?

A. I think not. I would refer to the contract.

Q. Now that contract is of record there, and if it were not for the fact that it would unnecessarily delay your examination I would like to have you take a set of township plats and map them out, because I did it this noon.

A. I mapped that once. I believe that map is still in the files of the Railroad Company in New York.

Q. Well now, do you not know the fact to be that the Railroad Company placed their price upon that land and that Mr. Dixon and Mr. Kelly and other comparatively small stockholders of the Booth-Kelly Company, tried to induce that Company to buy the land, brought it before their board of directors and the company refused to buy it, did not consider it a good buy, and that was why Mr. Kelly and a few of his associates bought it for their own personal speculation?

A. I think very likely that is true.

Q. Well now, if this was such an unusual privilege to the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, how do you account for the fact that they refused to buy it on those terms?

A. Now, just let's get that straight. You have picked out a contract which was not made to the Booth-Kelly but was acquired by them by assignment. Now, you see your inquiry tends to confuse me; whether it will confuse the Court I don't know, but it confuses me. Now we will just keep those things separate. I don't claim, nor do I think you do, that the making of that contract to John F. Kelly, Trustee, even though among them were these same men, same stockholders of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, was binding upon the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, but they got control of it by assignment afterwards. I think the facts that you state are undoubtedly true.

Q. Do you not also know it to be a fact that these same men, Mr. Eberlein, who had tried to persuade their company to buy it and the Company had refused to do it because they didn't consider it an attractive purchase, that after they had made three or four payments the Company finally changed its mind and bought it back from these men at an advance of something like ten dollars an acre?

A. I don't know anything about that. I only know the fact that they did. But that is not what I was referring to in my testimony. As I tell you, I didn't refer to that particular contract.

Q. Well, you must have had that contract in your mind or you would not have had it platted up; you say it is now on the records of the Company?

A. I think it is.

Q. You certainly had it in mind at one time?

A. Well, I know; but I didn't necessarily have to connect it up with the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company. It was an improvident contract, and as such I characterized it; and it was. And that is the policy, not only the Booth-Kelly but all of them, of large purchases to which I objected. Now don't put it on the ground that I have any particular grudge against Booth-Kelly, because I haven't. I don't care anything about them.

Q. Well, I am afraid that the import of your testimony would give that impression, Mr. Eberlein.

A. Well, then, it would weaken my testimony, would it not?

Q. Not if it were well founded; not if you had grounds for it; but if you don't mean it that way I want the record to correctly represent your feeling on that.

A. Well, I am here to give you the facts. The fact is that probably the reason why I have mentioned them more than any other is that I had more to do with them than any other; I had more trouble with them than anybody else.

Q. Now when Mr. Dixon came to San Francisco and asked to see certain records in your office what records did he ask to see?

A. I have a recollection on two or three occasions that he demanded—he didn't put it very much in the way of a request, either, but he was pretty insistent on seeing our cruisings on certain timber lands; what timber lands I don't pretend to recollect.

Q. Who brought him into your office?

A. Oh, I don't remember that.

Q. Who sent him there, if you know?

A. Sent him to the office?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I presume he knew the way there and came.

Q. No, but who introduced him into your office, if you know?

A. Well, now, my recollection is that I didn't meet him at all.

Q. Do you remember the fact to be that Mr. Herrin introduced him into the office?

A. Not that I know of. He may have been to Mr. Herrin, as a great many people did go to Mr. Herrin; when they wanted to do business with the land department and they thought they might not be able to do business with me they went very often to Mr. Herrin. Now that you mention it I have a recollection of somebody, a messenger or somebody coming down from the law department with the information that Mr. Dixon wanted something and he wanted it right away, and I said, "Who is Mr. Dixon?" And he said he was some connection to the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company. I merely said that if Mr. Dixon had any business to do with the land department he had better come down. He never came.

Q. When did he make the request for these cruisings?

A. I think that same time. That is my recollection.

Q. Well, you say that your only recollection of it is that a mesenger came down?

A. Yes.

Q. And said he wanted some information?

A. He did. I am giving you the recollection.

Q. And Mr. Dixon never came down himself?

A. He didn't come to me; no.

Q. I understood you to say that Mr. Dixon came and made certain demands and rather in an offensive way?

A. It was. The way it came about may have been the fault of the intermediary, but the demand was a pretty peremptory one, as I recollect it, to send out of the office, not to the law department but to Mr. Dixon, who was I understood up there at that time, certain documents, and my recollection is that those documents were not in existence at that time and could not be sent. That is, that the cruisings had not been made. He probably had been advised or thought probably that we had restored certain cruisings.

Q. Now, did he ask for the cruisings, Mr. Eberlein, or the price that you asked for the land?

A. No; it was papers, Mr. Townsend. If it had been price there would not have been any—that would have been very easily answered and he would have been answered at once. But the extraordinary demand for papers belonging to the department to be sent out of the department to a man who had no connection with the department and whom I didn't know at that time rather made an impression.

Q. Well, you know that the man who came into your office was an employe of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Oh, I don't remember anything about that. I don't charge my mind with a lot of detail of that kind, but the man probably I knew or probably he came to my assistant; I can't tell you. But that is the way it got to me. I am giving you the fact as I remember it.

Q. Well now, the upshot of all this is that you considered that all of the timber land had been sold in Oregon that could be used by mill men legitimately for sometime to come?

A. No, not at all; all that could be used within a reasonable time by the large purchasers. There were other men in Oregon who were not men of large capital at all, but who had small mills and were turning out ties and timbers, and I believed that those men ought to be fostered, and I think so yet.

Q. Well, did any of them apply to purchase any of these lands during the years 1906, 1907 and 1908?

A. Well, there were indirectly several sections of timber turned over to Cole Brothers and to Fisher Brothers. Those are two I remember. There may have been others. But it only illustrates the policy which I wished to pursue.

Q. Well, those were turned over by the Southern Pacific Company and not by the Oregon and California Railroad Company, were they not?

A. For the reason that the Oregon and California Railroad Company, under contract with the Union Trust Company, could not enter into the kind of an agreement that was necessary to enter into with those men.

Q. But the fact is that those lands were first conveyed by the Oregon and California Railroad Company to the Southern Pacific Company, were they not?

A. So we got our money for them. The Oregon and California got their money .

Q. And it was a year or two afterwards that the Southern Pacific Company made its dealings, whatever they were, with Cole Brothers and Fisher Brothers?

A. No.

Q. If I have the names correctly.

A. Yes, you have the names correctly, but you are mistaken as to that fact. They were at work in 1906 on those lands, and as I recollect it and as my information goes, we made a price on those lands to the Southern Pacific Company, who took them over in order to get necessary supplies to keep open the lines of this operating company. They paid for that to the Oregon and California Railroad Company and the money was turned over to the representative of the bondholders. Now the Southern Pacific Company, as I recollect it, made a contract with these men agreeing to take their output, paying them, they returning such part of it every month, the cost, to the Railroad Company, because they were not in funds to enable them to buy outright. And that was a very good arrangement for them; it enabled them to make more than days' wages, which they could not have done if they had to go to any one of these large timber owners and buy the timber.

Q. The Southern Pacific Company took most of the product of their mills, do you mean?

A. I think it took it all, and paid for it current prices.

Q. Then, when you get right down to it, the fact of the transaction was that that was the method by which the Southern Pacific arranged to supply itself with ties and building material without actually operating the mill itself?

A. Certainly. That is right. They did, though, operate mills themselves.

Q. I understand, but I am talking about these particular mills?

A. Yes, sir; that is right.

Q. Now in grading these lands as agricultural lands, lands that were capable of settlement, as has sometimes been said in the course of the examination, you did not do that with any idea of complying with the laws involved in the case at bar, did you?

A. Well, do you mean having this land appraised?

Q. Having them classified as agricultural or settlement lands; you didn't do that with any idea of selling the lands within the terms of the grants which are involved in this case?

A. If you mean this little accident of a few lines that old George W. Julian slipped over on Congress there, why of course not. We never pretended to, never entered into any calculation at all.

Q. You have apparently the same feeling towards George W. Julian that you have toward the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company?

A. Oh, no. One man was a common nuisance; I don't say that of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company.

Q. Which one was that?

A. Julian.

Q. Oh, yes. He was a member of the Joint Committee of Congress in charge of the conduct of the War of the Rebellion, was he not?

A. He was a member of Congress from Indiana, and I came from that general part of the country, and, as I remember, he had a reputation of being an objector to anything and everything, a mischief maker; and there was a sigh of relief when he retired from Congress.

Q. Relief to the railroad companies, do you mean?

A. Relief to Congress, to the suffering people.

Q. It was under his leadership that the policy of granting lands in aid of internal improvements finally ceased, was it not?

A. I don't know as to that. I was pretty small at that time.

Q. Well, you ought to remember the good things about him as well as the bad, no matter how small you were.

A. Probably his obituary notice takes care of all of that.

Q. You have just concerned yourself in finding out what you could that was bad about him; is that it?

A. Oh, no; no; but unfortunately the evil that men do lives after them, and that is the only thing that has survived that I know in regard to Mr. Julien.

Q. You haven't read my brief?

A. No. I have been intending to take a week off to read that. I hear it is a good one, and I am going to read it, I will promise you.

Mr. Fenton: It will take more than a week.

Q. Would you have put any of the agricultural lands on sale to actual settlers only in quantities not greater than one quarter section to one purchaser and for a price not exceeding two dollars and fifty cents per acre?

Mr. Fenton: Objected to as immaterial.

A. If I had the sale of it I would have sold the agricultural land first to the adjoining proprietor, if he wanted it, the man that had struggled along making a farm down there in that country, and if there was any adjoining land which he might make use of by incorporating it into his farm he should have had the opportunity first, and that was what we endeavored to do, and I would not have cared anything at all about the amount or the price.

Q. Well, you would have cared about the price, wouldn't you?

A. I would have got a reasonable, fair price for it, on general principles, and for the particular reason that the contract with the Union Trust Company, the deed of trust, provides that the land must be sold for a fair actual value, and they refused on several occasions to pass deeds on the ground that the consideration was not large enough.

Q. But you would not have paid any attention to this little joker that you describe as having been slipped over on Congress by Mr. Julien?

A. No, sir, I would not.

Mr. Fenton: Defendants admit that they would not have paid any attention to the priviso of April 10th, 1869.

Mr. Townsend: Or of the similar provision of May 4th, 1870?

Mr. Fenton: Or of Section 4 of the Act of May 4th, 1870, with respect to the limitation on the grant, which was not a valid limitation among other things and never was recognized by the Company and never was insisted on by the United States until April 30th, 1908.

Witness: And it was disregarded by every respectable attorney in the state that ever examined the title.

Mr. Townsend: Now I will pause for a moment for Mr. McAllaster and Mr. Singer to extend their remarks into the record, so that there may be a complete representation on this subject.

Mr. Singer: Well, I would suggest a limitation of Mr. Townsend, who is a respectable lawyer, and he has a different opinion, and you didn't mean it that way.

Witness: Oh, no.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Townsend is certainly a respectable lawyer and the equal of any of us.

Mr. Fenton: Let's not put all of that in the record.

Witness: No, don't put this in the record, but Mr. Townsend knows I had no intention of applying these remarks to him.

Mr. Townsend: Well, the record will show for itself how those remarks were intended.

Q. The fact is, I think, as has been developed from the testimony, but to make it positive I will ask you, that no lands were sold during the years 1906, 1907 and 1908, with the exception of the conveyance to the Southern Pacific Company, if it took place during those years? I am not certain of the date of that, but with that exception there were no sales of any of these lands, were there?

A. That is all I recollect at this time.

Q. Now you say that in the fall of 1904 Mr. Craig, who was the Joint Passenger Agent of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company and the Southern Pacific lines in California, after conference with you upon the subject caused circulars to be issued announcing the intention to resume the sales of lands that were susceptible to cultivation?

A. I don't remember the limitation in the advertisement. It was general in its terms and referred to the approach of the time when land grant lands would be offered for sale.

Q. Well, you say it was designed to attract settlers?

A. Yes, sir. It wasn't a special circular; it was something inserted into a pamphlet that was put out by his department.

Q. You say that it was expressed in flamboyant terms, lurid colors and lots of adjectives?

A. Yes, that is right. I don't mean this particular notice, because as I recollect it I wrote it myself, but the general literature in which it appeared was ordinary railway literature of that character.

Q. Now you say that after the fire in 1906 you had no means of knowing what deeds had been executed. Did you not know that in May or June, 1879, the Oregon and California Railroad Company through its board of directors adopted a bylaw prohibiting the execution of any conveyances on behalf of the Company unless the same were specifically authorized by resolution of the board of directors and that thereafter no deeds were executd until authorized by resolution of the board of directors and that the minute books of the meeting of the board of directors disclosed all deeds that were executed after that time?

A. I may have known that fact, and I have no doubt that we exhausted all the means of information that were open to us and that among them. But I don't recollect of having recourse to that particular source. I do remember of going to the Union Trust Company and getting a lot of information.

Q. Now you say that in 1906 by the latter part of August this rumpus and noise that had been stirred up with reference to forcing the Railroad Company to dispose of these lands had become so great that you gave notice to your superiors that you were able to sell agricultural and grazing lands; that is true, isn't it?

A. Well, I gave notice to them that we were in position to go ahead and to treat applications for that class of lands as rapidly as they could be examined.

Q. Now from whom did you learn that the Booth-Kelly Company had made threats that they would force you to let go of this land?

A. Directly.

Q. From whom?

A. A talk with Mr. John W. Blodgett at one time.

Q. When?

A. In New York, in my office there, I think during the year 1907. There was a great deal of talk indulged by them which traveled to me—I speak of these talks, these particular conversations—that we would be obliged to let go. I didn't pay much attention to the talk at that time but it was current.

Q. Well, who did you hear say it personally, John W. Blodgett, you say?

A. Why, I refer to my talk with Mr. Blodgett more than anyone else.

Q. And what did Mr. Blodgett say?

A. I can't remember the exact language.

Q. Well, give the substance of it?

A. But Mr. Blodgett is a courteous gentleman and would not be apt to use brutal language at all, and in that case it was simply a very positive intimation on his part that we would have to do it. I believe at one time in one conversation—I had more than one; he was in my office there several times; one time Mr. Arthur C. Hill was with him; among other things he made bitter complaint to me in criticism of the railroad by reason of their running mills, that we had no right to run mills and that they ought to buy their stuff from them; and I told him that the only reason the mills were ever started or operated was simply because they canceled their contracts and refused to furnish any stuff when the company most needed it. But that can hardly be urged against them, because the market at San Francisco took a tremendous jump, and they paid large bonuses for furnishing lumber quickly; but the Railroad Company was criticised very severely by them.

Q. Well, I understood you to say that the Booth-Kelly Company boosted the price on ties from twenty-three cents to over sixty cents over night?

A. They did, so I was advised.

Q. Now you say that the market price raised at San Francisco now?

A. Why, of course. It certainly did, by reason of the fire.

Q. Well, the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company was not the only party that supplied ties and building materials at San Francisco, was it?

A. No, no; a great many others.

Q. Well, who was it that boosted the price?

A. They did so far as I was informed. Probably the rest did, too; but as I understand it they were the main dependents of the road; from their geographical position the lower end of the road in making their extensions always got their supplies from them.

Q. They didn't boost the price, then; they simply took advantage of the advanced price?

A. They took advantage of the advanced price, but it had the same effect upon the Railroad Company; it left them helpless.

Q. That is, the Railroad Company had to pay the market price for the stuff?

A. The contracts were canceled, as I was informed by Mr. Harriman himself, practically without any notice. Now of course there may have been reasons for it, but still it was very burdensome upon the Railroad Company, and it might be urged, I think justly, that the Railroad Company should have notice in a case of that kind; but I am not making any point as to that.

Q. Now you say that Mr. Dixon was present before Congress in the year 1908 or 1907, and assisted in the passage of the resolution directing the institution of this suit?

A. Why, he appeared before the committee of the House, which you addressed.

Q. Well, did he urge the pasasge of the resolution?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well now, don't you know that he was the only opposition I had during the entire effort I made to get that resolution through?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Don't you know that he first tried to amend it and afterwards tried to defeat it?

A. I don't know anything about what his lobbying was, but I know what his remarks were before the committee.

Q. Well, what were his remarks before the committee?

A. Well now, I think they are quoted. I make a quotation in that document there. I will not undertake to repeat remarks; I will read them to you.

Q. Well, if you take out any isolated quotation it might not fully represent the position that he took before the committee.

A. Well, I believe it did. Now what you refer to, you may think that I knew of Mr. Dixon's activities down there but I did not. It may have been known to others in connection with the Railroad, but not to me. I merely appeared before that committee with Mr. James Gore King, who was the representative of the Union Trust Company. We came down from New York to attend that hearing, and those remarks were made by Mr. Dixon, and the understanding of his attitude was the same by Mr. King and myself. That is why we never had any reason to change our opinion that he was there throwing the burden of everything on the Railroad, claiming the dubious honor of having fomented all of this agitation for the purpose of depriving the Railroad Company of a land grant. I believe his language is not susceptible of any other construction. What his subsequent acts were I don't know anything about.

Q. Now did Mr. Dixon or any other representative of these purchasers do anything before that committee other than to contend that they had purchased their lands in good faith, without knowledge of these restrictions, and asked to be relieved by an amendment to the bill or resolution?

A. I remember the address of Mr. Blodgett and of Mr. Hill, and my recollection is that theirs was along that line. They testified, too, as to the non-agricultural character of the land which they had purchased, and I don't remember of their making any direct onslaught on the Railroad Company, but it was different in the case of Mr. Dixon, though I understand he represents the same company that Mr. Hill and Mr. Blodgett did.

Q. Now you say that Mr. Hawley, Congressman Hawley, he also made a campaign upon this same general subject?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that he was a colleague of Mr. Booth, who was a member of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, or, at least, was very friendly with him, you say?

A. I have understood that he was, that they were very close together, socially and otherwise.

Q. And the fact was developed during the course of your direct examination that Mr. Hawley was very instrumental in getting through the resolution directing the institution of this suit and also instrumental in getting through the recent act authorizing the compromise of the purchaser suits. Do you mean to imply Mr. Hawley has been actuated in this matter by a desire to help the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company?

A. Why, that wasn't my direct testimony at all. I don't think it can be inferred from it. Mr. Hawley in doing what he did I have no doubt did what he thought was right and in accordance with campaign promises he had made.

Q. Well, do you mean to say that your direct testimony did not develop the fact that the Booth-Kelly Company had started this agitation, and that Mr. Hawley then carried it on in his campaign and was a great friend of Mr. Booth, and that afterwards when he went to Congress he got through the act that would carry out the threat of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company and had subsequently gotten an act through that would now galvanize the title of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, as you expressed yourself?

A. Well, I believe those are the facts as you have stated them.

Q. So you did think then that Mr. Hawley has been actuated in his public service in this matter by a desire to assist the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company in carrying out its original threat and now giving it entity?

A. That would be calling for a personal opinion and I don't care to give a personal opinion about these people.

Q. Well, isn't that the intention of your testimony?

A. No. My testimony is to try to stick to facts. I have been drawn into some discussion here, but as to that I don't think I will go that far. I don't care to impute or impugn Mr. Hawley's motives. I only know the fact to be that his campaign was contemporaneous with the events which you mention, that he went into Congress on a campaign of agitation against this land grant, and I believe that is the fact.

Q. Well, what special significance did you mean by calling attention to the fact that he and Mr. Booth were very friendly, to quote your exact language?

A. I believe that was called out by the examination, and I am merely stating what I have heard. You may call that hearsay.

Q. You say, "I understood that he and Mr. Booth were very friendly; they were both of the same faith."

A. Yes.

Q. "And prominent in those circles."

A. I believe that is true; and I say that that was called out in examination.

Q. Have you in mind now anyone else who is very friendly with Mr. Hawley and was of the same faith and prominent with him in the same circles?

A. I don't know, I am sure.

Q. Mr. Booth is the only man in the State of Oregon that you call to mind who is friendly to Mr. Hawley and is of the same faith and prominent with him in the same circles?

A. If I were well acquainted in the State of Oregon I might be able to cite others, but at the present time I haven't an acquaintance that would justify me making any such statement.

Q. Well then, do you mean to say that when you called attention specifically to Mr. Booth that you did not mean to carry with it any implication of the motive of Mr. Hawley in this matter?

A. I believe again that my answer in that case was called out by examination, and I have stated the case. Now if there is a connection I think that it will appear right there.

Q. Well, what has taken place to call your mind so particularly to the friendly relations between Mr. Booth and Mr. Hawley and not to the friendly relations between Mr. Hawley and any other resident of this state?

A. I think it is a fair conclusion from known facts, if I may be permitted to testify to conclusion—am I?

Q. You have to a great many.

Mr. Fenton: Answer the question in your own way.

A. That the agitation, as I was informed and as I believe, started at Eugene. As I was informed and as I believe it was started through, largely so, members of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, and I think that this agitation was seized upon for campaign purposes and was used as such, and Mr. Hawley was the beneficiary of this situation which was thus created. I think that is a fair, reasonable, safe conclusion.

Q. Now, you also directed attention to the fact in your examination that Mr. Hawley was somewhat active in securing the passage of what is called the Innocent Purchasers Bill, by which the large holdings of these large purchasers have been confirmed?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, don't you know that that bill was passed unanimously by both houses of Congress?

A. It may; it may be.

Q. Don't you know that that bill was promoted by Senator Bourne, Senator Chamberlain, Congressman Lafferty and Congressman Hawley alike, all of them in favor of it?

A. Undoubtedly, though I don't know the fact; I don't keep up with such things.

Q. Well, why have you been keeping up with Hawley so much and not the rest of them?

A. Well, I haven't been singling out Mr. Hawley; as I say, his name has been called out in this examination.

Q. Well, I have called out the others?

A. Very well.

Q. Now don't you know about the others?

A. Why, what do you want me to testify in regard to the others?

Q. I ask you if you don't knew the others have been equally active and you say no?

A. I say I presume they were. They were all from Oregon.

Q. Well, do you know whether they were or not?

A. This condition, however, exists in Mr. Hawley's district, and this as I understand it was not the basis of any legislative campaign, congressional campaign. It may have been in Mr. Lafferty's case; I don't know; I presume it was. But I suppose all of the representatives in Congress at this time have taken advantage of this unfortunate condition. I don't see that that, however, is pertinent in this inquiry.

Q. Well, it is just as pertinent on cross examination as it is on direct, isn't it?

A. Oh, certainly; certainly.

Q. Now when you examined these lands in your various trips in the grant that you describe were you looking to see how much of it could be settled upon?

A. That was one of the things I looked at.

Q. Why did you want to ascertain that?

A. Why, I didn't go for any such special purpose. I went taking a general look over the grant, to see the character of the land, the timber or whatever there was on it. That is only one element in the calculation.

Q. Now you say you went through the Cascades; at what point?

A. We crossed below here, came out about Hood River.

Q. Any other point?

A. No; we crossed over here and came out at Hood River.

Q. Is that the only place you ever crossed the Cascades?

A. Oh, no; I have crossed the Cascades below.

Q. Where?

A. Klamath County.

Q. So that Multnomah and Klamath Counties were the only two places you ever crossed the Cascades?

A. I think so.

Q. Well, that gave you no personal information as to the land between, of course?

A. Oh, no; I haven't testified to anything else.

Q. Well, I didn't know just where you crossed; it wasn't brought out in your direct examination.

A. Well, I understood that it was brought out and that I testified as not having been in the district around the center of the grant or around east of Eugene, or in any of that country, and it is true.

Q. You say you have never been in the western part of the grant?

A. I have never been in the west side of the grant at all.

Q. You don't know anything of the character of the Coast Range from personal observation, except such as may be——

A. (Interrupting) Except at the boundary of the state on the California side. I know that very well.

Q. But you don't know the character of the Coast Range?

A. North of that point?

Q. North of that point.

A. No.

Q. You do not know that in many places you can find land under cultivation clear to the top of the Coast Range, do you?

A. No, I do not, not on these grant lands. It has never been so reported to me, at least.

Q. Now in making up your statements and in forming your estimate as to the character of this land you have relied considerably upon the reports made to you by these cruisers that you have referred to?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Including Mr. Britt and Mr. Elliott you mentioned in your direct?

A. Yes.

Q. You relied upon their statements, did you?

A. I did, also on Rees's statement.

Q. Well now, did you really trust Britt's judgment in those matters?

A. Oh, I trusted Britt's judgment in a great many matters; no reason why I shouldn't.

Q. Well, weren't there some matters in which you didn't trust his judgment?

A. His judgment?

Q. Yes.

A. What do you refer to?

Q. Well, wasn't Britt one of the fellows that you thought was interested in that sale to John F. Kelly, Trustee?

A. I believe he was.

Q. And you thought that was dishonest on his part, didn't you?

A. I don't believe any man can serve two interests, the buyer and the seller, at the same time.

Q. That is what I mean.

A. Well, that is what I mean.

Q. Now as I recollect it, his interest there was in the name of his wife or some relative, wasn't it?

A. My recollection is that it was; I was so informed.

Q. Well, after having learned that he was guilty of a double dealing of that sort, did you still trust his reports as to other matters that came to your attention?

A. I think Mr. Britt was out of the service about that time, but later I have had talks with Mr. Britt and he is a man who has had a very wide experience here, and as to his testimony as to the character of lands, that does not attempt to fix a value, but as to character of lands I could not understand and I don't understand why his statement should not be taken.

Q. Now you explain this letter that you wrote August 16, 1905, addressed to Mr. Dunne, as having reference to certain conversations that you had had with Mr. Pinchot?

A. Why, a part of the letter refers to that.

Q. Well, I mean the part referring to the change in the attitude of the officers of the Government.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now you say Mr. Pinchot came to you what time?

A. Some time in that year prior to that time, he was in San Francisco, as I remember it, and made that proposal to me, and he afterwards covered it by letter.

Q. Now this proposal, stripping it of the embellishments with which he might have adorned it, was a simple proposition that the Railroad Company should give the Government a large tract of land, approximately four hundred thousand acres, I think you said?

A. I didn't say four hundred thousand; I don't know; but it was as I recollect it all the land—

Q. (Interrupting) In the Cascade Mountain Reserve?

A. In the Cascade Forest Reserve, lying in the eastern part of Jackson and in Klamath counties, the western part of Klamath.

Q. And that the only consideration that the Railroad Company was to get was the privilege of cutting off the timber under such rules and regulations as the Forestry Service might establish?

A. That is what I remember of it.

Q. Well now, did that appear to you to indicate that that was a friendly act?

A. Well, I don't know. I had the feeling all the time that it was the steel hand in the velvet glove; is that it? We were so much in the bad books of the Government at that time I thought Mr. Pinchot thought we would be willing to do most anything.

Q. Well then, it wasn't so much that you thought that he was friendly with you as it was that he was taking advantage of the situation?

A. Well, what I did think was that the attitude having changed to such an extent that a representative of the administration would come asking something in the form of a favor, whatever you might think about the ultimate outcome of it, was such a remarkable change that if we wanted to get our transfer of that grant recognized, recognized within a reasonable time, why that was the time to do it.

Q. Why, you hadn't any idea of complying with his request, did you?

A. I had none; no.

Q. Nor any other officer of the Railroad Company, so far as you know?

A. I don't believe so.

Q. Your idea was to string him along until you could get what you wanted and then turn him down; is that it?

A. Oh, no, no, no; not at all; because the matter was simply pending at that time and this other matter was pending at that time, and it was not a question of stringing anybody because the Government of the United States had a right to make any such suggestion or proposition and have it considered.

Q. But you have no further explanation to make as to why you considered that an evidence of friendship on the part of the officials of the Government?

A. Not at all, excepting the attitude, as I say, both of that and the Reclamation Service, all wanting something and wanting to apparently be friendly.

Q. Now you remember of writing the letter of August 11, 1905, to Mr. D. A. Chambers that has been introduced in evidence, don't you?

A. Yes.

Q. Now if you didn't have in mind a transfer of the Oregon and California Railroad grant why did you use this language: "I merely wish to explain that what I wish to know is what is the practice regarding transfers of grants made by Congress for railroad purposes, such as Southern Pacific, Oregon and California," and so forth?

A. Such as what?

Q. Southern Pacific, Oregon and California, and so forth?

A. Oh; Oregon and California has no significance there. I might just as well have said Central Pacific. That just came in my head.

Q. Now can you explain why throughout this correspondence, including your letter to Mr. Dunne, there is not the slightest reference to the transaction to which it relates?

A. Why, there were so many letters that passed in regard to that same thing. That is simply a coincidence. There was no intention at all to leave out anything. And another thing, while I think of it, you called attention to the fact that I have cited as an example the Southern Pacific Railroad Company grants and the Oregon and California Railroad grants is that they are the particular grants which we dealt with that have an indemnity provision, and that was the great thing that was the stumbling block in that case.

Q. Well, I know, but now if you were simply inquiring with reference to the Southern Pacific grant why didn't you say so, say that you wanted to know what would be the practice under the Act of July 27th, 1866, granting lands to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

A. Why, probably because it didn't occur to me to do so.

Q. You knew that the Interior Department had held that some grants were assignable and that others were not?

A. I did not, or I would not have taken the trouble to have Chambers look the matter up. You see, I am not an attorney, and there are a lot of things I don't know and I depend on attorneys to find out for me.

Q. Well, do you consider that in asking an attorney a question as to whether the Southern Pacific Railroad grant in California could be assigned and the assignee could exercise the right of indemnity selection could be intelligently presented to an attorney without calling his attention to the grant that you had in mind?

A. My dear sir, as I have said there are a number of letters that preceded and also followed that particular letter. That letter possibly had some ear mark on it at the top of it as to subject that would disclose that; whether that copy shows it I don't know.

Q. This letter shows, Mr. Eberlein, that it is the first communication from yourself to Mr. Chambers upon the subject, because it starts out and says, "I found it necessary to wire you today as follows."

A. Yes.

Q. Then quotes the telegram, and then you follow on and explain to him why you had to send it. It shows upon the face it is the first communication.

A. Yes. Well, what is the matter with the letter?

Q. What I am asking you is, why, if it referred only to the Southern Pacific Railroad grant you didn't mention it in any of this correspondence?

A. It is not necessary in that case at all. I was asking for an opinion as to a principle, and if the Government of the United States had in other cases accepted an assignee of a congressional grant that is what I wanted to know and it didn't make any difference to me what name you put on it. As far as that objection goes I consider that entirely immaterial. But I will say here, if that is what you want to know, that if you think that there is anything in that correspondence that even obliquely refers to this Oregon and California grant I can tell you emphatically no, it does not. The idea of transferring the Oregon and California grant to a land company was never sprung that I know of.

Q. Have you any way of explaining how or why that correspondence was filed in the Oregon and California Railroad file?

A. I can't tell you. That might be the blunder of a clerk. It may not have been Oregon and California file; I don't know that it was.

A. I can testify as to the filing system before the fire, and that is what governs here.

Mr. Townsend: Wasn't there a separate filing system for the Oregon and California correspondence?

A. No, sir. We kept them filed, as I recollect it, by a system which—we didn't keep them in that shape; I will tell you that right now. That is something that wasn't saved from the fire, which you have in your hand.

Mr. Fenton: The box, you mean?

A. No; the box wasn't saved from the fire.

Mr. Fenton: That is the letter file?

A. No, no; the case wasn't filed; or that wasn't the way they filed letters. Now, what you have there, gentlemen, is the results of this tax investigation in Oregon, which happened to be saved and thrown into that box. But those boxes never were in the fire, which can be seen. You could not scorch part of those contents and not scorch the outside.

Q. Now you say that when the Government was installing the Klamath Irrigation project that the Railroad Company, referring, I assume, to the Southern Pacific, did everything it could to get the states of Oregon and California to consent to either the raising or the lowering of the level of those intra-state lakes, or securing legislation which granted to the Federal Government the title to the bed of the lake.

A. Those series of lakes, naming them in the acts.

Q. Now what did the Railroad Company do to induce the states to pass those bills?

A. I don't know what steps were taken. I only know that I was importuned to get Mr. Harriman interested so that the matter might be taken up in these two legislatures and passed. The time was getting short and what steps were taken here I don't know because I wasn't present in the state. I was in the East at the time.

Q. Well, you have testified, however, that the Railroad Company had sufficient influence to get those bills through the legislatures of the two states?

A. Did I? They may have had; I don't know; but I wasn't present in the state and I only know the fact that the bills passed in the time that the Government desired.

Q. You say here, "It finally resulted in the passage of acts by both California and Oregon?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Granting the rights of the states to the United States?

A. We did everything we could to assist them at that time and it was to the work done by the Railroad Company that they owe the success in that matter wholly."

A. Well, I will stand by it. I believe it is true.

Q. Now, Mr. Eberlein, you say that the Booth-Kelly people started this agitation in 1906 and that it spread quite rapidly until about August that the public agitation was so great that you took cognizance of it in some way, it was brought to your attention in some way. That is the general substance of your former testimony. Hadn't there been considerable agitation before that time?

A. Why, not that character of agitation; not demands. What I referred to was the proceedings and resolutions by different commercial bodies, of which they always favored me with a copy and a pretty stiff letter. That was the first time there was any organized movement that I know of.

Q. You had been anticipating that for sometime, hadn't you?

A. That there would be trouble over that?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, I think that signs pointed that way.

Q. As a matter of fact, when you first came out here you read the granting acts and discovered this provision, which is the general basis of this present litigation, didn't you?

A. Why, I read the granting acts but as to that clause that you mention I was informed at the time that that was not considered operative, and I will take this opportunity of changing my very unfortunate remark that I made there a while ago without any reference at all that could be offensive to any one in regard to the opinions of attorneys. I sincerely regret the remark that might be construed in a way that I had no intention at all. What I had reference to was that I was informed and believed that up to the time that I came here that these titles had passed muster with attorneys and that it was the consensus of legal opinion here on the Coast and in Oregon that the language did not operate to cloud the title to these lands.

Q. But, I say, you learned of the provision in the grant, without calling now for any testimony as to what you were advised with reference to its validity?

A. Oh, I read the act, yes. I believe there is some such language in the Union Pacific grant, but I don't remember as to that exactly.

Q. No; it is entirely different in the Union Pacific grant.

A. The same question was brought out in the old Crowe resolution at one time I remember down there.

Q. But I want to get at the question now of the responsibility of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company for this agitation. As a matter of fact, were you not looking for agitation and wouldn't there have been the same agitation if the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company had never been in existence?

A. I don't believe there would. Possibly. You can't tell what might have come about. But a concerted action of this kind has to have promotion by some individual or individuals that have power and have standing in their districts, and it originated at Eugene, and as I say I am informed and believe that R. A. Booth was chairman of the first meeting that was called to protest.

Q. The matter was under discussion and consideration, however, by yourself and other officers of the Company prior to 1906, was it not?

A. I don't think it was under any serious discussion at any time. I have one recollection of having made an inquiry in regard to some case or other in which that was spoken of. I remember particularly of taking notice of a suit or an effort made by so-called bona fide purchasers who attempted to acquire the lands of the Elijah Smith grant in that way, and I took the matter up then and suggested—

Mr. Fenton (interrupting): You refer to the Southern Oregon Company's grant?

A. Yes, sir, the Southern Oregon Company. I suggested at that time that if those clauses were identical with these in the Oregon and California grant, that any adjudication there would undoubtedly affect us.

Q. Well now, if the Booth-Kelly Company was responsible for initiating this agitation, why, in your letter of February 20th, 1904, addressed to Judge Cornish, did you use these words: "I hand you copy of letter written to Mr. Herrin on the subject of the two dollar and fifty cent limitation sales to actual settlers in the grant to the Oregon and California Railroad Company. The matter is going to come to a head without any action on our part. I enclose copy of the printed reports on the subject. I have advice from Oregon that there is considerable excitement and undoubtedly we shall be obliged to defend ourselves vigorously. I wired Mr. Andrews as per copy enclosed to keep to work"—I think that should be at work, probably a clerical error—"vigorously with his defaulted contracts so as to save us as much trouble as possible."

A. I am familiar with the letter. Now what is that question? What did I mean by it?

Q. I say if the agitation was started by the Booth-Kelly Company why did you write him in 1904, two years before, that you were advised that there was considerable excitement in Oregon then upon the subject and you should undoubtedly be obliged to defend yourselves vigorously?

A. Because that was the only thing that a business man of reasonable intelligence could infer from what was transpiring. That had reference, I believe, to this action I have just testified to in reference to the Southern Oregon Company.

Q. Oh, yes; the correspondence shows that.

A. Well now, that is what I meant, and I think it is easily inferable that if those people had a like clause in their grant that undoubtedly the whole thing would spread. It did not, though, at that time, and the peculiar circumstance in all this is that this business, so far as the Oregon and California Railroad Company is concerned, became acute only after the fire. Then it came to a head with surprising rapidity when we were entirely helpless to proceed.

Q. Now Mr. Eberlein, I want you when you return to San Francisco to consult such records of the office of Mr. McAllister as you can and designate in a written statement the deeds or contracts to the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company which you contend—

A. (Interrupting) Are improvident?

Q. (Continuing) Were improvident and included special privileges extended to that Company, and address your communication to Miss Margaret A. Fleming, the Special Examiner before whom this testimony is being taken, at Postoffice Building in the City of Portland. Identify it by your signature so that she may extend it in the record as your complete answer to one of the questions which I asked you and which you were unable to answer from the material now before you.

A. I will be very, very glad to do so.

Mr. Fenton: Will the witness be good enough to furnish counsel for the Government and counsel for the defendant a copy of his letter for their files?

Witness: Yes, sir.

RE-DIRECT EXAMINATION.

Questions by Mr. Fenton:

You were asked about a reservation of a hundred thousand acres of timber lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company for railroad purposes; do you or do you not know whether or not the Union Pacific Railroad Company has a reservation of about forty thousand acres of timber land of its own which is likewise under reservation for railroad purposes?

A. You mean the Union Pacific?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I do not. I don't recall any reservation there.

Q. You don't remember?

A. No. Mr. McAllaster would be competent to testify about that.

Q. You don't know whether there is or is not?

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. Now referring to the John F. Kelly, Trustee, contract which you regarded as improvident, and which you learned was a contract in which some twenty-five people were interested and for whom he was trustee, and in which you say some employes or officers of the company were interested, I wish you would state to the Court whether or not any of the officers of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, or whether or not any of the counsel for that Company or for the Southern Pacific Company, and particularly whether Mr. P. F. Dunne, Mr. William D. Fenton, Mr. William Singer, Jr., Mr. William F. Herrin, were in any wise interested in, connected with, or parties to, that contract, directly or indirectly?

A. No, sir, not that I am advised. The names of railroad men whom I identified on that contract were those employes of the Southern Pacific Company.

Q. Were they men of official responsibility, executive officers of the Company?

A. They were not in the first rank.

Q. Were they in any wise connected with the land department excepting Mr. Britt?

A. No, sir.

Q. Who was interested as a cruiser?

A. No, sir.

Q. And who had nothing to do with fixing the values?

A. With the traffic and operating departments were all.

Q. From whom did Judge Cornish take his directions as to any action for the Oregon and California Railroad Company?

A. Mr. Harriman, I understand.

Q. You were present at the meeting of the Irrigation Congress held at Sacramento in 1907, in September, which Mr. Harriman addressed?

A. I went there to hear the address.

Q. And did you hear it?

A. I did.

Q. Do you think that is reported officially in the proceedings of that year of the Association?

A. I was not a delegate to that particular Congress, but I was officially connected with the National Irrigation Association at its annual meeting in Portland, and at that meeting and at all others that I have attended there was an official stenographer who took down verbatim all the addresses and the debate, I believe.

Q. Now you spoke about your idea of the sale of these timber lands which you suggested to your superiors when sales should be resumed of timber land, was to reserve in the contract of sale the products of the land. Do you mean that the Company making the sale should reserve in that contract, or was it your recommendation to reserve in that proposed contract anything else other than the products of the manufacture of the timber, or did it have application to grain and wheat?

A. Nothing whatever but the transport of the product of the timber in cases where it was shipped.

Q. This contract of reservation would be in the contract of sale, and was it your idea that such a reservation or covenant should be in the deed?

A. I understood—my advice was, that it would be necessary to include it in the deed.

Q. Yes. That was never adopted?

A. Never to my knowledge.

Q. Any reservation of that kind as to the transportation of the products, consisting of timber, by the Southern Pacific Company in this case, or the Oregon and California Railroad Company, if it should resume the operation of its road in its own name, you said would be at current rates. Do you not know that those rates, if unreasonable, would be fixed by the State Commissions of the State for local hauls or intra-state hauls, and by the Interstate Commerce Commission for interstate hauls?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whatever the agreement might be?

A. Yes, sir; certainly.

Q. You understood that, did you?

A. I understood that, and my idea was to include that provision so that it would be thoroughly understood.

RE-CROSS EXAMINATION.

Questions by Mr. Townsend:

In any of your experience in connection with this land grant, and by that I mean the two land grants involved in this suit, do you know of any instance where the purchaser of lands knew at the time of the purchase of this clause in the grant which in terms restricts the manner in which the granted lands might be sold?

A. I wasn't present at the time these sales were made.

Q. Well now, I am asking you if anything that came within your observation had any bearing upon that subject, to the end that I may send for the evidence if it is in existence?

A. The only thing that I know of is talk with these different purchasers who came in and spoke of that.

Q. But that was after this agitation arose, was it not?

A. Oh, I think so; probably before in some cases, but always after the execution of the contract. I wasn't present at that time, and whatever of that kind came up was taken up afterward, and it is only from what these people have said that leads me to believe that they examined their title and believed that they were safe in getting it.

Q. That they had no knowledge of any defect of any kind?

A. Oh, they had knowledge. I know some of them evidently had knowledge. I mean the larger purchasers. The small purchasers, I haven't an idea that they ever knew of it at all or examined the title. They bought under an executory contract and they never saw an abstract.

Q. You don't know whether any of the large ones did at the time of the making of the sale, or not, but you do recall that some of them spoke of it afterwards?

A. They spoke of it afterwards in such a way that led me to believe that that matter was discussed and passed up.

Q. Now do you remember who discussed it with you?

A. Well, now, this is a hazy recollection. I can't swear positively, but I had a number of talks with Mr. A. B. Hammond, and it is in my mind, when you mention that, that he told me of that. He is the kind of a man who would examine his purchase pretty carefully, and I believe I have heard it mentioned, just when I don't know, that this matter was gone into by—

Q. (Interrupting) Mr. Linthicum?

A. Yes, for the Weyerhausers.

Q. No; for the Booth-Kelly.

A. Booth-Kelly?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, didn't they make—I have got it when they bought out Lindley that they made an examination of that.

Q. They may have done so at that time, too, for all I know.

A. Yes.

Q. With the exceptions that you have stated, you know of no specific instances of that kind?

A. I don't recall any; no.

Q. That is, that you recall now?

A. I don't recall them now.

RE-DIRECT EXAMINATION.

Questions by Mr. Fenton:

Out of the many hundreds of contracts in all nearly eight thousand, you had no opportunity to talk with the vendees or with the grantees as to whether they knew at the time or before they bought the land as to what their knowledge was of these provisos in the acts of Congress of April 10, 1869, and May 4, 1870?

A. Oh, no; I never had any talks with them generally.

Q. What you mean to say is, then, that you never heard that question discussed by any of these purchasers or parties who had acquired the title until after this question was raised in the public prints and in these discussions?

A. Yes; that is what I intend to convey.

RE-CROSS EXAMINATION.

Questions by Mr. Townsend:

Just one more question on that subject. You found nothing in the records of the office before the fire indicating that any of the purchasers had discovered these provisions and objected to the title upon that ground?

A. No, I never saw a case of that kind.

Whereupon J. N. SHERBURNE, called as a witness on behalf of defendants, being first duly sworn, testified that he resides at San Francisco, California, and is head clerk of Government accounts of the Southern Pacific Company, and has been in the employ of that company and its predecessor since 1881. Its predecessor in the operation of the railroad from Roseville Junction to the extension towards the California-Oregon state line, was the California and Oregon Railroad Company, and later the Central Pacific Railway Company, and he has been continuously in the department mentioned up to the present time. He had immediate charge of the preparation of Defendants Exhibit 288, purporting to be a "Statement of Government freight and passenger transportation over the free road between Portland, Oregon and Roseville Junction, California, for the years 1906 to 1910, inclusive, showing proportions accruing north and south of Oregon-California state line." This exhibit was prepared as to freight from the waybills, and the transportation of passengers from the ticket reports of the station agents.

Whereupon it was understood that all the evidence upon this subject should be received subject to the objection of the Government that it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and to the objection that the amount of service rendered by the Company in transportation of troops and property is no defense in this case; it being understood that no objection is made on account of not producing the original books of the company.

Whereupon witness further testified that the exhibit is a correct statement of the various amounts, and what it purports to show, as shown by the records of the company for that period. The records of these accounts in San Francisco prior to April 18, 1906 were destroyed by fire. He was familiar with these accounts previous to that time, that is, from 1882 down to 1906. The volume of business of this kind in the movement of Government freight and passengers over the road from Portland, Oregon, to Roseville Junction, California, from 1882 up to the year 1906, was approximately the same by years as shown in Defendants' Exhibit 288, as he remembers, with the exception of the period of the Spanish-American War in 1898, when it was heavier by reason of a great many regiments coming through Portland to San Francisco. He recalls at that time several of these regiments, some of the northern regiments, intended for the Philippines and destined for Manila were moved by the company from Portland to Roseville Junction and then to San Francisco. He recalls particularly Idaho and South Dakota and Minnesota. With the exception of the special occasion of 1898, known as the War with Spain, the movement of Government freight and passengers was approximately the same from the time the road opened, as shown in Defendants' Exhibit 288.

Defendants' Exhibit 336 is Department Circular No. 62 of date October 29, 1907, as issued by the Comptroller of the United States Treasury, different departments, with a view of having a uniform bill of lading on transportation, requested to cover movements of troops and property of the United States, and is furnished by the United States and the Treasury Department for use by this company and other companies in the transportation of Government employes and property.

Whereupon defendants offered and there was received in evidence, Defendants' Exhibit 336 which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified as such.

Whereupon witness further testified that Defendants Exhibit 337 is Circular No. 16, Quartermaster General's Office, of date July 1, 1912, and is entitled "Schedule of Land-Grant and Bond-Aided Railroads of the United States and Instructions concerning Settlement of Accounts over such roads, with a Compendium of United States Laws showing the Conditions of the Grants or Subsidies," and has a map in the back of same, and was issued by the Quartermaster's Department of the United States Army, as a guide to the Railroad Company performing the transportation, the manner in which the bills are to be rendered for charges, and also as a guide to the settling or disbursing officers of the Government as to the settlement of such bills. There is at page 42 of this Circular the following:

No. 58.—Southern Pacific Company. From Roseville Junction, California, to East Portland, Oregon, under the column Statute, Volume and Page, these entries—July 25, 1866. 14—239; June 25, 1868, 15—8; April 10, 1869, 16—47, and opposite thereto these words: "And be it further enacted, That the grants aforesaid are made upon the condition that the said companies shall keep said railroad and telegraph in repair and use, and shall at all times transport the mails upon said railroad, and transmit dispatches by said telegraph line for the Government of the United States, when required so to do by any department thereof, and that the Government shall at all times have the preference in the use of said railroad and telegraph therefor at fair and reasonable rates of compensation, not to exceed the rates paid by private parties for the same kind of service. And said railroad shall be and remain a public highway for the use of the Government of the United States, free of all toll or other charges upon the transportation of the property or troops of the United States; and the same shall be transported over said road at the cost, charge, and expense of the corporations or companies owning or operating the same, when so required by the Government of the United States.—Act of July 25, 1866, Section 5."

This is the Act or section of the Act under which this service of which he has been speaking, has been performed by the Southern Pacific Company and its predecessors, since the construction of the road and since his knowledge of the same in 1882. The free service furnished by the company and represented by Defendants' Exhibit 288, is the free service referred to in the Act. The object of keeping a record of the amount of that free service is for statistical purposes. There is no stated period for the issuance of these circulars. Circular No. 16 is practically a reissue of Circular No. 13 issued June 1, 1912, and Circular No. 16 is the one under which the Government and the company are now doing business.

Whereupon defendants offered and there was received in evidence Circular No. 16, marked "Defendants' Exhibit 337," which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Circular No. 16 practically supercedes General Orders No. 41 from the War Department of date February 28, 1907, entitled "Regulations governing the military transportation over land grant and bonded railroads and the settlement of accounts for such service, with a compendium of United States laws showing the condition of the grants or subsidies, with map and other data, somewhat similar to the Circular No. 16, identified as Defendants' Exhibit 337, and containing at page 42, under No. 50, this entry: "Southern Pacific Company, San Francisco and Portland lines, from junction with Central Pacific Railroad to northern boundary of California," giving then the dates of the statutes and the section 5 of the Act of July 25, 1866, the same as set out in Circular No. 16, and which General Order No. 41 appears to be issued by order of the Secretary of War, J. Franklin Bell, Major-General Chief of Staff.

Defendants' Exhibit 338 is a complete set of forms of requisition made by the United States under this Act of Congress, upon the railroad operating the line from Roseville Junction, California, to Portland, Oregon, and they are known as a Quartermaster's Department United States Army bill of lading, requesting the transportation of property of the United States in three sections; the first the bill of lading proper, the second, a memorandum bill of lading, the third the shipping order. Also a Government Request for Transportation of passengers, Quartermaster's Department Form No. 17. This is only a copy of the form that is used as a requisition for passenger transportation. It is not valid until it is filled out by the proper officers, and is identical with that used for transportation, but has on it the words in red ink "Copy not valid transportation request." The transportation request is issued by an officer of the army requesting certain transportation of a railroad company, the document being filled out. showing the number of passengers to be transported, and between what points. That document is surrendered to the company's agent, and transportation is furnished, either tickets, or a ticket covering the number called for by the document, the agent accepting the transportation request in lieu of cash. The request is then sent to the general office by the agent, to cover tickets issued by him, and the general office uses that as a bill against the Government for the service. If it is a free service, it is carried on the books of the company without charge to the United States and no bill presented. The three blanks relating to shipment of goods of property, are filled out or issued by a shipping officer, stating the commodity and points between which it is to be carried. That is also surrendered to the company, and used by the company to bill against the Government for such services, and if it is free service it is held in the records of the company and not surrendered to the Government, which is not presented with a bill. If the United States desires to ship a regiment from St. Paul to San Francisco, going partly over bond-aided or land-grant roads, over which the United States is entitled to free transportation, and it is routed in part over non-aided railroads, intermediate or connecting, and reaches Portland over a non-aided road, or a road over which the Government is not entitled to free transportation, the shipment or movement of a regiment, and a like movement of Government property under this statute, receives free transportation over the road from Portland to Roseville Junction, and if the movement is destined over the non-aided road from Roseville Junction to San Francisco, that is charged against the Government and bill presented, and that part is paid by the Government; possibly not for the full amount which the company would charge for that service, but the Government makes a cash payment; that is, if the Government asks for service over a portion of the mileage that is bond-aided, over which it is entitled to free transportation, and it is a through movement over a part of a line that is connected therewith, that is entitled to charge for and be paid. The traffic offered by the Government at any point in the United States moves over this segment or portion of the bond-aided line, and also over that portion which is free, and it does not make any difference where the traffic originated, or over what roads it comes, if it is Government traffic, entitled to move free over a bond-aided or land-grant road over a portion of that haul, it is carried free. The business does not have to originate at Roseville Junction on the one hand, or at Portland on the other in order to entitle it to free movement.

Whereupon defendants offered and their was received in evidence these four documents marked "Defendants' Exhibit 338," which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified as such.

Whereupon witness further testified that the United States is making these requests continually and has been up to this date, and the company is furnishing under the Act of Congress all transportation requested by the Government.

Whereupon witness, on cross examination, further testified that this transportation commenced in 1887, he believes, when connections were made between the California and Oregon and Oregon and California Railroads. There were a few military posts along the uncompleted portions of the roads prior to the completion of the continuous lines. The company used to have business as far north as Redding on the original California and Oregon Railroad running from Roseville Junction north, and there were a few shipments of property for the Weather Bureau and Signal Service, but the volume of business did not reach the company until the road was opened in the middle of December, 1887. The company commenced to keep an account of the amount of this traffic furnished the Government from the time the service was performed. It was in vogue when he took charge of the work, so that it was kept by his predecessor, but he has no personal knowledge of the time the company did commence to keep a record. He does not know anything about how to compute the amount of traffic of this character that the Government may have lost by reason of the delay in completing the construction of the railroad in accordance with the terms of the granting Act, and it would be difficult to make a computation of that kind. It is the rule of the company that a record be kept of all transportation, whatever its nature, not only the Government transportation, but commercial, and this is the reason for keeping these records for statistical purposes. They keep a record of the amount paid by the Government for the transportation of mails, and that amounts to a considerable sum each year, on the road from Roseville Junction to Portland. The company is paid for that service on rates made by Congress, based on weight, but he does not recall the amount. He thinks this transportation account is greater than the mail account.

Whereupon, on redirect examination, witness further testified that he became an employe of the Central Pacific Railway Company in 1881, and at that time the Central Pacific Railway Company was operating the line from Roseville Junction towards the north as far as completed, and the Oregon and California Railroad Company operated the road from Portland to Ashland prior to 1887, and was operating the road, as he recollects, from 1882 down as far south as it was completed. He does not mean to say that the first free transportation under this Act of July 25, 1866, began in 1887, when the road was completed through. The company handled or had free transportation, to his knowledge, since 1882, when he went to work on that particular class, that is, as far north as the road was opened, but he knows nothing of that traffic from Portland as far south as it was opened. He had nothing to do with the Oregon and California Railroad Company. The Southern Pacific Company was not incorporated until 1884, after the Central Pacific Railway Company was incorporated. He has no knowledge whatever of how much business of this kind was moved from 1869 up to completion in 1887 on the Oregon and California Railroad Company. Fort Vancouver is situated six miles from Portland, and Vancouver Barracks are on the Columbia River, and they have been there for a great many years.

Whereupon, on recross examination, witness further testified that it is his understanding there was a post at Vancouver before there was any railroad in there. Vancouver is on the Northern Pacific Railroad Company line. He remembers that the Northern Pacific was completed by Villard before he failed in December, 1883. While the Northern Pacific is a land-grant road, it is not under obligation to furnish free transportation. It is what is called a fifty per cent line, that is, in accepting the grant of lands, the company conceded the right of Congress to make such rates as Congress saw fit, and Congress has seen fit to cut the rate to fifty per cent.

Whereupon it was stipulated that J. A. Ormondy, Chief Clerk of John M. Scott, General Passenger Agent of the Southern Pacific Company Lines in Oregon, would testify substantially the same as J. N. Sherburne on the subject matter of inquiry, other than as to the volume of business with which the witness is not familiar.

Whereupon, F. W. SERCOMBE, a witness called on behalf of defendants, being first duly sworn, testified that he resides at East Orange, New Jersey; is an accountant, and was in the office of the auditor at San Francisco, California, on September 20, 1905, and prior thereto, up to as late as January 4, 1906. His superior or chief officer, part of the time was George Klink, who was the auditor of the Southern Pacific Company and subsequently Charles B. Seger. These statements, Defendants' Exhibit 320, consisting of "Statement No. 1, showing by counties the assessment upon Congressional lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company from 1891 to 1904, inclusive," and "Statement No. 1-A, showing by Counties the assessment upon Congressional lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company from 1891 to 1904, inclusive," the first statement bearing date September 20, 1905, the second statement being dated January 4, 1906, were prepared under his direct supervision and instruction, in San Francisco, at the time specified and mentioned on these respective statements. The signature in the lower left hand corner of Statement No. 1 is his signature, and indicates that, to the best of his knowledge and belief, the statements are correct. The facts purporting to be stated, for instance, in the column as to "Taxes Paid" for each year, were obtained from the tax receipts of the company in the auditor's office, showing taxes paid on these lands. These compilations or computations showing average assessed valuation per acre, and average tax paid per acre, were made under his direction. It is his recollection that the figures showing the total acreage in columns, for the various counties, were obtained by him from the tax receipts and added up, and these statements, computations and figures are correct, based upon the tax receipts and the records of the company examined by him at the time. His recollection is that these documents were prepared at the request of the office in Portland.

Whereupon, on cross examination, witness further testified that at the time these statements were made, Charles B. Seger was auditor. Seger did not sign these statements for the reason that he had recently come from Texas and was not thoroughly acquainted with the organization, and for the further reason that witness was in charge of the general accounts of the Southern Pacific Company, which included the so-called land accounts. He supervised the preparation of these statements to the extent of indicating to the clerks, precisely what kind of a statement he desired prepared, the documents from which this information should be compiled, and the manner in which it should be finally turned over to him, for transmission to the person requesting the information. He was asked for certain information and then issued instructions or directions to his clerks to prepare these statements accordingly. He supervised the preparation of the statements. He would check the work against the records of the company, the ledgers of the company, to see that the total taxes paid would agree with the aggregate of the statement, and it is his recollection that he would and did apply this check to the work to see whether the total amount corresponded with the ledger account.

Q. Well, now, for illustration, I call your attention to Statement No. 1-A, referring to Tillamook County for the year 1902. I see that it states here the acres assessed to be 60,261.39; assessed valuation $148,420; average assessed valuation per acre $2.50. It shows right on the face of it that it is not correct. Did you notice that?

A. In what way is it not correct?

Q. Well, there is only one way in which it could not be correct; that is by being incorrect.

A. That the division of the acreage into the assessed valuation does not equal $2.50?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I would have to verify that before I could say it is not correct.

Q. Well, you could see that 60,000 acres at $2.50 would be $150,000. It is more than 60,000 acres, and the total assessed valuation is $148,420, and the average is stated there to be exactly $2.50 an acre. Did you pay any attention to those things to say whether that is correct or not?

A. Not these deductions. They were made mentally or by pencil by the clerk preparing them. Those two columns, though, were from the original tax receipts. A clerk is liable to make a mistake there in carrying out those particular extensions; that information being prepared principally for the person who requested it as to the average assessment and average tax per acre, and in no way affecting the acreage or the taxes paid.

Q. Well, you did not purposely have those made incorrect, did you?

A. Oh, no; no.

Q. There is no reason why it should not have been made correct, is there?

A. No reason at all. There may be a clerical error in making that computation anywhere in the statement.

Q. I also observe here Washington County for the year 1892; acres assessed 22.748; assessed valuation $22,915, showing average assessed valuation more than $1.00 an acre, although it is stated here to be 58 cents.

A. Yes.

Q. Have you any way to account for that?

A. The same thing applies. It may also be accounted for by a typographical error in the stenographer copying the figures.

Q. The statement shows on page 1, if I understand it correctly, average of 2 cents and 7 mills tax paid per acre per year for the years 1891 to 1904, inclusive. Is that correct?

A. Yes, 2 cents and 7 mills.

Q. So that the total tax paid during those fourteen years average per acre is 37 cents and 8 mills, or fourteen times 2 cents and 7 mills?

A. Yes, that is the average.

Q. And, if I understand you correctly, these statements are based entirely upon your ledger account showing tax account, taxes paid, and the receipts received each year from the local county officers?

A. County officer, whoever he was, yes.

Whereupon, on redirect examination, witness further testified that he is now employed in the office of the comtroller of the Southern Pacific Company at New York, Mr. Mahl, and has been continuously in the employ of the Southern Pacific Company during the times with reference to which he has testified. At the time these tables were prepared he was in San Francisco; he left San Francisco after the fire of April 18, 1906.

Whereupon, A. N. HOFFMAN called as a witness on behalf of defendants, being first duly sworn testified, that he is clerk in the Land Department of the Southern Pacific Company and has been in the employ of the Company two and a half years as clerk, on the records in the office and examining records in the United States District Land Offices. His work in United States Land Offices has been abstracting entries that bear adversely to the Company in different land offices in California, Nevada and Roseburg, Oregon. He has made an examination of the land in the Roseburg land office for the purpose of ascertaining the acreage of public lands not entered within the limits of the grant of July 25, 1866 and May 4, 1870. Although he did not enter all the work on the map, he checked it back with reference to the map. He verified "Defendants' Exhibit 339" in his examination of the public records of the Local Land Office of the United States at Roseburg. The red squares on this exhibit show the vacant public land as to the even numbered sections within the limits of the grant. These red squares circled with green show the land within the forest reserves, the limits of forest reserves, and those with other circles show lands withdrawn for power sites, Fisheries Bureau and Indian Reservations. The memorandum with this map showing the estimated acreage of public lands in the Portland and Roseburg, Oregon, Land Districts of 1,012,960 acres within the limits of these grants as public lands not entered in the counties of Multnomah, Washington, Tillamook, Yamhill, Polk, Clackamas, Marion, Lincoln, Benton, Linn, Lane, Coos, Curry, Douglas, Josephine, Jackson, and Klamath, is, so far as these counties lie within the United States Roseburg Land Office District, correct on an estimated basis. In making the investigation, he worked from the tract books and from the plats in the District Land Office and those that showed vacant, he marked upon some smaller plats, that he had, and used that data from original search of the public records and transferred it to Defendants' Exhibit 339 which is correct according to the search which he made. Mr. Wall, he believes, assisted in the preparation of this data on this map and statement with reference to the lands situated in the Portland United States Land Office District and he and Wall worked together in connection with the preparation of this map. Wall did the work in the office and witness transferred Wall's work on to this map; that is to say, Wall did the work in the Local Portland United States Land Office, searching the records there for the data and furnished him with data, and witness transferred it to this map in connection with the work that witness had personally done in the Roseburg office. These two districts covered all those counties mentioned in this list and a little more, he believes, up north. The table covers all of the vacant lands within the limits of the grant in these two land districts.

Whereupon defendants offered and there were received in evidence these Exhibits marked "Defendants' Exhibit 339" and "Defendants' Exhibit 340" to which complainant objected as immaterial.

Whereupon it was stipulated that the Wall referred to by the witness would, if called, testify as to said exhibits the same as witness Hoffman and that the testimony of the two witnesses would cover both exhibits, excepting that the testimony of Wall would relate to the land situated in the United States Land Office Portland District, which exhibits are hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified herein as such.

Whereupon L. F. STEEL, recalled as a witness for defendants, further testified that he had custody of the corporate records of the Oregon and California Railroad Company under W. W. Cotton, Secretary of that Company up to January 15, 1912, when Cotton resigned and his successor was elected. He has prepared a summary showing the stockholders, number of shares, the date of the election of directors, president, vice-president and secretary from the earliest period of the Oregon and California Railroad Company down to January 15, 1912 and "Defendants' Exhibit 341" is the statement prepared by him from the records of the Company and is a correct summary of the facts as shown by the corporate records of the Company and was prepared at the request of Mr. Townsend, representing the United States in this suit.

Whereupon defendants offered and there was received in evidence "Defendants' Exhibit 341" which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified herein as such.

Whereupon JOSEPH GASTON, recalled as a witness on behalf of defendants testified that he is acquainted with the work which the Oregon Central Railroad Company East Side, known as the Salem Company, did by way of construction, grading etc. of its railroad from East Portland south in 1868 and prior to April 1869. They were in a contest with the Salem Company with respect to the land grant made by Congress in aid of the construction of the railroad from Portland to the California line and it was the interest and purpose of himself and associates to delay the East Side or Salem Company in every way they possibly could so as to exhaust their resources and prevent them from being in a position to have any claims or chance to get the land grant for their Company. In this work of opposing them, he and his associates, incited opposition among the land owners to give them the right of way or asking exhorbitant prices for the right of way and they prevented them in every possible way they could, from getting labor, and did all they could to break down their credit and stir up law suits against them about their right of way. For the purpose of ascertaining the amount of actual construction work and the extent of the grading and other construction work between East Portland and Salem, he went over the line once with the superintendent of construction of the Oregon Central Railroad, or as it was called then the West Side. Afterwards this superintendent M. S. Hart went over the East Side line several times as many as three times, he thinks, to ascertain how much work the East Side Company had done and where it was and what sort of work it was and what probably were the expense in doing this work, his object being to ascertain the resources and to exhaust them, if they could. Prior to February 1, 1869 and during 1868, including January, 1869, as nearly as he could estimate it, there was work done all the way along the line of the Oregon Central of Salem, East Side, from East Portland to within five miles of the City of Salem. He thinks there was one patch of work on the south side of Lake Labish, and it was in places all along, owing to the disposition of farmers to give right of way and the facility for making a showing of work done, and his associates had Mr. Hart, the superintendent of the West Side Company make an estimate on his last trip, as to the amount of what Hart thought the whole amount of money the East Side Company had expended, that is suposing that they had paid for it all and Mr. Hart put the amount at $150,000.

Hart's estimate was made in February 1869, and he thinks that Hart's estimate was reasonable. He and his associates and everybody else knew that the East Side Company was not connecting up its work, that it would not count on the first 20 miles of railroad but was work that would count in the construction of the line.

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

"Q. Do you know anything about the pay-roll set out at page 130 of the printed record in the case of Holladay v. Elliott, which purports to show a correct footing of the pay-rolls and number of men employed on the Oregon Central (East Side), commencing with September, 1868, down to and including January, 1869, and for the period up to September 12, 1868, which foots up, according to this table, $49,113 from September, 1868, to and including January, 1869, and $81,455.31 prior to September 12, 1868, giving it by months, the number of men employed in each month, and the rate per month excepting that prior to September 12, 1868, which is given in a lump sum and referred to in Mr. Elliott's testimony as $81,455.31 in that case; and all aggregating $130,568.31, money disbursed on pay-roll account for construction? Have you any knowledge of that, or as to whether that is fairly accurate?

A. I think these old pay-rolls were submitted to me in some litigation between Holladay and Elliott, or John Nightingale and Elliott—I could not be certain which; but the pay-rolls were submitted to me as to my opinion of their reasonableness or honesty, and anything else I might choose to say about them. I could not identify them now, but if they are the same payrolls, my opinion at the time was that Elliott had spent the money that he claimed he had.

Whereupon on cross examination witness further testified that there was no construction work prior to April 16, 1868 by either the East Side or West Side Companies. They commenced about that date, the West Side Company on one day and the East Side Company on the next day. The East Side Company projected its line on the East Side of the River where for the most part the expense of grading was much less than the expense of grading the line on the West Side road during the first few miles.

Q. Mr. Holladay and his associates spent a great deal of money in that political fight, did they not?

A. Yes, I think they did.

Mr. Fenton: Objected to as immaterial, and as not cross-examination.

A. Holladay admitted to me he had spent considerable money.

Mr. Fenton: It already has been testified to in direct by this witness called for the Government.

Q. And do you not remember, Mr. Gaston, that after the fight was taken into the Legislature and Holladay finally won out and got his resolution of October 20, 1868, adopted and approved by the Governor, that both sides then went to Washington to fight the next battle there, which finally resulted in the act of April 10, 1869?

Mr. Fenton: Objected to as not cross-examination, and as incompetent, and as impossible for the witness to state what caused the act of April 10, 1869.

Q. You remember that?

A. I remember that both parties sent agents to Washington. Mr. Simeon G. Reed went on behalf of the West Side Company; and John H. Mitchell and Stephen F. Chadwick—I think that Mitchell went first, and that Chadwick joined him afterwards, or he was in Washington, and he helped in the fight there—helped Mitchell.

Q. Didn't Mr. Holladay himself go East?

A. I think he was—I think he was in the East; whether he was at Washington or not, I don't know.

Q. Well, now, isn't it a fact that after that resolution of October 20, 1868, was passed by the Legislature of Oregon both sides suspended construction until the fight in Congress had been disposed of?

A. Well, not immediately. I know that we kept our forces at work for a while, and I think they did theirs, too. But it was suspended by the West Side—I know Captain Ainsworth, who was putting up money for us, declined to put up more money until he saw the result at Washington; but we still did keep some men at work, and my recollection is that they kept some men at work, too, but how large a force, I couldn't say.

Q. Well, now, Mr. Gaston, don't you remember that Mr. Elliott came to Oregon in April, 1867, with $15,000 that he had gotten from the Huntington crowd in California, for the California end of this grant, and that that was substantially the extent of his financial resources?

Mr. Fenton: Defendants object to that as incompetent, and as hearsay.

A. No, I couldn't say what his resources were. I only knew by hearsay that he had sold out his interest in the California end of it to the Huntington crowd for $15,000, I think, as I recollect. If he had any other money, or if that was all in money, I don't know.

Q. And do you not remember that after he came here in April, 1867, and organized the last East Side Company, he immediately entered into a contract with A. J. Cooke & Company, which you have heretofore testified was simply Elliott acting under a fictitious name? You remember that?

A. Oh, yes, that was my information. I couldn't tell you how I found it out, but that was given out by their side, that they had made a contract with A. J. Cook & Company. And that circulated sometimes as J. Cook & Company. Jay Cooke was the great capitalist promoter of the Northern Pacific at that time.

Q. Now, do you know that Mr. Elliott immediately went East, and spent the year 1867 trying to raise money on the bonds of his East Side Company, and you were trying to block him in the meantime by sending circulars to all the bankers of the East, exposing what you contended to be an attempted fraud on the part of Elliott?

A. Yes, I remember that. How long Elliott was in the East about that, I couldn't say. But I know he went East, and that I sent those circulars there to bankers, Jay Cooke, and the Railroad Journal, and everybody else—I got a Bankers' Gazetter, and sent it to all of them.

Q. And do you remember that there was no construction work during the year 1867 by either the East Side Company or the West Side Company, both companies being engaged in an effort to raise money?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were raising money here in the West, in Oregon locally?

A. Yes.

Q. While Mr. Elliott was in the East endeavoring to raise it there?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, don't you remember that, as the total result of Mr. Elliott's effort to raise money in the East, all he brought back was a couple of locomotives, which he brought around by way of the Horn, landed them at San Francisco, and then sold them to the Central Pacific, and brought to Oregon as his only financial resources the money that he got from the sale of those two locomotives?

Mr. Fenton: Objected to as hearsay and as incompetent.

A. Well, I know that was the talk, but I don't know that that was all the money Elliott had. I know that before—I think before they sold the locomotives they got $20,000 from Barney Goldsmith here in Portland.

Q. Do you know of any other resources that they had, except the $20,000 they got from Mr. Goldsmith and the money that they realized from the sale of the locomotives?

A. I only know from what men have told me, that is to say, that I would know personally, except hearsay, Now, they got $1,000 from Sam Brown, up there in French Prairie; and they got $1,000 from another man —I tried to recollect his name there, but I couldn't—he is an old friend of mine; and they got money from other people there, that it was never reported, simply because it was a general opinion among people on the East Side, a great many people, that Elliott's concern was not sound, but they were willing to put up money to help build a railroad, if the money was spent, believing that finally there would be a railroad, and that it would not be lost, and that it would help out the fight against the West Side people. Now, that is the way Sam Brown put it to me, and this other man. And each one of them were wealthy farmers, and they put in a thousand dollars apiece that they told me about; and they said others had, but I don't know who the others were. And how much money they raised in that way, I never could find out, of course.

Q. Well, now, isn't it a fact that, after Mr. Elliott started construction on April 17, 1868, he had not proceeded more than sixty days before he was unable to pay his men, and that you used that to embarrass him —you took advantage of that circumstance to embarrass them in the further prosecution of their work?

A. Yes, they missed on a pay-day, and we made all the capital we could out of it against them.

Q. Now, that was the time he enlisted the services of Holladay and brought Holladay to Oregon, or anyway that Holladay came to Oregon?

A. Well, now, I couldn't say about that. Now, they got that money from Barney Goldsmith, and they spent it along. I think Goldsmith put the same sort of condition upon them that the farmers of French Prairie did—that the money must be spent on the road, and not on lawyers; or, as they called it, in lawsuits or that sort of thing. They were willing to give money to help build a railroad, but not for lawsuits. And I couldn't tell you now whether the Goldsmith money was spent before the locomotive money and these different resources—I couldn't tell you. Of course, they would not—it was not to their interest to let out anything that they could keep back.

Q. But you do remember that they were practically "all in," as the expression goes, financially early in their work, and before Holladay came to their assistance?"

A. Oh, yes. And we thought we had them beat several times. But it was just like the man who thought he had scotched the snake—why, they would curl up again, and start in.

Q. Now, as a matter of fact, Mr. Gaston, don't you know that their corporate minutes show that they were expending a large part of this money that they were getting from the various sources for attorney's fees and the expenses of the fight with you, to try to get the land grant away from you?

A. Well, they had to spend something that way; but I don't think that Mitchell got—he was their principal fighter—I don't think he got much money until Holladay came in; and then they struck Holladay for all the money they could get out of him.

Q. Do you know what Holladay's resources were?

A. I don't know about Holladay's particular resources just at that time; but I know from the statement of men in the East how he got his money to commence business on the Pacific Coast, and whether he had any left for this railroad enterprise or not, I don't know.

Q. Well, don't you know, Mr. Gaston, from your observation at that time and what you learned afterwards, that Mr. Holladay had gone broke at San Francisco and borrowed money from Latham, that Latham had advanced money to him, and finally financed his last venture here in Oregon, with the hope that he might pull out and repay Latham the money that he had borrowed from him at San Francisco?

Mr. Fenton: Objected to as immaterial and not cross-examination.

A. I don't know. Of course, I don't know anything about that certainly. I only heard reports that the money that he beat Russell, Majors & Waddell in Missouri out of—four or five hundred thousand dollars—he had put into steamships out here, and then by his reckless way of doing business he got in debt, and then he had to mortgage his steamships to Latham for money.

Q. Well, didn't you understand that the only money he had to use here in Oregon he got from Latham?

A. Well, I couldn't say that I understood just that; but that Latham was financing his speculations, and that in the end, why, he sent that man—I have forgotten his name now, a friend of his—to Germany to sell the bonds. Latham put up the money to send the people to Germany to sell the bonds. Holladay told me that himself.

Q. Well, now, this first year, 1868, that the East Side Company was engaged in construction, you have told me the fact—it is a fact, is it not, Mr. Gaston?—that they simply put in grading work, which could be done with the least expense, so as to make the greatest showing in the way of mileage?

A. Yes, they did that. They spent their money where it would make the biggest show.

Q. They would take the leveler stretches of the road, where the grading would be inexpensive, and throw in some grading?

A. Yes. And take a side hill and run up there, by New Era there, they could take the shovels and go along and shovel out over the bank there, and make a showing of track for quite a ways without a great deal of money. They did that wherever they could.

Q. Now, about how many miles of grading did the East Side Company do during the year 1868, if you should connect it up and make it continuous?

A. Oh, they must have done—in the way they did it, they must have done considerable over thirty miles.

Q. Well, now, don't you think that $5,000 a mile would be pretty expensive for that kind of grading that they did?

A. Yes, I think it would; but they spent money on other things, you know.

Q. What other things?

A. Well, they had a sawmill, and they had a pile-driver outfit, and various things like that. And then they had to keep up their organization, and those fellows require money. They had to have a superintendent and foreman, and all that sort of thing.

Q. Well, you could grade that tract from Portland to Salem, even as it is graded now, with $5,000 a mile, couldn't you?

A. No, you couldn't do that as it is graded now.

Q. Haven't you included, unintentionally, Mr. Gaston, some of the work that was done in the year 1869? Haven't you got the two years confused in your mind?

A. No. We was figuring on, you know, the session of Congress that came in—we was figuring on what sort of a showing could be made there at Congress.

Q. Well, now, don't you remember that, even after the East Side Company had beaten you in the Legislature and secured the resolution of October 20, 1868, and had again beaten you in Congress and secured the act of April 10, 1869—that even then, with their improved credit, it was all they could do to complete twenty miles by Christmas day, 1869?

A. Oh, I know it was. I know Holladay was exhausted, and they had a whole lot of trouble to get this little piece of road right over here in East Portland. They were awful hard up. And if I had been as smart as I ought to have been, I could have still beaten them. I had a chance to have got money from London, but I submitted the whole thing to Captain Ainsworth, who had put up the money for our side, and he turned down the proposition. I know they were hard up even after they got the action at Washington.

Whereupon witness further testified that he does not think that the East Side Company did more work in 1869 than it did in 1868, except buying of iron, which was a big item. He thinks it was 50 pound rails they put in but he cannot tell where they got the iron. The iron was brought across the continent on the Central Pacific to San Francisco and then brought up in steamers. In the year 1868 the West Side Company did not do as much work as the East Side Company, by way of construction. He did most of the work for the West Side Company himself with a little party of men and he thinks they had about three little gangs working between the top of the ridge near Portland and Hillsboro. They spent a large part of their resources on some of these heavy grades. The bridges were the biggest items on the twenty six-miles of road from Portland. He could not say whether the East Side Company put any bridges in in 1868. He thinks the East Side Company had a sawmill installed up at, or this side, of New Era before the year 1869. He does not know what representations Mr. Reed made to Congress upon the amount of work that had been done by the East Side Company, in these pamphlets submitted to Congress. Witness issued a pamphlet explaining the unsoundness and crookedness of the organization of the East Side Company and that was circulated. He thinks Mr. Reed probably gave each member of Congress a copy of that pamphlet. He would not now change any statement that he had made in that pamphlet. He would not say now that he had not strained a point a little to depreciate the East Side Company before Congress, because that was part of the game, to belittle their work all they could. He had seen the pamphlets, the East Side Company issued and they pursued the same tactics. It was just about the same thing. Each side was trying to belittle what the other had done and to exaggerate what his side had done. He fought them with the same weapon. He did not intend to make a downright false statement, he had some friends in Congress that he would not have liked to have caught him in that. Sam Cox and John Bingham from Ohio were very good friends of his and they had known him personally from boyhood. He did not want them to think any the less of him. He thinks that the land Holladay got on the East Side was entirely donated to him and knows that old Gideon Tibbitts gave a tract of land this side of the car shops and thinks that the land Holladay got was given to him. He does not recollect now of the East Side Company buying the lands. Witness thinks that if, on March 19, 1870, Holladay and his associates had expended $800,000 on the east side road, there must have been a great deal more expended during the year 1869 than during the year 1868, but he don't know whether they expended any $800,000—that is just a mere assumption. He remembers that at the time of the organization of the East Side Company, under the name of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, the documents relating to that transaction, all of which are introduced in evidence, show, or purport to show, the expenditure of $800,000 by Holladay and his associates prior to that time, but whether Holladay and his associates had really expended that, he has no knowledge and would not say that the statement of expenditures of $800,000 by Holladay and his associates or its pay rolls were correct. He could only give his opinion of the value of the work done. He does not believe that Holladay and his associates ever spent $800,000 at that time and he would not give any credit to Elliott's pay rolls because they are payrolls, because he knows from the character of the man that he might make up any sort of a payroll. He could only judge from the appearance of the work done. In judging as to the extent of the work done by the East Side Company he is relying upon the reports of Superintendent M. S. Hart who was a better judge of that than he was. Hart was an old railroad grader and he put more confidence in Hart's judgment than in his own. At the time he saw the work it had not been anywhere near completed for that year. The East Side Company did a great deal more work after witness saw it than they had had done. It was about three months after the East Side Company commenced this work that he went over it, which would be sometime in July and as to what work was done after that, he has no personal knowledge, but is giving the information gained from Mr. Hart. He and Hart went along and saw where the line of the East Side Company was and they had worked a good many places and then Hart told him how much more they had done made his reports to him personally, so that he and Hart had knowledge of how the East Side Company was getting along. At the time witness inspected that amount of work there, he does not think there had been more than $40,000 spent and as to anything that was spent after that he has no personal knowledge but relies simply upon the reports of Hart to him, both as to quantity of work and the probable amount that had been expended in connection with it, including the character of the work.

Whereupon on re-direct examination witness further testified that he went with Hart on one of these trips checking up this work. They went over the work to see the line of the East Side Company and how it was doing the work and where and getting all the information they could about it. They went as far south as Gervais, clear to the end of the work, and they had a party of men cutting out timber beyond Lake Labish this side of Salem, about 5 miles. He and Hart went over this work sometime in July, the exact date he could not say. He was up to Salem in September or October, 1868 and this was July 1868 when he and Hart went over the work. At that time they had cut out the timber beyond Lake Labish, of course that was part of the grading work. There was grading in French Prairie north of Lake Labish about the time he and Hart went over it, along about Gervais. Hart is dead. Hart was superintendent of the Oswego Iron Works for several years. The West Side Company took him from that work and he was then on construction work of the Oregon Central, West Side, after that, when he made personal reconnaissance of the line of the East Side Company. Hart worked for the Oregon Central, West Side, for a number of years and completed the line from Portland to Forest Grove, laid the track and everything. Witness as an officer of the Oregon Central, West Side, acted upon the report of Hart as superintendent and engineer as to the value of the work done by the Oregon Central, East Side, in part in his calculations but witness had his own personal views up as late as July 1869. He does not think that he, witness, went over the line after that, towards Salem from East Portland, up as late as October, 1868, although he passed through that country on the old stage road which passed pretty close to this work and he could see from the stage line the work at several points and that the work was going on while the Legislature was in session. The East Side Company was making quite a showing in June, 1868. There was an election at which the respective friends of the two Oregon Centrals had a spirited contest as to who should win the legislature. All through the Willamette Valley people took sides. At that time the election to the Legislature took place in June. Milton S. Latham was president of the London & San Francisco Bank, Limited, a man of financial standing and good reputation as a financier. He had been United States Senator from California and was quite a successful man. He raised the money to build the railroad in California. The Oregon Central, East Side, built a lot of trestle work in East Portland along what is now East First Street and it had graded the track on the ground there and it built the trestles after it got the action of Congress.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

Q. I show you, at page 95 of this printed brief of counsel for Elliot in the case of Holladay and Emmet

v. Elliott and others, in the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon, January term, 1879, a picture which purports to be "Defendants' Exhibit No. 11. View of Oregon City—Willamette Falls. Railroad graded under Elliott in 1868. Referred to in P. Buckley's testimony," and will ask you to look at that, and state if you recognize that as a part of this grading done by Elliott in 1868, as shown by that exhibit, and as a picture of Oregon City and the falls, as they looked in 1868.

A. Yes, that is a very good picture of matters about Oregon City at that time; and that is where the track was located there along the foot of the bluff.

Q. That is about where it is now, isn't it?

A. Yes, the same position; and it shows the track here. Away up there is what was called "The Basin." You see, the steamboat men built a bulkhead around the lower end of the cliff—the cliff across the river—and made a basin there, that would bring the steamboats down there where they could shoot the freight right down to the lower boat. That was before the building of the locks and canal.

Mr. Fenton: I offer that exhibit, with the promise to still further connect it with further testimony, and ask leave to take it out of the book or to substitute a duplicate of it from another brief. I think I have another one or can get one; and ask to have it marked "Defendants' Exhibit 367."

It may be stipulated that photographic copies of these exhibits may be substituted in lieu of the originals?

Mr. Townsend: Yes, that is all right. I desire to ask a question with reference to the admissibility of this exhibit.

EXAMINATION BY MR. TOWNSEND.

Q. Are you certain, Mr. Gaston that the track was actually laid in 1868?

A. No, I wouldn't say that; but the grade is on there.

Q. As a matter of fact, I think your former testimony was that you think the track was all laid in 1869, don't you?

A. Yes, I think the track, the iron—the ties and iron—was laid in 1869.

Q. Put down in 1869?

A. Yes.

Mr. Townsend: With that qualification, I have no objection to the admission of this exhibit, although I do not concede that this exhibit was taken in 1868, or that the track was laid as shown in this exhibit in 1868; but will concede, on the faith of Mr. Gaston's testimony, that the grading was done as shown in this exhibit, with the exception of the laying of the ties and rails.

Mr. Fenton: Counsel for defendants desire to state that "they do not know whether the iron was laid in 1868, but do not wish to admit that it was not—leaving that to the testimony."

Whereupon defendants offered and there was received in evidence "Defendants' Exhibit 367" which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified herein as such.

Whereupon witness upon re-cross examination further testified that on this trip in July, 1868, made by him and Mr. Hart, he found stretches of grading at different points along the line. They must have had eight or ten different bunches or crews of men, had one in each place and they were separated by ungraded sections of the road. Some of them had graded maybe a mile or two or more and so on—it varied. He could not say that there were stretches of five or six miles where there had been no grading at all, but there might have been some places, one place as much as that, but they were scattered all along the road, all along the line. As a matter of fact they were doing all they could to get financial support on the East Side all along the line. They were trying to get local support and to create public opinion in their favor and political opinion, in view of the approaching election and all that sort of thing and they were distributing their work with all these things in view. There is no question about that. Their work in the vicinity of Salem was undoubtedly for the purpose of influencing the acts of the Legislature and the people of Salem. They got no support from the people of Salem. They got no subsidy from the people of Salem but got promises of land. They did get land there for a station, but he does not think they got any money. They got money from big farmers, wealthy men, along the line. Brown was quite a wealthy man and there was quite a number of others in French Prairie who were wealthy, as wealth went in those days. He does not recollect of ever having any conversation with Holladay or Mitchell or any of the people connected with the East Side Company about the statement that the East Side Company made before Congress, heretofore introduced in evidence.

Whereupon GEORGE H. HIMES, called as a witness on behalf of defendants and being first duly sworn testified that he is Assistant Secretary of the Oregon Historical Society and has been an officer of that Society since its organization, December 16, 1898. He has been secretary of the Pioneer Association of Oregon for 28 years and has lived in Oregon over 59 years. He was in business in Portland in 1868, as a job printer and was in Oregon when the Oregon Central Railroad Company, East Side, commenced construction in East Portland on April 16, 1868, and was present at the breaking of the ground on that day. He had occasion to go from Portland to Salem by stage during the summer of 1868, in July and in passing along the stage road of that time came in sight of the track where the line of the East Side Company was laid out and more or less of grading was being done and groups of men were scattered along from place to place covering a distance of several miles. These extended at that time, as near as he can recall somewhere probably between Hubbard and possibly as far south as Woodburn, that is, what is now known as Woodburn. Sam Brown's place is in the vicinity of what is now called Gervais, about two miles distant and there was grading in the vicinity of Sam

Brown's place. He remembers that, because he happened to stay there all night and knew Sam Brown very well indeed. He did not go off the stage road, but just observed the work as he went along, observed the road, the grading condition all in sight of the stage road at all points. This was along about the middle of July, or the first of August, 1868. There was no particular circumstance that fixed that date in his mind. He simply had occasion to go to Salem and had no other way of getting to Salem on a hurried trip at that season of the year, except by stage. The boats were going, but quite often it would take a much longer time to go by boat than by stage. The bars in the river frequently interfered. He remembers once he went and it took him two days to go by boat from Portland to Salem. The event of breaking ground for this East Side Railroad on April 16, 1868, attracted a great deal of attention because it was a movement, or the beginning of the movement, which led the people of that time to pay a good deal of attention to it. It was practically the first railroad. There was a movement the day before on the West Side of the river and there was a starting point of railroad construction. At that time there was no other railroad in Oregon aside from the Portage Road between The Dalles and Celilo and with that exception this was the only railroad in the State commenced. The first settlement was made by Young, in Oregon in 1834. There was Jason Lee on the East Side of the River, ten miles north of Salem, and Young on the West Side of the Willamette River, in the vicinity of what is now

Newburg. Young got there probably a little earlier than Lee, although both arrived in the same year, 1834. That, is the American settlement he refers to. Commencing with the immigration of 1834, which was the largest up to that time, Oregon began settling pretty generally through the Willamette Valley, especially in the vicinity of Hillsboro, in Washington County, and along up the Valley. Commencing 1843, largely in Yamhill County, in the vicinity of Lafayette and McMinnville, 1844 and 1845. W. T. Newby who came in 1843, settled upon the townsite of what is now McMinnville. Between 800 and 1,000 people came in the immigration of 1843, not all adults. There were a little short of 300 men capable of bearing arms who came in that immigration. There was no attempt made in those early days to make any record of the women and children, but he has added enough to the list of women and children so that it aggregates now the names of about 800 all told. Considerable immigration came in 1845, which must have been about 3,000. They settled adjoining those that had already settled—the land was not taken up consecutively, that is, continuously—there were stretches between these settlements that were already made, where others followed. The first settlers, settled along the water courses largely and followed the streams, and the second lot of settlers would settle just next to them, adjacent to water courses. The next large immigration was in 1847, and was probably about the same as that of 1845. There was a large immigration in 1849, but a large part of that went to California. The discovery of gold on January 19th, 1848, and the information respecting that, got back in to the eastern part of the country the latter part of that year and the spring of 1849 brought out great numbers of people. A goodly number came into Oregon, but the number in proportion to those that went to California was very small. The immigration of 1852 was from 25,000 to 30,000, that is those who came across the plains in the year 1852. The proportion of men coming in that year was much greater than any other year before or afterwards. From his investigations so far, the proportion of those who came into Oregon would be about 10,000 out of the 30,000. They settled just adjacent to these settlements already made, and broadening out from the water courses, from the river towards the foothills. Up to 1852, they took their land commencing after the passage of the Donation Land Law, September 27, 1850, under that law. All claims prior to September 27, 1850, were taken up under what might be termed the land law of the Provisional Government, that is squatters' claims, afterwards perfected donations. There was no large immigration after 1852. There was not much of an immigration in 1865, especially in the Willamette Valley. There was considerable immigration in 1862, 1863, 1864 and 1865 in Eastern Oregon.

Whereupon witness further testified.

"Q. I will call your attention to Defendants' Exhibit 259, which I would like to have you look at. It shows a yellow field in the Rogue River Valley surrounding Medford, where I am now pointing, and a yellow field in the Umpqua River Valley surrounding Roseburg, and from there on through to Oakland north, and then beginning south of Cottage Grove and all up through Eugene, Junction City, Corvallis, Albany, Salem, Oregon City and Portland. This yellow field shows lands that were lost to the railroad company within the limits of the grant, either by being taken under the Donation Land Law, or as in the Oregon Central Military Wagonroad grant along the Middle Fork of the Willamette, and the Coos Bay Military Wagonroad grant along the Umpqua, and other public land laws by which the railroad grant was lost in that limit. Where with reference to that map were the main donation land claims situated?

A. Well, they were all through from Portland southward as far as to the Calapooia Range, and then there were quite a number of settlers went into Douglas County, what we know now as Douglas County, in the vicinity of Yoncalla and Roseburg, in 1849, '50 and '51, and extended as far south as Jackson County, or Rogue River Valley, as early as 1851, '52 and '53.

Q. Then, as I understand you, Mr. Himes, the oldest settled portions of Western Oregon were in the Willamette Valley and the Umpqua Valley and the Rogue River Valley?

A. Yes, sir. Of coure, there were a few settled over at Port Orford in 1851, and there were some settlements along in the mountains—not in the mountains, but across the mountains, on the ocean side of the Coast Range.

Q. These were chiefly on streams?

A. Yes.

Q. And watercourses?

A. Yes; but on watercourses that had tributaries to the ocean; "some of the inlets or bays."

Whereupon, on cross examination witness further testified that these donation claims had all been taken long prior to 1866. No donation claims were taken, he thinks, later than 1855. It was modified by cutting down to one-half, the number of acres that could be taken under the donation land law. In a general way he thinks that the situation of these donation claims and their location and extent, were well known to local people in 1866 and from that on, so that the parties who secured this land grant for the Railroad Company, he thinks, well knew or must have known, the extent to which the lands had been previously settled upon. His connection with the job printing office commenced July 26, 1865, and was continuous from that date up to January 9, 1899. The original firm name was Carter & Himes. In a general way he knew of the railroad fight between the East Side and West Side Companies and was here while that was going on, and some of the literature with reference to that was printed in his office. He remembers in a general way, after Holladay came and became identified with the East Side Company that the matter was taken into the legislature in the fall of 1868, resulting in a resolution rescinding the designation in the year 1866, of the West Side or Gaston Company.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

Q. Now, do you remember after that that the matter was taken before Congress, and was a matter of discussion in Congress and before the committees of Congress, until the passage of the act of April 10, 1869?

Mr. Fenton: Defendants object to that as necessarily hearsay as to this witness. He could only tell what he had read in the newspapers or heard others say.

A. I remember in a general way about that from the public press.

Q. Well, you know those historical facts just as well as you do the historical facts Mr. Fenton has been asking you about, don't you, Mr. Himes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As to the settlement of Oregon and all these historical facts? That is true, isn't it, Mr. Himes?

A. That is true, yes.

Q. Now do you remember that in November or December, 1868, the East Side Company had a pamphlet printed by you, which was afterwards used in the controversy in Congress?

A. It was not printed at that time. It was printed in the following year—1870.

Q. In 1869, you mean?

A. No, I think not. It was not printed until 1870. I worked all day—set the whole business up myself with my own hands, did the press work, and I worked night and day on that proposition some little time; and among other things I worked all day on the 4th of July. It couldn't have been in 1869. I think it was in July 1870 before that was printed. That is, now, the pamphlet I refer to gives what purports to be Elliott's side of the whole controversy.

Q. Well, now, you have the wrong pamphlet in mind. This was a pamphlet after Mr. Elliott's,—

A. Well, the pamphlet I have in mind would be a pamphlet I suppose hard on to one hundred pages. I have a copy of that pamphlet.

Q. This pamphlet that I refer to was printed before Elliott's connection with the company was severed,

A. Oh, I see.

Q. And before his controversy with Holladay arose; but has reference to the controversy between the East Side and West Side Companies. Now, I will show it to you, and see if you can recall it.

A. I rather think that is the pamphlet that Walling printed.

Q. No.

A. In looking this over, I see it was not the pamphlet I had in mind.

Q. Here is the resolution at the close of it.

A. This is a short, small pamphlet as compared with the other.

Q. Here is the resolution that goes with it, which shows that, "At a regular meeting of the Directors of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, held November 25th, 1868, the following proceedings were had: 'On motion of Mr. Ellsworth, the foregoing statement of facts was unanimously adopted by the Board and the President and Secretary were instructed to officially sign the same, and attach the seal of the company thereto.'

I. R. Moores, President.

Saml. A. Clarke, Secretary."

A. I remember this pamphlet very well.

Q. Now, don't you remember that that was printed after the fight was concluded before the Legislature in Oregon here in 1868, and before the fight was concluded in Congress?

A. Well, I couldn't say. I remember the printing of that pamphlet as to its relation to the fight that was going on. Of course, I don't know that I have any recollection about that at that time, but, of course, it must have been by the showing of the date.

Q. Do you remember who had you print that?

A. I am not sure, but I think that—of course, Mr. Carter was the senior partner in the office, and he knew Mr. Moores very well, and he knew Mr. Ellsworth very well—Strictly Ellsworth—and my recollection about it is that the arrangement for printing was concluded between Mr. Moores and Mr. Ellsworth; and I was there, of course, as a partner, but was busy about other matters in connection with the office; and I have no distinct recollection about this matter, any further than that the copy and everything was turned in by those men, and then, of course, I did my work in connection with the printing of it; and as far as the business end of the transaction was concerned, I had no special thing to do with it; although in a great many cases—Mr. Carter was out of the office a good deal—I took in work; but in that particular case I never met Mr. Moores or Mr. Ellsworth up to that time.

Q. And is Mr. Carter alive?

A. No, he has been dead a number of years.

Q. Would there be any way in which you could ascertain the date that that was printed by you people?

A. Well, if you give me the date I will make a memorandum of it. I am not sure—I think, however, that I can tell.

Q. The date of the resolution of the Board of Directors of the Oregon Central Railroad Company in which it was directed that it be signed is November 25, 1868, and I therefore assumed in my former question that it was printed after that time. We have other evidence that it was in existence early in 1869, and I just wanted to see if you could not tell—

A. Well, I think it is possible that I can determine that date, although it might take me some time. I believe that I have the account books of the firm of that time. They would be stowed away among a good deal of other stuff, and it might take me some time. I would be glad to look them over, and hunt it up. Now, just excuse me one moment—what is the date where the imprint is on that page, the date of that?

Q. That is 1868. You can testify that that is correct, can you not?

A. Yes, there is no question about that. That is correct, 1868—the firm of Carter & Himes was organized, or rather the partnership was entered into on October 5, 1868. The firm prior to that date was simply W. D. Cater, but our terms of copartnership began on October 5, 1868.

Q. And how long did it continue?

A. And it continued one year. It would take it in 1868 and up to the following year, 1869.

Q. So that this pamphlet must have been printed—

A. That was printed between October 5, 1868, and December 1, 1868. Somewhere along there.

Q. Well, now, are you acquainted enough with the manner in which the work was done so as to be able to testify that that was printed with the authority of the officers of the East Side Company?

A. Well, I should say it was, without any—scarcely any doubt. But in order to satisfy myself absolutely respecting that, I think it would be very necessary for me to overhaul the old books, if I can find them—and I believe I can—and see who made the entry, whether I made the entry myself for the work, or whether Mr.

Carter made it. If I made it myself, I could probably give some information about it; but if Mr. Carter made it, I could not.

A. Now, I was going to say in this connection, I have a very distinct recollection of doing some printing for Mr. Gaston, but I am not able, from anything that I can recall in connection with the wording of this, to say that that was what Mr. Gaston had printed; but I do know that Mr. Gaston had something printed. He made the arrangements with Mr. Carter. I did the typesetting myself. But it seems to me, from my recollection, that the matter Mr. Gaston had printed respecting matters of the railroad, was not so voluminous as that appears to be. But I would like, if it is possible, to see the original of that. I perhaps might be more sure.

Mr. Fenton: May I ask counsel what Government's exhibit you are asking the witness about?

Mr. Townsend: 105.

A. Yes, I remember this very well indeed. (Printed exhibit.)

Q. Well, now, Mr. Himes, having examined the original of Government's Exhibit 105, a typewritten copy of which was exhibited to you before, are you prepared to testify that Government's Exhibit 105 was printed by the firm of which you were a member, some time between October 5, 1868, and December 31, 1868?

A. I am, yes, sir.

Q. You know that at no time you permitted a false date like that to get out?

A. Never. Never.

Q. From your general knowledge of the manner in which the business was conducted, and the business habits of yourself and Mr. Carter, and your general knowledge of this entire subject, the history of this railroad fight, are you not prepared to state, according to your best recollection, that the document was printed with the authority of those who acted for the Oregon Central Railroad Company, East Side?

Mr. Fenton: Defendants object to that as not the best evidence, and as only hearsay. You may answer.

A. My judgment is that publication was printed at the instance of Mr. Joseph Gaston—in my judgment.

Q. Mr. Joseph Gaston?

A. Yes.

Mr. Fenton: No. He has got it mixed up.

A. Yes, sir. Another publication that I had in mind, and I thought when I was looking over it casually that there was some reference to that—but I am satisfied that was printed by Mr. Gaston, or caused to be. I had nothing to do with the business arrangement. I remember those circumstances in connection with it—I wouldn't swear to it positively, but then it is my impression—I know that we printed a publication for Mr. Gaston connected with the railroad matters, and it gave a recital of the affairs in connection with the organization of the company, and also it related to some difficulty between the two corporations, so-called.

Q. Well, you knew which company he was connected with, didn't you?

A. I knew he was connected with the West Side Company.

Q. Well, do you mean that Mr. Gaston put out a document purporting to be the authorized document of his adversary?

A. Well, of course, I couldn't go into the merits and give the reasons, or anything of that sort, but it is my judgment now—I cannot get rid of that impression. I know we printed something for Mr. Gaston, and I am satisfied, as far as I can recall, that that is the document. As I say, I am not positive of it. Of course, there might have been some other, but it has the earmarks of Mr. Gaston's work, as I understood the situation at the time. Of course, as I say, the business arrangements were made between Mr. Gaston and Mr. Carter. Mr. Gaston didn't know me in the premises, and I didn't know him, except simply as he came in. I remember distinctly a circumstance like this in connection with it; whatever the document was, there was a question about the payment for it; and I am not sure but Mr. Gaston brought the work to me first, when I come to recollect the circumstances connected with it, and that there was a job of a little bit more magnitude than I felt disposed to take into account without inquiring into the financial responsibility of the party offering the work; and that Mr. Carter came in soon afterwards, and I said to him "Here is a job that is left here, but I didn't give him a price on it, because it is a man I don't know, and I want you to take care of it." And I remember that he said that there was quite a little work about that, and that we would have to be sure of the financial end of it. And when Mr. Gaston came in and talked the matter over—of course, I couldn't hear what was said; but whatever it was, it was entirely satisfactory, and the work was proceeded with and finished. The only way I could absolutely be sure would be simply to go back—I think I can find the old books of that date, and that would settle the question in my mind.

Mr. Townsend: I think Mr. Himes is mistaken.

A. It may be a confusion in the two different pamphlets.

Mr. Townsend: This is a scurrilous attack on Gaston, which he answered.

A. Now, this, I was going to say—of course, I didn't look it over only simply to examine the text of this —I simply recognize the printing and the type and everything of that sort; no doubt about that, not the least bit. We printed a pamphlet for Mr. Gaston. There is no question about that part of it. But my idea of the pamphlet that Gaston printed—and I didn't examine this more than simply looking at the type to find out the discussion of the text—only my idea of it was this: that it was a history, so to speak, of the transactions between the two companies, and an attempt on his part to show that the East Side Company had no rightful claim to the name.

Q. But this pamphlet is right the reverse.

A. Well, then, I am mistaken.

Q. This is an attack on the West Side Company.

A. Well, then, I am mistaken then, because, as I say, I didn't look it over sufficiently to get at the bearing; I just simply looked through to gather the type, and the headlines, and the subdivisions.

Q. You do not mean to put into the record here any suggestion that Mr. Gaston came to your printing office and had a pamphlet issued in the name of the other company, the East Side Company?

A. Oh, no, no; not by any means.

Q. Well, if this pamphlet, Government's Exhibit 105, is an attack by the East Side Company on the West Side Company, then that is not the pamphlet that Mr. Gaston brought to you?

A. No, that is not the pamphlet that Mr. Gaston brought to me. As I say, I didn't examine it thoroughly enough to get the trend of the document. There was only one point of doubt in my mind—that the pamphlet we printed for Mr. Gaston was not quite so voluminous as that one appears to be, or as that one is. The circular that Mr. Gatson brought, I couldn't really say how many pages, it was his side of that controversy, or at least bearing upon his side.

Q. There were several circulars issued. How about this one—Government's Exhibit 103? Do you recognize that type?

A. No, I think that is printed by A. G. Walling. However, there was one form of type that each of us had in common, and were frequently loaned some sorts, as we say, from one to the other, and it is possible that that might have been printed by our firm. We only printed —there was only one job that was printed for Mr. Gaston.

Q. How about that?

A. Well, I printed that.

Q. That was one which he did have printed? That is the Newby case.

A. I printed that.

Q. No, this is the brief of Mitchell, Dolph & Smith. Let's see if I can't get their brief in the Newby case.

A. There is the document I had in mind. I printed that.

Q. This is the document which was used before the Oregon Legislature presenting the claims of the West Side Company.

A. Well, that is the document—that is the one. I was mistaken. When I looked through that, there was so much more matter. I know that one you have your hands on.

Mr. Fenton: You better identify it, hadn't you? Salem, Oregon, October 13, 1868. Signed T. R. Cornelius.

Mr. Townsend: It is not necessary to put that in,

is it?

Mr. Fenton: No, it is not necessary. The witness says that is the one he printed, not the other.

A. Yes, that is the one.

Q. Mr. Himes, I have presented to you a book consisting of newspaper clippings, pamphlets and various documents and letters, which are collectively bound together and entitled "Oregon Railroad History," which has been compiled by Mr. Gaston from the various documents that he has had relating to the early railroad history of Oregon, and having directed your attention to a certain pamphlet issued by the West Side Company, under date of October 13, 1868, addressed to the Oregon Legislature, I will ask you if that is not the document which Mr. Gaston brought to you to have printed, instead of Government's Exhibit 105?

A. Yes, sir. I am very clear about that now.

Q. Did Mr. Gaston bring more than one document to you?

A. Only one.

Q. So that you are now positive that you were mistaken when you said that you thought he brought Government's Exhibit 105?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, now, going back to that question again, have you any way of refreshing your recollection, without going over these old records that you spoke of, as to who did bring this to you to be printed, referring to Government's Exhibit 105?

A. No, I have not. I couldn't remember.

Q. Well, I will not ask you to do that if it involves too much labor, Mr. Himes; but if you should happen to run across it without too much effort, would you please let us know?

A. Yes.

Q. And we can recall you to testify upon that subject.

A. Situated with the work that I have in hand today and tomorrow, it would be almost impossible; but I think that I can find it during the week, that is, in the course of a couple of days, and let you know.

Q. It is not of sufficient importance to justify our imposing upon you, Mr. Himes. If you can do it without too much inconvenience, I will thank you.

A. All right.

Whereupon J. C. MORELAND, called as a witness on behalf of defendants, being first duly sworn testified that he resides at Salem and is clerk of the Supreme Court and came to Oregon in 1852. He was referee in the case of Ben Holladay and C. Temple Emmet, plaintiffs against Simon G. Elliott and others, defendants, brought in the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon for Multnomah County and appealed to the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon, and heard and determined in the Supreme Court, in July 1879, and took and reported all the testimony in that case, except a few depositions that were not taken before him. Most of it he took in long hand. The testimony of S. G. Elliott was taken down in short hand by A. J. Marsh and reduced to long-hand by him and read over to Elliott in the presence of witnesses. "Defendants' Exhibit 368," being a document of date April 23, 1867, purporting to be an agreement entered into between the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Salem, and A. J. Cook and Company, for the construction of the first 150 miles of the Oregon Central Railroad Company's railroad (East Side) was an exhibit offered and admitted in evidence in that case, and he knows the signature of I. R. Moores and Ben Holladay and the signatures to this document by these parties are genuine. He knows the signature of S. G. Elliott and of A. J. Cook & Company by S. G. Elliott and that is the genuine signature of S. G. Elliott. He knows the signature of John H. Mitchell and is not sufficiently acquainted with the signature of M. N. Chapman to identify it. Both of these men are dead. The endorsement or assignment, or purported assignment, of that document on the back of it, dated May 2, 1867, signed Albert J. Cook in the presence of W. D. Litchfield was on the document at the time it was introduced in evidence, but he does not know the signature of Albert J. Cook or W. D. Litchfield. He knew George L. Woods, president of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, and Samuel A. Clarke, secretary of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, and they are both dead. He is not sufficiently acquainted with the signature of George L. Woods, but has seen his signature a good many times. He has seen the signature of Clarke and knows it very well and that is his signature. He has no question about that. When this document was admitted in evidence before him it was admitted without question to have been executed by the parties; both parties recognized it as the original. The signature in red ink on the front page of that cancellation signed "Ben Holladay & Co. Oregon Central Railroad Company, By I. R. Moores, President. Oregon Central Railroad Company, By Geo. E. Cole, Secretary." Witnesses "J. H. Mitchell" and "M. N. Chapman" are the signatures that he recognizes. These are the signatures of all these parties. That cancellation was on there at the time that this document was admitted in evidence before him. He commenced taking the testimony in this case in 1870 and it was continued at intervals until 1875. The signature on the assignment, or a part of it, by S. G. Elliott, of date May 20, 1867, witnessed in the presence of Walter Van Dyke, is the signature of S. G. Elliott, and it was on there when the document was admitted in evidence. "Defendants' Exhibit 369" purporting to be a memorandum of agreement of date May 12, 1868, between the Oregon Central Railroal Company and A. J. Cook & Company, and which purports to be signed on behalf of the Oregon Central Railroad Company "I. R. Moores, President O. C. R. R. Co., S. A. Clarke, Secretary O. C. R. R. Company, A. J. Cook & Co." Witnessed by Geo. Anderson and E. D. Towl, is a document he recognized as having been admitted in evidence before him and these signatures are the signatures of I. R. Moores, and S. A. Clarke. The signature of A. J. Cook & Co. is in the hand writing of S. G. Elliott. The signatures of Ben Holladay, I. R. Moores, George E. Cole and J. H. Mitchell, on the document to the cancellation in red ink on this document of date March 29, 1870, signed "Ben Holladay & Co. Oregon Central Railroad Company, By I. R. Moores, President. Oregon Central Railroad Company, By Geo. E. Cole, Secretary." Witnessed by "J. H. Mitchell and M. N. Chapman," are the signatures of Ben Holladay, I. R. Moores, George E. Cole and J. H. Mitchell, and that endorsement and these signatures as they now purport to be, were on that document at the time it was admitted in evidence before him. Referring to "Defendants' Exhibit 369" which shows file marks "Filed Nov. 24, 1875, Geo. L. Story, Clerk, By R. L. Durham, Deputy," and then "Filed June 19, 1876, D. H. Murphy, Clerk," witness stated that George L. Story was clerk of Multnomah County and D. H. Murphy was Clerk of Marion County. The case was transferred for hearing from Multnomah to Marion. There was change of venue and the case was tried before Judge Boise. Judge Shattuck, who was on the bench in Multnomah County, had been an attorney in the case. He did not know how the file mark before the Clerk of the Circuit Court of Multnomah County came to be made. He had turned all the documents and papers in to the clerk of Multnomah County when he was through with it. The document purporting to be signed "Albert J. Cook, in the presence of W. D. Litchfield," bearing date May 2, 1867, purporting to be "Exhibit "W" attached to S. G. Elliott's deposition," and initialed "J. C. M." was an exhibit in the case and was introduced in evidence during the taking of S. G. Elliotts deposition, and the words "Exhibit 'W' " attached to S. G. Elliott's deposition is initialed "J. C. M." and are in the hand writing of witness. He did not know the signature of Albert J. Cook or the attesting witness W. D. Litchfield. This document was introduced by Elliott and sworn to as genuine.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence each of these respective documents, "Defendants' Exhibits 368, 369 and 370," to which complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and hearsay, which said documents were received in evidence and are hereinafter set out and dscribed and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified herein as such.

Whereupon witness further testified that Elliott was a witness in this case before him and called and recalled a good many times, and that these original documents belong in the custody of witness as clerk of the Supreme Court and that he would like to have these documents returned.

Whereupon it was stipulated that these original documents could be withdrawn and said Exhibits extended in the record by the Examiner and a copy thereof verified by the Examiner substituted therefor.

Whereupon witness further testified that he came to Oregon from Boise City, arriving on July 3, 1868. His father then lived in Clackamas County, and shortly after coming he went up there and was there two or three times that summer and fall. He had never seen a railroad except those from lower to upper Cascades and from The Dalles to Celilo, and he was a good deal younger than he now is and was interested to see what a railroad would look like, and he paid some attention to that. He was over on the French Prairie and as far up as what is now the town of Gervais, or very nearly there. He was up to Sam Brown's place during that summer and fall, and wherever he got a chance or was in sight of it he would leave the road and go over and look where they were grading, between Oregon City and Portland. He was over that road three or four times that year. The grading was scattered along from about Stark Street in East Portland up to about as far as he was along that road, approximately where the town of Gervais is now. It is about thirteen or fourteen miles from Salem. He is not able to state how many gangs of men were working between these points grading, but they were scattered all along the way. He saw them quite frequently. He does not think that he is competent to judge of the value of that work. He was never engaged in it. He could not now identify the photograph "Defendants' Exhibit 367" as having been taken in that case, but knows there were a number of photographs introduced. This photograph represents Oregon City of course, taken there at Oregon City. That is familiar to everybody that is familiar with Oregon City, but this was not taken until after the road had been built, this was taken after 1868 because there were not any rails laid there in 1868 at that point. When he took the testimony the road had been built. There were no rails there in September, 1868. He is very certain that picture was taken after that. There was some work done on the grading. Referring to "Defendants' Exhibit 371" witness says that it looks very much like that wall did up there, and a good deal like it does now. It has been changed some.

Whereupon said "Defendants' Exhibit 371" was offered and received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified herein as such.

Whereupon witness further testified that he has been continuously a resident of Portland from 1868 up to June, 1907, and since then a resident of Salem, and is familiar generally with the general value of timber lands in Oregon from 1866 up to 1892 and thinks that timber lands as such were practically valueless up to sometime in the '80s. Then there began to be some demand for timber lands, as he recollects it, sometime, he could not fix the date, but it was along in the latter '80s he should fix it. In the early days in Oregon timber was not considered of any value. Men wanted places for farms and when they took a farm they burned up the timber. On his father's claim out in Clackamas County, trees that would make elegant saw logs, were burned to get them out of the way. The timber, on land in the Willamette Valley that had timber on it, in those early days that was needed for farm purposes, was all destroyed. There was no sale for the timber at all. His father took a donation land claim in Marion County, approximately five or six miles east of what is now the town of Hubbard, it was pretty nearly in Clackamas County. Historically the first American settler in Oregon was Jason Lee in the year 1834. He settled ten miles below Salem in what is known as Mission Bottoms. In pioneer days, there was quite an immigration in 1843, some came every year from 1834 on, but the first large immigration came in 1843, there were about 1,000 that year. The next large immigration after that was in 1852, that was the largest immigration, he thinks, that ever came across the plains. It was considerably larger than in 1843. These people settled all the way from Multnomah County to Jacksonville. Some people who came in their train went out as far as Jacksonville and they took up their land mainly under the donation land law of 1850. Prior to 1866 there was a railroad built from The Dalles to Cellilo around the portage and he thinks this was built about 1866. He knows it was there in 1867, because he traveled over it. It was built by the Oregon Steam Navigation Company and as part of the link to operate their steamers in river transportation. With that exception there was no railroad in Oregon prior to the road built from Portland south. The construction work on the Oregon Central, East Side, and the constructon work on the Oregon Central, West Side, was the first railroad construction work in Oregon, with the exception of this link referred to as built by the Oregon Steamship & Navigation Company. Those were great days for Oregon when the road was opened. There were some settlements along the edges in the mountains in those days, extending up into the Cascade Mountains out beyond the Sandy. He was through there in 1866 and there were some—one cabin he knows beyond the Sandy on the road across the Cascade Mountains. These settlements were along streams and on lands that they could secure for agricultural purposes and grazing, but there were only a few settlers in the mountains.

Whereupon on cross-examination witness further testified that the litigation between Elliott and Holladay and others, extended over a period of several years and the case was of a good deal of importance for those times and in that case the general early history of the building of these railroads was gone into quite thoroughly. In that suit Holladay and his associates did not seek to cancel securities held by Elliott, but to cancel a contract of partnership that was entered into between Holladay and Elliott. That was the subject of the suit, to cancel that partnership, these partnership articles. The general object of the suit was to dissolve the partnership. To some extent it did involve incidentally some of these corporate securities that Elliott had claimed in that suit. Holladay and his associates claimed to have made certain advances for the benefit of the former copartnership, which were to some extent disputed by Elliott, and Elliott claimed to have made some advances which were to some extent disputed by Holladay. It is true, that to take the testimony of Elliott as to what he advanced, by way of money, he could find corresponding testimony on the other side of the case, disputing these items in whole or in part. In that litigation, Holladay claimed a considerable balance from Elliott and Elliott claimed a considerable balance from Holladay. In the final judgment of the Supreme Court, that is as far as his findings were set aside, the Court found that Holladay was indebted to Elliott about $28,000 on that agreement signed by C. Temple Emmett for Holladay and Emmett, of $21,000 at the time the partnership was entered into. The Supreme Court found that had not been paid. With that exception, the accounts were balanced. He does not remember how much Elliott claimed from Holladay in that suit, but it was a great many thousand dollars. The amount which Holladay claimed against Elliott aggregated a good deal in the way of damages that he claimed against Elliott for breach of the copartnership and for failure of Elliott to carry on the work. Witness reported findings of fact and performed the office of a master in chancery under a strict equity practice. There was considerable conflict in the evidence as to the manner of the work that had been done by Elliott and as to his competency to perform the work. There was a great deal of contradictory evidence. It was contended in that case that Elliott had misrepresented his financial backing and the question as to who Albert J. Cook was, and his backing was very extensively gone into. To his mind there was never any satisfactory evidence to account for Albert J. Cook. He heard the evidence on both sides and thought that Elliott had been operating under the name of Albert J. Cook and that Albert J. Cook was either a myth or some insignificant person that Elliott had picked up and who was without any financial backing at all. Albert J. Cook had nothing to put into the concern so far as he recollects. He does not think Elliott claimed that Cook had put anything into it. His recollection is that Elliott did not organize the Oregon Central Railroad Company.. What influence a prospective contract with Elliott under the name of A. J. Cook & Company had in the organization of the Company, he does not know. His recollection is that the Oregon Central Railroad Company, East Side, was organized by a company of men interested in having a railroad on the East Side as against a railroad on the West Side and he does not think Elliott had that company organized. That is his judgment about it now.

Whereupon witness further testified:

Q. Don't you remember that Elliott came to Oregon early in 1867, and first tried to do business with Gaston, and then having failed caused this new company to be organized and capital stock to be subscribed in the name of the corporation itself, and then the construction contract which he immediately caused to be executed provided for the turning over of a large part, if not all, of that capital stock to him as A. J. Cook and Company, and that it was because he held that stock that Mr. Holladay, for one reason, organized the Oregon and California Railroad Company in 1870. And in this litigation Mr. Elliott was asserting some rights by reason of this preferred stock of the old East Side Company, possession of which he secured under this construction contract he had held.

Mr. Fenton: I object to that as not in accordance with the record of either the Oregon Central or the Oregon and California Railroad Company.

A. It has been a long time ago and my memory may play me false as to that, but I do not now recollect that Elliott claimed any stock in the company. He claimed large interests under mortgages that had been introduced, but if Elliott had ever had any of that stock of the Oregon Central Railroad Company my memory fails now. I have not looked over this thing since 1875 to any great extent. If he got any of that stock I am not certain. These articles of agreement I have not read, but if he got any of that stock my memory plays me false. My recollection on that is not at all distinct—my memory. The stock, I think, was not made any particular question in this case because the stock was regarded as absolutely valueless. I have forgotten what became of the stock.

Q. Both sides treated the Oregon Central Railroad Company (East Side) as an invalid corporation, and as in effect a copartnership, did they not?

A. Well, I think it was rather conceded that that was an invalid corporation; that the president could not subscribe the majority of the stock.

Q. And that was the decision of the Supreme Court finally?

A. I so understand it.

Whereupon witness further testified that he and his people when they first came to Oregon went to live in Clackamas County, about six miles from the town of Hubbard, in township 5 south, range 1 east. The country there is pretty level and is a considerable distance from the foothills. His father took a donation land claim of 320 acres. The law was amended in 1852 so that he could take only a half section. Prior to that time they could take up a section. It was all timbered in spots. The timber was scattered but it extended all over the place. A great deal of it was good saw timber, a great many good saw timber trees were on the place. A good deal of that land is cleared now. When they lived there, there was probably not over 20 acres cleared. It was cleared in the main by hard work, by cutting down the trees and then burning them up and then grubbing up the grubs and hazel brush that were on them. If one would undertake the job of burning down one of these big fir trees and burning it up, it would, he thinks, be a big obstacle, although not insurmountable. It was good land, good soil, when cleared, but the clearing of those big trees was a big job.

Whereupon witness further testified.

Q. Yes, but here is what I am getting at, Mr. Moreland. In this case there has been some testimony introduced tending to prove, or at least intended to prove, that some of the lands, if not all of the lands involved in this case cannot be used for the purpose of settlement and cultivation, and one of the reasons assigned is the presence of the timber on the land. And what I am trying to get at is that that same obstacle was encountered by the early settlers, even under the donation claims.

A. Yes, sir. And it cost more to clear the land of those fir trees when they had to be burned up than the land was worth after it was cleared, if a man got anything for his wages while he was at work at it.

Q. Now, if the timber has since acquired a value, and it can be sold to assist the settler in clearing the land, then the difficulties confronting the settler are not as great today as they were then?

A. Nothing like as great if he can sell the timber. If we could have gotten pay, stumpage, for the trees that had to be burned up on that place the way they are paying for them now, the place would have paid for itself, I think. The timber would have paid for clearing.

Whereupon upon re-direct examination witness further testified that the Willamette Valley generally was not a timbered country when he came to Oregon. There were a great many prairies. The donation land claims that were taken were mainly taken in the valley, on level land. The preferred claims in these early days were on the prairies. Referring to "Defendant's Exhibit 259" and the yellow field on the map showing lands lost to the Company's grant by prior settlement in the vicinity of Needy and around there, witness further testified that the country around there was chiefly taken under the donation land law, or some public land law prior to the time the railroad grant took effect. That it was all taken up as far as they thought it could be cultivated then. Out in Molalla there was a very beautiful prairie. There was no timber there. That prairie was taken up by early settlers before they came to Oregon. His father lived on his donation claim eight years and made their living on the place. They made all the living they got on the place, that is, his father used to go away and work for some of the neighbors very frequently and the boys and girls worked on the place and did what they could, but it was hard picking. He was eight years old when they came there.

Whereupon witness upon re-direct examination further testified that he remembers that there was a contract of partnership entered into between Ben Holladay, C. Temple Emmett and S. G. Elliott of date September 12, 1868, and that that was the contract involved in that suit. That suit was begun very shortly after Holladay discharged Elliott as superintendent. It was a question as to Holladay's power, Elliott being one of the partners, whether Holladay had the power to discharge Elliott from the position to which he was assigned by these articles of co-partnership and he thinks he was discharged in September, 1869, but he is not certain. The suit was begun, he thinks, less than a month after that, but he does not remember, the records will show that.

Whereupon witness identified his findings of fact and conclusions of law as referee in the case of Ben Holladay and C. Temple Emmett, plaintiffs against S. G. Elliott and others, defendants, about which he has testified and the same were offered and received in evidence, together with the certified copy of the findings and decree of the Supreme Court of Oregon in that case as one exhibit, subject to the same objection heretofore made by complainant as to proceedings in that case, which said findings of fact and conclusions of law and certified copy of findings and decree of the Supreme Court are in words and figures as follows, to-wit:

"FINDING OF FACTS.

"First—That on the 12th day of September, 1868, the plaintiff, Ben Holladay and C. Temple Emmet, and the defendant, S. G. Elliott, entered into a copartnership of that date for the purpose of constructing, equipping and operating one or more railroads in the State of Oregon, and the States and Territories adjacent thereto; that by the terms of said copartnership the interest of each member thereof was as follows: Ben Holladay, 24-40 parts; C. Temple Emmet, 10-40; Simon G. Elliott, 6-40.

"Second—That said copartnership articles contained also the following special agreement: And, whereas, The parties hereto are about to purchase and take an assignment of all the contracts now subsisting between the Oregon Central Railroad Company of the one part, and A. J. Cook of the other part, and between the Oregon Central Railroad Company of the one part, and A. J. Cook & Co. of the other part, for the construction and equipment of the railroad from the city of Portland to the northern boundary line of the State of California.

"It is hereby further witnessed, that the said Simon G. Elliott shall not be called upon to advance out of his own private means any money towards the work undertaken by this copartnership under the said contract, but the said Simon G. Elliott shall be charged with and shall account for his proportion of the expense of the said work whenever this copartnership shall have realized under and by virtue of the said contracts, or any of them, sufficient moneys to cover the outlays and expense incurred and paid by this copartnership in and about the said work. And it is further understood and witnessed, that the said Simon G. Elliott is hereby appointed the General Superintendent of the work of constructing, equipping and operating the said Oregon Central Railroad under the said contracts, and that he is to receive a salary of five hundred dollars per month, payable in gold coin of the United States.

"Third—That after the execution of the articles of co-partnership, and as part of the partnership transaction, plaintiffs gave to the defendant, S. G. Elliott:

"Office Ben Holladay & Co.

"Portland, Oregon, Sept. 12th, 1868.

"S. G. Elliott, Portland:

"Dear Sir:—On our purchase of this date from A. J. Cook & Co. of the pending contracts with the Oregon Central Railroad Company for the construction of the railroad from Portland to the California line, it is understood that we are to pay you the money furnished by you to the firm of A. J. Cook & Co. and standing to your credit on their books. This money is stated by you to amount to about twenty-one thousand dollars. When the accounts are fully made up and the balance correctly ascertained, you will be entitled to our obligations for the correct amount. Respectfully yours,

"Ben Holladay & Co.

"That said paper was not executed on the day it bears date, but it correctly expressed the agrement between the parties thereto.

"Fourth—That on the 12th day of March, 1867, the defendant S. G. Elliott, procured from one A. J. Cook, at San Francisco, California, a written power of attorney to himself, to make all necessary arrangements with certain parties in Oregon for the building of a railroad from Portland south through the Willamette Valley, a distance of one hundred and fifty miles.

"Fifth—That said Cook was a man of small means, inexperienced in railroad matters, and that the writing was obtained from him at the request of defendant S. G. Elliott, with the understanding and under the agreement that said Cook was to have no interest whatever in said contracts to be made, and was not to be made liable for anything whatever, and that he took no part or interest whatever in the contracts afterwards made.

"Sixth—That on or about the 22d day of April, 1867, a corporation was formed under the general incorporation laws of this State, under the name of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, for the purpose of building and operating a railroad from Portland, Oregon, southward to the California line, on or near the stage road, and having its principal office in Salem, Oregon; but that on the 23d day of April, 1867, only seven shares of stock had been subscribed to the capital stock thereof, by bona fide subscription—said Oregon Central Railroad Company, by George L. Woods, chairman, on the 22d day of April, 1867, having attempted to subscribe seventy thousand shares to said capital stock, and that there were never but thirty-one shares subscribed to the capital stock of said corporation, excepting said seventy thousand so attempted to be subscribed, the capital stock of said corporation being $7,250,000, divided into 7,250 shares of $100 each.

"Seventh—That at the time of the incorporation of said company there was another company organized and incorporated under the general incorporation laws of the State, under the name of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, for the purpose of constructing, maintaining and operating a railroad from Portland south to the California line, having its principal place of business and office at Portland, Oregon—said corporation being designated in these findings as the 'O. C. R. R. Co. West Side.' The first named being designated herein as the 'O. C. R. R. Co. East Side.'

"Eighth—That on or about the 23d day of April, 1867, the defendant S. G. Elliott, in the name of A. J. Cook, entered into a contract with the said O. C. R. R. Co., East Side, for the construction and equipment of one hundred and fifty miles of its road from Portland south, a true copy of which contract is set forth as Exhibit 'A' attached to the deposition of Ben Holladay, as contained in volume 1 of the testimony herewith returned; and that on the 27th of November, 1867, the defendant S. G. Elliott, in the name of A. J. Cook, entered into a supplemental contract with said O. C. R. R. Co., East Side, modifying and changing said first contract, a true copy of which is attached to said deposition of Ben Holladay, marked Exhibit 'B.'

"Ninth—That on or about the 12th day of May, 1868, the defendant S. G. Elliott, in the name of A. J. Cook & Co., entered into another agreement, or contract, for the construction of the balance of said road from the end of the first 150 miles to the California line, being 210 miles more or less, a true copy of which contract is contained in Exhibit 'C,' attached to said deposition of Ben Holladay; and that on or about the 10th day of June, 1868, a supplemental agreement was entered into by the defendant S. G. Elliott, in the name of A. J. Cook & Co., with said O. C. R. R. Co. East Side, constructing and explaining the aforesaid agreement, a true copy of which is attached to said deposition of Ben Holladay, marked Exhibit 'D.'

"Tenth—That on the 2d day of May, 1867, said Albert J. Cook endorsed upon the first contract herein referred to of date April 23d, 1867, the following assignment:

" 'In consideration of the sum of one dollar to me paid by S. G. Elliott, of San Francisco, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, I hereby transfer and assign forever all my right, title and interest in the within instrument.

" 'Witness my hand and seal this 2d day of May, A. D. 1867.

" 'Albert J. Cook.

" 'In presence of W. D. Litchfield.'

"And that thereafter said S. G. Elliott never had any other or further authority to use the name of said A. J. Cook, or had any further communication with him upon that subject.

"Eleventh—That at and prior to the time of making the said contract between A. J. Cook and said O. C. R. R. Co. East Side, referred to as Exhibits 'A' and 'B,' the defendant S. G. Elliott, fraudulently concealed from and misrepresented to the officers and Directors of said company the financial ability of A. J. Cook and his interest in said contracts.

"Twelfth—That in making said contracts said railroad company, relying upon the representations of the defendant S. G. Elliott, believed said Cook to be a man of large means, able to carry out his contracts and to be the real party interested in the contracts.

"Thirteenth—That on the 20th day of May, 1867, the defendant S. G. Elliott, assigned to N. P. Perrine seven-twentieths of said first mentioned contract of date of April 23d, 1867, for the sum of $3000 coin, which was paid by Perrine to said Elliott, and on said day said Perrine and Elliott formed a copartnership under the name of A. J. Cook & Co., as equal partners, a true copy of which article of partnership is set forth in the deposition of S. G. Elliott returned herein on pages 90, 91 and 92 of the printed deposition.

"Fourteenth—That on or about the 29th day of May, 1867, the defendant S. G. Elliott assigned to James P. Flint one-tenth interest in said contract of date April 23d, 1867, a copy of which assignment is in the same printed deposition of S. G. Elliott on pages 100 and 101.

"Fifteenth—That during the latter part of March, 1868, the defendant sold and assigned to T. R. Brooks two-twentieths of said first contract, and to Gardner Elliott one-twentieth interest therein for $1,500 coin, which sum was paid to said defendant.

"Sixteenth—That on or about the ——— day of April, 1868, the defendant S. G. Elliott sold and assigned to Ignatz Frohman seven-twentieths of said contract of date April 23d, 1867, for the sum of $14,000 coin, and that said Frohman paid to said Elliott the sum of $13,300 coin, thereon, and that on said date said Frohman and said Elliott formed a partnership under the firm name of A. J. Cook & Co., a true copy of which articles of partnership are set forth on pages 307 and 308 of the printed deposition of said defendant Elliott.

"Seventeenth—That prior to the date of the formation of the copartnership herein the defendant Elliott had assigned one-twentieth in said contract to some other person, whose name is not disclosed by the evidence, but said S. G. Elliott held control of the same, as he did of the two-twentieths assigned to J. P. Flint, referred to in the fourteenth finding, which control did not give him any interest therein.

"Eighteenth—That at the date of the formation of said partnership said persons still held said interest, respectively, in said contracts as aforesaid, but the plaintiff Ben Holladay held an agreement for the purchase of the interest of said Perrine, at the option of said Holladay, and that after the formation of the said partnership the plaintiff purchased said interest of said Perrine and Frohman.

"Nineteenth—That at and prior to the execution of the articles of partnership the defendant S. G. Elliott represented to the plaintiffs that he was a civil engineer, and that he was competent and well qualified to fill the position and to perform all the duties pertaining to the office of superintendent of the work of constructing, equipping and operating the said railroad under the said contract.

"Twentieth—That said representations were a moving cause in the formation of said partnership, and the sole reason of said Elliott being appointed to said position, plaintiff relying solely upon his representations therein.

"Twenty-first—That said defendant S. G. Elliott, at the time of the formation of said partnership was, and is wholly incompetent and not qualified to perform the duties of such position.

"Twenty-second—That at and prior to the formation of said partnership, S. G. Elliott represented to the plaintiffs that the work of construction was so far advanced that it could be completed, ready for the ties from Portland to Salem, for the sum of $40,000 coin, and that plaintiffs relied upon such representations in forming said copartnership; that it cost for work done after said partnership was formed to finish said twenty miles ready for the ties $175,653 55-100.

"Twenty-third—That prior to and at the formation of said partnership the defendant S. G. Elliott represented to these plaintiffs that the said firm of A. J. Cook & Co. had received $775,000 of the bonds of the said O. C. R. R. Co. East Side, and $1,000,000 of the stock called interest-bearing preferred non-assessable stock, which had not been transferred to said company, all of which he represented he could control and would turn over to said firm upon its formation, except $39,400 bonds, which he represented to have negotiated for machinery.

"Twenty-fourth—That at the time of the formation of said partnership the defendant S. G. Elliott did not have control of all said stock and bonds, but had given away and sold for small sums $470,000 of said stock as follows: J. P. Flint, $100,000 of said stock; C. Temple Emmet, $100,000 of said stock; T. R. Brooks, $100,000; S. F. Elliott, $100,000; Gardner Elliott, $40,000; B. F. Avery, $10,000; E. B. Sadler, $100,000; John J. Kromer, $10,000; Gen. B. F. Pratt, $10,000; Parker, $10,000 of it. That of said bonds that he had placed $22,800 in the hands of W. H. Martin, who refused to deliver the same up until he was paid for service in trying to negotiate them, and that a bond for $500 had been placed in the hands of one Brick who claimed to own the same.

"Twenty-fifth—That said S. G. Elliott, for said stock so disposed of, had received money as follows: S. F. Elliott, $7,500 coin; Parker, $500 currency; J. F. Emery, $350 coin; and that in account of money advanced to S. F. Elliott, for money advanced to A. J. Cook & Co. he should be charged with these amounts.

"Twenty-sixth—That among the property purchased for use on said railroad were four locomotives, which were sold by S. G. Elliott in San Francisco at a net profit of $4,000 in currency, and that in said account with A. J. Cook & Co. defendant S. G. Elliott should be charged with that sum.

"Twenty-seventh—That at or prior to the formation of said copartnership there were several suits or actions instituted and pending against the said O. C. R. R. Co. East Side, designed to test the right of the said O. C. R. R. Co. to use the corporate name.

"Twenty-eighth—That by reason of said suits and the cloud cast over the company, its bonds were of no value in the market.

"Twenty-ninth—That the stock called preferred interest-bearing non-assessable stock, was illegal and of no value.

"Thirtieth—That said contracts and none of them were, at the formation of said copartnership, or ever since have been of any value.

"Thirty-first—That prior to the formation of said co-partnership the Congress of the United States by an Act entitled 'An Act granting bonds to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California to Portland, Oregon, approved July 25, 1866,' granted to such company organized under the laws of this State, as the Legislature might designate for the purpose of aiding in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland, Oregon, southward to the California line, every alternate section of the public lands (not mineral) designated by odd numbers, to the amount of twenty alternate sections per mile, ten on each side of said railroad line; and when any of said alternate sections or part of sections should be found to have been granted, sold, reserved, occupied by homestead settlers, pre-empted or otherwise disposed of, the right of way left to said company to select other land designated by odd sections nearest to and within ten miles of the limits of said first named alternate sections; and that among other things said grant was conditional that said railroad company should complete the first 20 miles of its road and put the same in running order on or before December 25th, 1869.

"Thirty-second—That the Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, by a joint resolution passed at the regular session thereof 1866, had designated the said O. C. R. R. Co. West Side, as the company to receive said grant under said Act of Congress.

"Thirty-third—That the Legislative Assembly of Oregon at its regular session held in 1868, after the formation of the copartnership herein, by a like joint resolution designated the said O. C. R. R. Co. East Side as the company to receive said land grant.

"Thirty-fourth—That after the execution of said articles of copartnership, September 12th, 1868, the said firm entered upon the work of constructing the said road under said contract, the defendant S. G. Elliott acting as general superintendent of construction until October 4th, 1869.

"Thirty-fifth—That by reason of the incompetency and mismanagement of the said S. G. Elliott, the work on said first 20 miles was so delayed thereon that it could not have been completed under his superintendency within the time required by the Acts of Congress.

"Thirty-six—That by reason of the incompetency and mismanagement of the defendant S. G. Elliott as general superintendent of construction, work was delayed on said first 20 miles so far that the greatest portion of said work had to be done at increased cost on account of the heavy and bad weather, and that by reason thereof the cost of completing said first 20 miles was increased at least $10,000, and that plaintiffs have been damaged in that sum by his incompetency and mismanagement.

"Thirty-seventh—That on the 4th of October, 1869, the plaintiff Ben Holladay, acting for himself and the plaintiff C. Temple Emmet, caused a notice to be delivered to the defendant S.G. Elliott, of which the following is a copy:

" 'Office Ben Holladay & Co.,)
" 'Portland, Oregon, Oct. 4th, 1869.)

" 'Mr. S. G. Elliott: As your services as general superintendent in the construction of the Oregon Central Railroad are no longer required, Mr. John F. Kidder has been employed to take charge of the work as constructive engineer.

"Respectfully, Ben Holladay & Co.'

"Thirty-eighth—That thereafter the said S. G. Elliott ceased to act in any manner, as a member of said firm in any capacity.

"Thirty-ninth—That thereafter the plaintiffs proceeded to complete the first 20 miles of said road, and by great exertion and diligence completed the same on the 24th day of December, 1869.

"Fortieth—That if the said S. G. Elliott had remained in charge as general superintendent said first 20 miles would not have been completed within the time specified by the Act of Congress.

"Forty-first—That nothing whatever was done by either of the parties thereto under either of the contracts referred to as Exhibits 'C' and 'D' heretofore.

"Forty-second—That on the 24th of December, 1869, work was suspended by the firm of Ben Holladay & Co., except as to taking care of the property and disposing of the same.

"Forty-third—That there were no profits ever realized by the firm of Ben Holladay & Co.

"Forty-fourth—That said contracts were of no value to said firm or to any firms, and that to have fulfilled them would have entailed so great financial loss upon the contractors as to render the same impracticable as a business transaction.

"Forty-fifth—That on the 28th of March, 1870, the said contracts were by the said O. C. R. R. Co. East Side, duly canceled by the consent of the plaintiffs acting as the firm of Ben Holladay & Co.; and all the bonds and stock of said company that had come into the possession of said firm of Ben Holladay & Co. were delivered up and canceled, and on the said 28th of March, 1870, said company was dissolved.

"Forty-sixth—That all the assets of the firm of Ben Holladay & Co. (aside from the bonds, stock and contracts above referred to) did not exceed in value the sum of $10,000 (ten thousand dollars).

"Forty-seventh—That the total amounts paid out by the firm of Ben Holladay & Co. in the construction of the O. C. R. R. Co. under said contracts, exclusive of the amount paid to A. J. Cook & Co., was $596,510 55-100, which money was all paid out by the plaintiffs and was repaid to them by the said O. C. R. R. Co. upon the cancellation of said contracts.

"Forty-eighth—That after the execution of said partnership and prior to the commencement of this action, the defendant S. G. Elliott sold and assigned to the defendant T. R. Brooks, one-fortieth interest in said partnership, being one-sixth of his interest therein, and to the defendant Gardner Elliott another fortieth interest therein, leaving the defendant and S. G. Elliott only four-fortieths interest in said partnership.

"Forty-ninth—That neither party to said partnership was importunate to have the same formed, but the same was willingly entered into by each of said parties.

"Fiftieth—That since the commencement of this suit the plaintiff Ben Holladay has purchased the said interest from T. R. Brooks and Gardner Elliott and is now the owner thereof.

"Fifty-first—That the accounts of the parties stand as follows: Total amount expended on the road by A. J. Cook and A. J. Cook & Co., including $6,000 for services and expenses to April 23d, 1858, $64,109.82. The amount of expenses charged in this item of $6,000 were not more than $500, leaving a charge of $5,500 for services which plaintiff did not agree to pay. The amount received from the sale of $39,400 bonds in currency at par, gold being 140, would make in gold $28,142.85, with which he should be charged. He received from Ignaz Frohman $14,000, less $700 drawback, leaving $13,300 with which he should be charged. Received from N. P. Perrine $3,000; received from Gardner Elliott, $1,500; received from S. F. Elliott, $1,500; received from J. S. Emery say $350; received from Parker $500 in currency, gold being 140 make $357; borrowed from Trust Company in San Francisco, paid by plaintiffs, $6,560; profits on locomotives, $4,000 in currency, gold being 140, $2,859; making a total of $63,006 to be deducted from the amounts on the road, would leave $1,103 with which plaintiffs should be charged on their letter or agreement dated Sept. 12th, 1868, as the money advanced by S. G. Elliott to the firm of A. J. Cook & Co., which plaintiffs had agreed to pay. Plaintiffs should also be charged with his salary to Oct. 4th, 1869 twelve (12) months and twenty-two (22) days, at 500 per month, $6,366.50; also, one-tenth of the assets of B. H. & Co. $1,000, would leave a total of $8,469.52, with which plaintiffs should be charged. Defendant S. G. Elliott received over and above his traveling expenses, from the plaintiff, $9,000—would leave the defendant S. G. Elliott upon a proper accounting between him and the plaintiffs, indebted to them in the sum of $530.45.

"Fifty-second—That on or about the 4th day of Nov. 1869, the defendant S. G. Elliott made a bill of sale to the defendant J. B. Rogers of all his household furniture and a lot of personal property. That said bill of sale was simply between the parties to facilitate the sale of said property to other purchasers by said Rogers, in the contemplated absence of Elliott, and was void as to the creditors of said Elliott.

"J. C. Moreland, Referee.

"I also find the following

"CONCLUSION OF LAW

"1st. That said Oregon Central Railroad Company was illegally organized, and its stock called non-assessable interest bearing preferred stock, was void.

"2d. That the plaintiffs had no legal right to discharge the defendant S. G. Elliott from the position of general superintendent, but his incompetency and delay in prosecuting the work precluded him from recovering damages for such discharge.

"3d. That the misrepresentations of the defendant S. G. Elliott as to his qualifications for the position of general superintendent of construction under the said contracts, his incompetency for said position and his sale of said interests in said partnership to T. R. Brooks and Gardner Elliott, entitle the plaintiffs to a decree dissolving said copartnership as of Nov. 5th, 1869, the date of the commencement of this suit, and a settlement of the partnership accounts as of that date.

"4th. That plaintiffs had judgment and decree against the defendant S. G. Elliott for the sum of $530.48, balance of account, and the sum of $10,000 damages to be apportioned by plaintiffs according to their respective interests.

"5th. That neither party received of the other any costs or disbursements.

"All of which is respectfully submitted.

"J. C. Moreland, Referee.

"And the Court having taken the same under advisement, after fully considering the allegations and proofs of the parties and the finding of said Referee, finds:

"1st. The 20th finding of said referee should be modified in this—said representation of S. G. Elliott of his competency was not the sole cause of his being appointed superintendent of said road, but his position in being then in control of said road was one cause of his being so appointed.

"2d. That findings 35th and 36th are not supported by the evidence.

"3d. The 40th finding is modified so as to read as follows: The incompetency of S. G. Elliott as superintendent of said road made it necessary and proper for Ben Holladay & Co. to suspend him from that position and trust and to substitute another man in his place.

"4th. The 42d finding is not supported by the evidence.

"5th. The 2d finding of said referee as a conclusion of law is rejected as erroneous.

"6th. The Court further finds as a conclusion of law that from the fact found by said referee as modified as aforesaid, that the plaintiffs are entitled to a decree dissolving partnership, and that the defendant S. G. Elliott is indebted to the firm of Ben Holladay & Co. on account, the sum of $530; that of this sum plaintiffs are entitled to 9-10 dollars, equal to the sum of $477 (dollars), for which sum they are entitled to a decree, but not for costs and disbursements.

"It is therefore ordered and decreed by the Court that the said firm of Ben Holladay & Co. be dissolved, and that the plaintiffs have and recover from S. G. Elliott the defendant, the said sum of four hundred and seventy-seven dollars ($477), to be distributed between said plaintiffs—twenty-eight fortieths to Ben Holladay, and ten fortieths to C. Temple Emmet—and that they have execution therefor.

"R. P. Boise, Judge."

FINDINGS AND DECREE.

"At a Supreme Court begun and held at the City of Salem, County of Marion, State of Oregon, on Monday, the 7th day of July, A. D. 1879.

"Present: Hon. James K. Kelly, Chief Justice; Hon. R. P. Boise, Associate Justice; Hon. P. P. Prim, Associate Justice; P. H. D'Arcy, Clerk; Joseph A. Baker, Sheriff and Ex-Officio Bailiff.

"WHEREUPON on Fr'day, the 15th day of August, 1879, the same being the 28th Judicial Day, the following proceedings were had:

"Appeal from Marion County.

"Ben Holladay and C. Temple Emmett, Respondents, vs.

"S. G. Elliott, Appellant.

"Now on this day the above entitled suit having heretofore been tried and submitted to the Court and taken under advisement, and the Court being now fully advised as to what final decree should be entered therein, the Court finds:

"First, that the contract of co-partnership of Ben Holladay & Co., set forth in the complaint, was entered into without fraud or misrepresentation upon the part of either the appellant or the respondent.

"Second, that the bonds of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, mentioned in the pleadings, and the preferred interest-bearing non-assessable stock issued by the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Salem were illegal and of no value.

"Third, that on the 22nd day of April, 1867, John H. Moores, J. S. Smith, George L. Woods and others, filed articles of incorporation in the office of the Secretary of State and in the office of the County Clerk of Marion County, to incorporate the Oregon Central Railroad Company. That the capital stock was fixed at $7,250,000, divided into 72,500 shares of $100 each, and on the same day stock books were opened, when six shares of stock were subscribed by six different persons; then followed this subscription: 'Oregon Central Railroad Company, by George L. Woods, Chairman, 70,000 shares, $7,000,000.' That on the same day directors and other officers were elected, and on the 23rd day of April, 1867, the O. C. R. R. Co. thus organized; entered into the contract with A. J. Cook to construct 150 miles of its road, from Portland south through the Willamette Valley, for $5,250,000, to be paid in first mortgage bonds of the company payable in twenty years, and to be taken by the contractor, A. J. Cook, at par; That payments of eighty per cent were to be made by the O. C. R. R. Co. for the work done by A. J. Cook; to be paid every month as the work progressed; That the O. C. R. R. Co. also agreed at the same time to issue $2,000,000 of preferred stock unassessable and bearing interest at the rate of seven per cent per annum, and deliver the same to A. J. Cook immediately after signing the contract, and that the common stock of the company should be offered to the people of Oregon at ten cents on the dollar; That afterwards the appellant, who became the owner of the A. J. Cook contract, associated others with him under the firm name of A. J. Cook & Co., and on the 27th day of November of that year entered into a supplementary agreement with the O. C. R. R. Co. whereby in consideration of materials bought for the construction of the road, the company agreed to issue and deliver to A. J. Cook & Co., $775,000 of first mortgage bonds on its railroad and franchises, and the bonds were issued accordingly. That the $2,000,000 of preferred stock specified in the agreement of April 23rd, had already been issued and delivered by the O. C. R. R. Co. to A. J. Cook & Co. That one million dollars of this preferred stock was given back to the directors of the company, according to a private understanding with them, that they were to have it to be used by them in procuring the necessary legislation in Oregon to promote the interests of the corporation, and that this delivery to the directors of $1,000,000 left still $1,000,000 of the preferred interest-bearing non-assessable stock in the possession of A. J. Cook & Co. That this is the stock and these are the bonds, less $68,000, which was transferred by A. J. Cook to the firm of Ben Holladay & Co., upon the formation of the copartnership.

"Fourth, that the attempt to subscribe 70,000 shares to the stock of the O. C. R. R. Co. by the corporation itself through a person styling himself chairman, was done simply to evade the liability which the law imposes on all persons who subscribe to the capital stock of corporations.

"Fifth, that such subscription to the capital stock of said company by the corporation itself was illegal and void.

"Sixth, that such attempted organization of said company, based upon said illegal and void subscription to its capital stock, was illegal and void, and the said corporation was not organized according to law.

"Seventh, that it was under said illegal and void organization of said company that the contracts set forth in the complaint were executed by said company, and the stock and bonds therein mentioned were issued.

"Eighth, that said contracts were of no value.

"Ninth, that upon the formation of the copartnership of Ben Holladay & Co. in September, 1868, the work of constructing the railroad under the contracts of A. J. Cook and A. J. Cook & Co. was continued under the appellant as general superintendent, and was prosecuted with reasonable vigor until December, when it was partially suspended, and from that time until July, 1869, but little work was done. That during the month of May, only nine, and July only eleven men were employed on the whole line of the road from Portland to Salem. That the appellant was absent in the Atlantic States during the preceding winter and returned too late to commence operations on the road during the months when work could have been prosecuted with the greatest benefit to the firm and the best season of the year for profitable labor in railroad building was suffered to go by and the appellant was discharged by the firm of Ben Holladay & Co. from their employment as general superintendent and for alleged inefficiency, and after he ceased to act as superintendent on the 4th day of October, 1869, a largely increased force of laborers was placed on the road, far higher wages were paid for workmen, and in this way the section of twenty miles was completed on the 24th day of December, 1869. That one of the chief causes why the work progressed so slowly during the spring of 1869 was the inability to procure the funds necessary to carry it on more vigorously.

"Tenth, that suits had been commenced in the U. S. Circuit Court and in the Circuit Court of this State against the O. C. R. R. Co. to test the legality of its existence as a corporation, and they had so far progressed as to foreshadow its overthrow. That Joseph Gaston, the president of a rival corporation of the same name, known as the Oregon Central Railroad Company (west side), had issued circulars and sent them to bankers and brokers in the East, setting forth that 'the corporation was a humbug and its bonds were worthless.' That it was known that the company was hopelessly insolvent; that Ladd & Tilton had presented to it for payment certain interest coupons which were protested for non-payment, and that there were no subscribers to the capital stock of the corporation from whom any money could be collected to defray the rapidly accumulating interest on the bonds and its preferred interest-bearing stock, and said bonds were worth nothing in the money markets of the world, and that to have gone on and attempted to complete the road under the contracts of A. J. Cook & Co. with that corporation would have been simply an act of folly, and would have bankrupted not only Ben Holladay & Co. but financially ruined every member of the firm, and that it was an impracticable undertaking to construct the railroad under the copartnership of Ben Holladay & Co. and for that reason a dissolution of the co-partnership should be decreed.

"Eleventh, that at the time of entering into the copartnership the firm of Ben Holladay & Co., in consideration of the transfer, to-wit of the property of A. J. Cook & Co., agreed to pay the indebtedness of that company, including a debt due to the appellant, then estimated at $21,000. That sometime after the formation of the copartnership Ben Holladay & Co. gave the appellant a written instrument to this effect, which was antedated so as to conform to the date of the agreement, which is as follows:

'Office of Ben Holladay & Co.

Portland, Ore., Sept. 12, 1868.

S. G. Elliott, Portland, Dear Sir: On our purchase this date from A. J. Cook and A. J. Cook & Co. of the pending contracts with the Oregon Central Railroad Company for the construction of a railroad from Portland to the California line, it is understood that we are to pay you the money furnished by you to the firm of A. J. Cook & Co. and standing to your credit on their books. This money is stated by you to amount to about $21,000. When the accounts are fully made up and the balance correctly ascertained you will be entitled to our obligation for the correct amount. Respectfully yours, Ben Holladay & Co.'

"That this writing was accepted by the appellant, and that the amount of money furnished to the firm of A. J. Cook & Co. by the appellant, Elliott, was $21,000, and that said appellant is now entitled to that sum with interest, less the amount which was paid to him thereon by Ben Holladay & Co.

"Twelfth, that prior to the bringing of this suit the firm of Ben Holladay & Co. had paid to said Elliott, on account of said sum of $21,000, the sum of $8,000, and that there is due from the said firm of Ben Holladay & Co. to the appellant the sum of $13,000 with interest thereon since September 12, 1868.

"Thirteenth, that at the time this suit for a dissolution of the copartnership was commenced, the assets of the firm of Ben Holladay & Co. consisted in part of a section of twenty miles of railroad, then nearly completed. That by the terms of the contract entered into between the O. C. R. R. Co. and A. J. Cook & Co. the latter firm was to receive $32,000 per mile for the construction and equipment of that portion of the road, or $640,000 for the twenty miles, which sum was to be paid to the firm of Ben Holladay & Co. under the contract of A. J. Cook & Co. in bonds of the O. C. R. R. Co. which were of no value for reasons already stated, and that the Oregon Central Railroad Company, having no lawful organization, the respondents appropriated and converted that section of the railroad to their own use and benefit, and subsequently sold it to the Oregon & California Railroad Company, a new corporation organized to complete it, and the amount of money necessarily expended in constructing that section of the road cannot be satisfactorily ascertained from the evidence in the case. That inasmuch as the respondents appropriated that section of the road, as well as all the work on the other portions to their own use, without the consent of appellant, it should be presumed that it was worth to them what it cost to construct it, including not only what they paid out upon it, but also the unpaid balance of $13,000, which A. J. Cook & Co. had expended upon it, and which Ben Holladay & Co. assumed to pay to the appellant when the co-partnership was formed, and that having terminated that copartnership and excluded the appellant from any participation in the settlement of its affairs and the disposal of its assets, the respondents should be held liable to pay the debts of the firm, as well as those due to themselves, as the amount due to the appellant; and the Court further finds that besides the railroad property belonging to Ben Holladay & Co. that firm had the machine shops, also saw mills, wagons, carts, horses, etc. which the respondents also appropriated to their own use and subsequently transferred to the O. & C. R. R. Co., worth in the aggregate $19,500, of which the appellant was entitled to four-fortieths or one tenth, that being the interest which he had in the copartnership at the time this suit was commenced, making his share therein the sum of $1950.

"Fourteenth, that though in law the firm of Ben Holladay & Co. had no title to the lands granted by Congress to aid in the construction of the Oregon Central Railroad, yet in equity it was entitled to them, as all these lands were earned by the money and labor of Ben Holladay & Co., and were in fact afterwards transferred to the O. & C. R. R. Co., and whatever may have been realized by the sale must in equity be regarded as part of the assets of that firm, and although the partnership was terminated by the respondents before the lands for the first section were fully earned, yet they will not be permitted to exclude the appellant from his rightful share in the lands by affecting a dissolution of the copartnership a few weeks before the title to them became perfected. That nearly all the valuable lands embraced within the limits of the Railroad Grant for the first 20 miles had already been disposed of by the U. S. Government before the grant was made, and that up to September, 1868, there had been selected and patented to the O. & C. R. R. Co. for the first section of 20 miles, 32,267.36 acres, and about the same number of acres more could be selected whenever the surveys should be made.

That these lands were worth in the aggregate about 25 cents per acre, and that all the lands patented and unpatented, amounting to about 64,534 acres, were worth $16,133, of which sum the appellant ought to have one-tenth or $1,613.

"Fifteenth, that upon a fair settlement of the partnership transactions the respondents are justly indebted to the appellant in the following sums: Nine-tenths of the balance of A. J. Cook & Co. indebtedness unpaid by Ben Holladay & Co., $11,700, interest since September 12, 1868, $12,622.70; appellant's interest in machine shops, sawmills, etc., $1950, interest since November 5, 1869, $1886; equitable shares in land grant $1613; eight years interest on same $1280. Total $31,051.70. That of this sum the respondents should pay in proportion to the interest which they had respectively in the copartnership of Ben Holladay & Co., that is the respondent Holladay is to pay twenty-four parts or $21,909.46, and respondent Emmett ten parts or $9,132.08.

"It is therefore ordered, considered and decreed that the report and findings of law and fact of the referee and of the Court below, in so far as they are not changed and modified by the foregoing findings and conclusions, be and they are hereby confirmed, and that so far as they conflict therewith that they be and they are hereby in all things set aside and modified.

"It is further ordered and decreed by the Court that the copartnership of Ben Holladay & Company in the complaint mentioned be and the same is hereby dissolved as of the commencement of this suit, and that said respondents be and they are charged with all the assets of said firm in accordance with the findings aforesaid, and that the appellant, Simon G. Elliott, have and recover from the respondent Ben Holladay the sum of $21,919.46 and that he also have and recover of and from the respondent, C. Temple Emmett, the sum of $9,-132.08.

It is further ordered and decreed that all the costs and disbursements incurred by the respondents and appellant in the Circuit Court and in this Court shall be paid by them in proportion to the interest which they have respectively in the copartnership; that is, the appellant shall pay one-tenth of such costs and disbursements to be taxed, and the respondents shall pay the remaining portion of such costs and disbursements; that the costs and disbursements in the court below shall be taxed there; that the costs and disbursements in this court are allowed, taxed at $359.10, and that execution issue therefor.

"It is further ordered that this cause be remanded to the court below for such further proceedings as are by law required.

"STATE OF OREGON,
"County of Marion- } ss.

"I, J. C. MORELAND, Clerk of the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon, do hereby certify that the foregoing copy of Decree has been by me compared with the original, and that it is a correct transcript therefrom, and of the whole of such original, as the same appears of record, and in my office and custody.

"IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of said Court, at Salem, Oregon, this 18th day of September, 1911.

(SEAL) J. C. Moreland, Clerk."

Whereupon WILLIAM SINGER called as a witness on behalf of defendants, and being duly sworn, testified that he is a member of the law department of the Southern Pacific Company in San Francisco, and as such has charge of all suits and proceedings in courts and land offices involving questions of title to lands or rights of way granted by the so-called Oregon and California land grant, California and Oregon land grant, Central Pacific land grant, and Southern Pacific Railroad Company land grant. He is also an attorney in such matters for the Southern Pacific Company. In the United States land office, pursuant to the rules of practice of that office, he authorizes the appearance of attorneys over his signature as general land attorney for the particular company represented. He commenced this employment in the year 1878, as a land office attorney for the California and Oregon land grant, then owned by the Central Pacific Railroad Company, as attorney for B. B. Redding, land agent of that company. In 1884, or 1885, he became land attorney for the Central Pacific Railroad Company's land grant, and for the entire land grant of the California and Oregon Railroad Company, both in land office proceedings and in courts, other than federal courts. In 1894 there was added to his jurisdiction, federal cases for the California and Oregon, Oregon and California, Central Pacific and Southern Pacific Railroad Company's land grants. In 1888, when William H. Mills was appointed land agent of the Oregon and California land grant, witness investigated the title of that company to its lands in Oregon, and reported that to William H. Mills. After the year about 1884 or 1885 until 1894, he owed no allegiance to the chief counsel of the companies but acted as attorney for William H. Mills, as he understood it, under authority from Mr. C. P. Huntington, that he was such attorney for William H. Mills.

Referring to the form of deed described in Exhibits 11 and 12 to the Stipulation as to the Facts in this case, witness testified that upon investigation of the operation of the land department of the Oregon and California land grants, he found that warranty deeds were being given for patented and unpatented lands. He recommended to Mr. Mills in 1889 or 1890 that the issuance of warranty deeds be discontinued and that a deed granting and conveying the lands be given to patented lands, and that a deed quitclaiming all the right, title and interest which the company had or might thereafter acquire, be given to unpatented lands for the Oregon and California land grants, and his recollection is that he drafted the deeds set forth in those exhibits. This is confirmed by the peculiar phrase of the granting clause, "Grant and convey" not having been used, so far as his observation goes, by any conveyancer but himself, and the other form of deeds "Remise, release and quitclaim all right, title and interest which the company owns or may hereafter acquire" having originated, he believes, with him; his belief is that those forms were drawn by him, sent by Mr. Mills to Secretary Andrews, then Secretary of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, with instructions to adopt and use them thereafter. Those forms of deeds comply substantially with the forms of deeds about that time drafted by him for use in conveying lands of those land grants, for which William H. Mills was land agent. The primary object of these forms of deeds was to standardize the forms of deeds, although an important consideration with him was to dispense with warranty deeds, which, in his experience as a railroad attorney, were not given by any railroad company other than the Oregon and California. There was no purpose by these instruments, or the adoption of these forms, to anticipate or meet any contention or claim now made by the United States in this suit as to the provisions of Section 4 of the Act of May 4, 1870, or the Act of April 10, 1869. His recollection is that prior to that time he had given a written opinion that the proviso in the Act of May 4, 1870 was a covenant and not a condition and that the Act of April 10, 1869 imposed no covenant if it had any effect at all. In fact, prior to the commencement of the case of Oregon & California Railroad Company against Eaton and the answer filed therein, they had attached no significance whatever to the proviso referred to either in the Act of May 4, 1870 or the Act of April 10, 1869. It was his understanding always, and he believes it to be true, that Mills, during the lifetime of C. P. Huntington, acted as supreme executive officer in land grant matters, and did not submit forms of deeds to the consideration of anybody but witness and upon the approval of witness Mills passed them up to the secretaries of the companies for adoption.

Witness recognized what purports to be a certified copy of letters dated May 7, May 23, 1870, and May 20, 1872. The letter of May 20, 1872 purports to be a certified copy of a letter from Willis Drummond, Commissioner, to Honorable C. Delano, Secretary of the Interior, which letter refers to certain papers filed in his office by the Honorable George H. Williams, Attorney General, for the purpose of obtaining a construction by the department, of the proviso of the Act of Congress approved April 10, 1869, Statute, Volume 16, page 47, amendatory to the Act of July 25, 1866, Statute, Vol-16, page 239, etc., as an apparent certified copy under the seal of the general land office, marked as Defendants' Exhibit No. 373. Whereupon the same was offered and received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified as such.

Whereupon witness was shown Defendants Exhibit 374, purporting to be a certified copy of a form of deed and acknowledgment from the European and Oregon Land Company, together with letter of date January 23rd, 1874, signed I. R. Moores, Land Agent, together with a letter of Willis Drummond, Commissioner, to I. R. Moores, Land Agent, of date March 13, 1874, all certified by the recorder of the general land office under date of April 11, 1912, and the seal of said general land office affixed, and witness recognized the same as so certified. Whereupon defendants offered and there was received in evidence Defendants' Exhibit No. 374 which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon witness was shown Defendants Exhibit No. 375, purporting to be correspondence between the general land office and the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and therewith certified copies of executed deeds by Milton S. Latham and others, to the United States, Oregon and California Railroad Company, Farmers Loan & Trust Company, to the United States, and approved by R. Koehler, Receiver, in the suit of Lawrence Harrison, et al, against the Oregon & California Railroad Company, et al; from the Oregon and California Railroad Company to the Union Trust Company of New York, and to the United States, all relating to lands claimed by the United States to have been erroneously patented, and which documents purport to reconvey the title to the United States, together with the correspondence transmitting the same, and all being certified of date April 11, 1912 by the recorder of the general land office, under the seal of that office, and witness recognized that as a duly certified copy of these documents.

Whereupon defendants offered and there was received in evidence Defendants' Exhibit 375, which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon witness was shown and recognized as a duly certified copy, a letter of the Assistant Attorney General, Walter H. Smith, to Secretary Delano, of date May 5, 1871; a letter of Secretary Delano to Attorney General Akerman of date May 8, 1871; a letter of Attorney General Akerman of date May 9, 1871 to Secretary Delano, and certain other correspondence connected therewith, and marked Defendants' Exhibit No. 376.

Whereupon defendants offered and there was received in evidence Defendants Exhibit No. 376, which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identifid as such.

Whereupon witness was shown a printed copy of an opinion of Attorney General Brewster, dated June 15, 1882, addressed to Secretary of the Interior H. M. Teller, being on pages 35 to 39 inclusive of Executive Document No. 29, 47th Congress, Second Session.

Whereupon defendants offered and there was received in evidence and is hereinafter extended in the record and is as follows:

"DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,

Washington, D. C., June 15, 1882.

"Sir: By a letter dated the 5th of January last, your "predecessor submitted to me a number of questions aris"ing upon an application of the New Orleans Pacific "Railway Company for certain lands claimed under the "land grant made to the New Orleans, Baton Rouge and "Vicksburg Railroad Company by the act of Congress of "March 3, 1871, chapter 122.

"The land grant mentioned is contained in the twen- "ty-second section of that act, which provides:

"That the New Orleans, Baton Rouge and Vicks- "burg Railroad Company, chartered by the State of "Louisiana, shall have the "right to connect, by the most "eligible route to be selected by said company, with the "said Texas Pacific Railroad at its eastern terminus, and "shall have the right of way through the public land to "the same extent granted hereby to the said Texas Pa- "cific Railroad Company; and in aid of its construction "from New Orleans to Baton Rouge, thence by the way "of Alexandria, in said state, to connect with the said "Texas Pacific Railroad Company at its eastern ter- "minus, there is hereby granted to said company, its suc- "cessors and assigns, the same number of alternate sec- "tions of public lands per mile, in the State of Louisiana, "as are by this act granted in the State of California to "said Texas Pacific Railroad Company; and said lands "shall be withdrawn from market, selected, and patents "issued therefor, and opened for settlement and pre- "emption, upon the same terms and in the same manner "and time as is provided for and required from said "Texas Pacific Railroad Company, within said State of "California; PROVIDED, That said company shall

"complete the whole of said road within five years from "the passage of this act."

"The eastern terminus of the Texas Pacific Rail- "road, as fixed by the same act, was a point at or near "Marshall, Tex.

"The New Orleans, Baton Rogue and Vicksburg "Railroad Company was incorporated by an act of the "legislature of Louisiana passed December 30, 1869, "which authorized it to construct and operate a railroad " 'from any point on the line of the New Orleans, Jack- "son and Great Northern Railroad, within the parish "of Livingston, running from thence to any point on the "boundary line dividing the States of Louisiana and Mis- "sissippi,' the route here indicated lying east of the Mis- "sissippi River. It was also authorized to construct and "operate a branch railroad from its main line (above "described) to the City of Baton Rogue; and for the "purpose of connecting its railroad with the railroads of "other companies, &c., it was furthermore authorized 'to "construct, maintain, and use, by running thereon its "engines and cars, such branch railroads and tracks as "it may find necessary and expedient to own and use;' "and such branch railroads were, for all the purposes of "the act, to be deemed and taken to constitute a part of "the main line of its railroad within the State of Louis- "iana.

"On November 11, 1871, that company filed in the "General Land Office a map designating the general "route of a road projected thereby from Shreveport, by "way of Alexandria, to Baton Rogue, and thereupon a "withdrawal of the public lands along the same was or- "dered, which became effective in December following.

"Subsequently by an act of the legislature of Louis- "iana, passed December 11, 1872, the same Company was "given 'full power and authority to commence the con- "struction of their road in the City of New Orleans or "Shreveport, or at any intermediate point on their line "of road, as may best suit the convenience of said com- "pany, and facilitate the speedy construction of a con- "tinuous line from the City of New Orleans to the City "of Shreveport, or perfect railroad communication with "the Texas Pacific Railroad, or any other railroad in "northwestern Louisiana, at or near the Louisiana State "line: PROVIDED, however, That the said Company "shall construct the line of its road between the City of "New Orleans and the City of Baton Rogue on the east "side of the Mississippi River, to the corporate limits "of the said City of Baton Rogue, or adjacent thereto.'

"In the mean time, by the act of Congress of May "2, 1872, chapter 132, the Texas and Pacific Railway "Company (formerly styled the Texas Pacific Railroad "Company) was 'authorized and required to construct, "maintain, control, and operate a road between Marshall, "Texas, and Shreveport, Louisiana, or control and oper- "ate any existing road between said points, of the same "guage as the Texas and Pacific Railroad.' The same "act further provided that 'all roads terminating at "Shreveport shall have the right to make the same run- "ning connections, and shall be entitled to the same

"privileges, for the transaction of business in connection "with the said Texas and Pacific Railway, as are granted "to roads intersecting therewith.'

"On February 13, 1873, a second map was filed in the "General Land Office by the New Orleans, Baton Rogue "and Vicksburg Railroad Company, designating the "general route of a road projected thereby from New "Orleans to Baton Rogue, and a withdrawal of the pub- "lic lands along the same was ordered, which took effect "in April, 1873. The route between those places, those "designated, lies on the east side of the Mississippi River. "That company has not constructed any part of its road, "either on the route between New Orleans and Baton "Rogue or on the route between the latter place and "Shreveport; nor, indeed, has there been a definite loca- "tion of its road anywhere between the points mentioned. "Nothing beyond the designation of the general route "thereof appears.

"Pursuant to a resolution of its board of directors, "adopted December 29, 1880, all the right, title, and "interest of that company in and to the aforesaid grant of "public lands made by the act of March 3, 1871, were "deeded to it by the New Orleans Pacific Railway Com- "pany. This action of the board of directors and offi- "cers of the former company was afterwards approved "and ratified by the stockholders thereof at a meeting "held in December, 1881.

"The New Orleans Pacific Railway Company was "originally incorporated under the general laws of the "State of Louisiana in June, 1875. Its charter was sub"sequently amended by acts of the Louisiana Legisla"ture, passed February 19, 1876, and February 5, 1878.

"It is thereby authorized to construct a railroad "begin"ning at a point on the Mississippi River, at New Or"leans or between New Orleans and the parish of Iber"ville, on the right bank of the Mississippi, and Baton "Rogue, on the left bank &c., or from any point within "the limits of this State, and running thence toward and "to the City of Shreveport,' which is made its northwest"ern terminus.

"The route of this company as projected is under"stood to extend from New Orleans to Baton Rogue, "and thence by way of Alexandria to Shreveport. Be"tween New Orleans and Baton Rogue it lies on the "west side of the Mississippi River; while the designated "route of the New Orleans, Baton Rogue and Vicks"burg Railroad Company, between the same points, lies "on the east side of that river. Between Baton Rogue "and Shreveport its general course and direction corre"sponds, in the main, with the route designated by the "last named company. It is throughout its entire length "from New Orleans to Shreveport within the limits of "the before-mentioned withdrawals of public lands.

"In October, 1881, the president of the New Orleans "Pacific Railway Company made affidavit that three "sections of its road were then completed and ready for "examination by the government; whereupon a com"missioner was appointed to examine the same, the re"sult of whose examination appears in a report made by

"by him to the Secretary of the Interior, under date of "the 26th of that month. One of the sections embraces "68 miles of road, beginning on the west bank of the "Mississippi River, opposite New Orleans, and ending "near the town of Donaldsonville; another embraces 20 "miles of road near Alexandria; and the third embraces "50 miles of road terminating at Shreveport. For each "of these sections lands are claimed by that company "under the aforesaid land grant, as assignee of the New "Orleans, Baton Rogue and Vicksburg Railroad Com- "pany.

"No map of definite location of any portion of its "road has been filed, other than those of constructed por- "tions. It appears that in February, 1881, the New Or- "leans Pacific Railway Company purchased from Mor- "gan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad and Steamship "Company, the road constructed on the west bank of "the Mississippi River by the New Orleans, Mobile and "Texas Railroad Company, from Westmego to White "Castle, a distance of 68 miles, and that the same has "become a part of the main line of the road of the New "Orleans Pacific Railway Company.

"The following are the questions submitted:

"1. Was the grant to the New Orleans, Baton "Rogue and Vicksburg Railroad Company, a grant in "presenti?

"2. Had the New Orleans, Baton Rogue and Vicks- "burg Railroad Company, at the date of its alleged "transfer of land to the New Orleans Pacific Railway "Company, such an interest in the lands, under said "act, as was assignable?

"3. Is the New Orleans Pacific Railway Company, "such a successor to or assignee of the New Orleans, "Baton Rouge and Vicksburg Railroad Company as is "contemplated by said act?

"4. Should it appear that the 68 miles of the New "Orleans, Mobile and Texas Railroad was constructed "prior to the act of March 3, 1871, granting lands to "aid in the construction of the New Orleans, Baton "Rouge and Vicksburg Railroad, can the New Orleans "Pacific Company (its assignee) claim any benefit from "the grant? Or in the case of such prior construction, "and the nonconstruction of any portion of the New Or- "leans, Baton Rouge and Vicksburg road, has the pur- "pose for which the grant was made failed, and the "grant consequently lapsed?

"5. If the New Orleans, Mobile and Texas road "was constructed, subsequently to the date of said act, "is so much of its road as is now owned by the New Or- "leans Pacific Company such a road as is contemplated "for acceptance by the president within the meaning of "said act, and may patents issue to the latter for lands "opposite to and co-terminus with such constructed por- "tion of road?

"These questions are accompanied by a request for "an opinion upon such other questions of law as may "suggest themselves touching the transfer of said land "grant, to which reference is above made.

"Of the above stated questions the first three may be "considered together in connection with the following "inquiry, which presents itself at the outset, whether "the assent of Congress to the transfer made by the New "Orleans, Baton Rouge and Vicksburg Railroad Com- "pany of all its interest in said land grant to the New "Orleans Pacific Railway Company is necessary (by rea- "son of anything in the provisions of the grant itself) "to entitle the latter company to the benefit of said grant "in aid of the construction of the road projected by it.

"The act of March 3, 1871 passed to the New Or- "leans, Baton Rouge and Vicksburg Railroad Company "a present interest in a certain number of alternate sec- "tions of public lands per mile within the limits there "prescribed. Its language is 'there is hereby granted "to the said company' the number of alternate sections "mentioned; words which import a grant in presenti, "and not in future, or the promise of a grant (97 U. S. "Rep., 496) But the grant thus made is in the nature "of a float. It is of sections afterwards to be located, "their location depending upon the establishment of the "line of the road. Until this is definitely fixed the grant "does not attach to any specific tracts of land. Upon the "line of the road being definitely located the grant then "first requires precision, and the company becomes in- "vested with an inchoate title to the particular land cov- "ered thereby, which can ripen into a perfect title only "as the construction of each section of 20 miles of road "is completed and approved, when the right to patents "for lands opposite to and coterminous with such con"structed section accrues.

"The proviso in the grant that the company shall "complete the whole of its road within five years from "the date of the act is a condition subsequent, the failure "to perform which does not ipso facto work a forfeiture "of the grant, but only gives rise to a right in the govern- "ment to enforce a forfeiture thereof. Yet in order to "enforce a forfeiture such right must be asserted by a "judicial proceeding, authorized by law, or by some legis- "lative action amounting to a resumption of the grant. "(Schulenberg vs. Harriman, 21 Wall., 44) Hence, "until advantage is taken of the non-performance of the "condition, under legislative authority, the interest of the "grantee in the grant remains unimpaired thereby.

"Such being the nature and effect of the grant and "its accompanying condition, and no action having been "taken by legislation or judicial proceedings to enforce a "forfeiture thereof, it follows that at the period of said "transfer by the New Orleans, Baton Rogue and Vicks- "burg Railroad Co. this company was invested with a "present interest in the number of alternate sections of "public lands per mile granted by the act of 1871, not- "withstanding it was already in default in the perform- "ance of the condition referred to, and that it still re- "tained a right to proceed with the construction of the "road in aid of which the grant was made until advantage "should be taken of the default. But as it had not then "definitely fixed the line of its road, although a map des- "ignating the general route thereof was duly filed, that "interest did not attach to any specific tracts of land,

"but remained afloat, as it were, needing a definite loca"tion of the road before it could become thus attached.
"Was the interest here described assignable to another "company, so as to entitle the latter to the benefit of the "grant in aid of the construction of its road between the "places named therein, without the assent of Congress?

"Doubt has perhaps arisen on this point in view of "the fact that in one or two instances it has been thought
"expedient to obtain legislation by Congress confirming "or authorizing a similar assignment (see section 2 of "the act of March 3, 1865, chapter 88, and section 1 of "the act of March 3, 1869, chapter 127), and also in view "of the adverse ruling of this department in the case of "the Oregon Central Railroad Company. (13 Opin., "382) However, a similar assignment made in 1866 by
"the Hannibal and Saint Joseph Railroad Company to "the Pike's Peake Railroad Company, afterward known "as the Central Branch Company, was held to be valid
"by Attorney-General Stanbury in an opinion given to "the Secretary of the Treasury under date of July 25,
"1866.

"In the latter case the Hannibal and Saint Joseph "Company, which was incorporated by the State of Mis"souri, with authority to construct a railroad between "Hannibal and Saint Joseph, within that State, was, by
"the Pacific Railroad act of July 1, 1862 (section 13),
"authorized to 'extend its road from Saint Joseph, via "Atchison, to connect and unite with the road through "Kansas, and may for this purpose use any railroad
"charter which has been or may be granted by the legis"lature of Kansas', & c., and by the fifteenth section of "the same act it was provided that 'wherever the word "company is used in this act it shall be construed to em- "brace the words their associates, successors and assigns "the same as if the words had been properly added there- "to.' Subsequently, in 1863, an assignment was made "by that company of all its rights under said act (which "included an interest in both a land and a bond subsidy) "to the Atchison and Pike's Peake Railroad Company, "a company previously organized under a charter grant- "ed by the legislature of Kansas. The latter company "having constructed a section of 20 miles of the proposed "road west from Atchison claimed the benefit of the "grant made to the Hannibal and Saint Joseph Com- "pany, as its assignee, and this claim was recognized and "allowed, in accordance with the opinion of the Attorney- "General. It will be observed, however, that the Hanni- "bal and Saint Joseph Company was authorized to 'use "any railroad charter which has been or may be granted "by the legislature of Kansas,' and this, together with "the provision in the fifteenth section quoted above, may "have been regarded as sufficient to sustain the assign- "ment.

"In the case of the Oregon Central Railroad Com- "pany, mentioned above, a grant of a right of way "through the public lands, and also of alternate sections "thereof, was made to that company, 'and to their suc- "cessors and assigns,' by the act of May 4, 1870, chapter "69, for the purpose of aiding in the construction of a "railroad and telegraph line between certain places in "Oregon. In August following an instrument was exe"cuted by the company assigning all its interest in the "grant to the Willamette Valley Railroad Company,

"and thereupon the question arose whether the grant was "susceptible of being thus transferred. The Attorney-"General (Mr. Akerman), to whom the question was "submited, after reviewing the various provisions of the "act, some of which (see section 5) imposed certain duties
"and required certain important acts to be performed "by the company, decided in the negative, holding that,
"upon consideration of those provisions, the Oregon Cen"tral Company was alone within the contemplation of "Congress in respect to the donation made and duties "imposed by that act. The words 'their successors and "assigns' as used in the act, were regarded as words of "limitation merely.

"But the grounds upon which that decision appears "to have been based are not found to exist in the case
"now under consideration. Here a grant of a certain "number of alternate sections of public lands per mile is "made to the New Orleans, Baton Rouge and Vicks"burg Railroad Company, its successors and assigns, in "and of the construction of a road from New Orleans, by "the route indicated, to connect with the eastern ter"minus of the Texas and Pacific Railroad, which lands
"are required to be "withdrawn from the market, se"lected, and patents issued therefor, and opened for set"tlement and pre-emption upon the same terms and in "the same manner and time as is provided for and re"quired from said Texas Pacific Railroad Company."

"The grant is coupled with no special duties or trusts, "for the performance of which there is reason to believe "the particular company named therein was more ac- "ceptable to Congress than any other. Its purpose is "to secure the construction of a railroad between the "points designated, and whether this purpose be ful- "filled by that company or by another company must "be deemed unimportant in the absence of any provision "indicative of the contrary. The interest derived by the "grantee, though it remains only afloat, is a vested in- "terest, and it is held under the same limitations which "apply after it develops into an estate in particular lands "until extinguished by forfeiture for non-performance "of the condition annexed to the grant. I perceive no "legal obstacle arising out of the grant itself to a transfer "of such interest by the grantee to another company, "and should the latter construct the road contemplated "agreeably to the requirements of the grant, and thus "accomplish the end which Congress had in view, I sub- "mit that it would clearly be entitled to the benefits "thereof.

"The question of the assignability of the interest of "the grantee would be more difficult if, after definitely "locating the line of its road, and thus attaching the "grant to particular lands along the same it was pro- "posed to transfer that interest to another company "for the benefit of a road to be constructed by the latter "on a different line, though following the general course "of the other road. But in the present case the facts "give rise to no such difficulty. The grant had not

"previous to the transfer become thus identified with a "particular line of road, and was thereafter susceptible "of location upon the line of the road projected by the "assignee (the New Orleans Pacific Company), pro- "vided this road met the requirements of the grant in "other respects, as to which no doubt is suggested.

"My conclusion is that the assent of Congress to the "assignment made by the New Orleans, Baton Rouge "and Vicksburg Railroad Company, as above, is not "necessary in order to entitle the assignee to the benefit "of the land grant in question.

"The remaining questions relate to the 68 miles of "railroad formerly belonging to the New Orleans, Mo- "bile and Texas Rialroad Company, but now owned by "the New Orleans Pacific Company, and made a part "of its main line between New Orleans and Baton Rouge.

"The land grant in question was, as its language im- "ports, made in aid of the construction of a railroad be- "tween certain termini, contemplating a road to be con- "structed, not one already constructed. It has not been "the policy of Congress thus to aid constructed roads. "Had a constructed road existed at the date of the grant, "which extended from one terminus to the other, and "afterward the New Orleans, Baton Rouge and Vicks- "burg Railroad Company, instead of entering upon and "completing the construction of a road, had purchased "the road already constructed, this, it seems to me, would "not have satisfied the purpose of the grant so as to "entitle the company to the benefit thereof. The same "objection would apply where the constructed road ex"tended over only a part of the route contemplated by "the grant. So far as I am advised, the action of the "government hitherto has accorded with this view. On "the other hand, if such road was constructed subse"quently to the date of the grant, and is owned by the "grantee or the assignee of the latter, I see no ground

"for excluding it from the benefit of the grant should it
"otherwise fulfill the requirements thereof.

"Agreeably to the foregoing views, and in direct "response to the several questions submitted, I have the "honor to reply as follows: The first, second, and third "questions I answer in the affirmative. The fourth "question (including the alternative added thereto) I "answer in the negative. The fifth question I answer
"in the affirmative—assuming, as I do, the company "named therein to be an assignee of the grantee in the "act referred to.

"I have the honor to be, very respectfully,

"BENJAMIN HARRIS BREWSTER,

"Attorney General.

"Hon. H. M. Teller,

"Secretary of the Interior."

Whereupon witness was shown and recognized Report No. 906, 47th Congress, Second Session, Senate, of date January 2, 1883 from the Committee on the Judiciary to accompany Bill S. 2301, by Mr. Garland, and identified as Defendants Exhibit No. 377. Whereupon defendants offered and the same was received in evidence, and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon witness was shown and recognized Defendants Exhibit No. 378, being certified copies of certain correspondence between Joseph S. Wilson, as president of the European & Oregon Land Company, with replies thereto by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, offered collectively as one exhibit, which correspondence is in part under the signature of Joseph S. Wilson, President, on the letterheads of the European & Oregon Land Company. Whereupon defendants offered and the said Defendants Exhibit 378 was received in evidence, and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon witness was shown and recognized Defendants Exhibit 379, being a certified copy of map of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, West Side, filed by it under the Act of May 4, 1870, showing the definite location of the line of the Oregon Central Railroad under the Act of May 4, 1870, which was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon it was stipulated between the parties that the Court in any stage of this case until and including a final hearing in the Supreme Court of the United States, if the case shall reach that court, shall take judicial notice of all proceedings had in and final disposition of the forty-five suits against purchasers referred to in the "Stipulation as to the Facts," including issuance of patents to the lands therein described when issued, if any shall be issued, which stipulation, it was agreed, was subject to the objection on the part of complainant that the evidence is immaterial and irrelevant.

Whereupon, on cross examination, witness identified Government's Exhibits 126A, 126B, 126C, 126D, 126E, 126F, 126G, 126H, and 126I as correct copies of the originals of which they purported to be, and it was stipulated that these documents were properly executed and acknowledged, or signed by the parties purporting to have signed the same; proof of the execution and further identification of such documents being waived.

Whereupon complainant offered and there was received in evidence said Exhibits 126A, 126B, 126C, 126D, 126E, 126F, 126G, 126H and 126I, and the same are herinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon, witness further testified that there is printed in the same type as that of all other documents introduced in said Government's Exhibit 126A, 126B, 126C, 126D, 126E, 126F, 126G, 126H and 126I, Acts of Congress relating to the Oregon and California and Oregon Central Railroad Companies, chapter 242, "An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad, in California, to Portland, in Oregon," (14 U. S. Statutes, page 239), at the foot of which printed statute appears the words "Approved July 25, 1866; also chapter 80, "An Act to amend an Act entitled 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad, in California, to Portland, in Oregon,'" (15 U. S. Statutes, page 80), at the bottom of that "Approved June 25, 1868"; and also "An Act to amend an Act entitled 'An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad, in California, to Portland, in Oregon, approved July 25, 1866"; and at the bottom of that "Approved April 10, 1869 (16 U. S. Statutes, page 47); also "An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland to Astoria and McMinnville, in the State of Oregon," at the bottom of that "Approved May 4, 1870 (16 Statutues, page 94), these statutes, respectively, being set out in this printed document at length and in full.

Whereupon it was stipulated that the Central Pacific Railroad Company completed the construction and equipment of the California and Oregon Railroad from Chico to the south boundary line of Oregon in several sections, all on or before June 20, 1888; that the said entire constructed railroad was examined by commissioners appointed for the purpose and favorably reported on by them; that such report was submitted by the Secretary of the Interior with his favorable recommendations to the President, and such recommendations approved by the President, all on or before November 8, 1889.

Whereupon it was stipulated by and between the parties that the Court may take judicial notice of the decisions of the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and the rules and regulations of the Land Department, of the reports of either of these officers to Congress, and the reports of any committee of Congress and the action of Congress thereon; subject to the objection that may be made by either party to the same, or any thereof, as incompetent, immaterial or irrelevant, or any other objection which might legally be interposed, it being intended to waive the actual production of these documents, to save expense and the incumbering of the record.

It was further stipulated by and between the parties that the following documents were recorded, in the manner provided by law, in the Records of Deeds and Mortgages of Multnomah County, Oregon, at the dates hereinafter mentioned, and thereafter, and about the same time, in the Records of Deeds and Mortgages of the other counties of Oregon in which any part of the lands involved in this suit are situated, to-wit:

Deed from Oregon Central Railroad Company to Oregon and California Railroad Company, of date October 6, 1880, recorded at page 555, Book 42, Records of Deeds of Multnomah County, Oregon, on October 6, 1880.

It is further stipulated and agreed that either party may at any time furnish a certified copy of either of said documents herein above set out, and the same shall be admitted in evidence subject to any objection that the same is incompetent, irrelevant or immaterial; and this stipulation is made subject to any objection that either party may desire to make to the same, or any part thereof, as incompetent, irrelevant or immaterial.

It is further stipulated that, with respect to all of the conveyances, deeds of trust, mortgages and other documents above described, such proceedings were had that at the time of the filing of the bill of complaint, and at all times subsequent thereto, no parties had any right, title, or interest in or to, or lien upon, any of the lands involved in this suit, other than the defendants herein; the sole purpose of this portion of the stipulation being to avoid any question of defect of parties defendant.

It is further stipulated that the court may take judicial notice of the pleadings, proof and final decrees in the cases of United States v. Oregon and California Railroad Company, John A. Hurlburt and Thomas L. Evans; and United States v. The Oregon and California Railroad Company and Oregon Central Railroad Company—the latter named case commonly known as the "Quadrant Case;" and both of which cases reached the Supreme Court of the United States; and that either party, without being compelled to produce the records, may refer to any part of said record, including all pleadings, stipulations of fact, and other proceedings in each of said suits, subject to any objection that the same may be incompetent, irrelevant or immaterial, all parties reserving the right to introduce at any time to complete the record a certified copy of such pleadings, papers, stipulations, decrees or other proceedings in either of said cases, or any thereof, subject as aforesaid to any objection of either party that the same may be incompetent, irrelevant or immaterial.

It is further agreed between the parties hereto that the stipulations of fact signed by the parties in said causes were prepared by the attorneys for the defendants therein, and submitted to the Attorney General, who signed them.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence, marked collectively "Defendants' Exhibit 381," Circulars Nos. 208 and 218, issued by the Department of the Interior, described as follows:

"Circular No. 208. The Three-Year Homestead Law. Department of the Interior, Washington, February 13, 1913."

"Circular No. 218. Additional Entries under the Enlarged Homestead Acts—Instructions. Department of the Interior. General Land Office. Washington D. C., March 17, 1913. (To) Registers and Receivers, United States Land Office, Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, Utah, Washington and Wyoming.

Whereupon the same were received in evidence and marked as "Defendants' Exhibit 381" subject to the objection of the complainant that the same are incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant, and the said exhibit is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence a summary of patents to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, marked "Defendants' Exhibit 382," the Government waiving the calling of a witness to verify the accuracy of the statement, which said Defendants' Exhibit 382 was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence a certified copy of the original reports of the commissioners appointed to examine and report upon the various sections of the constructed railroad of the Oregon Central Railroad Company (West Side), and of the Oregon Central Railroad Company (East Side), together with the action of the Secretary of the Interior and the President of the United States thereon, marked collectively "Defendants' Exhibit 383," which was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence a certified copy of the affidavit of Henry Villard, of date January 8, 1883, from the records of the office of the Secretary of the Interior, marked Defendants' "Exhibit 384," to which complainant objected upon the ground that the same is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and was an affidavit unauthorized by law, and is a self-serving declaration made by the President of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and not a proceeding in which the Secretary of the Interior had any jurisdiction or discretion to act, and therefore such affidavit imports no notice of any kind to the United States,, and did not in any way pertain to any official duty of any officer of the United States.

Whereupon said affidavit was received in evidence, marked "Defendants' Exhibit 384," and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence, for convenience of parties, and in furtheranc of the stipulation, Report of the Committee on Public Lands, No. 1664, of date May 29, 1884, 48th Congress, First Session; Report No. 931 from the Committee on Public Lands, March 8, 1886; and Report No. 390 from the Committee on Public Lands, March 8, 1886—the last two reports being to the 49th Congress, First Session, and the same were marked collectively "Defendants' Exhibit 385", and were received in evidence, subject to the objections herein heretofore reserved, which said "Defendants' Exhibit 385" is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified herein as such.

Whereupon, for convenience, defendants offered and there was received in evidence in connection with the stipulation as to the Quadrant Case, reference to United States vs. Oregon & California R. R. Co., 57 Federal 426; Oregon and California R. R. Co. vs. United States, 67 Federal 650; United States vs. Oregon &c. Railroad, 164 U. S. 526; and for convenient reference in the case known as "Northern Pacific Overlap"; U. S. vs. Oregon & C. R. R. Co., 69 Federal 899; Oregon & C. R. R. Co. vs. United States 77 Federal 67; United States v. Oregon & California Railroad Company 176 U. S. 28.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence, marked collectively "Defendants' Exhibit 386", certified copies of the following deeds:

A deed from the Oregon and California Railroad Company to the City of Portland, of date July 3, 1893, for the S. ½ of S. ½ and NE ¼ of SE ¼, Section 23, Township 1 S., Range 5 E.; all of Section 27, Township 1 S., R. 5 E.; N. ½ of N. W. ¼, SE ¼ of NW ¼, W. ½ of NE ¼, SE ¼ of NE ¼, NE ¼ of SW ¼, and SE ¼, Section 31, Township 1 S., R. 5 E.; E ½ Section 33, Township 1 S., R. 5 E.; N ½ Section 19, Township 1 S., R. 6 E.; N ½ Section 5, Township 2 S, R. 5 E., containing 2234.70 acres, of which 514.80 acres are in Bull Run Forest Reserve, for the consideration of $4579.40.

taining 955.52 acres, all of which is in the Bull Run Forest Reserve for the consideration of $1958.82, which said Defendants' Exhibit 386 was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

In connection with Defendants' Exhibit 386, defendants refer to the Act of September 29, 1890, known as the General Forfeiture Act, 28 Stat. L. 496-498.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence certified copies of stipulations as to facts in the following cases:

Oregon & California Railroad Company and Oregon Central Railroad Company; and the same were severally and separately marked, in the order named, "Defendants' Exhibits 387, 388, 389, 390, and 391, and 392, to each of which complainant objected on the ground that these are manifestly introduced for the purpose of binding the Government by the matters of fact set forth in such stipulations, and that such stipulations show upon their face that they were designed for use in the particular cases in which they were made, and not for use in any other litigation, and upon the further ground that the issues in those cases in no way involved the question of the exact date or manner of the vesting of the grant under the Act of July 25, 1866, and further, upon the general grounds that they are incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial. Which said Defendants' Exhibits 387, 388, 389, 390, 391 and 392 were received in evidence and are hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon defendants produced and formally offered in evidence certified copies of the deeds and mortgages hereinbefore referred to in the stipulation of parties, and the same were severally and separately marked as Defendants' Exhibit 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400 and 401, described as follows:

It was further stipulated that at a meeting of the Water Board of the City of Portland of April 7, 1891, a committee was appointed to investigate these contracts and find out the amounts due, and the chairman, Henry Failing, reported that the amount necessary to pay off contracts was $8532.84; whereupon warrants were drawn for this amount, but deeds were not delivered until two years later, on account of final payments required according to the following memorandum, which appears on an envelope in the handwriting of Superintendent Dodge of the Water Board of the City of Portland:

Whereupon the defendants offer in evidence from said printed document page 11 thereof, No. VII., likewise identified by the witness William Singer as a part of the collection of Laws and Documents referred to, and which is in words and figures as follows, to-wit:

to pay to the holder hereof in the City of New York, on the first day of April, one thousand eight hundred and ninety, with interest thereon at the rate of seven per centum per annum, payable in gold coin as aforesaid, free from any U. Mr. Townsend: Both of the last two preceding forms are subject to the objection on the part of the Government that the same are incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Whereupon A. K. SLOCUM was called as a witness on behalf of defendants, and being duly sworn, testified that he was manager of Circulation of the Oregonian on February 15, 1908, and recognized the photograph attached to his affidavit as a correct reproduction of a portion of the Morning Oregonian of the issue of August 12, 1871, which is undoubtedly a copy from the Oregonian of that date, and his affidavit to the effect that it is a photographic copy of the paper of that issue is correct, because he checked it up at that time. That advertisement appeared in the Oregonian of the issues from August 12, 1871 to September 11, 1872, upon the dates listed in his affidavit, and the dates given are correct as shown by the original files of the Oregonian, which he inspected. Which evidence was received subject to the objection heretofore made to said Defendants' Exhibit 280 heretofore received in evidence.

Whereupon J. B. EDDY, called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and being duly sworn, testified; that he is tax and right of way agent of the Southern Pacific Company, and tax agent of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and has been in the tax department of the Oregon and California Railroad Company eight years. He was State Railroad Commissioner from 1893 to 1898. He entered the services of the Oregon and California Railroad Company in the tax department when it was consolidated with the O. R. & N. Company. He means when the offices were consolidated, the companies were not consolidated, they were put under the same general management at this end. He was right of way agent for the Southern Pacific Company, Pacific Railway and Navigation Company, Corvallis and Eastern Railway Company—the allied lines of the Southern Pacific Company in Oregon; and was also right of way agent for the Oregon and California Railroad Company —that is all property purchased for the use of the Southern Pacific Company for operating is purchased in the name of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, in connection with its leased lines. The Southern Pacific Company does not own any lands. The Oregon and California owns it all, and when the Oregon and California Railroad Company finds it necessary to have additional right of way for any additional mileage that may be operated by the Southern Pacific Company, that right of way is acquired in the name of the Oregon and California Railroad Company and added to the holdings of that Company as railroad property. He has procured certain copies of so much of the assessment rolls of the Counties of Washington, Yamhill, Clackamas, Polk, Marion, Lincoln, Benton, Linn, Lane, Douglas, Coos, Curry, Josephine, Jackson, Klamath, Columbia, Tillamook, and Multnomah, in which the unsold lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company involved in this suit are situated, including the unpatented lands to which the Company has obtained title within the primary or selected limits for the year 1911. Whereupon witness being shown Defendants' Exhibit 318, purporting to be such certified copy of so much of said assessment rolls for those counties as relates to said lands, and the same being recognized as such by the witness, defendants offered and they were received in evidence over the objection of complainant, that the same are incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, being Defendants' Exhibit 318, which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence identified as such. Whereupon witness further testified that he had prepared or verified from his records, based upon the taxes actually paid by the Oregon and California Railroad Company on the unsold Congressional lands, the acreage for each county, the valuation as shown by the records of his office and the assessment rolls, and the valuation upon which the company has paid these taxes, the average value per acre as computed, the average value in mills, the total tax paid, and the average tax per acre in all of these counties, from 1904 down to and including the year 1911, and had prepared a blue-print tabulated statement, which he is able to say is correct, based upon the tax records of the company and the vouchers for taxes paid. Whereupon witness recognized this tabulated or comparative statement, marked Defendants' Exhibit 319, and further testified that this was prepared in his office, under his direction, from the press-sheets, vouchers, tax receipts and records of the office pertaining to these unsold Congressional lands, and obtained the facts shown in his vouchers from the assessment rolls in the hands of the sheriff for the collection of taxes. These are taken from the counties. They always send some one there to check them up and then transfer them to their records. This table is based upon disbursements actually made to the sheriffs of the various counties in payment of taxes and represents the payments actually made by the company, and they are correct. Whereupon defendants offered in evidence Defendants' Exhibit 319, to which complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, which was received in evidence, so marked, and is hereinafter set out and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified as such. Whereupon witness being shown two documents, marked for identification Defendants' Exhibit 320, and treated as one exhibit, Statement No.

1-A, showing by counties the assessment upon Congressional lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company from 1891 to 1904, inclusive, of date January 4, 1906, purporting to be prepared by the auditor in San Francisco on that date; and Statement No. 1, showing by counties the assessment upon Congressional lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company from 1891 to 1904, inclusive, together with the acreage assessed, the assessed valuation, the average assessed valuation per acre, the total taxes paid, and the average taxes paid per acre, purporting to be prepared by the auditor at San Francisco, California, September 20, 1905, Statement No. 1-A also showing the acreage assessed, the assessed valuation, the average assessed valuation per acre, the total taxes paid, and the average tax paid per acre, and stated that these documents came from the auditor at San Francisco and are a part of the records of the office. The records of the company in San Francisco were destroyed by earthquake and fire on April 18th, 1906. The name of Robert Adams is the name of an employe in the auditor's office, signed at the lower left hand corner of Statement No. 1, and he is satisfied from the documents that they were prepared in the auditor's office from the records of the company, and he has acted upon that as such for the company, and has every reason to believe that they are correct. He did not make them, but they correspond with the records of later date. Whereupon defendants offered these documents as one exhibit, Defendants' Exhibit 320, to which complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and im-material, which exhibit was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified as such. Whereupon witness further testified that one of these documents was arranged by counties and the other by years, merely for convenience. The same information is in one that is in the other, only put in a little different way for convenience of reference. He prepared Defendants' Exhibit 321 from the records in his office, and that table or statement includes the information contained in part in Defendants' Exhibit 319 and Defendants' Exhibit 320. There is an overlap in those though. Defendants' Exhibit 319 and Defendants' Exhibit 320 are all summarized in Defendants' Exhibit 321. Defendants' Exhibit 321 is a correct statement of what it purports to show. Whereupon defendants offered in evidence Defendants' Exhibit 321, to which complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, which exhibit was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified as such. Whereupon witness further testified, that this Defendants' Exhibit 321 showed in Coos County the total tax per acre from 1891 to 1911, inclusive, as $2.54 per acre and that is correct; that the total tax in Columbia County is $2.75 per acre for the same period of time, and that is correct; that the total tax paid during that period of time, in Multnomah County, is $2.75 per acre and that is correct. These exhibits refer to the Congressional lands, granted lands, of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and in so far as they cover the unsold patented lands, they include all those that are involved in this suit. Witness further testified that he has been more or less familiar with the territory shown by the yellow field on Defendants' Exhibit 259, for twenty-nine years; tolerably familiar with it for twenty years, going up and down in it, traveling on the railroads, and on the wagon roads; and he became familiar with the topography and general physical characteristics of what is known as the Willamette Valley as an officer of this company and otherwise as an officer and citizen of the State. Whereupon complainant objected to any testimony as to the character of the lands involved in this suit upon the ground that the same is incompetent, irrevelant and immaterial. Whereupon it was stipulated between the parties that this same objection should be considered as taken to all testimony offered by defendants relative to this subject without the necessity of repeating the same. Whereupon witness testified that the territory known as the Willamette Valley is practically all in yellow within the 20-mile limit of the grant made to the Oregon and California Railroad Company of date of July 25, 1866, and is all that portion of the map north of Cottage Grove to Portland, a distance of about 125 miles, roughly speaking. On the east side of the Willamette River it is practically level from Eugene to Oregon City. On the west side it is level in Lane, Benton and Polk Counties; Yamhill, Washington and Columbia Counties are more rolling. It was taken up largely under the old Donation Land Act, in the early days of the settlement of the state. He refers to the donation land law, but does not recall its date. He knows these things from the fact that, in checking the right of way deeds they bear reference to the donation claims. Oregon City is the County seat of Clackamas County; Salem the county seat of Marion County; Albany the county seat of Linn County; Eugene the county seat of Lane County; Corvallis the county seat of Benton county; Dallas the county seat of Polk County; and Hillsboro the county seat of Washington County; St. Helens the county seat of Columbia County. The State Capital is at Salem. The State Agricultural College at Corvallis. The State University at Eugene. Oregon City is the oldest town in the State of Oregon, according to history and his knowledge. In the beginning of the government in this country Oregon City was the State Capital. Dr. John McLoughlin took a donation claim at Oregon City. He was the Hudson Bay Factor, the virtual ruler of this whole territory at the time the settlement began, and is commonly called in the history of the country "the Father of Oregon." Portland was first established as a town about 1845 or 1846, and was named after Portland, Maine. Oregon City is the head of shipping on tide water with reference to the Willamette Valley. Portland is the chief port for shipment of the products of the Willamette Valley by sea. Astoria was founded by John Jacob Astor in the early part of the last century, as a fur trading point. The Columbia River is the northern boundary of the State of Oregon. Captain Gray discovered that stream in 1792. Salem has been the capital of the State ever since it has been a state, but there was a territorial capital before that, at Oregon City and at Corvallis a little while. Oregon was admitted into the Union in 1859. The Territory of Oregon was first organized in 1849 and the Provisional Government in 1843. Polk County was named after James K. Polk, President of the United States. Dallas, the county seat of Polk County, was named after George M. Dallas, Vice-President of the United States. Benton County was named after Thomas H. Benton, Senator from Missouri. Linn County was named after Senator Linn, Senator from Missouri and a friend of the Oregon Territory. Lane County was named after General Joseph Lane, the first Territorial Governor of Oregon, and its first Senator in Congress after it became a State. The first settlement of any consequence in the Willamette Valley was in 1843. There was considerable immigration in 1842. Jason Lee came in 1836 and settled at Salem, or near Salem; Mission Bottom, he thinks, just below Salem. The bulk of that land covered with yellow, not taken by these wagon road grants is agricultural land. There are large areas of the Willamette Valley that are open plains; French Prairie, Howell Prairie, Tualatin Plains, and the Albany Prairie, and quite a number of others of lesser note. The sides of this field in yellow, begin to rise up gradually, are foothills—foothills of the Cascades on the east side, and foothills of the Coast Range on the west. In Polk County the foothills begin practically at the town of Dallas. East of Dallas it is level. West of Dallas it is foothills, rising up to tall mountains and to timber. The large body of land in yellow in the vicinity of Roseburg and Oakland, in Douglas County, outside of the Roseburg and Coos Bay Military Wagon Road grant, were settled under the Donation Law in the fifties. The lands marked in yellow that were thus settled are small prairies and foothills. The large body of yellow along the creek from Ashland to the Rogue River was settled in the early fifties under the Donation Land Law and the Pre-emption and Homestead laws. That is the section known as the Rogue River Valley, and from the junction to Bear Creek with the Rogue River southerly to Ashland, and is a valley mostly prairie, open country. The Siskiyou Mountains are at the south end. The summit of the Siskiyou Mountains is about ten miles this side of the Oregon and California boundary; and the summit is about fifteen miles from Ashland on a direct line. Ashland is about twenty miles from the summit by the wagon road, but in a direct line it would be perhaps twelve or fifteen miles. Cottage Grove is approximately 140 miles from Portland. Roseburg by railroad is 198 miles from Portland. Ashland about 343 miles from Portland. He cannot speak from knowledge as to these lands in the Willamette Valley in their native state being covered with any kind of timber; he can only speak from information; that there was on his first appearance in the valley extensive growths of fir and oak, mostly second growth fir and oak grubs—scrub oak. These lands in the valley were not called timbered lands in any sense as compared with these lands in the mountains. The lands in the valleys are such lands as, when cleared, make first class agricultural land, and the lands in the mountains, when they are cleared, would not be worth much, if anything. This second growth fir and oak grubs in the Willamette Valley is good for cord wood. He caused a statement of taxes that were paid upon this land prior to 1891 to be prepared as far as he could get it. P. A. Worthington had charge of the preparation of the data for that; he was acting under his direction for the Oregon and California Railroad Company. Defendants' Exhibit 321 in the computation of total taxes paid, total taxes per acre, average tax per acre per year, does not take into consideration any taxes paid prior to 1891. This exhibit includes taxes from 1891 to 1911. The assessment rolls as shown are attached to a certificate for the Multnomah County assessment. The other forms for the other counties were prepared in his office on the usual form that the Company filled out for furnishing the Assessors with a list of these properties, and were filled out for the clerks to compare with their tax rolls and certify to the correctness thereof to save time. The "Port of Portland" shown on the tax roll for Multnomah County is local to that county and that form does not obtain elsewhere, excepting where there are different ports in different counties. Some counties do not have any. Taxpayers are allowed to pay half the taxes prior to the first Monday in April and the next half prior to the first Monday in October, if they so elect. If they are paid prior to the 15th of March a three per cent rebate is allowed, equivalent to six per cent interest on the money. This is at the election of the taxpayer. He has caused to be prepared a summary of the census returns. Defendants' Exhibit 322 is a typewritten statement showing the population of certain places at each census for which there were returns for 1860, 1870 and 1880, and a printed slip giving the population of each of the counties in Oregon from 1850 to 1900 furnished by E. Dana Durand, Director of the Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce and Labor, at Washington. Whereupon defendants offered the said exhibit as Defendants' Exhibit 322 in evidence to which complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, which exhibit was received in evidence, and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified as such. Whereupon witness further testified that he had caused to be prepared Defendants' Exhibit 323, showing the population of certain counties and towns for the years 1890, 1900 and 1910 and the same is a correct summary of the census for the various years named to the best of his judgment and knowledge. This was furnished to him by Seneca Beach, who was superintendent of the census for Oregon. Whereupon defendants offered in evidence Defendants' Exhibit 323, to which complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial. Which Exhibit was received in evidence, and is hereinafter set out and described, and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence, identified as such. Whereupon witness further testified that Defendants' Exhibit 324, is a statement of the summaries of the assessment rolls of the several counties of the state for the year 1911 as equalized by the county boards of equalization, and compiled by the Board of State Tax Commissioners of the State of Oregon as an official compilation, published by authority of the State of Oregon by the Secretary of State, of this State, and was furnished to him by the State Tax Board, and witness testified to the same effect with reference to Defendants' Exhibits 325, 326, 327, 328, 329 and 330; to which the complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial. Whereupon each of said exhibits was received in evidence, so marked respectively, and are hereinafter set out and described, and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence, identified as such. Whereupon witness further testified that Defendants' Exhibit 301, which purported to show the year, the acres, the valuation, the taxes paid for Benton County, Douglas County, Lane County, Linn County, Marion County, Washington County and Yamhill County, was prepared by P. A. Worthington, under his supervision. The lands referred to in this exhibit 331 are the unsold lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company for the respective years in the various counties. The assessment of these lands in some of the counties was included with other property for taxation purposes. The tax figure represents the entire tax paid including rolling stock and road bed and other things. They were assessed in a lump. The assessors in those days did not seem to have as good a record as they have in these. He was able to ascertain from these statements the amount of taxes paid by the company on its lands in the Congressional land grants, by going back and getting if he could, the taxes levied for that year and computing it on the valuation of the land, and by comparing it with the previous year where the land alone was assessed. That is, by taking the previous year and the succeeding years, where the land is assessed alone, and striking an average he could very nearly get it. Whereupon defendants offered in evidence Defendants' Exhibit 331, to which complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial; which was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described, and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence, marked Defendants' Exhibit 331, identified as such. Whereupon on cross-examination witness further testified, that he had lived in Oregon about 31 years, had farmed a little since that; served as deputy sheriff four years; Special Indian Agent of the Government for three years; Railroad Commissioner nearly six years and with the Railroad Company for twelve years; the balance of the time he edited a newspaper. When he first came to Oregon he took a bunch grass ranch in Eastern Oregon and farmed that for two years. Thirteen or fourteen years ago he bought a farm in the Willamette Valley and farmed that for a period of six months. This bunch grass farm in Eastern Oregon is in an open country and the farm that he purchased in the Willamette Valley had 27 acres of it improved and the rest of it was timber. It was located in Clackamas County, but he cannot give the description of it, section, township and range. It was just below the mouth of the Molalla, on the west side of the Willamette River, three miles straight out from Canby, and then across the river. He lived six months on this farm, cleared up six acres, and hauled rails and sold the land. He has been in the employ of the Railroad Company nearly 12 years and is still in its employ. Whereupon on redirect examination witness further testified that he had made a computation of the average assessed value per acre of these lands from 1892 down to and including 1911, both inclusive, based upon the assessment rolls and the assessment of the property and the taxes paid, and prepared this Defendants' Exhibit 359, purporting to show the year, the average value per acre from 1892 down to and including 1911, and showing the highest assessed value of any lands in Columbia County and the lowest in Tillamook County, and it is a correct showing from the records of the company. Whereupon defendants offered said exhibit marked Defendants' Exhibit 359 in evidence. Whereupon the witness further testified that he took Columbia and Tillamook Counties because they were the highest and lowest average assessment for the year 1911. Whereupon complainant objected to the introduction of said exhibit as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and that the amount of taxes is no defense in this suit. Whereupon said exhibit was received in evidence, and is hereinafter set out and described, and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence, and identified as such. Whereupon witness on cross-examination further testified that the average assessed valuation per acre during the year 1911, was the highest in Columbia County and the lowest in Tillamook County as compared with all of the counties within which these land grants are. He has been employed by the Railroad Company nearly 12 years as right of way agent, right of way and tax agent, special right of way agent and special tax agent and has had to do with the payment of taxes since 1904. He was in the tax and right of way office with J. W. Morrow, beginning in 1904, but his connection with it for the first two or three years was only incidental. His attention was given more especially to right of way matters. He knows that there was a system in effect with reference to the listing of lands for taxation, segregating those that were subject to contracts from those that were not subject to contracts, but whether that system had just been inaugurated or whether it had been in effect prior to that time he could not say. He thinks he has had enough to do with the matter of taxes on these lands since 1905 so that he can speak with reference to the general methods pursued by the Company. He does not think that the Company ever objected to the assessment of any of these lands above a valuation of $2.50 per acre on the ground that that was the limit of the interest of the Company in the lands. There was not to his knowledge any effort made to keep the assessment down to the point where the Government contends was the extent of the interest of the Company. The Railroad Company handled the subject upon the theory that it was the absolute owner of the lands, without reference to these restrictions in the granting acts. The only thing that it has been contending for was to see that the land was assessed in about the same proportion as other lands of like value and no effort was made to avoid assessment above $2.50 per acre. He realizes that if the assessed valuation of these lands had since the year 1904 been kept down to not exceeding $2.50 per acre that the amount of the total taxes paid by the Railroad Company would be very greatly reduced. It is a fact that $1,637,314.69 have been paid since the year 1904, not taking into account the present year (1912) as against $737,601.12 paid down to and including the year 1904. These figures include all the taxes paid by the Railroad Company up to this time; that is the amount relating to the years 1905 to 1911 inclusive, included all taxes paid down to the present time, the taxes for the year 1912 not being due until March, 1913.

"A. Prior to 1891 the record of taxes paid is exceedingly difficult to obtain from the fact that some of the counties did not begin to assess granted lands until 1890, and in other of the counties the taxes are included with property such as roadbed and station grounds, so that the taxes on the lands can only be approximated. From the best available data, I find that prior to the year 1891 we paid in Benton County $2,546.42; Douglas County approximately $4,400.00; Jackson County, $40,878.22; Josephine County, $100.00; Lane County, $4,816.26; Linn, $1,400.00; Marion, $2,076.32; Multnomah, $723.40; Washington, $1456.56; Yamhill, $1,530.34, or a total of $59,927.52. From 1891 to 1904, inclusive, we paid $737,601.12; from 1905 to 1911, inclusive, $1,637,314.69, or a grand total of $2,434,843.33.

In 1911 the holdings of the Company were 2,119,927 acres, so that, on this acreage, the taxes paid would average $1.15 per acre. From 1874 to 1898, inclusive, the taxes paid were $326,420.61. In the latter year the holdings represented 2,322,084 acres, so that the taxes paid to that time would average within a very small fraction of 14c an acre. From 1874 to 1907, inclusive, the taxes paid were $1,208,833.86 or 58c an acre on 2,073,415 acres then owned. From 1908 to 1911, inclusive, we paid $1,266,009.47, or 57c an acre on 2,119,927 acres owned in the latter year. In the earlier years when the assessors began assessing the granted lands of the company, the valuation placed thereon was about 40c an acre in 1874, gradually increasing, and in but few instances exceeding $1.00 an acre as late as 1890."

Whereupon witness further testified, that he has computed the average amount of the taxes paid during these several periods with reference to the holdings of the company from time to time. If the taxes were apportioned among all of the lands that inured to the Railroad Company under its grant, including approximately 820,000 acres that have been heretofore sold and 2,300,000 acres that are involved in the present suit, the average tax per acre would be a little less as to the unsold lands. The taxes per acre prior to 1905, for instance, was very light, and if those acres were taken off and the taxes paid to that time were deducted from it it would not make a very material difference, but would make some difference. The gross amount of lands appearing to have inured to the Railroad Company under these grants is 3,182,169.57 acres. Apportioning the total taxes paid by the Railroad Company down to this date, that is, apportioning the total taxes among all the lands that inured under the grant instead of the present holdings of the company, the average tax per acre is a fraction over 76 cents, figured on the basis of 3,000,000 acres and over. The average tax per acre on the total amount paid, prior to the institution of this suit on September 4, 1908, computing the average with reference to the total amount of lands which inured to the company under its grant, instead of the present holdings of the company, or the holdings of the company at the time this suit was instituted is a very little less than 38 cents per acre; making the same deduction with reference to the total amount of taxes paid down to the year 1904, and including that year, the average tax per acre paid would be less than 25 cents per acre, and making the computation with reference to the total quantity of land which inured under the grant, that is 3,182,-169.57 acres instead of the holdings of the company in the year 1904. More than one-half of all the taxes that have been paid by the company on these lands, from the beginning down to the present time have been paid since the institution of this suit. Whereupon on redirect examination witness further testified, that since 1908, including that year, most of the counties in which these lands are situated, have employed cruisers and have cruised the timber lands of the company in these various counties, including other lands of like character, which has resulted in largely increased assessments, not only of the company's lands, but all other lands of that character. In making distribution or apportioning this tax per acre on the total lands inuring to the grant,—3,182,169.57 acres,—it is his understanding there would be included the lands that have been sold and deeded from time to time from the beginning down to date, that is, that the acreage 3,182,169.57 acres is the total number of acres in the grant. After these lands are conveyed to others, aside from the executory contracts of sale, by which the vendees assume the payment of the taxes as between the company and the county, the owners would pay these taxes on these lands, and the company would have no record of it in its disbursements. The owners would pay the taxes when the lands are deeded, and the taxes paid by the owners would not appear in the figures which the company charges as having paid on the grant. That would be stricken from the list. That would be true as to the executory contracts where the parties paid the taxes. Whereupon upon recross examination, witness further testified, that this computation of his, has been made from the records in the office since 1892. When the company makes a statement to the sheriff for the payment of taxes, for each county, every subdivision that it pays on, is included in the receipt. The company keeps duplicates of these, in the office and these reports are made from those duplicates? He has simply added together the amount of those receipts for each year in each county. The amounts paid by the company on lands that were subject to contracts, and then the amounts so paid charged against the purchasers, seem to be very small. There have been about two or three instances since he has been handling it direct, and they are small amounts. Where the purchaser or the owner of the contract had not paid and allowed the tax to become delinquent, the company would pay it. Whereupon on redirect examination the witness further testified, that he is tax and right of way agent of the Oregon and California Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Company, and has checked up Defendants' Exhibit No. 7, printed in and part of the joint and several answer of the defendants in this case, being a "Statement showing right of way through unsold East Side Grant Lands required for Oregon and California Railroad," and it is a correct reservation as made by the company. There are some extra widths that are required for meeting special conditions. As right of way agent he could say that that was reasonably necessary for the operation of this railroad. The tract described as "North half of Section 15, Township 33 South, Range 6 West. Reserve entire half section for reconstruction of railroad on account of change of line," is at the point just immediately south of Tunnel No. 9, where the road is constructed largely upon trestles and cuts through points of the hill. It is contemplated to change the line, taking out those curves and trestles, and a large amount of the land will be needed for borrow material. The company has not fully determined just where the relocated line will be. Whereupon, upon cross examination, witness further testified, that the Railroad Company has set this apart so that it will not be included in any of the sales made of any of the granted lands, until after these changes are made, and it sees just what it needs out of that half section. All of these other reservations have reference to the permanent track and for the most part consists of 100 feet on each side of the track, which gives the railroad company a continuous right of way through that part of the state, at least of 100 feet on each side of the track, connecting it up with the public lands which it obtained, and includes the same general width of right of way on the odd numbered sections which it obtained in the even numbered sections of the grant.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence Defendants' Exhibit No. 7 to the answer, in connection with the testimony of the witness, to which complainant objected as immaterial and irrelevant; which said Exhibit No. 7 is attached to and made a part of the joint and several answer of said Defendants in this suit, and designated as Exhibit No. 7 of said answer.

Whereupon P. A. WORTHINGTON, called as a witness on behalf of defendants, being duly sworn, testified that he is at present employed by the Southern Pacific Company and has been specially employed by Mr. Eddy of the Tax Department of the Oregon and California Railroad Company for the last 30 days going to the different county seats and checking the rolls and looking over the tax records all that he could find in the different counties. His purpose was to find what the records disclosed as to the amount of taxes paid by the Oregon and California Railroad Company on its congressional lands in the different counties, referring to the lands described in the bill of complaint in this cause granted to the predecessors of the Oregon and California Railroad Company under the Act of July 25, 1866 and the Act of May 4, 1870. These certified copies of the assessment rolls for the year 1911 of the Congressional lands of the Company for the various counties include unpatented lands unsold, primary; these are in addition, as he understands, to the lands described in this suit. He found out by checking over the amount of land described in the suit, that these are in addition to those lands, and that would account for the fact that the Company apparently is paying on some unpatented unsold primary lands, that are not included in this suit and makes the difference between the acreage footing of say Clackamas County as shown in "Defendants' Exhibit 318" and as shown by the bill of complaint. In doing the work of preparing this statement in "Defendants' Exhibit 318" he checked with the officers where he could get them to assist him and at times went through and compared them with their roll and checked them over himself, and made the balances and saw that they balanced with the roll. These statements are correct upon his own knowledge, from the rolls officially on file with the sheriff or clerk of the respective counties. An examination of the headings of "Defendants' Exhibit 318" shows that the sheriffs or clerks certified in the major part of those outside of Multnomah County to that part of the roll which pertains only to the Congressional lands, the valuation and taxes thereon, but do not go into the merits of the school districts and various other items that are on the roll generally. They did not use the top of the roll which is usually printed on these forms of blanks, the rolls are furnished to the various counties, like Multnomah for instance, by the State. That form is the form furnished by the State for different assessments and they are uniform for each county. There may be some minor changes as for the different ports in different sections of the State. He prepared personally "Defendants' Exhibit 331" from the records as he found them in the several counties and these statements are correct as found upon the records of the different counties and were taken from the assessment rolls—some of them—all that he had would be from the assessor's rolls and sometimes he would find the tax rolls in the hands of the sheriff. He found the records in many instances in the attics, piled away in some corner of the vault and very hard to find, and in some cases they could not be found at all, but he examined all the records that he could find in the counties named in the statement. Referring to the memorandum "No evidence that this was paid" referring to Lane County assessment for 1890 stating the number of acres, valuation and tax, witness testified that he found on the roll opposite the name and tax as to the other items marked the word "paid." In that particular instance he found the value was carried out and the number of acres, but there was no note on the margin of the book showing that the tax had been paid. Upon further investigation his attention was called to the case of the Oregon and California Railroad Company against Lane County and James E. Noland, Sheriff, reported in 23 Oregon, to the effect that that year's assessment, made by the sheriff, was involved in litigation and resulted in a suit so that it appears that for 1890 a part of the taxes on these lands were paid and a part apparently unpaid, as shown by the roll, and that the reason of the sheriff's assessment was that it was an assessment upon indemnity lands that had not been selected that the sheriff made. Where the items shows the words "Included with other property" that means that the road bed or the station grounds and rolling stock of the Company were included. These were all carried in one column and he could not segregate them to tell how much of it was on the land without going back and getting the levy of that year and making a calculation. He found this the way in which the assessment was carried on the roll for Marion County. He has made a computation as best he could from these records and from "Defendants' Exhibit 331" to show what taxes have been paid by the Oregon and California Railroad Company on its Congressional lands from 1873 down to 1890, both years inclusive, and the result of his computation is that in Benton County the average number of acres assessed from 1873 to 1890 were 9753 acres and the tax paid $2546.42, the average tax per acre 26 cents. In Lane County from 1874 to 1890, the average number of acres assessed for the time were 52,000 acres, taxes paid $4816.26, the average tax per acre 9 cents. Linn County, from 1883 to 1890, the average acres assessed were 28,714 acres, and the tax was $1400.00, average tax per acre about 4.8 cents. From 1883 to 1890 Washington County, the average number of acres of land assessed was 5360 acres and the tax $1456.56, or an average tax per acre of 27 cents. Yamhill County, from 1877 to 1890, 11106 acres was the average assessment and the tax was $1530.34 or 13 cents per acre. This is substantially correct as shown by the assessment rolls and by "Defendants' Exhibit 331." Lincoln County was carved out of Benton County since 1891. It is his understanding that the lands had not been patented or selected by the Railroad Company and that was why these lands did not appear upon the rolls earlier. He has undertaken to show by "Defendants' Exhibit 331" all that he was able to find in these various counties and his search was confined to the counties disclosed in "Defendants' Exhibit 331." He has made an investigation and search of the records of Multnomah County prior to 1891 to see whether the lands in Multnomah County were withheld from taxation or assessment on account of the suit of the United States against the Oregon and California Railroad Company, Hurlburt and Evans and the record shows that the taxes were paid from 1875 to 1890 and the lands were not omitted from assessment and taxation on account of that suit. That suit was after the date mentioned by him along in 1893. He prepared "Defendants' Exhibit 352." These figures are copied direct from the records of Multnomah County and are correct.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence "Defendants' Exhibit 352," to which complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, which exhibit was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified as such.

Whereupon R. A. BOOTH, called as a witness on behalf of defendants, and being first duly sworn, testified that he resides at Eugene, Oregon, and that "Defendants' Exhibit 332," being two maps purporting to show the lands of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company in red, and the lands of the Wentworth Company in green, were prepared in the office of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company under his direction. He is a shareholder and director of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, and is familiar with the holdings of that company and the Wentworth lands, and believes these maps to be accurate.

Whereupon counsel for complainant objected to the testimony of this witness relating to the character of the lands and their values, within the limits of these grants involved in this suit as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and it was stipulated that this objection shall be considered as taken and made to all of the testimony of this witness on this subject.

Whereupon witness testified that these lands of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company thus indicated on these maps, are chiefly valuable for their timber—except those that have been cut over. He does not know the name of the holding company of the lands colored in green, known as the Wentworth lands, but his relation to these lands in organizing them into a fire district when he was manager of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, was with Mr. Wentworth of Chicago, who, he understands, is still interested in the lands. His understanding is now that they are under the care of L. J. Wentworth of the Portland Lumber Company in Portland, Oregon. These lands are chiefly valuable for their timber. Speaking of the character of these lands, with the timber cut off, they are ordinarily termed stump lands, the stumps still remain and all of the heavy debris such as does not burn readily with fires that are run over them for the purpose of clearing them as well as they reasonably and easily can be done for the purpose of protecting the remaining forest; they are hillsides, mountainous. The lands of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company now owned in Lane County and in Linn County adjoining those in Lane, a bit more than half of them, or about 75,300 acres out of a total of about 136,000 acres, were acquired from the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and were originally part of this grant to that Company. He could not say, but Mr. Dixon could say, what proportion of this holding thus acquired from the Oregon and California Railroad Company has been completely logged off. The timber lands owned by the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, as shown on these maps, are in the western foothills of the Cascade Range. They are along the small creeks which are tributary to the Willamette River, the different prongs, and on the hillsides and ridges between the streams. They are all mountainous and hilly lands, except such as they find on benches formed by old slides and erosions and the narrow creek bottoms. The soil varies. It is all more or less rocky. Some of it is dark alluvial soil on the benches. Some of it is red. Some of it is rocky ridges. It has no value except for the timber, where the timber is standing, because the light is excluded, and there is no growth of vegetation that is valuable. After they are cut off and the light debris burned, so as to give a coating of ash, they are good grazing lands. Grass grows readily wherever it is seeded, and they form good pasture lands. If it is seeded immediately after burned, with such tame grasses as are in ordinary use in that locality, they can all be used the greater portion of the year, if the timber is cut off and the debris burned and then seeded in the stumps. The high lands perhaps would be covered with snow during three or four months of the year, and only the lower lands could be used. From his knowledge and investigation, the cost of clearing these lands of the stumps to render them suitable for plowing, where there is any soil that could be adapted to pasturage or grazing or agricultural purposes of any kind, varies greatly because of the different number of trees on the ground and the different character of the soil in which they grow. It would range anywhere from $50 to $500 an acre.

Q. Now, let me put to you this question. Suppose that an intending settler should apply to purchase one of these quarter sections in the state of natue in which it was before any of this timber was cut off, and should offer to the company, seeking to purchase it, $2.50 an acre under this act of April 10, 1869, go on the premises as an actual settler, and there to make his home as an actual settler, I wish you would state to the Court whether or not in your judgment such land is adapted or was adapted to actual settlement in quarter sections in that way.

Mr. Townsend: That is objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and calling for a conclusion of the witness both upon a question of fact and law, and not being a subject that comes within the scope of expert testimony in any way.

A. It is not adapted to settlement, and settlers could not make a living on it until after the timber was removed because of shade excluding the light and preventing any vegetable growth.

Q. Would or would not such settler be able to make a living on these lands for himself, or for himself and family, without cutting and selling the timber therefrom?

A. He would not.

Q. What, then, is the chief value of these lands and of lands similarly situated in this grant?

A. In their virgin state?

Q. Yes, that is what I mean.

A. The lands to which I refer belonging to the company and those intermingled are chiefly valuable for their timber.

Q. What would you call these lands then, what class would you put them in, agricultural or timber or stone or grazing, or what?

A. Timber-lands.

Q. About what proportion of these lands belonging to the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company in your judgment are without any soil that would be useful for any purpose—I mean that are rocky or contain no soil of value or are unfit even after cleared and grubbed for agricultural purposes or grazing purposes?

A. The percentage that would not do for grazing is very small, practically all do for grazing except where there are rocky ridges and where it is too rocky to allow the grass to reach the soil; but the percentage of that is very small as far as our land is concerned.

Q. You say it is nearly all suitable for grazing after it has been cleared of the timber and the debris by burning, and after being seeded. Supose that a settler or a man buying one of these quarter sections of logged off land was expected to make his living by grazing on the quarter section, and was not permitted to have the outrange all over the country, you may state whether or not the grazing on this quarter section under these circumstances would be sufficiently good to enable him to suport himself or his family.

A. It would not be. It is not the custom for one one to use grazing lands unless they have some arable land to use in conjunction with it, so that they may provide winter feed; but I consider the lands splendid grazing lands, and he could rent them to others.

Q. About what rental could he get from them, as compared with the rental charged by the Forest Reserve, or do you know?

A. If they were seeded he could get from 50 cents to one dollar per year.

Q. Per acre?

A. Per acre, yes; and seeded.

Q. From whom could he get that—large herdsmen?

A. Yes, and the ranchmen who own stock.

Q. About what would it cost him to prepare this land for seeding and pasturage and to put it in grass, as you have indicated?

A. If he simply runs a fire over it the cost would be very slight, unless he was unfortunate in burning adjoining timber for which he might be liable. The fire spreads over it quickly, and perhaps would permit 70 to 80 per cent of it to be used for pasture, and the cost of the seed would be from $1.25 to $2.50 per acre, owing to the kind of grass and quantity that he sowed on it.

Q. And does that include the labor of seeding as well?

A. Yes, sir. I think so.

Q. Now, does this grass that you refer to in that way require reseeding anually, or is it like meadow or something of that kind that lasts for a number of years and then would have to be reseeded?

A. The custom, of course, or good custom, would be to have perennial grasses, those that don't require to be seeded often.

Q. Then they would simply be reseeded after they had run out?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Like an ordinary meadow in bottom lands?

A. Yes, sir.

Witness further testified that he was familiar with the unsold lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company in Lane County; some of them in Linn, Douglas and Josephine, and that the lands of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company are similar to the remaining lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company that are intermingled and lying in the same vicinities. He would call these unsold lands timber or burned over lands. They are essentially the same in soil or in rock or in topography, in a general way, as the lands of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, and he would say as to the ability of a settler to make a living on these lands in their native state, that the settler could not do it. Of course, by that, he means if the settler remains on the land all the time. It is a mere guess as to what is the present value of the best particular quarter section of these timbered lands, either unsold or belonging to the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, measured by its market or commercial value. There is no market for the lands now. There is no call for lands in that locality except as the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company may be picking up occasionally a claim that adjoins their own. He does not know of any lands being sold in the market in the ordinary way. The Booth-Kelly Lumber Company buys some lands. He could give something of an idea what it pays for them, meaning the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company. The highest price that he knows, of timber investors paying for this class of land per quarter section, taking the best quarter section in Lane County, is about $1.00 per thousand on a stumpage basis. There are quarter sections that would be worth $10,000 at that rate. There have been no sales of these timber lands in the vicinity of the lands of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company that he can recall, where they paid as high as $10,000 per quarter. There have been, however, within the last year, lands sold in western Lane County at about the rate he has named. The price that he named is the extreme price so far as he is advised, but there have been quite large sales within the last year in the Siuslaw region. He knows that the Johnson-Wendling Lumber Company made a large purchase in Lane County in the last year. This concern is composed of G. X. Wendling, of San Francisco; two of the Johnsons, and the Fleischackers of banking interests in San Francisco and largely interested in power lines. He cannot tell how many acres these gentlemen purchased in the sale mentioned by him. In the papers it is frequently referred to as a billion and a quarter and a billion and a half feet, and he has seen the map. It covers, or at least it is a number of different townships, but the acreage he could not give. It would be considered a large purchase. The lands of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company were purchased from the Oregon and California Railroad Company between 1898 and 1902.

Q. I wish you would state, Mr. Booth, in your own way, whether or not at the time you made these purchases, or at the time they were made, by the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, they were made in the usual and ordinary course of business and at the then market price. State the circumstances under which these purchases were made, and including your judgment as to whether or not the prices paid were at the time reasonable.

A. The parties who organized the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company had been operating for quite a good many years previously in Josephine County, and attention was first called to the fir timber at Saginaw in 1896. We had been operating about ten years in Josephine County on lands purchased from the Oregon and California Railroad Company and others, and came to Saginaw to look over the operations there of Mr. J. I. Jones in 1896, and soon thereafter leased his plant for one year, with privilege of buying. At that time these lands were involved because he had contracts running with the company and they were assigned to us. Within the year we exercised our right to purchase, took over the contracts and bought a few hundred acres additional lands in that locality. The price that we paid for the lands that were under the contract was the price at which they had been sold or bargained to Mr. Jones, and the price that we paid for the adjoining lands was the price that was asked us when we applied for it. After about a year's operation, or during the close, about the close of 1898, we applied for other lands known now as the Wendling Basin. The lands were on the market then, had been frequently quoted from $6 to $6.50 an acre, and we entered into a contract in March, 1899, for 18,000 acres plus, at $7 an acre, is all that we were asked for them. In fact it was 50 cents per acre more than they had been quoted to us in the beginning of the negotiations, but our company was small and taking a less area than had first been discussed; the price was advanced 50 cents. During 1898 and for two or three years thereafter we made frequent purchases from the company, but purchased more of the company lands from others who had contracts with them. In this way we purchased all the lands, all of the company lands that are shown by these maps. And during the same period, and since, we have purchased the intervening even sections. The prices that we paid were the prices asked by the Railroad Company, and were open to all buyers so far as I know. We paid the usual market prices in the usual way.

Q. How did these lands compare in quality with the remaining unsold company lands in the vicinity?

A. Well, we aimed at all times to buy in compact bodies, and in the purchases that I refer to we did buy in compact body unless it was a place where lands were burned.

Q. Before you made these purchases did the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company inform itself by cruising or in any way as to the timber character of these lands?

A. It did.

Q. In doing this, did it proceed in any other or different way from that of any prudent buyer of timber lands in western Oregon?

A. I think not. The lands were examined by members of the company and their cruisers, then written into a contract. Before examining, however, we would confer with the Railroad Companies as to whether the lands were sold and at what price they would be offered us, and ordinarily we were given time to cruise them.

Whereupon witness further testified that no consideration was ever extended or given to the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company that was not extended or given to every other timber buyer that sought to buy land from the Oregon and California Railroad Company. He could not give the average price per acre of these lands purchased from the Oregon and California Railroad Company which the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company paid, but he could give the price stated in the principal contracts. The increase in value of timber lands and timber holdings in all parts of western Oregon, since the purchase by the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company of these lands, has been quite marked. In fact Booth-Kelly Lumber Company was the first large buyer from the Oregon and California Railroad Company in the interior, to do an interstate business. The Booth-Kelly Lumber Company demonstrated that the timber had value and was a fair competitor with other fir timber shipped from coast points. When that was known, buying became general. Large timber buyers have made investments in Western Oregon and now have holdings there, from Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, Illinois, Iowa, and other points, and also by people in Oregon. He considers that the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company was the pioneer company in demonstrating the fact that these timber lands when accessible to transportation, had a value resulting from the manufacturing of the timber into lumber and its shipment. Then later investors from these states mentioned, gradually came into this market, and from that time, the market gradually appreciated. He can name quite a number of these people who have thus come from these states and made investments in various parts of Western Oregon in the timber sections: Charles Green, the Wentworths, the Wright-Blodgett people, various people from Saginaw, Michigan, the Danahers and others from Detroit, the Drew Timber Company, and many others. The investments of these people, extended to timber lands of Western Oregon in different localities, both within and without the grant. From the date of the organization and operation of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, the price of timber lands in Western Oregon has been gradually appreciating, and he thinks, it is continuing. This market has developed in all of the counties of Western Oregon where there are timber lands. Those who invest for the purpose of operation, either immediately or within a reasonable time, buy only within the influince of transportation facilities. There are others who buy for the purpose of holding a long time who pay little regard to transportation facilities, but buy for investment purposes. Transportation facilities are the principal factor so far as properties are concerned; that is, transportation that in some way gets connection with the ocean or a rail line. He has lived in Oregon all his life, and most of the time in Western Oregon. He commenced lumbering first in 1880, and has been interested in it at all times since, and has been acquainted with the value of these timber lands, or their market value, or whatever value they may have had, from 1880 down to the present time. These timber lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company had no market value about 1880 of consequence for timber purposes or otherwise. At times small tracks, 40 or 80 or 160 acres, were purchased by small mills for local use, and at the time in the 80's when the railroad was extended from Roseburg south, there was some little market developed in that way for railroad use, but not in any other way. He thinks that these lands first began to have a market value about 1898; that their purchase was the first of consequence. About 1898 all the principal valleys of Western Oregon had been settled in a general way, and these valleys were used mostly for agricultural and grazing purposes. The first large claims were taken under the Donation Land Act and subsequent acts for homesteaders, the pre-emption law and public entry. In 1898 there was little land in the valley belonging to the railroad companies. There was considerable in the foothills that was purchased for agricultural and grazing purposes. Prior to 1898 there was no demand in the region of the holdings of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company by purchasers, or by any one, for these timber lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company. When Booth-Kelly Lumber Company went in there, these timber lands of the railroad company were all offered for sale. There had been no purchases of any consequence. The timber lands of Josephine County, were purchased earlier than those of the Willamette Valley. The timber lands there, were mostly covered with pine, and had uses different from fir, and the operations followed immediately there, after the completion of the railroad. The chief value of these lands was their timber. He was interested in the manufacture of sugar pine and other pine lumber at Grants Pass for a number of years. The concern was, Sugar Pine Door and Lumber Company. He became an employe in August, 1888, shareholder in 1889, secretary in 1890, and manager in 1895. They sold their business there, after the organization of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, he thinks, in 1903. Practically all the timber of the Sugar Pine Door and Lumber Company that it purchased, was logged off by 1903, and the Sugar Pine Door and Lumber Company was manufacturing lumber that it purchased from the mills. The Sugar Pine Door and Lumber Company manufactured sash, door and general finish from sugar and yellow pine, or what is now known as California white pine, and the bird's-eye pine was used in some high class finish. It also manufactured box shooks and things of that kind—that was the principal item of business. Most of these lands that were owned by the Sugar Pine Door and Lumber Company were acquired from the Oregon and California Railroad Company.

Q. What would you say as to the character of the soil there, and as to the fitness for any particular use after the timber was removed?

A. The most of the pine that we operated was taken from the granite soils. It grows there on that class of land more than any other, at least in all the regions near the railroad where we operated. The soil has little value after the timber is removed. There is, however, a red soil in the country, in that section where the pine also grows, that is valuable for fruit purposes.

Q. What would it cost, roughly speaking, to take the stumps out of this land that you refer to in Josephine County, and to make it arable, where there is any soil for that purpose?

A. It would vary, I think, from $20 to $50 an acre. The trees are scattering, and there is but little underbrush.

Q. Less stumps per acre on that character of land than on the lands in Lane County?

A. Yes, and they are more easily removed.

Whereupon defendants offered and there was received in evidence Defendants' Exhibit 332, which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon witness further testified—

Q. Mr. Booth, some testimony has been offered in this case from Mr. Charles W. Eberlein, and a report has been introduced in evidence written by Mr. Eberlein, on the subject of the agitation in Western Oregon, or in Oregon, to compel the Oregon and California Railroad Company to sell these unsold lands involved in this suit, and I think it is stated by Mr. Eberlein in substance that you had something to do with this matter. I deem it proper that you should make such statement on that subject as you care to make, and I will ask you therefore to state what, if any, connection you had with that matter, and what knowledge you have on the subject, stating the same in your own way.

A. Will I confine the statement to that phase of Mr. Eberlein's testimony to which you refer?

Q. For the present, yes.

Mr. Townsend: The Government objects to evidence of this character on the same ground that was urged during the examination of the witness Eberlein, namely, that it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, the circumstances under which the Government instituted this suit being in no sense a defense existing in favor of the Railroad Company.

Mr. Fenton: Counsel for the defendants understand the objection is made, but deem it proper that the witness shall make such statement as he cares to make on this subject.

Mr. Townsend: Now, may it be understood that this objection shall apply to all of the evidence of this witness upon the subject without renewing the same?

Mr. Fenton: Yes, it may be so understood.

A. Mr. Eberlein testified, as I understand it, that members of our company, and myself in particular, agitated the matter of forfeiture of the grant; that I had been at various meetings where there was such agitation, and that I had presided at one. The statement is unqualfiedly false.

Q. Mr. Eberlein somewhere in his testimony, I can't call particular attention to it, stated in substance and effect that these contracts made by the Oregon and California Railroad Company for the sale of these lands which were ultimately conveyed to the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company were improvidently made, and that certain officers of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, or certain employes of the company, were covertly or secretly interested in these contracts, or some of them, and that from his investigation of the matter he felt that the contracts were not made in good faith on the part of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and that there were some favors of some kind extended to the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company for certain undefined reasons, and I think I recall asking him if certain particular officers whose names had been associated with the transaction were in this deal, to which he replied No, but that certain others were. I wish you would, in your own way, on behalf of yourself and on behalf of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, and on behalf of the Oregon and California Railroad Company employes, state what the fact is in that respect, and whether or not any favors were extended, or any employes of the Oregon and California Railroad Company were interested, directly or indirectly, in this matter.

A. The best answer, I think, is to review the circumstances of the organization of the company and the purchases of the land. As stated before, the first purchase that we made of these lands (I refer now to the lands of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company) was made from Mr. J. I. Jones. The company had not been organized, nor had any members of it had any acquaintance with Mr. Jones at the time of the initiation of this transaction. After acquainting ourselves somewhat with the manufacture of fir and its uses, and believing that a business could be built up by its manufacture, we brought the matter to the attention of a number of gentlemen whom we knew, and with whom we had business relations in California, and we talked to the principal officers of the company in relation to further operations, the uses of the materials, and the places where it could be marketed, and rates that would be given. This matter was taken up directly with Mr. C. P. Huntington, Mr. H. E. Huntington, Mr. George Crocker and Mr. William H. Mills. After negotiating with Mr. Mills for the lands in the Wendling Basin, which was the first purchase of consequence—

Q. That is in Lane County, I believe?

A. In Lane County, as shown on the map that has been introduced—we agreed to purchase the lands at $7 per acre, which, as I stated a while ago, is 50 cents more than the price that was first asked, on account of our taking a less area than had been first discussed. The purpose of selling us the lands was to build up the transportation business of the road, and after the contract had been agreed to, and even after it had been written, we were not permitted to sign it until we had made an agreement for the manufacture and the transportation of the lumber. We made such agreement with Mr. C. P. Huntington simultaneously with the signing of the contract, and agreed to move over the rails of the company from Wendling, one point, not less than 2500 carloads of forest product within twelve months from the time that they would lay their rails to our mills. We purchased the right of way for that track, gave them the ties, and fulfilled our part of the contract. We have been operating since. As to whether it is improvident or not, the best answer is the condition of that community now. It is populous and prosperous, and ten-fold more settlers than there were at that time. We received no favors in it whatever.

Q. You say settlers—you mean people living in the country?

A. People living in that locality, employed in lumbering and supplying those who are employed in lumbering. There was no member of the company, of the railroad company, or of any other railroad company, interested then or at any other time or in any lands that the company have owned or do own; that is to say, at any time that the company owned them. After the company had purchased as much land as its principal officers thought it should have, and a quantity sufficient to operate over an extended period of time, I called the attention to the directors to a body of land that was lying adjoining some that we had already purchased, and suggested that the company should own it. It was decided by the directors that they had purchased a sufficient quantity, and I then asked for permission to form a company to buy the lands so that they might be held in friendly hands. That was the last large purchase of lands made from the company in which I was interested, and I was one of 25 who purchased them. The purchase was made in the name of John F. Kelly, a trustee, and at the time the purchase was made there was no thought of any one in connection with the railroad being interested, but at a later time some of the employes of the company—

Q. Of the Southern Pacific Company?

A. Of the Southern Pacific Company, were interested, but the lands were eventually sold to the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company; but before they were, all the individual members sold their interests.

Q. I will ask you to state whether any officer or employe of the Oregon and California Railroad Company was interested, directly or indirectly, in this so-called Kelly contract, or in any of these lands that afterwards came to the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company.

A. Well, I think the parties were officers who were interested while they were held by Kelly.

Q. Well, I say the Oregon and California Railroad Company?

A. Oh, no, sir; they were not. I beg your pardon; none of them, or in any other lands owned by the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company.

Q. I wish particularly to inquire whether or not Mr. Richard Koehler, who was First Vice-President of the Oregon and California Railroad Company and General Manager of the Southern Pacific Company at that time, of the lines in Oregon, and who had been connected with the Oregon and California Railroad Company since 1874 down to I think 1904, had, directly or indirectly, any interest in any of these lands or in this contract.

A. Absolutely none.

Q. I will ask you whether George H. Andrews, Acting Land Agent and Secretary of the Oregon and California Railroad Company for a great many years, and who resigned September 15, 1904, and was succeeded by Mr. Charles W. Eberlein, and who had been with this company from the early days down, and who is now dead, had any interest in these lands or these contracts, directly or indirectly, or ever had?

A. He did not.

Q. I will ask you to state whether or not Mr. William F. Herrin, Chief Counsel of the Southern Pacific Company since 1894, down to the present time, had any interest in these lands or contracts, directly or indirectly, or in any other way.

A. He did not.

Q. I will ask you whether or not Mr. William D. Fenton, who became counsel for this company in June, 1891, and who has continued in such relation up to the present time, ever had any interest, directly or indirectly, in these lands, or was connected, directly or indirectly, with the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company in any way.

A. He was not. Neither he nor any of the persons named ever had any discussion, and so far as I know any thought of such a thing.

Q. I will ask you to state whether Judge William Singer, Land Attorney of the Company, and connected with the Southern Pacific Company and the California and Oregon railroad, Central Pacific Railway Company and these companies since 1878, and continuously since, and still in such position, ever had any connection with Booth-Kelly Lumber Company or any interest in these lands, directly or indirectly.

A. None whatever.

Q. I will ask you to state whether or not any of these gentlemen, or all of them, because of any political relations to you or to any member of Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, ever exercised, attempted to exercise, or suggested to the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, or to you, or you to them, any favors, concessions, undertakings or arrangement because of any political relations or otherwise.

A. Absolutely none.

Q. Then, as I understand, Booth-Kelly Lumber Company bought these lands from the Oregon and California Railroad Company in the same way as any other purchaser, and upon the same basis?

A. That is my understanding.

Q. Who was William H. Mills?

A. He was the Land Agent.

Q. Where was his office?

A. Located in San Francisco. The first purchase of consequence that we made was directly with him.

Q. Who fixed the price for the Oregon and California Railroad Company on these lands that were purchased through Mr. Mills?

A. Mr. Mills did. I would like to add, if I may be permitted—

Q. Go ahead.

A. That the majority of the lands formerly owned by the Railroad Company that were later purchased by us was purchased indirectly or purchased from parties who assigned contracts with the company, without any knowledge or initiation from us.

Q. These persons from whom you took assignments, were they any of the company's employes or persons interested?

A. They were not.

Q. And were these officers or any of them that I have named interested in those contracts?

A. No, sir, or in any lands that we own or ever owned.

Q. I desire to call your attention to a statement contained in Mr. Eberlein's report, Defendants' Exhibit 309, found at page 80, which reads: "It may be asserted confidently that the present movement against the Oregon & California land grant was not instituted by persons wishing to settle, nor is it a movement for the general good." This report bears date May 1, 1908. "It has been brought on by agitation begun by certain large timber holding interests in Oregon for the sole and express purpose of compelling the railroad company to part with its timber holdings, in order that they might be acquired by these same timber holding interests. This fact has been well known by the land officers of the Oregon & California Railroad Company since the agitation was commenced, but it is brought to light clearly by the statement of Mr. A. C. Dixon of Oregon, an officer of the lumbering and timber holding corporation of the name of 'The Booth-Kelly Company,' before the Committee on Public Lands of the House of Representatives, on March 12, 1908. (See 'Hearings Held Before the Com. on the Pub. Lands,' etc., page 76), where he says: 'It was at a meeting of shippers, mostly lumbermen, that the question of disposal of lands still in the hands of the original grantees (Oregon & California Railroad Company) was first brought out in a public way, and the lumber interests were behind and favored every resolution on this subject adopted in the State and are still in hearty accord with the original purpose of the movement.' And, further: 'The Government, with all the agencies at its control, should secure their (the people's) rights from an offending corporation in a suit which we and other public-spirited citizens of our State have proposed and furthered continuously since it was first brought to public notice.' " This appears to be a quotation from the remarks of Mr. Dixon, set out at page 76 of a Statement of Mr. Dixon, made at the Hearings held before the Committee on the Public Lands of the House of Representatives, March 12 and 14, 1908, on Senate Resolution No. 48, instructing the Attorney General to institute certain suits, etc., published by the Government Printing Office at Washington, 1908; and I have verified the quotation from this statement of Mr. Dixon, as thus reported, and it seems to be an accurate copy of what Mr. Dixon is purported to have said. In view of Mr. Eberlein's statement in this report and his testimony elsewhere, that you attended and presided at one of these meetings, I wish you would state further, if you care to, what meetings, if any, you attended, where, and what was the purpose of these meetings, and what was the subject under consideration, whether you had anything to do with making this statement quoted from Mr. Dixon, or whether the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, other than as represented by Mr. Dixon, so far as you know, took any such position.

A. I never attended any meeting that had for its purpose the discussion of the forfeiture of the grant, but I attended one meeting in 1906 at Eugene that was called by the commercial organization at Cottage Grove. Their call was extended to the commercial bodies of the towns of the Willamette Valley. The meeting was quite largely attended in which they were discussing the proposed advance in rates, mainly what was known as the $3.10 rate to Bay points, but also the increase in the eastern rate.

Q. You mean lumber rates?

A. Lumber rates. I did not preside. I spoke at that meeting.

Q. What is the fact as to whether or not this meeting was called and attended mainly by persons who were interested in the manufacture and sale of lumber?

A. The call was a general one to people in the Willamette Valley. It was attended by quite a number of gentlemen from Portland, representing the transportation committee, as I think, of the Chamber of Commerce, and various other members of the commercial bodies of the Valley.

Q. Was there at that meeting under discussion the subject of compelling the Oregon and California Railroad Company to sell its unsold timber-lands?

A. Not so far as I recall.

Q. What was said, if anything, if you recall, at that meeting about an effort to be made to forfeit the grant for failure to sell the lands at all, or for failure to sell it in accord with this act of April 10, 1869, at $2.50 an acre and to actual settlers, and in quantities not to exceed 160 acres?

A. Well, the matter discussed principally was the matter of rates on lumber, and so far as I recall nothing else. That is what I discussed.

Q. Was there or not any statement by any representative members there that the lumbermen should institute some method of reprisal looking towards forcing the company to sell these lands or to forfeit the grant if these rates were advanced? Was there not something of that kind said?

A. Nothing that I recall. It would have been absurd, of course, for the owners of timber-lands to urge forfeiture of the grant, when they would certainly know it would cloud their own titles.

Q. Well, at that time, Mr. Booth, isn't it true that the timber men, I mean the people who desired to invest in these lands, were opposed to the company's discontinuance of sale?

A. Well, I don't think that was so with timber men any more than other classes of people. There was a general remonstrance against it, and it extended to all classes of people, that it was not right and a mistaken policy, and so on.

Q. That is to say, to suspend the sales of the land?

A. To suspend the sales of the land.

Q. As they had been sold theretofore?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there or not any particular demand voiced at that meeting, or any other, that these lands should be sold at $2.50 an acre to actual settlers in quantities not to exceed 160 acres?

A. There was not at that meeting, nor at any other meeting that I know of.

Q. The opposition, as I understand you, then, to the policy was because the lands were not open to sale, as they had been theretofore.

A. That is it.

Q. Did you or did you not have anything to do personally with the preparation of the joint memorial which was passed in February, 1907, by the Legislature of the State, introduced, I think, by Senator Mulit of Jackson County, other than to vote for it with all the other senators?

A. I had nothing to do with the preparation of it. I voted for it.

Q. The records of the Senate and of the House show that it was practically a unanimous vote on that measure. Was there or not any discussion in the Legislature on that subject?

A. I think there was. A number of senators spoke in favor of it.

Q. That was in February, 1907?

A. About that time, yes, sir. There was a general demand for it from the constituency all over Western Oregon.

Q. That demand was because the company had not continued to sell the lands as before?

A. Yes, sir. Now, if I may refer to a further statement there in connection with our company?

Q. Yes.

A. And the matter of agitation. I am informed that Mr. Eberlein said that we had threatened to have such measures introduced.

Q. I don't find that in the record. I don't think it is there.

A. I think it was in the newspapers.

Q. Well, I don't think it is in the evidence, but you may make your statement.

A. Because the company declined to sell us lands. That is not true, so far as I know. We never applied to the company for any lands that we did not purchase unless it might be two or three sections that were intermingled with ours. That was about the time the lands were withdrawn. But we never had any trouble with the company in any way in relation to the purchase of the lands—never any misunderstandings, and had no occasion whatever from that cause to agitate the forfeiture of the grant.

Q. I wish you would refresh my memory by stating who were the members of the Transportation Committee of the Chamber of Commerce that attended that meeting at Eugene to which you refer, in 1906.

A. Mr. Devers was there.

Q. A. H. Devers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. H. Wittenberg?

A. I am not sure as to Mr. Wittenberg. Mr. Samuel Connell I remember. I don't know whether he was there as a member of the body, but I remember his being there. I don't think I can name any others, although I know there were several of them.

Q. Mr. Samuel Connell, I believe, at that time was in the manufacturing of lumber, the same kind of lumber, here in Portland?

A. Yes, sir; and I am inclined to think at that time he was Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce; if not he had been prior.

Q. Mr. Devers was a—

A. Member of the Committee.

Q. Member of the Committee. He was not in the lumber business.

A. No, sir; a grocer.

Q. He was a grocer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. This meeting, then, was primarily to discuss a proposed increase of rates on lumber, common lumber, common green lumber, that was destined to Bay points in California, from $3.10 to a rate of about $5. Is that correct?

A. That is correct. I think also it had to do with the advance of the eastern rate from 40 cents to a higher price.

Q. Fifty cents?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at that time the rates put in by the company, or threatened to be put in, or announced to be put in, were satisfactory to the Portland lumber manufacturers, who didn't use the railroad but who shipped by water, and were not satisfactory to the interior manufacturer?

A. That is correct.

Q. It was claimed, was it not, by the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, that this rate of $3.10 had been put in by Mr. C. H. Markham about the time the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company established its business at Saginaw and Wendling, and that it was not a temporary rate but one that was to be continued? That was the claim, was it not?

A. The statements that have been made by members of the company, and by myself, were that it was a temporary rate when it was first made, but that after a year's time the rate had been tested, that it was satisfactory and was made permanent.

Q. Do you recall the fact that during that agitation of rate Mr. Stubbs, Traffic Manager, came to Oregon, and that there was some effort to agree on the restoration of that rate? He went to Wendling. He went over these properties with you and with other members of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company. Do you recall that circumstance?

A. I do.

Q. Do you recall that it was contended by the Company officials that the rate of $3.10 under the circumstances was not a compensatory rate, and that for that reason they ought to and should raise it; that it was afterwards litigated, and the rate was made $3.40?

A. Not just in the way you state it, Mr. Fenton.

Q. Well, just state it. I am stating from general recollection.

A. At that time our Wendling mill, the principal mill, was shut down, and Mr. Stubbs asked if we would operate it if the $3.10 rate was restored. We informed him that it would be, and he restored it on common green rough lumber. and we continued to operate. At a later time it was taken out and the $5 rate put in, and then it was litigated.

Q. Well, that is right. And what was the ultimate result of the litigation?

A. The rate was made $3.40.

Q. Do you recall that in that matter there was a difference of opinion among traffic officials in Oregon and traffic officials in San Francisco as to this controversy, and that the Oregon end of it, including Mr. Markham, wanted to maintain the $3.10 rate?

A. I do.

Q. That was a fact?

A. Mr. Markham wanted to maintain it, and other members. Mr. Stubbs was opposed but yielded.

Q. Now, then, that was the subject really under consideration at this meeting in Eugene in 1906, was it?

A. It was; and in connection with the eastern rate also.

Q. That is what I mean.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the discussion there do you recall that there was anything said or intimated by anybody as to the land matters?

A. Except indirectly. I remember this, that the establishment of the company's mills operating on its own lands was considered unfair to mill men.

Q. You refer now to the company's mills on—

A. The Wendling branch.

Q. On the Wendling branch, situated at Marcola?

A. Marcola, yes.

Q. Now, who considered it really a breach of good faith or an improper thing for the company to do under the circumstances? What manufacturing concern?

A. Well, as a matter of good faith I don't know that any one did, but it was very generally condemned; I think by all of us. I know it was by me.

Q. That is to say, the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company and other manufacturers felt that the company ought not to engage in a business in which they were common carriers and in which others who were patrons of the road were making their living and making their profits, if any?

A. Yes; because these parties had purchased the company's lands, demonstrated that they were valuable, and were then operating and were at a disadvantage in selling if the company provided itself with its material.

Q. Now, then, that was a source of some irritation between the manufacturers and owners of timber-lands and the company?

A. It was a matter frequently talked about, yes.

Q. Now, did that give rise or occasion to the policy which later became generally supported by the public, leading to the attempt to forfeit the grant?

A. It might have been a factor, but I don't think a very material factor. Now, it was stated, if I may answer that more fully, in Mr. Eberlein's testimony that the Railroad Company was compelled to do this largely on account of the acts of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company.

Q. On account of raising the price of ties?

A. Yes, and cancelling contracts for ties.

Q. What is the fact about that?

A. It is absolutely false. The Booth-Kelly Lumber Company never did cancel a contract with the Railroad Company, could not if it wanted to; but it frequently permitted contracts to be cancelled and never had any trouble with the Railroad Company as to the sale of its product.

Q. Was there or not about that time a sharp advance in the price of ties by all dealers?

A. Yes, sir; in all kinds of lumber, not ties alone.

Q. What was the occasion of that sharp advance?

A. The extended markets and the general demand for lumber.

Q. Do you recall what was the price of ties about that time?

A. I do not.

Q. Mr. Booth, I show you what purports to be a certified copy of "An Act Supplementing the joint resolution of Congress approved April thirtieth, nineteen hundred and eight, entitled 'Joint resolution instructing the Attorney General to institute certain suits,' and so forth," which appears to be an Act of Congress, approved August 20, 1912, commonly known as the Innocent Purchasers Act, which, for the purpose of identification, may be marked Defendants' Exhibit 333. Do you recall the fact that such an act has been passed?

A. I do.

Whereupon witness further testified that the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company has a suit pending known as one of the forty-five Innocent Purchaser suits in this court, and that the lands involved in this suit and in another suit against John F. Kelly, Trustee, and a third suit in which Booth-Kelly Lumber Company is interested, aggregate about seventy or seventy-five thousand acres, the entire purchase from the Oregon and California Railroad Company.

Whereupon defendants offered and there was received in evidence Defendants' Exhibit 333, which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon witness further testified that it was his understanding that Charles W. Eberlein testified that on account of some grievance of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, W. C. Hawley was induced to run for Congress for the First District, and to introduce the resolution of forfeiture, and that witness urged him to support it. This statement is not true, and witness never at any time suggested to Hawley that he should run for Congress, and never discussed the matter of forfeiture with him at any time prior to his election, or at any time prior to the introduction of the resolution known as the Fulton resolution. After that resolution was introduced, he talked to Hawley about it, at the time witness was a witness before the Interstate Commerce Commission, as it affected the purchasers of the grant. He had a short conversation with Hawley in which Hawley stated that the matter had not been very generally canvassed, and what would be done so far as innocent purchasers, if there were any innocent purchasers, had not been developed. Hawley made no statement in relation to his action in regard to this act. With that exception, he had no conversation with Hawley as to this resolution, nor as to his action in the matter, nor even as to running for Congress.

Whereupon upon cross examination witness further testified that he had lived in Oregon 54 years, was born in Yamhill County. He had not lived all of his life west of the Cascades. He had been in Eastern Oregon about three years in the 70's, with that exception he had lived in Western Oregon, that is in that part of Oregon situated west of the summit of the Cascades, and for a number of years last past he has been quite familiar with the general industrial and commercial history of Western Oregon. Kelly was associated with him in the Sugar Pine Door and Lumber Company but Kelly was not a stockholder until 1895 when witness became interested in the subject of establishing a general milling business, the first place was Saginaw and Kelly was one of his associates. He first took an option at Saginaw from J. I. Jones, whose holdings consisted mostly of railroad lands, but the option also covered some even sections. They first took an option for the purchase or lease and a few months after that, they made a lease for 12 months with the option of buying within the life of the lease and they exercised the right to purchase during that year and purchased in 1897. Shortly thereafter, they extended their plans and commenced purchasing these other railroad lands mentioned by him. Their negotiations for the purchase of lands in the Mohawk Valley, that is for the first large holdings, were in the latter part of 1898, the contract was in March 1899, and from that time on until late in 1902, they made other purchases. In the meantime they got several small contracts and two large ones, where the Railroad Company had sold lands to other purchasers. The large ones were from Amos Hyland, for lands tributary to the Middle Fork. The Hyland contract covered nearly 7000 acres of railroad lands. They purchased from him at the same time, some lands from the even numbered sections intervening the railroad lands. After they negotiated these contracts with the Railroad Company, they filled in their holdings as much as they could reasonably, by purchasing the intervening even numbered sections. These contracts where they purchased from other persons, were generally in other localities. The Hyland contract, being on the Middle Fork, was where they had no holdings of any consequence at that time and the Jones and Cook contracts were on the Brumbaugh River. It is a fact, generally speaking, that they first acquired the railroad holdings and afterwards picked out the even numbered sections intervening them, except where they made large purchases like the Hyland and Cook. The deal with them carried also even sections, but the Company added to them, even and odd sections from time to time. In the case of Mr. Hyland he owned quite a little of the even numbered sections then, where it was in the locality where he lived and had an extensive stock business. He owned many of the even sections and had purchased timber lands from his neighbors on the even sections. In the case of the Jones and Cook contracts it is true that they had purchased the odd numbered sections from the Railroad Company and then filled in by acquiring the even numbered sections. A large part of these lands referred to by the witness in his testimony, after they have been logged off, can be at a comparatively slight expense, converted into very good pasture lands. That has actually been done as to some of the lands that have been logged off; that has been fairly demonstrated. There is a sufficient rainfall in that general vicinity to give reasonable assurance of annual crops without irrigation. Dairying is generally carried on in this general vicinity and is understood to be profitable and he thinks it is. This dairying industry, has reference to lands between these holdings of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company and the railroad, as a rule in the little valleys on the edges of the foothills. There are ranchers as far east as the holdings of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company. These lands of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company could not be used for agricultural or dairying purposes, until the timber has been removed, then if they are seeded to tame grass they would make good pasture lands and of course a considerable portion of them would do for fruit, gardening and even agriculture, if they were cleared. While he does not know the fact beyond the State of Oregon, it is true, he thinks that the timber must first be removed before lands covered with evergreen forests, not of deciduous trees, can be used for any kind of agricultural pursuits, dairying or grain growing, or fruit growing or otherwise. Grass grows more or less among the oaks and maples and things of that sort. The timber of fir and pine lands, must first be removed and this is true with reference to these particular lands. When he refers to these lands as timber lands, he refers to the first use that can be made of such lands, and he does not mean by that, to exclude the possible use of the lands after the removal of timber, for grazing and agricultural purposes and when he says that these lands could not be used for the purpose of settlement and that the settler could not maintain himself upon the lands, speaking generally, he means that the lands could not be put to any use that would maintain a settler while the timber was standing. The reasonable value of the timber would go a long ways towards clearing the land and assisting the settler in establishing a home there. If he had the privilege or had the opportunity of disposing of the timber while he was clearing his land, he could make settlement on it. He thinks that to some extent as the milling industry has proceeded in this vicinity, with which he is personally familiar, employes of the different milling companies working for these companies at the same time have prepared lands in the vicinity in which they worked, by grubbing up the stumps, referring to lands that have been logged over and have thus prepared for themselves homes in that general vicinity. That has taken place to some extent. It has in instances where members of families working for the lumber concerns and other members of the family are clearing up homes along the foothills in the brush lands and in places in cut over lands.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

Q. Is it not a fact that a number of families have established homes in that general vicinity by that method that you have just described? I refer to lands that were timbered but have been logged off.

A. Well, that is especially true of the lands in the lower foothills that were covered with timber that has been removed and is being removed for wood and hauled into towns. There is a lot of that in Lane County, and I think in other counties, settlements being made in that way, but not much of that from the lands that we own or lands as remote from towns as they.

Q. Well, that is owing to the fact that settlement has not yet reached those remote parts, rather than the fact that the lands could no be so used. Isn't that true?

A. Well, there has been no policy adopted, so far as I know, of people who have cut over the lands yet of disposing of them, and the opportunity has not been given in that locality for that reason. It could be done if the cut over lands were sold to them.

Whereupon witness further testified that the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company has discussed the policy of reforesting its lands, but had not yet adopted a policy as to cut over lands. Pending a decision on that point, the Company has not disposed of its cut over lands. He lived at Grants Pass 12 years and at Eugene or in the vicinity 13 years and about 10 years at different periods near Roseburg. He is familiar in a general way with the country from Eugene south, practically to the State Line, but not very familiar at the present time with

Jackson County but is with Josephine, Douglas and Lane Counties. His knowledge of the character of the soil in Josephine County and its susceptibility to cultivation and growing of vegetable products, was gained largely during his residence there. It is true, that since he left there, the granite soils of Josephine County are being exploited, the lands are being cleared and advertised and offered for sale and some of them sold, but so far as his knowledge extends, it has not been demonstrated that these granite lands were good for vegetable products. He was there recently, at their fair, going there to attend to business matters in relation to his brother's estate, as he frequently does, and he made considerable inquiry then and also of the probability of irrigating the lands near Grants Pass, for the purpose of ascertaining how it would affect values there of lands than he had under control for his brother's estate. He was shown some products that were said to be grown on granite soil, that were fairly good, but the general understanding was that without irrigation the granite would not produce well. He is familiar with those lands immediately around Grants Pass, so far as planting is concerned. He knows that these lands have been planted and planted to grapes, lands on the hill sides in granite soil in sight of Grants Pass but the grapes are not yet bearing. What they may have done on any of these soils there since he left, with the exception of that immeditaely around the town and along the railroad he gained from inquiry from others. As he has stated these granite soil lands would produce with sufficient moisture from irrigation, but while there was plenty of water in close proximity, the cost of putting it on the granite lands was excessive and that had not been carried out yet to any great extent, but probably would be. He is positive that they will produce some sorts of vegetation with irrigation. That has been demonstrated. The meeting at Eugene referred to by him in his testimony, was brought about by the announced plan or purpose of the Railroad Company, to increase rates on milling products and that is what really brought forth the meeting. The milling industry in Western Oregon in those vicinities that are dependent upon the railroad for transportation, had very largely been built up, on the faith of the former rates that the railroad company had put in force. Markets had been established and mills erected and the entire industry, built up with reference to the existing transportation rates and he considered, that the territory south from Eugene to the State Line, within 30 or 40 miles of the railroad is dependent for transportation facilities upon the Southern Pacific Company, as lessee of the Oregon and California Railroad Company. It is a fact that about the same time that the Railroad Company threatened or gave notice in some way, that it was about to increase the rate on lumber, that it installed also at about the same time, mills of its own at Marcola.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

Q. Now, I will ask you if it is not a fact that the real reason that brought about this public remonstrance that you referred to yesterday, this general public demand which resulted in the unanimous adoption of the joint memorial of the legislature of Oregon addressed to Congress and the executive officers of the National Government, was the general fact that the Railroad Company had a virtual monopoly of transportation from Eugene southerly to the State line, and owned nearly one-half of all of the lands tributary to its line of road, and that the policy that had been adopted by the Railroad Company to withhold its lands from sale had materially checked the industrial and commercial development of that part of the state, resulting in this popular remonstrance and protest that you referred to, and which subsequently induced the unanimous adoption of this joint memorial to Congress.

A. I understand the question, but there is a certain deduction made there that I am not quite sure about. I can answer it in a general way, I think, so far as my own opinions are concerned.

Q. You understand the question now is, whether or not that general condition did not exist and that it was the discussion of that general condition that brought about this popular remonstrance, resulting in the unanimous adoption by the legislature of the State of this joint memorial?

A. I think it is true that the memorial was the outgrowth of the action of the Railroad Company in withdrawing its lands from sale and in the disturbance of freight rates. So far as I know, the agitation came first and continued from the commercial organizations at Cottage Grove, where the town and the community was largely dependent on lumbering, where many small mills had recently been established. I think that those two things were the principal causes of the memorial.

Q. Well, now, from your general knowledge of the industrial and commercial history of Western Oregon from Eugene southerly to the southern boundary line of the State, and especially the territory tributary to the line of railroad of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, is it not a fact that the withdrawal of those lands from sale by the Railroad Company, and the withholding of the lands by the Railroad Company did materially check the industrial and commercial development of that country?

A. I think that is true to some extent in the three counties named, more particularly in Josephine County. It was true in a less measure in Douglas because there is not a great deal of milling there, and in Lane because most of the milling concerns had provided themselves with timber; but it affected Josephine County directly and immediately.

Q. Was not that view publicly discussed in this general public discussion that you referred to, which brought forth the joint memorial of the Legislature, was not that one of the elements that entered into the discussion?

A. That is a claim that was very generally made.

Q. One of the principal problems that your company has had to contend with has been the subject of transportation. Is not that true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that has led you to give general study to that subject and particularly with reference to the community wherein the holdings of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company are situated?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, is it not true that the Railroad Company has virtually a monopoly of transportation from Eugene southerly to the southern boundary line of the State, and has had since the construction of the railroad? I am speaking now with reference to the subject of transportation as applied to the practical development of the industrial and commercial resources of that territory.

A. They are the only general transportation company in the regions near the railroad. Of course in that part of Western Oregon west of the Coast Range it is not influenced by that directly.

Q. You refer now to the territory that may make use of the ports on the Oregon Coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, that is limited to the lands situated west of the summit of the Coast Range, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And by far the greater part of this land grant is situated east of the summit of the Coast Range.

A. Yes, sir; so far as it relates to their land grant the answer would be in the affirmative. I understood you to include all Western Oregon.

Q. Well, my question did include Western Oregon, and for the purpose of completing the record I will ask you to limit yourself to the territory within the exterior boundary lines of this land grant. Now, is it not true that that territory is at the present time wholly dependent upon this Railroad Company for transportation, and has been since the construction of this railroad?

A. All the transportation is controlled by them, or influenced by them.

Q. Now, in your judgment, Mr. Booth, what effect would it have upon the future industrial and commercial delevopment of the territory within the exterior boundary lines of this land grant from Eugene southerly to the southern boundary line of the State if the Railroad Company should permanently withhold these lands as a permanent estate existing in its favor? My question is, what effect in your judgment would that have upon the general development of the industrial and commercial resources of that territory? I forget now whether I included that in my former question, this of course being subject to the same objection that has already been interposed.

A. If the lands are not to be occupied it would retard the growth in a general way and prevent the normal increase of population. But it would depend largely on what policy the railroad might adopt as to the lands in permitting them to be settled.

Q. Well, would it not give the Railroad Company the opportunity to entrench its monopoly of transportation by virtually a monopoly of production of the lands tributary to the railroad?

Q. Omitting now from consideration the lands that at the present time have passed from the Railroad Company?

A. That would be true if the Railroad Company removed the growth from their own lands and carried it over their own rails, or if they required settlers who might go on those lands to ship over their own rails. I do not know how it could be otherwise.

Q. But the ownership of the alternate sections, either even or odd, necessarily controls the industrial and commercial development of that country, does it not, by anybody, either the Railroad Company or anybody else?

A. It affects and retards it.

Q. Can there be any general development of this territory with which you are familiar within the exterior boundary lines of this railroad grant if the Railroad Company owns and holds virtually one-half of the lands situated in alternate sections, as this grant is, unless the Railroad Company will join in the effort to develop those industrial and commercial resources?

Q. Would it be practical to develop that country with the odd numbered sections withheld from development by the Railroad Company?

A. If they hold the timber-lands in any region it will probably retard the milling from the even sections that are intermingled, but when the timber is removed from the even sections, or on the brush lands, or things of that sort, it might retard, but it would not prevent the settlement on the even sections.

Q. But bearing in mind the establishment of roads and schools and other necessary incidents to the development of any territory, it is true of this territory, the same as any other, is it not, that the withholding of the alternate sections from settlement or improvement or industrial use would materially check and retard the development of the territory generally?

A. Well, I think my answer is a fair one, that it will retard it but not prevent it entirely.

Q. As illustrating that point, you testified yesterday, did you not, that there is no market for the lands intervening the holdings of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company except the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company itself. Nobody else is buying the lands intervening your holdings.

A. No, sir. I didn't testify that. It is not true.

Q. What did you say with reference to that?

A. I don't think the question was up. What I mean to say is that other people are purchasing the lands intervening so that we do not own on the even sections, have been doing so.

Q. You were asked yesterday as to the reasonable market price for the most valuable piece of land within your holdings. My understanding was that you testified that there was no present market for those lands except such as the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company itself purchased.

A. I did not mean to be so understood.

Q. Well, then, I either misunderstood you, or you misspoke. That was my understanding yesterday.

A. I understood the question to be the maximum value of any given claim. I think that that was repeated several times, that it should be the maximum value, and that is what I meant to respond to.

Q. But it is true, is it not, that where the lands in one or more townships are held, one-half of them in alternate sections by a single proprietor or owner, and the intervening sections in small quantities by a large number of holders, that the owner of one-half of the lands in alternate sections does to a large extent control the market value of those lands?

A. It has a very marked influence.

Q. It is difficult, is it not, to secure a purchaser for lands covered with timber, which are situated in isolated tracts, even as large as a section.

Mr. Fenton: Does your question apply to timberlands?

Mr. Townsend: Yes.

A. The market is quite active in a small way for timber-lands anywhere within the vicinity of our holdings; that is to say, they are changing hands, from one to another, but not in a large way nor at a high price; not at such prices as I named yesterday as a maximum price. But if the odd sections are held by one concern there can be no large grouping of lands, and without the grouping or continuous ownership the milling industry cannot be profitably carried on.

Q. That is, with the many problems that confront the milling industry, including the establishment of logging roads and the logging off of the land itself, and in view of the amount of profit made out of the business, it is impracticable to attempt an enterprise of that kind on any large scale with reference to the alternate sections of any particular tract of land?

A. That is true.

Q. Now in the valleys, and even in some of the foothills, it is a fact, is it not, Mr. Booth, that in the early days prior to 1880 the early settlers actually burned the timber in order to make way for a settlement, because there was not then market for the timber itself?

A. Yes, that was done much later than 1880.

Q. What I mean is, that the settlements that have been made in the valleys and in the sloping foothills were made many years ago, in a great many instances, even where the settlers had to burn the timber and got no value for it at all?

A. Yes, sir."

Whereupon witness further testified that he, in connection with Frank H. Buck, president of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, negotiated most of these purchases of railroad lands, so far as the first purchases were concerned. Later, the negotiating was done almost wholly by himself. The negotiation of those purchases was about equally divided, perhaps with the officers of the Company at San Francisco and at Portland. Negotiation for the first large purchase was conducted at San Francisco, and that related particularly to the general policy that the Company should pursue. Negotiations for the smaller ones, perhaps, the greater number of all the smaller ones, were with the Portland office, and in one instance, perhaps, the matter was discussed with both offices. George H. Andrews represented the Portland office and at San Francisco, they dealt with William H. Mills. They discussed the policy of the Railroad Company with Mr. Huntington, as to the uses the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company should put the timber to, that it bought, and they stated to Huntington that they were buying this, for the purpose of manufacturing, and agreed to ship at once and as soon as the land should come into their possession to construct a mill and commence shipping at once. They gave Huntington the territory about where they expected to ship, but the land negotiations were with Mills. Negotiations opened with Andrews were carried to San Francisco in order to get final decision in only one instance, where the matter was taken up at both ends. That was by common censent and not to go over Andrews or anything of that sort. The contract was finally signed by Andrews. Andrews was subject to the general supervision of the San Francisco office during that time. That is his understanding.

Whereupon on re-direct examination witness further testified that he did not testify that the lands of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company were in the Mohawk Valley, he did not mean to so testify, but that the lands about Wendling are in the Mohawk water shed. The lands of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company about Wendling are mountainous lands and are not in any valley. He testified that the dairying was mostly between the holdings of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company and the railroad. That is, the railroad referred to by him was the main line running from Portland through Eugene to the California State Line, or such branch lines as the Wendling line. There is considerable dairying in the Mohawk Valley below the other mills, and that is what might be called an extension of the Willamette Valley country. It is true that the valley lands of the Willamette Valley and other valleys in Western Oregon were settled under the public land laws and were mainly cleared of timber and were agricultural in their character, in their original state, but it is true that along the small streams extending well up into the foothills and even up to the timber regions, settlements up to 12 or 15 years ago, the cleared area was extended, even homes made, by felling timber and burning it. These lands referred to by him are along the border of the sections and the small streams that are tributary to the different prongs of the Willamette. He did not think that he said in his testimony that these timber lands had no value and now have no value excepting for timber that is on them, but he said and repeats, that that is their chief value. He thinks they have some value after the timber is removed. He thinks that the reforesting is entirely problematical, but it is demonstrated so far as their value as pasture is concerned. The men who own these timber lands, who have logged them off, in his region, are considering the question of what to do in that respect. The beginning of the market for timber was when the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company had demonstrated that by manufacturing the timber into lumber and shipping the same, there could be something realized out of the timber. The percent of their output affected by the $3.10 rate varied at different times. There was quite a good deal of disturbance about the $3.10 rate as he now recalls. It either was withdrawn or threatened to be withdrawn three different times. In their early work, he thinks as much as 30 to 40 percent of their output was influenced by it. This $3.10 rate applied to all classes and later and finally it applied on rough green common lumber. That was the final adjustment.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

Q. Now, then, the $3.10 rate as it affected this rough green common lumber only affected it from Willamette Valley points to Bay points in California?

A. Well, that situation is comparatively recent, Mr. Fenton. Our early milling in the beginning to the time to which you first referred, in 1898, and around there, our output went largely to California and to points that were influenced by that rate, where it was used as base rate, and so on. But the change to the common green rough lumber was the final adjustment of the rate, and with an understanding between the Railroad Company and the shippers. But earlier the $3.10 rate applied to all classes of lumber.

Q. I understand. And this later understanding was when with reference to the first application of the $3.10 rate?

A. I cannot give you the exact date now.

Q. Well, you had not been long manufacturing until the understanding was had that this $3.10 rate was limited to the common rough green lumber?

A. Yes, we had manufactured quite a number of years and had manufactured extensively before it was ever disturbed; established all of our mills.

Q. Yes, I know; but it finally was limited to the class of lumber that you speak of, and was in operation for a good many years before there was an effort made to raise it to the $5.00 rate, about which the complaint was made in 1906.

A. The $3.10 rate was in operation for quite a good many years.

Q. That is what I mean.

A. Before there was an attempt to raise it.

Q. Yes.

A. That is true.

Q. Well, then, later it was applied only to the common lumber, common rough green lumber?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was the situation when the effort was made to raise it to $5.00?

A. The final effort.

Q. Yes, by the company.

A. Yes, sir.

Whereupon witness further testified that there were copies in his office of some affidavits that were procured by the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company and submitted to the Public Lands Committee at Washington while the Congress was considering a bill to compromise with the purchasers involved in the 45 suits referred to in this record, which affidavits were submitted to the Public Lands Committee by Mr. Dixon. These related to the character of the lands and the cost of clearing.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

Q. These were—you might state generally—these related to the character of the lands, as I understand, and the cost of clearing?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Suppose the Oregon and California Railroad Company had in 1906 or 1907 offered for sale all of these timbered lands to so-called actual settlers in quantities not exceeding 160 acres and at a price not exceeding $2.50 an acre, and had sold them to so-called actual settlers or persons who would go actually and build a cabin and live on the land for six months, or whatever the time, three months, no time being fixed in the statute, and the title of the company had vested in these actual settlers, how long, in your judgment, Mr. Booth, would it have been until these actual settlers acquiring these lands at $2.50 an acre could have resold them to timber buyers and timber investors and mill men at a large advance; and how long would it have been until most of these lands would have passed into timber investors or timber men for the purpose of development?

Q. You may answer.

A. I think your question is at what time they could have done that?

Q. Yes; and what would they have done probably?

A. Well, I could answer it perhaps more accurately by referring to the conditions in the Mohawk or Wendling Basin. When we purchased the lands of the Railroad Company there about all of the even sections had been taken either by homesteaders or entrymen, under the Timber and Stone Act, but there were no residents in there except along Mill Creek, and as I recall now in two places where the lands had been cut over in part and the logs floated down the stream to Coburg, and there were two families living there, the families except the husband remaining on the property, but the husbands were away at work. And with that exception there was no one in that region. And of course they could not make a living on them, and did not attempt it, and there was no opportunity given them until our mill was established there, which was about 1898.

Q. What became of the title to these even sections?

A. We purchased them.

Q. That is to say, their chief value was for the timber, and the party holding the title disposed of them for that purpose?

A. That is right.

Q. And in your judgment that would have been the result if these lands had been sold to actual settlers under this $2.50 an acre—

A. It is the result of all the lands we own.

Q. Well, from your knowledge of the character of the lands that you own, the same thing would apply to other lands in the grant of the same class?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, then, would there have been any more of a commercial or industrial development if the company had sold these lands to these so-called actual settlers and required them to stay there on the land? Would that have been at all practicable or possible?

A. It would not have been, the class of lands to which we are referring.

Q. Then the only industrial development that would have resulted from the sale to actual settlers would have been the vesting of the title ultimately in timber investors to these lands, and their consequent use in due time when they desired them to manufacture.

A. So far as it relates to these lands that is true.

Whereupon upon re-cross examination the witness further testified as follows:

Q. Now, it is a fact, is it not, Mr. Booth, that the milling industry in Oregon has been conducted, to a very great extent, under a system by which the millers purchase the timber instead of the land itself. That is true, is it not?

A. I think not; not in our locality.

Q. Well, it is true, is it not, that the timber on a stumpage basis will usually bring almost as much money as the title to the land itself, if there is a reasonable time given for the removal of the timber?

A. If it is purchased at a time that the timber could be removed that is true, but in many instances, of course, cases where it is purchased for an investment, they would not buy unless they had fee to the land. But if it is for the purpose of manufacturing, I think they would bring just about as much.

Q. The Forestry Service is doing that same thing today, selling the timber and reserving the fee to the Government, is it not?

A. Not in our locality; but it is more or less negotiating; but there have been no transactions made there that I know of, though there has been considerable talk of it.

Q. That is largely because the Forest Reserve lands are more remote than other lands that are held by the mill owners, and therefore it is not a practical business proposition to purchase the timber within the Forest Reserves at the present time?

A. Principally because of the higher prices that they ask for their timber, and the restrictions in removing it.

Q. That is, the Forestry Service has been asking for a higher price than the real market value of stumpage in that vicinity?

A. Yes, and that other lands can be purchased for, and they have imposed restrictions.

Q. And in addition to that have imposed certain restrictions as to the removal of the timber and the clearing of brush, etc.

A. That is right.

Q. That makes it a less profitable business transaction for the mill operator?

A. That is right.

Q. Mr. Booth, in all of your dealings with the railroad people in the purchase of these lands, did any of them ever call your attention to this clause in the granting act which in terms prohibits sales except to actual settlers in quantities not greater than 160 acres to one purchaser, and for a price not exceeding $2.50 per acre?

A. They did not.

Q. Did you yourself know of them until after this agitation arose?

A. I did not.

Whereupon A. C. DIXON, called as a witness on behalf of defendants being first duly sworn testified that he resides at Eugene, Oregon, and is manager of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company and has resided in Oregon twenty-three years, ten years in Jackson County, seven months in Josephine County and between twelve and thirteen years in Lane County. He was a student from 1889 to 1893 and has been engaged in the lumber business since 1893. He attended the public and high schools at Ashland and the normal school at Monmouth, but did not graduate at Monmouth. He was there in 1892 and 1893. His business career has been at Ashland, Grants Pass and at two or three different towns in Lane County. At Ashland, he was in the retail lumber business from 1893 to 1899 and the firm name was Norris & Company. He was in the retail business for the major portion of that time, about five years as Norris & Company and then under the firm name of Hicks and Dixon. They purchased a sawmill and continued to retail lumber and at the same time manufactured lumber. They also leased a claim. Their sawmill was about six miles south of Ashland, in the foothills of the Siskiyous and they manufactured pine and fir, mostly pine. He was connected with the Sugar Pine Door & Lumber Company in Grants Pass for about seven months as stockholder and working in the office under Mr. Booth, at the same time working in the Bank part of the time. The Sugar Pine Door & Lumber Company operated at Grants Pass and then sold out to other people. The operation is still going on there in some modified form.

The general character of the timber that was used there, was mostly pine. There were several small mills operating there, principally in the summer time, and closed down in the winter, and he could not state with any accuracy, the amount of the cut. His next lumbering experience was at Wendilng, Lane County, where he went in March, 1900, until August 1901 when he went to Coburg and was there until June 1905, and then went to Eugene, where he has been since. He is a stockholder and manager of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company and has been its manager since February 1910. The majority of the stock of that Company is owned in Michigan, in the hands of parties who live in Michigan. John W. Blodgett is one of the large stockholders, and their Michigan headquarters or place of business, is at Grand Rapids. The cut of the mills of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, when they are running, is 175,000 feet a day of ten hours. One mill is idle, which if running would add about 40,000 feet a day to the cut. One of the mills was burned down last year, it was cutting a little over 100,000 feet a day. They have two mills now operating and one idle. They did have four. One of these mills operating is located at Wendling, one that is operating at Coburg, one at Saginaw that could be operated but is idle, and one at Springfield that is burned. He is more or less familiar with the lands of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company and knows where they are located and thinks he is familiar with the character of the lands as to their being timbered or otherwise. These lands are chiefly valuable for the timber and he thinks the Wentworth lands are chiefly valuable for timber, only he has not seen all of the Wentworth lands. He has been through some of them. It is his understanding that the Wentworth lands are purely timber lands. In his judgment, he would think the larger portion of the unsold lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company involved in this litigation, are in the same general class. He was in attendance before the Committee on Public Lands of the House of Representatives, March 12 and 14, 1908, when the committee had under consideration Senate Resolution 48, instructing the Attorney General to institute a certain suit. He made no formal appearance before that Committee at that time. He made a written general statement in behalf of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company directly, and not with any authority from any other Company, and as purchasers of these lands. He made the statement headed "Statement of Mr. A. C. Dixon, of Oregon" found at pages 76 and 77 of the printed "Hearings Held Before The Committee on the Public Lands of the House of Representatives, March 12 and 14, 1908, on S. Res. No. 48 Instructing the Attorney-General to Institute Certain Suits, etc." and that statement was according to the facts as he understood them.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence that portion of this document set out at pages 76 and 77 purporting to be "Statement of Mr. A. C. Dixon of Oregon" including the front page of this document and the second page down to and including the word "Committee" and just preceding the words "The American Eagle."

To which complainant objected upon the ground that it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and not a proper method of examination, and consists largely of hearsay statements and conclusions of fact and law.

Whereupon there being no objection, said portion of said document so offered was received in evidence and read into the record instead of the original in words and figures as follows:

"HEARINGS

HELD BEFORE THE COMMITTEE ON THE PUBLIC LANDS OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

MARCH 12 and 14, 1908

ON

S. RES. No. 48

INSTRUCTING THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL TO INSTITUTE CERTAIN SUITS, ETC.

WASHINGTON

GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE

"INSTRUCTING THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL TO INSTITUTE CERTAIN SUITS.

COMMITTEE ON THE PUBLIC LANDS,
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., Thursday, March 12, 1908.

The committee met at 10 o'clock a. m.

Present: Representatives Mondell (chairman), Volstead, Smith of California, Gronna, Howland, Reynolds, Hall, Hamilton, Ferris, Craig and Hammond.

Present also: Hon. William F. Englebright, Representative from California; B. D. Townsend, Esq.; Aldis B. Browne, Esq.; L. E. Payson, Esq.; J. B. Thompson, Esq.; W. S. Humphreys, Esq.; John W. Blodgett, Esq., and others.

The committee thereupon proceeded to the consideration of Senate Resolution No. 48, heretofore considered by a sub-committee.

The Chairman. The meeting this morning was called for the consideration of Senate Resolution No. 48. This resolution was referred to a subcommittee by the chairman for the consideration of certain legal questions; but since the appointment of that subcommittee other questions as to the equities of certain purchasers of the land in question have arisen which had not been presented at that time, involving questions of public policy. In view of that fact, without discharging or relieving the subcommittee, it was deemed best to have a hearing this morning before the full committee; and while we have not a quorum at this time, if there is no objection we will proceed to hear the gentlemen who are here for the purpose of presenting facts with regard to the resolution to the committee."

"STATEMENT OF MR. A. C. DIXON, OF OREGON.

Mr. Chairman, as one interested in the effect of Senate Resolution No. 48 I wish to address you briefly as to some phases of the question not fully presented at any of the hearings before your committee up to the present time.

In order to explain my position clearly and to indicate from what sources and in what manner I have gathered the information I wish to place in your hands, I will say that I went to Oregon when 15 years of age, and have lived there over seventeen years, and for fifteen years of that time have been engaged actively in the lumber business. A good portion of the few thousands of dollars I have been able to accumulate is invested in the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, with which company I have been connected for nine years, purchasing a small interest therein long before the time Messrs. Blodgett, Hill, and other Michigan men came into our company. For several years past I have interested myself in transportation matters in the State of Oregon and have been very actively engaged in securing a railroad commission law in that State and in conducting several suits against the Harriman system before our State Commission and the Interstate Commerce Commission on account of what we claim are unjust and illegal rates on lumber maintained by these lines. By reason of my position as chairman of the committees in charge of these rate cases I have come in close contact with the timber owners and mill men who are now deeply concerned by the measure your committee is deliberating on.

There are over 250 sawmills located along the line of the Oregon and California Railroad within the limits of the grant lands. These mills produce 600,000,000 feet of lumber per year, employing at least 8,000 men, with a yearly pay roll in excess of $4,800,000. The development of this industry, which may be considered a vast one when the sparsely settled condition of Oregon is understood, would never have assumed any proportion up to this time if the mill owners had not been able to buy grant lands and had not felt that they could purchase them from time to time as they needed the timber, for the following reasons:

These grant lands comprise practically every alternate section in the region the mills are located in; and if these lands are eliminated from the timber accessible to any mill, then between each 640 acres belonging to the operator there will be one mile in each direction of territory from which no timber can be taken and across which his logging roads can not be built or, assuring that they can be, from which he could secure no tonnage.

A glance at any township map will convince the most skeptical that no one could begin to operate under these circumstances. It therefore follows that the manufacturer must control or have access to timber in bodies more or less solid and united in character.

It was at a meeting of shippers, mostly lumbermen, that the question of disposal of lands still in the hands of the original grantees was first brought out in a public way, and the lumber interests were behind and favored every resolution on this subject adopted in the state and are still in hearty accord with the original purpose of the movement, it being necessary for the perpetuation of their business, for the reasons stated above. It has never been contemplated that lands already sold and upon which development has been in progress for years should be taken from the present holders and again placed on the market. To do this would arrest development of the State and give its chief industry a blow from which it would perhaps never fully recover. To even attack the titles of the present holders would be almost as serious a matter, as during the time suit was being conducted none of the lands, either in odd or even numbered sections, could be logged.

As to development, within the time of my connection with my company we purchased 17,000 acres of grant lands in a body, the nearest point of which was 17 miles from a railroad. We furnished the ties and right of way, and the Southern Pacific Company built a road 17 miles in length, connecting the timber with a shipping point. I aided in construction of our Wendling mill at a place where there were less than a half dozen families within a radius of 5 miles, and the men of these families had to leave home a portion of each year to make a living for those dependent upon them. Now there is a town of 600 to 800 people at this point, with employment for 300 men, and along this 17-mile road are 10 sawmills where there were formerly none, and the little valley is alive with the hum of industry and has developed beyond the dreams of those who were familiar with it ten years ago. Every acre of farming land in this valley has necessarily appreciated in value as these mills were built, and employment was furnished by them to large numbers of men.

I submit to you that, leaving aside all technical questions as to conditions subsequent, covenants, violation of contract, constructive notice, etc., we did, after using all possible business caution and as between men of honorable intention and fair dealing, innocently buy these lands in good faith, for value, and are the bona fide holders of same, and are the true settlers and developers of the State of Oregon, and our title to these lands should be quieted now, in the interests of the industries of Oregon and its further development and in the interests of fair play, justice to all, and in consideration of public policy in its broadest sense.

I have in the past and want to continue to interest myself in the development and welfare of the State, and can not bring myself to believe that the property and possession of myself and of friends who are similarly situated are to be placed in jeopardy in order that the Government, with all the agencies at its control, and the people thereof should secure their rights from an offending corporation in a suit which we and other public-spirited citizens of our State have proposed and furthered continuously since it was first brought to public notice and the primary intent of which we are still in hearty accord with.

I hope that the resolution before you will be so reported that the lands still in the hands of the railroad company will be opened to settlement and development and that those already in process of development and in the hands of innocent purchasers will be in no way disturbed."

Whereupon witness further testified that at the time he made this statement he was acting directly for the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company and the statement was submitted to some of the principal stockholders of the Company and some other owners, or representatives of owners of these lands which had been purchased. The circumstances were, that the statement was submitted in lieu of an oral statement and for the purpose of presenting their ideas to the Committee. The statement "there are over 250 sawmills located along the line of the Oregon and California Railroad within the limits of the grant lands," is a correct statement. The information was compiled by the Secretary of the Oregon & Washington Lumber Manufacturers' Association and by Mr. George Cornwall, editor of The Timberman, at the request of the witness, as chairman of the Transportation Committee of that Association. He is not sure, but thinks that Edmund P. Sheldon was secretary of the Oregon & Washington Lumber Manufacturers' Association at that time, but they had had several secretaries and he is not certain as to who was secretary at that time. He thinks that the statement "These mills produce 600,000,000 feet of lumber per year, employing at least 8,000 men, with a yearly pay roll in excess of $4,800,000," was fairly accurate and correct at that time. The information was prepared by these same men, as the result of replies to inquiries that had been sent to the mills through the Association where they were asked to report the capacity and cut of their mills and some of which was furnished by himself in regard to their own mills, based upon the best statistical information that he could verify by himself. Those figures were at that time approximately correct. Many of these mills were operating on lands acquired from the Railroad Company, the larger ones on lands acquired from the Railroad Company and the even sections. The smaller ones, some of them were very small, and only operated on one section during their entire existence, sometimes on the even and sometimes on the odd section. The fact stated in the statement that "The development of this industry, which may be considered a vast one when the sparsely settled condition of Oregon is understood, would never have assumed any proportion up to this time if the mill owners had not been able to buy grant lands and had not felt that they could purchase them from time to time as they needed the timber," is in his opinion just as stated, and the reason for it is that mills could not attain any size or do any considerable amount of business, if they confined their operations to the even numbered sections, because of the physical impracticability and almost impossibility of logging on alternate sections and leaving the intermediate sections standing. From an operating standpoint in the lumber business, it is economically best to have the holdings of the land in continuous solid bodies rather than to be interrupted by holdings between different tracts that might be owned by the operating company. These granted lands are these involved in this suit against the purchasers, those that they were operating on, and referring to the statement "If the mill owners had not been able to buy grant lands and had not felt that they could purchase them from time to time as they needed the timber," witness says, that they could not have started on any considerable scale if they had not already purchased, or been able to purchase immediately, lands from the Oregon and California Railroad Company. They could not continue their operations only as they could purchase them later on, purchase more of them, and he thinks it is true that these unsold lands involved in this suit still owned by the Oregon and California Railroad Company would become a commercial necessity to the continued and further operation of these mills already located on the even sections or on granted lands already purchased. His statement would only apply to the timber lands because they would have no use for any others. The statement that "It was at a meeting of shippers, mostly lumbermen, that the question of disposal of the lands still in the hands of the original grantees was first brought out in a public way, and the lumber interests were behind and favored every resolution on this subject adopted in the State and are still in hearty accord with the original purpose of the movement, it being necessary for the perpetuation of their business, for the reasons stated above," is both accurate and truthful so far as he knows. He speaks from his own personal knowledge, except as to any negative questions involved. He stated that that was the first meeting at which this was brought out in any public way and it was the first one of which he had any knowledge. That meeting was at Eugene. He thinks the statement "It has never been contemplated that lands already sold and upon which dvelopment has been in progress for years should be taken from the present holders and again placed on the market. To do this would arrest development of the State and give its chief industry a blow from which it would perhaps never fully recover," is correct. He made the statement that certain action had never been contemplated. He of course has no means of knowing what some people might have contemplated, but he never had heard of it, and it was not a matter of general knowledge and he thinks the statement is true now that that never was contemplated by people in general to disturb the owners and those in control of the property involved in these suits against the defendants. As to arresting the development of the industry he thinks that would go without saying. They could not operate without the timber lands. He is quite sure that it was the principal industry in the State at that time, in that section of the State at least. If they had been enjoined or prevented from cutting on these lands, practically all the large mills would have been compelled to close up. John W. Blodgett was one of the principal stockholders, not an officer, of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company.

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

Q. I notice in this statement of Mr. Blodgett, at page 100 of this document :

"The Chairman, Mr. Blodgett, while the question of the value of these lands would certainly not control in any action that the committee may take, still the question of value has been raised here a number of times, and just as a matter of interesting information, I think the committee would like to know as to the character of these lands generally; for instance, the character of the lands that your company own. Take your 70,000 acres and average them, and what do they run?

"Mr. Blodgett. Do you mean how many thousand feet per acre?

"The Chairman. Yes.

"Mr. Blodgett. Our lands were selected lands, of course, selected for the timber, and they represent, of course, a higher average than the average of the grant in that territory. I should say they ran perhaps 40,000 feet per acre.

"The Chairman. The entire 70,000 acres?

"Mr. Blodgett. Our lands, possibly 40,000 per acre; that is, they did average that originally. Of course we have cut a great many thousand acres."

What is your information on that subject, and how does it correspond with the statement of Mr. Blodgett?

Mr. Townsend: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and particularly upon the ground that it incorporates into the record the unsworn statement of Mr. Blodgett, and is therefore hearsay.

Q. You may answer.

A. I should say that his statement as to the stumpage per acre is probably slightly under the actual figures as demonstrated by the land we have cut off since that time. I have not made an accurate average. I should say perhaps it was 10 per cent too low.

Q. I notice in this same statement of Mr. Blodgett this:

"The Chairman. What is a fair estimate of the value of stumpage in that country in advance of the improvements you have put on to make them accessible?

"Mr. Blodgett. Well, in the boom time, existing about a year ago, I should say perhaps 75 to 80 or 90 cents per thousand feet, in large, compact bodies, large enough for an operation. That would not be true of an isolated tract of 160 acres, because 160 acres in that mountainous land of itself is of no value except speculative value."

What is your knowledge and judgment as to the accuracy of that statement and as to your own views on the subject?

A. I am not so very familiar with stumpage values at that time. I didn't at that time know any price as high as that being paid. And as far as it being an average of any prices we had ever paid or been paid in that section of the country, I think it was considerably above the average.

Q. How is the price now of stumpage on lands such as the Booth-Kelly Company owns, or lands similarly situated?

A. That is a very difficult question to answer intelligently. I have been buying lands for the company for three years approximately. Have bought several thousand acres. The highest price that I have paid has been twenty-two dollars an acre, twenty-two dollars and some cents. I have not bought any large quantities at one time, however, probably 1100 or 1200 acres in one purchase is as much as I have bought.

Q. Do you know what the United States asks for its stumpage in the forest reserve in Oregon?

A. Not except through newspaper report and hearsay.

Q. I notice in this statement of Mr. Blodgett, page 101, this question :

"The Chairman. You are fairly familiar with that grant yourself, personally?

"Mr. Blodgett. Yes; I have traveled over quite a portion of it myself.

"The Chairman. It does not average in timber anything like as good as the lands you bought?

"Mr. Blodgett. No, sir. As soon as you get out of the Willamette Valley you run out of the fir country and run into the white pine or yellow or sugar pine. The land of the gentleman Mr. McKee represents is in the white and sugar pine. I have also inspected that land.

"The Chairman. That is good timber land?

"Mr. Blodgett. Yes, sir; excellent timber land. That was also selected timber land."

Now, what do you say as to the correctness of those statements of Mr. Blodgett, from your own knowledge?

Mr. Townsend: Objected to upon the same grounds urged before to questions incorporating portions of the statement of Mr. Blodgett, and on the further ground that the statement of Mr. Blodgett is not before the court and cannot be made the subject of contradictory or impeaching testimony, and this is not a proper method of eliciting testimony from the present witness.

A. I have seen part of the land owned by Mr. McKee's client. I have seen quite a good deal of the grant —not all of it by any means. I think his statement is correct. That is, that we have selected lands, and the other large timber companies have selected the best of the lands.

Q. I notice Mr. Blodgett, further interrogated by the Chairman, says:

"The Chairman. That is good timber land?

"Mr. Blodgett. Yes, sir; excellent timber land. That was also selected timber land.

"The Chairman. As heavy as yours?

"Mr. Blodgett. No, sir; because, as I say, sugar pine does not grow as heavy.

"The Chairman. Is it of higher or about as high stumpage value?

"Mr. Blodgett. It is of a little bit higher stumpage value, all things considered.

"The Chairman. Possibly a dollar?

"Mr. Blodgett. Yes, sir.

"The Chairman. It possibly would run as high as 35,000 to 40,000 feet?

"Mr. Blodgett. No, sir; white and sugar pine, an excellent yield of that is 20,000 feet."

Now, what do you say, from your own knowledge, as to the accuracy and correctness of that statement of Mr. Blodgett's?

A. I know nothing about the pine values in that particular section at that time. The statement as to stumpage to the acre, 20,000 feet being an excellent yield in pine, is correct.

Whereupon witness further testified that he thinks he knows, in a general way, the present market value of stumpage of white and sugar pine. It is another very difficult question to answer. It is from $1.00 a thousand to $2.50, and depends very largely upon accessibility to transportation and availability for immediate use. Arthur Hill, who appeared before this committee and made a statement was, probably at that time, the largest stockholder in the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company. He then lived at Saginaw, Mich., but is now dead. Probably with one or two others, Blodgett and the estate of Arthur Hill control a majority of the stock of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, although he is not sure. They are very large holders of stock. No policy as to the best use of logged-off lands of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company, has been settled upon. It has been actively discussed several times and he thinks covered by what the witness Booth said, discussing the policy of reforesting, the disposal to settlers, and the possibility of grazing and pasturing lands. He has no means of knowing what would become of the titles to these timber lands if the Company had sold them to actual settlers in quantities not exceeding 160 acres at a price not exceeding $2.50 per acre and had made these sales, say, in 1906. The titles that had been given to individuals before that time largely went into the hands of the lumber companies and timbermen. He has no personal knowledge of the lands that the so-called actual settlers have applied for excepting from newspaper reports and court records.

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

Q. Well, what would be, in your judgment, the value of the best quarter section of the unsold land of the Oregon and California Railroad Company? What would it be sold for at private sale without being forced, for the purposes of the timber holdings or the timber that is on the same, within your knowledge?

A. The best possible price that could be secured would be from some one who was operating close to that section, right up against it—could use the timber quickly—you said quarter section, or section?

Q. Yes, 160 acres of the best timber land that is left.

A. I should say from eight to ten thousand dollars.

Q. I have had submitted to me, as representing a small mill company known as the Nehalem River Lumber Company, at Timber, Oregon, the purchase of the timber on a quarter section of land near Timber, in Tillamook County, the present owner of the timber or quarter section submitting a price of practically $40,000 for the timber on that quarter section, reserving the title to the land for reforesting, or for logged off purposes, or for any useful purpose, if there is any, and merely proposing to sell the timber, this timber being situated close to a sawmill situated on the Pacific Railway and Navigation Company's line west of Hillsboro. Do you or do you not regard that as an extravagant price for timber on a quarter section of the best fir land in this country, situated on a railroad close to a mill?

Mr. Townsend: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

A. It would be for any quarter section of O. & C. lands in the Willamette Valley that I know anything about. The timber in the Nehalem country is, I understand, somewhat different from what it is here.

Whereupon witness further testified that he has no present knowledge of any quarter section in the Siuslaw country or elsewhere in Lane County being sold for more than the price he paid for the quarter section mentioned, $3500.00 for 160 acres. He knows of one quarter section that the purchaser told him he paid $5000 for, and he thinks that he did. He knows of the purchase made by the Wendling Johnson Lumber Company. The lands were west of the Coast Range, practically all in Lane County, although there may have been a very little of it in Douglas County, but he thinks not. The men who did the buying told him approximately the amount of money expended, which was between a million and a quarter and a million and a half dollars, but the amount of acreage he never heard. The purchase was made from a great many different individuals and ran along for several months as different titles came in. Booth-Kelly Lumber Company had about 2200 acres there that they sold and he thinks that sale was consummated in January, 1912. The Booth-Kelly Lumber Company got for these 2200 acres $54,000, about $24.00 an acre. The Booth-Kelly Lumber Company had a cruise on these lands and the sale price was made on the basis of approximately $1.00 per thousand feet. These lands were situated near the Siuslaw River, scattered some on the east side and some on the west side of the Coast Range, about 30 to 36 miles west of Eugene. These lands were in Lane County, just outside the limits of this grant, he thinks. The deed was passed in January or February, 1912. He was present at a number of hearings before the Committee on Public Lands of the House of Representatives on the hearing of H. R. 22002, concerning the Oregon and California land grant, and made a verbal statement to the Committee. He was acting for the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company and almost all of the other defendants in what are known as the "Forty-five Innocent Purchaser Suits." When he made that statement he was not acting for all of them, but most of them, and he made the statement found at pages 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65 and 66 of a document published by the Government Printing Office at Washington, 1912, entitled "Oregon and California Land Grant Hearings Before the Committee on the Public Lands, House of Representatives on H. R. 22002, Concerning the Oregon and California Land Grant April 2, and May 2, 6, 8 and 25, 1912," and reading from that statement, pages 55 to 66, both inclusive, the witness said that is the statement he made.

Q. Now, I call your attention particularly to this part of your statement:

"Now, as to our views relative to our situation and to the compromise, we feel that the Government can afford to be very considerate of us for a number of reasons. First, going back to the purpose of Congress in granting these lands, it was primarily that the road be built, and, secondarily, that the country be developed as a result of this grant of land. We take the position that we have aided in the development of that section of the country to the fullest extent, and that in no other way could the lands have been used for development except in the way we have used them.

"The reason for that is this: The land is heavily timbered, much of it on steep hillsides, and in most instances the soil is rocky and not susceptible of cultivation. Now, no actual settler could have taken 160 acres of these lands, nor 1600 acres, nor any other number of acres, and made a living for himself and family. It would have been practically impossible, and is today, with the better means of transportation and other facilities that they have now."

What is the fact as to the accuracy of that statement, and is that based upon your personal knowledge?

Mr. Townsend: That is objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, hearsay, and an attempt to incorporate into the record mere conclusions of fact and law and not evidentiary matters.

A. The statement is correct, as I thought at that time, and believe now.

Q. I call your attention to a statement on page 58 of this document, which reads:

"We think that there is no question about the original purpose of the Government having been literally carried out in a much better way than it could have been under actual settlement. In this regard, Secretary Fisher, in talking to me the other day, said that if the lands were of the character I said they were the Government made a tremendous mistake in 1866 in granting to the railroad company lands of a character not susceptible to settlement and then asking the railroad to sell them only to actual settlers. Now, they did do that, and you must know without seeing photographs of the timber that these lands are timberlands or we would not have them, because we are in the timber business only. Now, if the Government did make this mistake 40 years ago we ask you here that we be relieved from the ill effects of it."

What have you to say with reference to the truth of that statement?

A. The statement that I had this conversation with Mr. Fisher, that he stated what I said there and my reply is correct, and the rest of it was my opinion at that time and is now.

Whereupon complainant objected to this testimony as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and hearsay and an attempt to incorporate into the records mere conclusions of fact and law and not evidentiary matter, but a mere argument made by witness on behalf of one of the parties against whom the United States had instituted its suit, as a reason for urging Congress to authorize this compromise, and complainant particularly objects, to the method of examination, in reading to the witness, hearsay statements, and incorporating them, in this record, as evidence of the statements themselves.

Whereupon witness testified that the statement:

"We have done the larger part of the work necessary to make that land valuable for cultivation, and nobody wants to buy these lands now as homesteads at any price. Eighty-five or ninety per cent of them are useful only for reforestation, and we have not started to reforest them because we do not know to whom they belong. We have spent the necessary money to clear them of timber, and if the intention was that actual settlers should make homes on these lands, how much less useful for this purpose would they be if the timber was still standing?" and which contains the words "nobody wants to buy these lands now as homesteads at any price," he thought was not sufficiently full as to the use to which these lands could be put. He stated that they could be used only for reforestation, at least 80 or 85 per cent. He should have said reforestation or pasture because he knows that they are used for that. It was an oversight that he did not say so. To which testimony of the witness complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and upon the further ground that the lands were involved in litigation in which injunction was asked against the incumbrance of the title.

Whereupon witness further testified that it is a fact that no one wanted to buy these lands as homesteads at any price. There have been some applications to buy small pieces, a few acres of bottom or arable land, as there are scattered around through them, but no application to buy for the purpose of buying 160 acres, or anything of that sort to make a living on.

Whereupon the attention of witness was called to page 60 of the statement, which reads:

"The Chairman. You have stated that the lands you have are not fit for actual settlement. Is the general character of these lands the same?

"Mr. Dixon. Well, as I stated, the fact that we purchased the lands for lumbering purposes is pretty good evidence that the land is not fit for actual settlers. As to the railroad grant itself, I have been over it pretty well a number of times and out into the timber, and I think the actual percentage—anything that I might say would be a guess, but 20 per cent would be a pretty close guess—I think there might be 20 per cent of these lands that can be cultivated."

and testified that what he stated there was a guess and he could not do any better now. His impression is that his statement is correct.

Whereupon the attention of witness was called to a portion of his statement in that document as follows:

"The Chairman. What is the general description of the lands which your client holds?

"Mr. Dixon. They are all timbered lands, all covered with fir timber. They are rather hilly, usually along a little canyon with a creek running down the center. We have five timbered bodies, each one along a creek or river. We like to have them that way on account of the facilities for operation. The timber is cut and hauled down to the creek; then we build dams and float it out to the river or railroad it out."

and witness testified that that statement is correct, except perhaps in using the word "all." The lands are all timbered lands technically, that is incorrect because there are a few acres now and then that are not in timber, but the statement is to all intents and purposes correct. Those acres that might be capable of cultivation are widely separated from the rest, in spots here and there throughout the grant.

Whereupon there was read to the witness from said statement the following:

"The Chairman. What area of lands that have been cut off have been sold approximately?

"Mr. Dixon. Practically none."

Is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. "The Chairman. What area of them, if any, has been cultivated.

"Mr. Dixon. Practically none. They are not susceptible of cultivation. Our idea has been to reforest them, and we have left the small timber standing for that purpose."

What do you say as to the accuracy of that statement?

and the witness answered that that is correct. He would say that the idea of reforestation and pasturage is not paradoxical or incompatible. They go together and the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company has pasture land but thought perhaps later it might be reforestered.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence the entire statement of the witness, together with the opening introduction of the Committee on Public Lands, House of Representatives, etc., pages 55 to 66 both inclusive and asked to have same read into the record.

Whereupon counsel for complainant objected to the document upon the same grounds hereinbefore set out but waived objection as to reading the same in to the record, which portion of said document reads as follows:

"COMMITTEE ON THE PUBLIC LANDS,

"HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

"Wednesday, May 8, 1912.

"The committee met at 10:30 o'clock a. m., Hon. Joseph T. Robinson (chairman) presiding.

"There were present before the committee Hon. A. W. Lafferty, a Representative in Congress from the second district of Oregon, and Mr. A. C. Dixon.

"The Chairman. Gentlemen of the committee, the hearing today is on H. R. 22002, by Mr. Lafferty. Mr. Dixon desires to be heard, and we will now hear him.

"STATEMENT OF MR. A. C. DIXON.

"Mr. Dixon. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I am representing primarily the Booth-Kelly Lumber Co., the largest purchaser from the O. & C. Railroad Co. of the grant lands under discussion. I am also authorized to speak in this connection for practically all of the 45 large purchasers who are parties in these suits. I feel that after what Mr. Townsend has said I can add very little of interest, and my chief purpose in taking your time now is to touch upon a few points which I think bear especially on the rights of these purchasers, and also to be subject to any questions you may want to ask concerning some of the points brought up the other day, and upon which I may be able to enlighten you.

"Now as to our views relative to our situation and to the compromise, we feel that the Government can afford to be very considerate of us for a number of reasons. First, going back to the purpose of Congress in granting these lands, it was primarily that the road be built, and, secondarily, that the country be developed as a result of this grant of land. We take the position that we have aided in the development of that section of the country to the fullest extent, and that in no other way could the lands have been used for development except in the way we have used them.

"The reason for that is this: The land is heavily timbered, much of it on steep hillsides, and in most instances the soil is rocky and not susceptible of cultivation. Now, no actual settler could have taken 160 acres of these lands, nor 1,600 acres, nor any other number of acres, and made a living for himself and family. It would have been practically impossible, and is today, with the better means of transportation and other facilities that they have now. We have taken these lands and solidified them by buying the even-numbered sections and have built mills, made large investments, built towns, and furnished employment to hundreds and thousands of people. Now, just to spend a moment on that point. In our own instance the largest town that we have, the town of Wendling, is devoted entirely to milling. There are about 800 people there, with 300 men working in the mills and timber. They have an electric-light system, water system, and all the conveniences that a little town of that kind might have. The wages we pay are good—excellent, I should say—from the point of view of people here. Twelve dollars a week is the minimum for mill-men and $17.50 is the average for employees in the woods. The more provident among these men mostly have their own homes or own farms elsewhere that they cultivate during a part of the year, and in every case they are better situated than the average or than almost any of the homesteaders in that section. I mention this town first, but there are dozens more there in a similar situation. In addition to these, there are a number of logging camps and mills where there are many men employed and where there are no towns, and these people naturally gravitate to the larger towns, such as Eugene, where I live. This is a town of 10,000 people now, and 10 years ago there were only 3,500 people there. The pay roll of the mills nearby is about $2,000,000 a year, and the development of the milling industry is almost the sole reason for the growth of the town.

"Mr. Townsend mentioned the other day the good faith with which these lands were purchased, and in this connection I wish to speak simply of our own case. We started out 16 years ago, without any capital of consequence, and upon the suggestion of Mr. Collis P. Huntington, of the Southern Pacific Co., we leased a small sawmill in the Willamette Valley with the idea of trying to find out if fir lumber, the only timber growing on these lands, could be shipped outside of the State at a profit. Up to that time there had been no market for, and no attempt to ship, fir lumber out of the State of Oregon. Mr. Huntington made us some special rates and we leased a mill for a year and started to develop the fir-lumber market. At the end of a year Mr. Huntington stated to us that the rates were fairly satisfactory to him, and he would continue them in force. We found that we had made a fair profit, and accordingly we bought the mill which we had under lease. When we bought the mill we had to buy something to run it on, and so we bought timber near at hand, half of it from the railroad and the other half from settlers or whoever happened to have it. That was the beginning of our business. A year or two later the business still continued to show a profit and we purchased another mill and also another body of timber, and for a period of eight or ten years we bought these different bodies of timber at the going prices at which anyone could have purchased them if they had cared to. Now I do not think I need to dwell long on this point, because Mr. Townsend has said that in all of his investigations he has found no evidences of any fraud, and I know the circumstances in all of these cases, and it is hardly possible to think that there could have been anything of that kind. The lands were open for purchase and sale, and you or I or anybody else could have bought all of them if we had had the money to do so.

"Now in buying these lands we followed the business-like custom that we still follow, and I think that all of you would in like circumstances follow. We submitted each abstract to our attorneys, and in no single instance that I know of did they question the Oregon and California Railroad's deeds or raise any question whatever as to their title. As Mr. Townsend has told you, there was no question in the minds of anyone as to the validity of these titles, and, using his expression, the titles were current in Oregon for years and years, and not only in Oregon but with the United States Government, because our company in several instances, and other companies, traded property with the Government, traded these lands back to them for other lands. We do not claim that we have a right to consider because the Government took the lands that the titles were good, but they made no question about it. I am simply telling you this to show you that they were just as ready to take them as anyone else.

"Now as to the suits themselves. There are 45 of these, covering approximately 400,000 acres of land. The other 400,000 acres which have been sold are in the hands of four or five thousand people. We do not want these small holders sued. Certainly not. But we are unable to see the difference between the titles that we have and the titles that they have. In other words, we do not see why 400,000 acres in the hands of 45 individuals and corporations, probably two or three hundred people altogether, stands in any different relation to the Government as to ownership than the 400,000 acres in the hands of four or five thousand people.

"Now, in the case of the Drew Timber Co., one of these parties: They bought 5,320 acres, and they have 11 bona fide stockholders, less than 500 acres to each stockholder. I fail to see the justice in attempting to take these lands away from these people when, if the 11 people had only known the circumstances, they could have gone out and bought 999 acres apiece and their titles would not have been questioned. Our company owns 74,000 acres, and there are approximately 45 of us—some of the stockholders are estates—and there are more people interested in our company than there are thousands of acres involved. Now, the question was asked the other day as to the remedy we have against the railroad company. Our attorneys, and all the attorneys that have given the matter any attention, so far as I know, have said that we could not recover. Now, whether the railroad company knew this limitation or not I am not prepared to say, but they did not give us warranty deeds, and even if we could get back from them several years hence the amount that we paid for these lands we might about as well lose the whole thing. What we could recover would amount to but very little, as compared to the actual loss sustained, and I will illustrate one particular case. The last purchase made by us was 19,000 acres bought at $17.50 per acre. We bought the land from people who had bought it from the railroad company for $10 an acre, on time, with eight payments still to be made, and we assumed the contract and have made seven of the other eight annual payments still to be made. Now, when we got that 19,000 acres we planned another large milling enterprise. We bought this in 1905, and we immediately went to work and bought 19,000 to 20,000 acres intermingled with this 19,000 acres. The only way that land can be operated successfully for lumbering purposes is to have it all in a solid body. You can't have a checkerboard tract, and you can't build a railroad and cut logs on other people's land. Now, it does not need any explanation to show you where we would be if we only got our money back. In the first place we can not get more than $10 an acre, and in the second place we can not get that until our title is proven perfect, and that will evidently be some time hence, and, as stated, our attorneys advise we could not recover then.

"Now, as to our operations. In our particular case one of our mills burned down during the pendency of this suit. Our largest mill burned in July last year, throwing out of employment perhaps 275 or 300 men. We still have the mill site, and we are anxious to rebuild; we are almost tempted to rebuild anyway, but we do not feel that it is a safe business proposition to put that money into a mill when we do not know for sure that we are going to have anything to operate the mill on, if the Government is successful in this suit and takes the land. Two other concerns have lost their mills by fire and are in the same situation. In addition to that, if we rebuild now and go on with developments we will have to borrow money, and we can't bond our lands or raise money on our property on account of this suit.

"Four years ago I happened to be in Washington on other business when this resolution came up, and seeing, as I thought, that it was dangerous to us, I sent for some of our people, and you are fairly familiar with the efforts that were made to have our titles quieted at that time. At that time the Attorney General and Mr. Townsend, and as far as I know the majority of the Public Lands Committee, were in favor of and were anxious to have our titles quieted. It seems to me now, and I am sure I thought then, that there should be no trouble at all to get title to these lands and get entirely out of the difficulty if it were not for the one legal point that was made, which was that to quiet our titles then would have injured the Government's case against the railroad. The files of the committee and the files of the department will show the investigations that were instituted at that time. They went into the matter very fully, and there were several volumes of testimony published. It seems to me that it goes without question that unless circumstances are different Congress should be of the same opinion yet, and now that the way is open grant us the relief that we are asking.

"As to the compromise itself, we think there is no question about our good faith in the purchase of these lands. We think that there is no question about the original purpose of the Government having been literally carried out in a much better way than it could have been under actual settlement. In this regard Secretary Fisher, in talking to me the other day, said that if the lands were of the character I said they were the Government made a tremendous mistake in 1866 in granting to the railroad company lands of a character not susceptible to settlement and then asking the railroad to sell them only to actual settlers. Now, they did do that, and you must know without seeing photographs of the timber that these lands are timber-lands or we would not have them, because we are in the timber business only. Now, if the Government did make this mistake 40 years ago we ask you here that we be relieved from the ill effects of it. We do not want to pay the penalty for the mistakes of the Government. We have cut over about 15,000 acres of land. We have done the larger part of the work necessary to make that land valuable for cultivation, and nobody wants to buy these lands now as homesteads at any price. Eighty-five or ninety per cent of them are useful only for reforestation, and we have not started to reforest them because we do not know to whom they belong. We have spent the necessary money to clear them of timber, and if the intention was that actual settlers should make homes on these lands, how much less useful for this purpose would they be if the timber was still standing?

"Now, for the reasons I have stated, we do not feel that we ought to have to pay anything to get these titles in good shape, but we have been sued for something over three years and have not yet had a chance to appear in court. We foresee that it will be at least five years longer before the suit can be determined. In the meantime, on the very lands in question we are paying something more than $20,000 a year in taxes, and we are paying several thousand dollars a year for fire protection. We have a force of organized rangers for that purpose, and we are also paying interest on our bonded indebtedness on these lands. Now, notwithstanding the fact that we do not feel that we ought to pay anything, and that Mr. Wickersham and Mr. Townsend, down in the bottom of their hearts, feel that we ought not to, except as a legal proposition—notwithstanding these things, we have made a proposition to pay the sum mentioned in the bill as a matter of expediency, so that we may know now where we are at. We had better lose these lands now than to go along for a number of years and let them lie idle and finally get them, because the damages to us in the meantime would be irreparable financially and so far as the ages of some of us are concerned. We can not get our youth back, or our efforts. Three or four of the largest holders of lands have died since this legislation was passed four years ago. We are trying to bring about a settlement which will leave the rest of us alive when the title is finally determined.

"Our course if this bill is not passed will not be one of our own choosing, but will be literally forced upon us. In that case we will be compelled to intervene in the railroad suits and add our equities to whatever equities the railroad people may have, and make the hardest kind of a fight we can to get our lands and also to help the railroad company out of their difficulties. Now, Mr. Townsend gave you a partial history of this resolution. There was never any trouble in Oregon, never a word said or any complaint about the lands that were sold. The whole difficulty arose when Mr. Harriman withdrew the lands from the market. The people and the commercial clubs and various organizations in Oregon started the agitation and sent a memorial to the legislature asking that the lands be sold and opened to settlement. During all this time, the four years since this resolution was introduced in Congres, we have carefully refrained from allying ourselves with anybody, because from the statements of the Department of Justice, the President, and every one else we felt the time would come when our skirts could be cleared without injuring the railroad suit, and the Government would see the justice of our case and our titles would be quieted. We are urging that upon you today. I am not like Mr. Townsend. He would like to see section 6 passed, but he will not urge it, but I do earnestly urge upon you that this compromise be arranged. I do not make this as a threat, but as a statement of fact. If relief is not afforded we will have to tie up with other litigants in a way that may result in defeating the primary purpose of the Government as to the recovery of the railroad lands. If the suit is won against these purchasers it will tear down industries in which millions of dollars are invested. Our company at the time this resolution was introduced had over a million dollars invested, in improvements; $275,000 in railroads and equipment, and something over $700,000 in sawmills. There are a number of others that have the same or larger investments. If this suit is won, their property will be worthless; the property in the mill towns will be worthless, the homes that these men own will be worthless, and there will be several thousand employees out of positions. That will be the condition if the Government takes this land and puts it into forest reserve or into the public domain.

"Now, I think, with what Mr. Townsend has said, I have about covered the situation, and I do not feel like imposing on you any longer.

"The Chairman. Mr. Dixon, you stated that those whom you represent, the parties in the 45 suits, do not wish to see the small purchasers sued, but as a matter of law their equities are absolutely the same as yours, which seems to be true. You have also said that unless this legislation or some similar legieslation is passed, those whom you represent will be compelled to intervene in the railroad suit and help to win that suit if possible for the railroads. What is the attitude of the purchasers whom you represent—what will be their attitude in the event that this legislation should be passed?

"Mr. Dixon. Well, Mr. Chairman, we are not interested at all in the other side, and our attitude would be one of neutrality.

"The Chairman. Actual neutrality or nominal neutrality?

"Mr. Dixon. So far as my company is concerned it would be actual. So far as I know I think it would be absolutely actual with all the defendants. I do not think any of the defendants are meddlers or anything of that sort.

"The Chairman. I did not mean that at all, but you can readily understand from the statement of Mr. Townsend and from your statement that this is a matter that widely affects the feeling and interest of the general public there, and you yourself have volunteered the statement that if the legislation is not passed you will help to win the suit for the railroads, and that you are in fact in sympathy with those who are in the suit. Now, I think the committee is entitled to know, without any feeling toward anyone, since you have volunteered that statement, what your attitude will be if the legislation is passed. We are entitled to know that, since you have volunteered the suggestion that in the event the legislation is not passed you will join in with the railroads to help them win this suit.

"Mr. Dixon. If the legislation is passed, our first move will be to ask for a stipulation and then pay for the lands gotten under the railroad deed. After that is done we will observe, so far as our company is concerned, absolute neutrality. Our desire has been to see these lands opened up. We are embarrassed by the railroad holding up 2,400,000 acres, and the whole State has been kept from its proper development thereby. And I may say to you further in this connection, I was in a number of meetings where the resolutions were brought out and sent to the legislature, where we were considering this whole proposition, and the only desire of every one present was that these lands be sold. None of these people had a clear idea as to the rights of forfeiture. Our idea simply was to force the railroad company to sell these lands. We are in that attitude today. We want them sold.

"The Chairman. You have stated that the lands you have are not fit for actual settlement. Is the general character of these lands the same?

"Mr. Dixon. Well, as I stated, the fact that we purchased the lands for lumbering purposes is pretty good evidence that that land is not fit for actual settlers. As to the railroad grant itself, I have been over it pretty well a number of times and out into the timber, and I think the actual percentage—anything that I might say would be a guess, but 20 per cent would be a pretty close guess—I think there might be 20 per cent of these lands that can be cultivated. This whole subject was crystallized on account of the refusal of the railroad company to sell some agricultural lands in Josephine County to a vineyardist. He had a vineyard down there, and I think it was 80 acres alongside of his vineyard, belonging to the railroad company, that he wanted to buy. They refused to set a price on it, and that is where the whole trouble started.

"The Chairman. What is the general description of the lands which your client holds?

"Mr. Dixon. They are all timbered lands; all covered with fir timber. They are rather hilly, usually along a little canyon with a creek running down the center. We have five timbered bodies, each one along a creek or river. We like to have them that way on account of the facilities for operation. The timber is cut and hauled down to the creek; then we build dams and float it out to the river or railroad it out.

"The Chairman. You heard Mr. Townsend's statement as to the value of the railroad lands, did you not?

"Mr. Dixon. Yes.

"The Chairman. What do you say as to the value of those lands?

"Mr. Dixon. He said he was certain that they were worth $25 an acre, and that some of them were worth as high as $30 an acre. I have been buying those even-numbered sections for our company for some time back, and the highest price that I have ever paid is $22 an acre, and that was within the last three years. It is only within three years that I have purchased any for the company. I have purchased several thousand acres in that time.

"The Chairman. Are those lands rising in value?

"Mr. Dixon. I think so, yes. There is no question about the increase in value. They have increased since we purchased them, although our own lands are not worth as much as we paid for them on account of the cloud on the title.

"The Chairman. What area of the lands purchased from the railroad company or their grantees by your people have been cut off? Do you know, approximately?

"Mr. Dixon. Well, in our case we have cut about 15,000 acres, and half of that is from the lands in question.

"The Chairman. Has there been any cutting recently done?

"Mr. Dixon. We have been cutting them steadily at a uniform rate since 1898.

"The Chairman. What area of lands that have been cut off have been sold, approximately?

"Mr. Dixon. Practically none.

"The Chairman. What area of them, if any, has been cultivated?

"Mr. Dixon. Practically none. They are not susceptible of cultivation. Our idea has been to reforest them, and we have left the small timber standing for that purpose.

"The Chairman. When was the first knowledge received in that country, actual knowledge, that there was any question as to a defect in these titles?

"Mr. Dixon. In 1906.

"The Chairman. And that was occasioned by a complaint made by some one who you say was a vineyardist to use the land for a vineyard and the railroad would not sell it to him?

"Mr. Dixon. The first I heard of it was in Josephine County, near Grants Pass, just outside of the city. There had been a great deal of irritation over the State, but it had never gotten any further than the murmuring of a general spirit of discontent. There was a good deal of cursing and damning the railroad company for not disposing of the lands, and about that time there was called a shippers' meeting to discuss freight rates and matters of that kind down at Medford, in Jackson County, just south of Josephine County. At that meeting a resolution was introduced to be presented to the legislature. These people came to discuss freight rates, but some of them brought this resolution in and introduced it, and it was passed. This was done in three or four towns over the State, and finally they got a Mr. Mullit, a banker from Ashland, to introduce the memorial in the legislature.

"The Chairman. Well, now, why would you and your clients want to intervene in this railroad suit?

"Mr. Dixon. For this reason. Our idea in wanting to compromise is to get out of litigation, and if we cannot do this the only way we can hurry matters, advance them, is to get in the railroad suit. The object of the Government's attorney is to keep us behind the railroad company, and not let us come to trial before the railroad company does, because they fear our equities will allow us to win out and thus aid the railroad company. Our only purpose would be to crowd ourselves up and be in the first trial as a matter of expediency and to hasten the final decision.

"The Chairman. You feel that you have superior equities to any that the railroads may assert? Wouldn't you be rather strengthening the railroad case than strengthening your own case by intervening?

"Mr. Dixon. I do not feel that we would be strengthening our case at all and I do not think that our attorneys feel that the court would do an injustice to us simply because we were allied with the railroad company. We would get our rights and the railroad company would get theirs, but Mr. Townsend seems to be afraid that intervention on our part might prejudice his case.

"The Chairman. In other words, the influence, the actual influence, which the clients whom you represent might reflect for the benefit of the railroad company? That was clearly the intimation that Mr. Townsend made, and I think the committee may very well consider that without reflecting on anybody.

"Mr. Dixon. We don't think it would be anything of the sort. The main idea in allying ourselves with the railroad company is to get into court at the same time they do. If we do not get this compromise, the first thing I will do when I get home will be to discharge our employees and close down our mills, because there is a great question in the minds of our attorneys as to whether or not we will be asked by the Government to pay double or treble damages for trespass on their property.

"The Chairman. You mean that they might demand an accounting for the lumber taken?

"Mr. Dixon. It just depends on the situation here in Washington, the Attorney General, the temper of Congress, or something of that kind. Our attorneys have advised us that they thought it was not a good business proposition and they recommended against continuing our operations.

"The Chairman. As a matter of law, you would probably be held accountable for the timber cut if you lost the land.

"Mr. Dixon. We do not want to take any risk, anyway.

"Mr. Raker. In speaking of intervention, is it not a fact that some of the owners claiming from 500 to 1500 acres, who received their lands from the railroad company as part of this grant, as well as the company which you represent and the 45 others, sought to intervene in the railroad suit, and the court held that they could not intervene?

"Mr. Dixon. No, I think not; Mr. Lafferty went over that quite clearly in his presentation. The intervention that occurred, as I understand it, was the intervention of people who had settled on these railroad lands, made actual settlements on 160 acres, with the supposition that if this suit was determined in favor of the Government they would be first on the ground and would get 160 acres at $2.50 an acre, and they intervened to establish their rights. If I understand correctly, their intervention was of no avail.

"Mr. Raker. No one up to date has sought to intervene who owns lands obtained from the railroad company.

"Mr. Dixon. Not so far as I know; and I think I am correct in that. The taking of evidence in the railroad suit is to close the 1st of July, and I presume the trial will come soon after that. If we are going to intervene we will have to do it very soon.

"Mr. Raker. Of course, the amount involved in this suit and its character is one that could be—you have stated you are not an attorney?

"Mr. Dixon. No, sir.

"Mr. Raker. You do not know anything about the proceedings?

"Mr. Dixon. Only in a general way.

"Mr. Raker. Very well, I will change that question. Do you intend to convey to the committee the idea that if your people would intervene in this suit, that with their influence they would be in a position to influence the decision of the court now trying the case?

"Mr. Dixon. I would not want to insult the court, Judge Raker, by inferring anything of that kind.

"Mr. Raker. I know; I am only taking the statement made.

"Mr. Dixon. The statement was that our superior equities, according to Mr. Townsend's statement, might work against the main suit. We have no influence with the court, so far as I know. I do not know the court in Oregon, and I do not think there is any member of the company that would think of such a thing.

"The Chairman. Mr. Townsend did clearly state that one of the reasons which influenced the Government and the Department of Justice in eliminating the purchasers of areas under 1,000 acres was to prevent having to encounter the influence which would manifestly and naturally be exerted by so great a clientage.

"Mr. Taylor of Colorado. By reason of their equities.

"The Chairman. Yes. I do not think that Mr. Dixon mentioned anything of the character that Mr.

Raker suggested.

"Mr. Dixon. I certainly did not intend anything of that sort.

"The Chairman. I drew the inference from the suggestions made by Mr. Townsend that the same thing might result by reason of the superior claims of the parties in these 45 suits.

"Mr. Raker. Now, Mr. Dixon, if you feel that your equities and the equities of the 44 other parties that have been sued are of such a character that by presenting them to the court in conjunction with the railroad company's case—do you state to the committee that you believe that by combining your equities you would have a sufficient standing in court to have the court decide in favor of the company and, of course, eventually your people and the other 45 by virtue of that superior equity combined?

"Mr. Dixon. I think I have stated to the committee that that was Mr. Townsend's idea that it might be the final result.

"Mr. Raker. Is that your opinion?

"Mr. Dixon. I have no opinion on that point.

"Mr. Raker. Have you discussed it with your associates and counsel and others interested in that matter?

"Mr. Dixon. No; the first suggestion that came to us was from the Department of Justice.

"Mr. Raker. What is that?

"Mr. Dixon. I say, Judge Raker, that the first suggestion of this particular point came to us from the Attorney General, as going to show one of the reasons why he was in favor of a compromise.

"The Chairman. Do you know how many corporations own the land that you appear for?

"Mr. Dixon. How many of the 45 are corporations?

"The Chairman. Yes.

"Mr. Dixon. Almost all of them.

"The Chairman. Do you know whether any of the stockholders in these corporations are also stockholders in the railroad company?

"Mr. Dixon. That is not my understanding, unless some of them may own a little Southern Pacific or Union Pacific stock, just as any individual might. I do not think there is any connection in any way.

"The Chairman. Is there any considerable number of the stockholders in the purchasing corporations who are also stockholders in the railroad company that sold to the corporations?

"Mr. Dixon. No.

"Mr. Taylor of Colorado. You don't think there is any reason why your company should meddle in the Government's litigation when you get out of it yourself and have your own title quieted?

"Mr. Dixon. On the contrary, there is every reason why we should not interfere at all. It would not be any of our business in any way. We certainly could not help either side if we were out of the case. We do not claim to have any influence with the courts in Oregon or any other place, and there is every reason why we should desire that the railroads should sell their lands.

"Mr. Taylor of Colorado. Your object in intervening is so that you can get a decision one way or the other during this lifetime, and close it up as soon as possible?

"Mr. Dixon. Yes.

"Mr. Taylor of Colorado. You desire to expedite the matter rather than to wait the ultimate determination of the Government's litigation and then litigate it afterwards yourself?

"Mr. Dixon. Yes. The Deparment of Justice has stated to us that they will use every means in their power to keep us behind the railroad company. That is the main suit and that is their intention. The proposal has been made by Mr. Fisher, Secretary of the Interior, and I think he will suggest it to this committee, either in writing or in person, and that is, that this bill as proposed is all right, but that the amount stated in the bill should be left discretionary with his department, or the Department of Justice, or some one else. Now, after I stated the conditions to him, his statement to me was that it was probable, or possible at least, that some of these parties would not have to pay anything, by reason of having developed the property, and others, perhaps, should pay more. Then he asked my judgment of what the value of the land was.

"The Chairman. I think the committee would like to hear from Mr. Fisher on that subject first.

"Mr. Dixon. I want to answer him now, because I will not have an opportunity afterwards. We disagree with him on that proposition. We take the position that these values should not be left discretionary with any one, and that there should be no consideration of the present value of the land, for the reason that whatever development and whatever values these lands have now we have made and created and we do not want to have to pay for it the second time. These lands have their values because we have built railroads over them, because we have bought the even-numbered sections, and gotten them together in one body and have developed them, and we do not think it is a fair thing to have to pay for the values which we have helped to create. We do not want to leave it to the discretion of the Department of the Interior, or whoever else may be designated, and, as I stated to Mr. Fisher, we would prefer to deal with the delay of the law, that we know something about, to dealing with his department or any other department that would not say what it was ready to do. We think it is a matter of present knowledge and within the province of Congress. We think our equities are strong enough to say that we should be relieved now.

"Mr. Raker. There is one more question I would like to ask Mr. Dixon. Your idea in intervening would be to expedite the suits?

Mr. Dixon. Our suits; yes.

"Mr. Raker. You have consulted with your counsel and they have advised you that an intervention in the main railroad suit would tend to expedite the trial of that suit and bring it to an earlier hearing?

"Mr. Dixon. Which suit?

"Mr. Raker. The main suit commenced by the Government against the railroad company.

"Mr. Dixon. No; they say that it will expedite our suit, not the railroad suit. I assume that that will be fixed by the court and tried when the court is ready. The Department of Justice has stated that they would, if possible, keep us behind the railroad company, and our idea in intervening is that we will get on all fours with the railroad company in point of time. We will be in court when they are, in place of being an indefinite time behind them. That is the only purpose of our intervention.

"The Chairman. I believe Mr. Lafferty wants to be heard on this matter.

"Mr. Mondell. I would like to make this suggestion: It occurs to me that it might be helpful to the committee if Mr. Dixon would file on behalf of his company a statement of their principal improvements. That is a matter that we might want to go into, particularly the number of miles of railroad constructed, the number of miles of wagon road constructed, and the approximate cost of them.

"Mr. Dixon. I have sent to me every month our monthly trial balances, and I could furnish them very readily.

"Mr. Taylor of Colorado. No, we want the number of miles of railroad that you have built to penetrate your woodlands, and the number of miles of wagon road, and the cost of those roads.

"Mr. Dixon. I can give you that today or any time —the number of miles of railroads and wagon roads and the number of mill sites.

"The Chairman. Will you attach that to your remarks?

"Mr. Dixon. Yes.

"Mr. Taylor of Colorado. It is your opinion, in regard to this last question that has just been raised, that the present values of the lands depend upon the improvements that have been made, and it is your opinion that the people you represent are entitled to that value rather than the Government of the United States?

"Mr. Dixon. Yes, sir.

"The following is a statement of the railroads, wagon roads, etc., constructed by the Booth-Kelly Lumber Co. upon its lands in Oregon:

"The Booth-Kelly Lumber Co. has constructed and has in operation between 7 and 8 miles of logging railroad and has partly constructed 4½ miles more. The cost of the railroad in operation and that which is almost completed has been $341,000, this cost including equipment. The committee will be able to judge from this statement that the country through which this road is built is anything but level agricultural country. The fact is, the road was very difficult to build on account of rock and the steep hillsides which were encountered.

"The grant lands for which we have been sued, approximating 74,000 acres, cost us $572,000. Our four sawmill plants cost $693,000. Logging property, such as donkey engines and rigging of all kinds, cost us $117,000. Dams and improvements in the rivers, not included in any of the above, cost $32,000. We have paid, all told, since beginning operation, in taxes, $223,000. We have paid out for fire patrol on our own lands $9,000. I might say in this connection we have organized and have charge of a patrol covering the timber lands belonging to about 70 different corporations and individuals—mostly individuals—all of whom contribute pro rata to the expense, and the total of the money we have paid out for fire patrol is several times the amount paid on our own land.

"As to wagon roads, we have approximately ten miles. The small amount of acreage is accounted for by the fact that wagon roads are only built into the edge of the timber, the roads from the edge of the timber in being what are called 'chutes' or pole roads, upon which logs are hauled. Of these, we have built for a number of years past an average of 4 or 5 miles per year, at a cost of twenty to thirty thousand dollars per year; but these roads are worthless as soon as the logs are out, and are not to be considered as permanent improvements.

"In addition to the actual expenditures made as above, our estimate of the cost of finishing the line already graded and under construction is $46,000. This is for the balance of the steel, the building of bridges and culverts, and the laying of sidetracks on grade already constructed.

"In addition to all this we have made permanent surveys and are ready to begin work on an additional piece of road approximately 12 miles in length, which will cost, according to our engineers' estimates, $203,000. All of this work will have to be done to provide for the next five years' logging and is a very small proportion indeed of the total which will be required to work out all of our holdings.

"Figures given above are only for the improvements and operations of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Co.; a number of the other defendants in these cases have railroads and improvements approximating if not equaling those of my company.

"Our mills alone have furnished the entire pay roll and support for the towns of Saginaw, population about 300; Wendling, population about 800; Coburg, population about 700; and has been the principal pay roll in Springfield, population about 1,800. The mills of the other defendants are likewise situated in regard to the towns of Leona, Cottage Grove, Mill City, Falls City, Dallas, Salem, and a number of other smaller towns.

"A number of improvements contemplated by my own company and other companies interested have been held up on account of this litigation, and if the suits are compromised the development will go ahead again to a remarkable extent.

"Respectfully submitted,

"A. C. DIXON."

Whereupon the attention of witness was called to "A Statement of the railroads, wagon roads, etc., constructed by the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company upon its lands in Oregon," set out on page 66 of this statement, purporting to state the number of acres of land which the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company owned involved in these "Innocent Purchaser Suits," the cost of the four sawmills and other property, taxes paid, etc., and other facts, and stated that he made up the statement himself from the books and reports of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company and he thinks it is correct.

Whereupon the attention of witness was called to a document with "Report No. 1008, House of Representatives, 62d Congress, 2nd Session. Oregon and California Railroad Land Grant. July 16, 1912.—Committed to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union and ordered to be printed. Mr. Robinson, from the Committee on the Public Lands, submitted the following Report. (To accompany H. R. 22002.)" and witness stated that he had seen that document before and had a copy of it, and that he had seen H. R. 22002 accompanying that report.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence as one exhibit these two documents, which were received in evidence marked "Defendants' Exhibit 334," and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified as such.

Whereupon the attention of witness was called to a statement or letter of his, of date April 10, 1912, appearing at pages 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41 and 42, inclusive, of a publication called "Suits in Oregon Hearing Before the Committee on Public Lands, United States Senate, Sixty-second Congress, Second Session, on S. 5835. A Bill Supplementing the Joint Resolution of Congress Approved April 30, 1908, entitled 'Joint Resolution Instructing the Attorney General to Institute Certain Suits, and so forth.' April 24, 1912. Printed for the use of the Committee on Public Lands, Washington Government Printing Office, 1912," and particularly page 40 of that statement, which reads:

"The lands in our possession are practically all such as are not capable of cultivation until after the timber is removed and the stumps cleared from the land, and then a major portion will only be useful for purpose of reforestation. These lands never could have been put into the hands of actual settlers and actually settled upon, for the reason that a settler could not make a living on 160 acres or any other number of acres of these lands. We have used them in developing the country in the only way in which they could have been used, and in this use we have spent millions of dollars in building railroads, developing the streams, and building sawmills, and are now furnishing employment to thousands of men, my own company having employed at the time the resolution of April 30, 1908, was passed in the neighborhood of 1,000 men, and our company was in process of development, so that within a few years we would have been employing from three to five thousand men—very many more than the number of men that could have been provided with 160 acres each from the lands in question. Employees in our mills and camps receive good wages, the minimum being $12 per week at the mills and the average wage in our logging camp $16.50 to $17.50 per week. The provident among these men have homes in these mill towns, and some of them own small farms elsewhere, which they cultivate during a portion of the year, and the average are much better off and in better financial position than they could possibly have been had they settled upon these lands as contemplated in the act."

Whereupon complainant renewed the same objections made heretofore to the testimony of this witness with reference to statements made before the Committee of the House.

Whereupon witness stated that he wrote that statement and delivered it to the President and that the statement is true except as to the particular he mentioned a little while ago. He overlooked the statement as to pasturage. He should have said that after these lands were logged off they would be useful only for reforestation or pasturage. That he thinks the statement, "These lands never could have been put into the hands of actual settlers and actually settled upon, for the reason that a settler could not make a living on 160 acres or any other number of acres of these lands," is true.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence that portion of this letter, to which the complainant made the same objection to this statement as herein heretofore set out, which said portion of said letter so offered in evidence is as follows:

"The Chairman. The following letter addressed to the President by Mr. A. C. Dixon and submitted to the committee in lieu of an oral hearing will be printed as a part of the hearing:

"Washington, D. C., April 10, 1912.

"The President.

"Sir: In compliance with your request that I put in writing my statements to you of Friday last, with reference to S. 5885 and H. R. 22002, these two bills being identical in form, allow me to say that I am not an attorney, so this statement will necessarily be only that of a business man, and therefore will not attempt to deal in legal terms or in such other phases of the matter as might be covered by the Attorney General, who, I understand, will furnish you with an opinion on the bills. I am representing, primarily, the Booth-Kelly Lumber Co., but at the same time am representing the owners of at least 90 per cent of the lands covered by 45 separate suits brought by the United States against purchasers of what are known as Oregon & California grant lands."

(Portion of letter referred to.)

"The lands in our possession are practically all such as are not capable of cultivation until after the timber is removed and the stumps cleared from the land, and then a major portion will only be useful for purpose of reforestation. These lands never could have been put into the hands of actual settlers and actually settled upon, for the reason that a settler could not make a living on 160 acres or any other number of acres of these lands. We have used them in developing the country in the only way in which they could have been used, and in this use we have spent millions of dollars in building railroads, developing the streams, and building sawmills, and are now furnishing employment to thousands of men, my own company having employed at the time the resolution of April 30, 1908, was passed in the neighborhood of 1,000 men, and our company was in process of development, so that within a few years we would have been employing from three to five thousand men—very many more than the number of men that could have been provided with 160 acres each from the lands in question. Employees in our mills and camps receive good wages, the minimum being $12 per week at the mills and the average wage in our logging camp $16.50 to $17.50 per week. The provident among these men have homes in these mill towns, and some of them own small farms elsewhere, which they cultivate during a portion of the year, and the average are much better off and in better financial position than they could possibly have been had they settled upon these lands as contemplated in the act."

Whereupon witness being shown "Defendants' Exhibit 335," being a map issued by the "Department of the Interior, General Land Office, Fred Dennett, Commissioner," said that he thinks the map is what it purports to be.

Whereupon defendants offered said map in evidence as "Defendants' Exhibit 335" and the same was so received and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified as such.

Whereupon witness upon cross-examination further testified that he, with certain other representatives of the large purchasers of these railroad lands, appeared in the early part of the year 1908 before the Public Lands Committee of the House with reference to Senate Joint Resolution No. 48, which afterwards became effective by passage and approval April 30, 1908, for the purpose of urging an amendment to the resolution which would confirm the titles of the purchasers, and that after the failure to secure such an amendment they endeavored by what they considered legitimate means to defeat the resolution itself. The effort was to try to get the resolution amended on final passage, or if they could not have it amended to have it defeated. It is not true that they in any way assisted the Government in securing the passage of that resolution to authorize the institution of this suit. His reasons were not the only reasons and arguments presented to the two committees of Congress and which were considered by these committees in passing upon these bills. There were other reasons than those contained in his statement which were presented to the Committees of Congress during the consideration of these two bills during the above session which finally became enacted into law with some amendments as the act of August 20, 1912. The question as to whether compromise would be authorized or not was the main question that he heard discussed and was the only one he was interested in. He was not connected with the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company during the time that it made all of its purchases referred to by Mr. Booth in his testimony, but was with the company when it purchased, he would say, half of them or more. The railroad company, in making all the sales of that land, so far as it came within his observation, endeavored to get all they could for the land. The Booth-Kelly Lumber Company paid the market price, or a little above the market price at that time. As to the restrictions, he never had heard of them at the time the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company purchased the lands. He knew nothing of that. The Booth-Kelly Lumber Company paid the railroad company more than it had to pay for the intervening even-numbered sections. No one representing the railroad company ever informed any members of his company, so far as he knows, of these restrictions, or gave them any warning as to the nature of the title that they were buying. He is quite sure they did not, and this was another reason that was submitted to the two committees in Congress upon the question of the equitable claim of these purchasers to a compromise as proposed by the act of August 20, 1912. In the deeds made by the railroad company to the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company there is no assurance or warranty of title. His understanding is that these deeds are legally termed bargain and sale deeds. There is no warranty, at least, in the deeds. One of the matters discussed during this time and presented to both committees as to this proposed legislation which finally became the act of August 20, 1912, was that the railroad company had sold these lands to purchasers for the highest market price, and no disclosure was made as to the restrictions upon the sale of the lands contained in the granting acts, and had given deeds without warranties, which left the purchasers without remedy if the Government should enforce a forfeiture against the purchasers. The refusal of the railroad company to sell its lands further arrested that part of the development that was dependent upon the operations on timber lands, and if the sale of these lands in that manner contributed to the development of Oregon, the refusal to sell them in that manner necessarily arrested the development of Oregon and in his opinion it could not be true that the railroad company has kept within the spirit or reason of these acts of Congress by first selling the lands in large quantities to mill operators and afterwards refusing to sell them at all. He has heard all of the testimony of Mr. Booth as to the availability of this land for grazing and other agricultural purposes and thinks that his testimony is generally correct upon these questions. It is true that the more the settler could get for timber on the lands, the more money he would have for development purposes, but he does not think the value of the timber would have anything to do with the settlement. If the settler could sell the timber on these timber lands it would certainly have the effect to help rather than retard the settler. He does not think the value of the timber would have any bearing on his testimony in regard to the use of the lands for dairying or other agricultural purposes. Solid bodies of timber lands, in a general way, are essential to practical milling; the removal of the timber is also essential to any subsequent use of the lands in this vicinity for grazing or other agricultural use, referring now to lands that have heavy growth of timber upon them. It is true that if the railroad company should withhold permanently the alternate odd numbered sections in this timbered region involved in this suit, particularly in these localities with which he is personally acquainted, the necessary effect of that would be to prevent logging off the lands and prevent their ultimate subjection to grazing or other agricultural use, such of them as are adapted to that use. The railroad company controls practically all transportation facilities from Eugene south to the southern boundary line of the State, that is, with reference to the territory within the exterior boundary lines of the railroad grant, and has controlled it since the railroad was constructed. The meetings referred to in his testimony and that of Mr. Booth were called, as far as he knew, primarily to object to the advance in rates threatened in 1906, and to rates that were considered unfair and these protests in regard to the land grant developed at these meetings were the first that he heard. The principal complaint was against traffic matters, unfair and unjust rates, as they thought at that time at least, and the matter of withholding the lands from settlement, the matter of the Railroad Company building its own mills to saw their ties and other things of that character were also discussed, including witholding the lands from sale. The principal object of the meeting at Eugene so far as he knew of it and he was one of the Committee on Arrangements, was to discuss traffic matters. Personally he did not know of the resolution in regard to the sale of grant lands until about the time the meeting was called to order. There was no commercial or industrial reason at any time since he has known these lands, as to a majority of the lands, why these lands could not have been sold in tracts of 160 acres and at a price not exceeding $2.50 per acre. He would not speak as to all of these lands, because he does not know. The vast majority of them could have been sold at that price at any time since he has been connected with the lands, in 160 acre tracts. He is not thoroughly familiar with the Timber and Stone Act requirements, but these lands could have been sold to individuals, in his opinion, at any time that they had an opportunity. He does not think the Railroad Company had to charge more than $2.50 an acre in order to develop the country. He would say that perhaps 55 or 60 per cent of the logged off lands of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company have been logged off since the year 1905. There have been practically no sales made at all of land grant lands by the purchasers of such lands since this agitation concerning the limitations upon the sale of the lands by the Railroad Company, commenced in 1906. With reference to the limitations upon the sale by the Railroad Company of these lands, the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company has repeatedly refused to buy grant lands since 1906 and refused to sell these large bodies of timber. Including the holdings of the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company and their timber lands in that vicinity and for that matter the other timber within the exterior boundaries of this railroad grant consists almost all together of fir and pine. It takes a number of years for these trees of long growth to reach maturity. There would be no very great change in a period of 25 or 30 years, nothing that would be noticeable except to an expert or some one making a critical examination. The conditions are approximately the same in October, 1912, as they have been ever since he has been acquainted with the land, and from the age of the trees were in the same condition in 1912 as they were 30 or 40 years ago without more than a slight change in the growth of the trees.

Whereupon on re-direct examination witness further testified that rails have been laid by the Oregon Electric Railway and trains are now operating from Portland through to Eugene and the official completion of this road to Eugene was in September 1912. He thinks there is also a railroad from Cottage Grove leading out into the foothills and mountains of the Cascades, a distance of 25 miles not owned by the Southern Pacific Company, or the Oregon and California Railroad Company which serves a lot of saw mills on that line and it is true that according to general repute as to ownership the Hill Lines have the Pacific & Eastern Railway Company, a line from Medford in the Rogue River Valley to Eagle Creek and up the Rogue River Valley on surveyed connection to what is called the Oregon Trunk, leading from a connection with the S. P. & S. Railway up the Columbia River and up the Des Chutes south to Bend and beyond. He understands there is about 25 miles of that road already built in Jackson County. He thinks it is true up to this date with very slight exceptions that the facilities for shipment of all lumber or timber on the water shed of the Coast mountains are by way of Marshfield and other ports on the Pacific Ocean.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

Q. Now, in your letter of April 10, 1912, to the President, referred to and submitted to the Committee on Public Lands of the United States Senate, as you have heretofore identified it, you have used this language: "Within the next several years a great deal of irritation was created in Oregon by reason of the refusal of the Oregon & California Company, or the Southern Pacific Company, to place a price on these lands or offer them for sale, and as a result of this irritation a number of commercial and other trade organizations adopted resolutions condemning this course on the part of the Railroad Company, and asking that some steps be taken to compel them to dispose of the lands." Referring to that, and refreshing your memory from that statement, what is the fact in that respect. Is that correct?

A. That is a correct statement.

Whereupon witness further testified that he is not positive but thinks that Senator Mulit, State Senator of Jackson County at that time introduced the resolution before the meeting at Eugene in 1906 relating to the sale of these railroad lands, but he is not sure that he was the one who introduced the Memorial in the Legislature of 1907. It is his recollection that the resolution that Senator Mulit brought to the Eugene meeting was introduced and adopted at that meeting at Eugene. That resolution and all the others that he ever knew anything about were simply urging the Company to dispose of the lands. He never heard of the matter of forfeiture until 1908 when he was in Washington.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

"Q. That is to say, the demand of the public in these meetings that you attended or that you knew of, was that the company be required to dispose of the lands as they had heretofore disposed of them, for the purposes of use to those who had use for them?

A. I don't know as to the disposing of them as they were heretofore disposed of, but the general idea and desire, as I interpreted it, was to have them sold and disposed of at a reasonable price. I think there were a great many thought they ought to be sold at $2.50 an acre, but a great many others didn't care."

Whereupon witness further testified that there was no particular desire, that he knew of, to have these timber lands sold to actual settlers. He never heard the idea advanced in the community that these lands could be utilized for actual settlement.

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

"Q. Would actual settlers have purchased these lands for actual settlement or for the timber that is on them?

A. I don't know how to answer that question. If they had been actual settlers they could not have been purchasing them for the timber that is on them. But if they had been purchased they would have been purchased for the timber that is on them.

Q. There occurred a protest in this case about actual settlers. We have some 7,000 in this record pretending, some of them, to have actually settled upon the best timber lands in the grant, and others to have applied for the very best timber-lands in the grant unsold, and for $2.50 an acre, in 160 acre tracts, and there have been some 7 or 8 applying for the same quarter section, according to the record. Now, would these lands have been purchased by men to settle on them, or for the timber, if they had been sold at $2.50 an acre?

Mr. Townsend: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and calling for a mere opinion of the witness upon a matter that is not properly a subject of expert testimony, and the witness not being qualified to testify as to the intention of those settlers or their good faith or lack of good faith.

A. As far as the lands I am familiar with are concerned, they would have purchased them only for or chiefly for the value of the timber that is on them.

Q. You base that judgment upon the history of the disposition of the lands in the even sections of the same class, do you not, in part?

A. Largely, yes; the fact that I don't think they could do anything else with them, a big portion of them.

Q. You mean that they could only use them for the timber that is on them?

A. Until the timber was taken off.

Q. Their chief value, then, would be the timber?

A. I think so.

Whereupon on re-cross examination witness further testified that the first passenger or commercial train of the electric line went through to Eugene on the day this testimony was being taken, in September 1912. This line will not be used by the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company in the shipment of any of its lumber until or unless it is extended from where it is now. The electric lines have not, to his knowledge been used to any great extent for transportation of lumber, not in any quantities of consequence in any other part of the road where timber is being milled, nor does he know of its being transported by means of electric lines, and he doubts whether that electric line will ever seriously compete with the Southern Pacific Company in the transportation of lumber or logs. The line from Cottage Grove to the Cascade Mountains is built and owned by eastern people and Mr. Hengen not by some of the mill men and does very little business other than transportation of lumber and logs principally which are transported to the Southern Pacific lines from the mills, from a point on the western slope of the Cascades, or in the foothills of the Cascades to Cottage Grove. In the immediate vicinity of Cottage Grove there are some twenty lumber mills and Cottage Grove does not buy the lumber transported over this other railroad, and that lumber must still be transported over the Southern Pacific to some other market. The line from Medford, which is constructed for a distance of about 25 miles, is up towards the Crater Lake country, Elk Creek. It is his understanding that the Hill Lines have constructed from a point four or five miles east of The Dalles, only on the opposite side of the river, connecting with the North Bank road southerly across the Columbia River by means of a bridge and then up the Des Chutes River, for the distance of about 150 miles, so there is a break between Bend, which is the southern terminus of the Hill line constructed from the north and the northern terminus of the Hill line that has been constructed from Medford of something over 100 miles—he does not know the exact distance. The Hill line as constructed and projected lies almost wholly east of the Cascades and it would not, under the present mileage that is built in the western part of the State be available for transportation purposes to the industrial plants or to the purchasers generally within the limits of this grant, from Eugene southerly to a point at least as far as Grants Pass or farther. He supposes it might be covered, but it could not be reached from the lines the Hill people now have or have projected as far as he knows anything of.

Whereupon complainant objected to all that part of the testimony of the witnesses Booth and Dixon inconsistent with the testimony of the witness Charles W. Eberlein upon the ground that the same was incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and inadmissible because an attempt on the part of defense to impeach the testimony of one of its own witnesses. Whereupon complainant moved to strike out such testimony on the same grounds and it was stipulated that this objection and motion should be treated as if interposed to each question of each of the witnesses Booth and Dixon.

Whereupon F. A. ELLIOTT, called as a witness on behalf of defendants and being duly sworn, testified that he is 47 years of age, born in Illinois, resides at Salem, Oregon, and is State Forester. He has resided in Oregon since December 1888 and was appointed State Forester in April 1911 by the State Board of Forestry, composed of the Governor of the State of Oregon, and six other members, one of whom is George W. Peavy, head of the Forestry School at the Oregon Agricultural College, George H. Cecil, District Forester and four members appointed by the Governor, one from the State Grange, one from the State Woolgrowers' Association and two from the Lumbermen's Association. He is now State Forester and is required, by virtue of his office, to make annual reports to the Governor. His duties are outlined in the law creating the State Board of Forestry. He has general supervision over the fire patrol of the State, including lands owned by private individuals and lands owned by the State and associations formed for fire protection. He made his first annual report to the Governor as State Forester December 1, 1911. His second annual report had not yet been published. "Defendants' Exhibit 360" is his first annual report as State Forester to the Governor for 1911, published by the State in 1912.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence said "Defendants' Exhibit 360" to which complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and hearsay and conclusions of the witness, which said exhibit was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified herein as such.

Whereupon witness further testified that the statements made by him in that report are as nearly accurate as they have any way of getting at it, to which last named testimony complainant objected as last above and as not a proper method of eliciting facts within the knowledge of witness.

Whereupon witness further testified that he was employed by the Oregon and California Railroad Company in its Land Department beginning in the latter part of April, 1889 and continuing until May 1st, 1906. His duties while in such employment from 1890 until about 1896 or 1897 were that he was assistant land examiner and assisted in cruising and classifying the lands being sold at that time belonging to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, granted to it by the Act of Congress of July 25, 1866 and May 4, 1870. After about that date, he was the chief land examiner of the Company and in that capacity did about the same kind of work, excepting that he had charge of all the field work for the Company after that. He went on the lands and cruised them in 40 acre tracts. A great deal of this work he did himself and a great deal he had done by other parties under his supervision. He understands that the reports which he made as cruiser or which were made under his supervision while he was in charge, prior to April 18, 1906, were practically all burned in the San Francisco fire. He made written reports of lands that he cruised, to Land Agent Andrews and later, to Eberlein, and thinks this form of report was gotten up by Rees and himself. These forms of reports are all substantially the same. Prior to the fire the Company used a book with four pages to a section, giving room for a quarter section, then a 40 in this quarter and on the opposite page, form for the report. These books were probably 4x8 inches in size in blank and were bound and had enough pages to hold a township. When the book was filled it was turned over to the Land Agent and kept on file in the office. He does not think any one of the reports was saved. Referring to "Defendants' Exhibit 259," witness testified that he cruised a great deal of the lands in all the different counties in which the land lies shown in this exhibit, unless it may be Curry County. He does not know that he ever cruised any in Curry County, but in the other counties, he has done a great deal of cruising, probably has been over as many different 40-acre tracts as any one else in the country. They used to have a classification of these lands, as timber, agricultural and grazing. The character of the land in general, is rough and mountainous; that is the land itself. These three classes were on these blanks and also had two classes when the lands were denuded of the timber, that is, they were called either grazing or agricultural land, when denuded.

To which complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and it was agreed between the parties that this same objection should be considered as taken to all the testimony of the witness relating to the character of the lands within the limits of the grant involved in this suit, settlements thereon and public land entries thereof, and it was agreed between the parties that this same objection shall be deemed taken to all the testimony of this witness on that subject.

Whereupon witness further testified that all lands that were considered unfit for cultivation were designated as grazing lands when denuded. Taking southern Oregon, beginning with Douglas County, there is a great deal of land, among the unsold portion, that is barren, rocky or covered with chaparral or brush, practically worthless for any purpose, that was classed as grazing land, simply because it was of no value for anything else. It has more or less brush, chaparral and all kinds of brush on the land and is rocky, very rough land. There is more or less of that scattered all through the grant, back in the mountains and foothills. He presumes Douglas County has more than any other kind of this character, of worthless land, because there is more railroad land in Douglas County. Josephine County would probably have a higher percentage of that kind of land than any other county. Off hand he would say that 40 per cent of the lands in Jackson and Douglas Counties would be worthless. The heaviest and most valuable timber lands of the grants, are in parts of Columbia, Washington, Multnomah, Clackamas, Yamhill, Polk, Benton, Linn, Lane and Douglas Counties. There are tracts of pretty good timber in Jackson and Josephine Counties, also in Lincoln County. Coos County is a very heavily timbered County. The comparative stand of timber on the unsold lands, compares favorably with the timber on the even sections, and with the timber in western Washington and in other parts of the world. It is just about an average of the timber in this State, with the exception that some of the very heaviest bodies of railroad lands have been sold. Generally speaking, he is familiar with these lands conveyed to the so-called innocent purchasers by the Company, aggregating something over 400,000 acres and they are the choice selected timber lands of the grant, up to the time these sales were made. There is a great deal of timber land in the grant which is left, that is substantially the same but at the time these sales were made, the land that was sold was more accessible. The remaining lands now probably would not run quite as good in the stand of timber, but these lands are becoming more accessible all the time, and at the present time (1912), these unsold lands would be practically of the same quality of timber.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

"Q. What, from your knowledge of the timber-lands of this company, both those now owned, and those heretofore owned and sold to these innocent purchasers, and from your knowledge of the timber-lands on the even sections in western Oregon, within the limits of this grant, and coterminous with the unsold portion, has been the highest market price paid for any particular body of this timber-land, quarter section or otherwise, where the sale was a bona fide sale, made in due course, the seller selling because he wanted to sell, didn't have to, the purchaser buying because he wanted to buy and was able to buy? What is the best price for any quarter section that you know of that has been paid?

A. Well, the best price that I absolutely know of was $10,000.

Q. Where was that situated?

A. That was in Lincoln County. I am not right sure—I will have to look at that map to see whether that is within the grant either. It may not be. No, it is not. No, this is outside of the grant.

Q. How far away from the exterior limits of the grant on the west?

A. About four miles. Now, let's see, just wait a minute. Well, I know of a claim, this claim I say that I know of, I had an interest in that claim. I know of that being sold for $10,000. But there are claims just to the east of that in Polk County, that was in 8—9, well, I don't know positively but I know of sales being reported in there at $8,000 to $10,000.

Q. What is the fair market value of these best quarter sections, depending upon accessibility or availability, nearness to logging streams or rail transportation, of the best unsold quarter sections of timber-lands of the company? What is the fair market value of those quarter sections?

A. The timbered sections of the grant?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I presume it would be safe to say $3,000 anyway.

Q. On an average?

A. On an average, yes, sir.

Q. And what would be the best maximum price, in your judgment, of the best quarter sections?

A. Oh, $10,000. There are claims that I could pick out that I know would sell for that.

Whereupon witness further testified that he does not know just where the claims of the Lafferty defendants so-called, John L. Snyder and about sixty-seven or sixty-eight others are located, but knows all granted lands in Columbia County quite well and has cruised quite a good deal of it. These lands are generally very heavy timber, of the rough mountainous country and he would think these quarter sections in this best timbered area would very easily average anyway $3,000 or $4,000. Some of them no doubt would bring a good deal more, but he does not know where these claims are located and has not been in there since they were located.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

"Q. Now, taking this grant in its entirety, and based upon your knowledge of the same, obtained by cruising that which you have cruised, and by examinations made by you as an examiner, and other means of ascertaining the character of the land in person, by traveling over the same on its trails, from your knowledge obtained in your official capacity as State Forester, and having supervision of the fire patrol of the timberlands of the State of Oregon, including these and the lands in the even sections as well, and taking into consideration all the knowledge that you have of these lands that are unsold, involved in this suit, that are shown on this Defendants' Exhibit 259 in colors in green, I wish you would state to the Court what per cent of that grant in your judgment, is suitable for actual settlement for agricultural or horticultural or other such purposes?

Mr. Townsend: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, in addition to the general objection urged as to this class of testimony upon the special ground that it asks the witness to pass an opinion as to what constitutes actual settlement within the meaning of this law, and further, that there is nothing in the law requiring that the actual settler shall be wholly dependent for his livelihood upon the products of the land settled upon, and therefore calling for a conclusion and opinion of the witness upon a question of both fact and law.

A. What per cent of the land is agricultural land?

Q. Yes, that would be available for any agricultural or horticultural use.

A. Well, I should say from five to ten per cent.

Q. Now, suppose, Mr. Elliott, that the company had sold these lands, or would now sell these lands in this grant, and particularly the timbered portion thereof, and that portion which is chiefly valuable for timber, to these so-called actual settlers, at $2.50 an acre, in quantities not exceeding 160 acres, and give them a good title to each quarter section, and these purchasers or actual settlers, having this title to these timber-lands should desire to make the best investment that they could make, the best disposition or use of the land which they could, what would become of the title to these lands, in the ordinary course of business? Who would acquire these lands, and for what purposes could they be used, and would they be acquired, if you know?

Mr. Townsend: That is objected to, not only on the general grounds urged to all testimony relating to the character of lands, but particularly upon the ground that it calls for a mere speculation or opinion of the witness as to what would become of the lands if the Railroad Company had obeyed the law, which is not a proper subject for expert opinion.

Q. You may answer.

A. What would these lands be purchased for? Was that the question?

Q. Yes.

A. They would be purchased for the timber, no doubt.

Q. What would become of the title to these lands? Where would the lands go shortly?

A. They would go into the large timber holdings. Of course, occasionally, a man might log a quarter section off himself, and keep the land, but it would be very seldom that that would happen.

Q. From your knowledge of the disposition of the lands in the even sections, coterminous with these, where title had been acquired under the Homestead Act or under the Timber and Stone Act, or other public laws of the United States, what has become of the lands in the even sections, where patents have been issued by the United States to these various parties, mainly?

A. It has very largely gone to large timber holders. Of course there are claims scattered all over the country that still belong to the original claimant.

Q. What is the chief value of these lands that have a value?

A. It is timber.

Q. Now, there has been some testimony in this case that some of these lands have been classified by the cruisers of the company as grazing lands, and especially after they have been denuded of the timber. What uses, if any, could these so-called grazing lands be put to, and in what way can they be said to be grazing lands, and what is the class of lands that you have classified as grazing lands, other than these worthless lands that you have spoken about already?

A. Well, the reason for classifying the lands as agricultural or grazing lands when they were denuded, was simply for the purpose of having a classification. Now, there was a time when we thought that all the land when it was denuded would either have to be used for agricultural or grazing purposes—That is all the uses we knew of for it. But under present conditions, and since the National Forests have been created, these lands largely, very largely, should be used for growing timber on.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. It should be kept as permanent timber-land. Nearly all the lands in this grant are lands that should be used for growing timber.

Q. You mean reforestation?

A. Yes, resforestation.

Q. I will ask you to state whether or not these people who have logged off their lands, these large timber owners, who have manufactured their timber, cut off their lands, have determined yet what to do with the logged off lands, if you know.

A. Very few of them have. Of course, there are some lands that they are clearing up, and putting into cultivation. Take along the Columbia River and places where it is susceptible of cultivation, they are using it. But otherwise it has generally grown up to young timber or brush, and not being used at all.

Whereupon witness further testified that it would take 50 to 75 years for second growth Douglas Fir to become saw timber from the time it is planted or seeded until it is merchantable. Reforestation of these timber lands after the timber has been once removed is impracticable under the present tax system, but he thinks the tax system should be changed so that it would be very practicable to reforest these cut over lands. The best use, in his judgment, to which the majority of these logged off lands could be put would be to grow more timber. These burnt over lands offer very little pasturage. He does not know how many acres it takes to keep a cow, but it takes quite a little and the main trouble is the young growth of timber or brush grows so fast that it chokes the grass out. There are places along the little creek bottoms where if they kept stock on it and kept the brush down very good grass grows, but taking the general run of the lands through the mountains, it grows up with brush and there is very little feed on it. The parcels of these lands suitable for some agricultural or horticultural purposes shown in the tabulated statements, "Defendants' Exhibits 343 and 344" are generally in small patches, from an acre to a few acres, little creek bottoms or level benches, what are called bench lands, scattered all through.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

Q. Suppose that an actual settler, or person denominated as such in this record, should apply to the company for the purchase of a quarter section of this so-called grazing land, that is, land that is not chiefly valuable for timber, and the company should sell this quarter section to him, at the maximum price of $2.50 an acre, or less, and he should be expected to go out upon the property with his family, if he had one, support himself or his family by having this 160 acres enclosed, pasturing his stock on this 160 acres, if he has any stock, make his living for himself or his family, and a home there, what, in your judgment, would be his ability to do that?

Mr. Townsend: Objected to as purely speculative and argumentative, restricting the actual settler to a ridiculous life of inactivity and laziness, not contemplated by this statute.

A. Well, I don't know of any quarter sections, don't call to mind any, that I think a man could make a living on. In fact, I know of quite a number of places where 40 and 80 or 160 acres have sold a number of years ago, generally to fill out a piece of land, maybe a little fairly good land on this, to fill out a quarter section on Government land, for instance; but I don't call to mind now any quarter section that the company has ever sold since I have been with them that a man has gone onto it and actually made a home, and made a living on that quarter section.

Q. Suppose that the company would sell one of these best quarter sections of timber-land to this so-called actual settler, at the maximum price of $2.50 an acre, and he should be expected to go out on this land to make a home for himself and his family, if he had one, what, in your judgment, would be his ability to make a living, for himself and his family on this timbered quarter section?

A. It would be impossible.

Whereupon witness further testified that there are very few, if any, entrymen who took homesteads within the limits of this grant on the even sections on the timbered area on the lands at the present time. They stayed on the lands long enough to get title to it and have abandoned it and their improvements have gone to rack lots of times, and generally you might say they have no improvements left on them. The improvements in the beginning were just make shifts as a general thing. Occasionally one would find a claim with pretty fair improvements, maybe 5 or 10 acres in a fair state of cultivation, but this is largely now grown up to brush. These lands in the timbered portions of the even sections thus homesteaded are now largely owned by large timber owners. To the best of his knowledge, he believes he has not worked for the Oregon and California Railroad Company any since May 1, 1906. He worked some in California for Eberlein and McAllaster since 1906, on the other grants in California. He does not recall when he cruised the lands described in "Defendants' Exhibit 355" but thinks he did a little work for Rees sometime since 1906, possibly this is the work he did, but it had slipped his memory. This appears to be the only tabulated statement made from any cruisers reports made by him now in the possession of the Railroad Company. He cruised a great deal of these lands. He has no official or business relation with the Oregon and California Railroad Company or with the Southern Pacific Company or any of their affiliated or associated lines. He recognizes "Defendants' Exhibit 361" entitled "Professional Paper No. 4, Series H, Forestry 1, Department of the Interior, United States Geological Survey, Charles D. Walcott, Director, The Forests of Oregon, by Henry Gannett, Washington Government Printing Office 1902," and the map in the pocket entitled "Map of the State of Oregon showing the classification of lands and forests," as an official document and map issued by the Department of the Interior. This map has had quite a general distribution throughout the State. He has one of them. A. J. Johnson referred to was in the Forest Service of the United States, he thinks, but he does not know who he was.

Whereupon defendants offered "Defendants' Exhibit 361" in evidence to which complainant objected as incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant and as consisting of a mere statement of opinion of the compiler of the document based upon information not under oath.

Whereupon "Defendants' Exhibit 361" was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified herein as such.

Whereupon upon cross examination witness further testified that he is a witness under pay as an ordinary witness and has no other compensation, or promise of any other compensation.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

Q. You saw me in the summer of 1907 here at Portland in this very building, did you not?

A. I think I did.

Q. And you made a statement to me concerning the general subjects that you now have covered by your testimony, did you not?

A. I think so, yes.

Q. And as you gave me that statement, I dictated it to a stenographer, did I not?

A. You said you were having it dictated. Did you have it all dictated, all the conversation we had?

Q. I am asking you if you did not see me dictate it in your presence, did you not?

A. Well, I think you did, yes.

Q. You heard me, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you saw the stenographer taking it down, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was transcribed on the typewriter and submitted to you before you left, was it not?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Will you swear that it was not?

A. I don't think it was.

Q. You swear that you never saw that statement after it was reduced to writing on the typewriter?

A. I don't think I ever did.

Q. You swear that you never read it over?

A. Well, I don't remember of reading it over.

Q. How many times did you visit my office with reference to those interviews?

A. Once, is all I ever remember of.

Q. Don't you remember that you visited it there once when it was dictated, and afterwards came back and saw the typewritten statement, after it was reduced to writing?

A. No, I don't remember that. I might have, but I don't remember it.

Q. I will ask you to examine this document, and state if that is not the statement as you made it to me at that time, and as I dictated it in your presence, and which was shown to you on the same day after it was reduced to writing?

A. I don't think I ever saw that in that form.

Q. I ask you to read it, and state whether you did not make the statements to me as set forth in that document, in the Postoffice Building in the City of Portland, in the State of Oregon, at about the month of August, 1907?

To which examination upon this subject defendants objected as incompetent and as not impeaching evidence or a proper method of attempting to impeach the witness as a narrative or purported narrative of a past conversation.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

A. What is the question you want me to answer now?

(Question read.)

A. I say that I did have a conversation with you, in which I made some of those assertions, but I don't think they are taken down as I gave them to you.

Q. I wish you would point out what portion of this statement does not correctly set forth the statement made to me by you at the time that I have indicated in my former question.

A. What is the question?

(Question read.)

A. Well, I might simply state that the conversation I had with you at that time was very largely the questions and answers were all made by yourself. I came in—you wrote to me once or twice to come down, wrote me finally to come down at your expense, and I happened to be in town, and I came in to see you, and I began to give you a little history of my work with the company, and some of this is fairly accurate as to what I said. But it is very largely answers that you made out yourself to questions that you had already asked. You began with the assumption that, as I was not with the Railroad Company at the time, of course I had a grievance, and would open up and give you any information that I had. And furthermore, when I went on to state, and I see you have got portions of it here fairly accurate about the grades of the land—now, in cruising the land and grading it as agricultural and grazing lands, etc.,—you have that fairly accurate. But I remember very distinctly that as soon as I began to answer the questions and answering them in my own way, you began to answer them in your way, and asked me if that was not so and so, and to get out in a nice way with you, I let you answer to suit yourself, a great many of these questions.

Q. You have not played the same game here to-day, have you?

A. No, sir, I am under oath now. You told me at that time—you were very insistent on this—now, this is not under oath; this is just a general statement. Oh, there is a good many of these statements that are all right.

Q. Isn't it a fact, Mr. Elliott, that I told you that I was not in the affidavit getting business, and that I did not care to take your affidavit, but that I wanted truthful information concerning the history of this grant, and your knowledge of it?

A. I don't know about that. I don't remember that detail.

Q. Do you mean to say that I kept cautioning you that you were not under oath for the purpose of getting you to state things that were false?

A. No, I did not say that.

Q. Did you say anything to me at that time that was false?

A. Not—no, I don't think I did.

Q. Well, do you say that in order to please me, when I asked you if things were so, that you agreed to them if you knew they were false?

A. Well, I say this: that you began with the assumption that I was going to give you a lot of information, and lots of information you tried to get out of me that I did not know anything about, but when you would ask a question, you would give the answer to it yourself, and I would let you go ahead and answer. Haven't you seen people that you would do that way with? I have, and you were one of them.

Q. That is your only explanation of that general statement, is it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That when you find anybody that wants you to give certain answers, you will do it. will you?

A. Well, there are times when I will, yes.

Q. Why would you give it to me at that time?

A. Well, just because from the general way you began to ask the questions.

Q. Now, sir, is it not a fact that I discussed with you every statement that is made in that document, and having gotten from you your version of it, I then dictated it, sentence by sentence, to the stenographer, and turned to you and asked you if that was correct?

A. I don't think so. I don't remember that at all.

Q. Did I dictate that entire statement without asking you as to the character of the statement as I went along?

A. You dictated this from our conversation. We talked along, and you would turn and dictate to your stenographer.

Q. After I had discussed a given subject or question with you, I would then turn and dictate the substance of it to the stenographer, did I not?

A. Well, the substance as you interpreted it.

Q. Did you not agree to it at the time?

A. I don't think so, any more than I would say "Let it go at that."

Q. Do you swear that you ever used the expression "Let it go at that"?

A. No, I would not say that I did.

Q. Will you swear that you ever in any way indicated to me that anything I dictated to the stenographer was not absolutely true?

A. No, I would not.

Q. Did you sit there and deliberately let me dictate to that stenographer things that were not true?

A. Well, if this is what you dictated, I surely did, but I don't think this is what you dictated and read to me.

Q. I thought you said I did not read it to you.

A. Well, you say you did, though, and I say I do not think that if this is what you say you dictated and read to me, I do not think you ever did.

Q. Well, did I read anything to you at that time?

A. I don't think you did. I believe you just simply dictated to the stenographer and fixed this up afterwards. I don't think I ever saw that paper in that form. I am sure I never did. I don't think I was ever by you to me at that time.

Q. I want you to go ahead and answer my former question, and point out the portions of that document that you say do not correctly set forth statements made by you to me at that ime.

Mr. Fenton: Same objection as made before last above, that this would be an attempt to prove hearsay declarations of Mr. Andrews and other officers of the company, through the mouth of this witness, under the pretense of impeaching the witness, and it is therefore incompetent.

A. Well, now, here is a statement here now, it says, "From Mr. Elliot's conversation, it is certain that Mr. Andrews, and those conducting the land business for the company, understood about the Act of 1869 which limited sales to actual settlers in limited quantities and for a limited price." Now, you don't say that I said those things, but you say from the conversation it is certain.

Q. Well, did you not, in substance, tell me that Mr. Andrews and the other persons named there did know about——

A. I don't think I ever did.

Q. Let me finish my question, please.

A. Well, go ahead.

Q. Did know about the restrictions of the grant.

A. I don't think I did.

Q. Well, go on with the next portion of that statement that you deny having made to me at that time.

A. Here is another one. "It is apparent that Andrews and Mills understood this point, and that they endeavored to dispose of as much of the land as they could before they were stopped, commencing about 1892, because as soon as there became a brisk demand for timber-lands, the policy of the company seemed to change from trying to dispose of agricultural lands to that of making a special effort to find purchasers for timber-lands, and the timber-land sales were exploited thoroughly."

Q. Do you deny having made that statement to me?

A. You do not say here that I made it. You say "it is apparent from the conversation."

Q. I ask you the question, do you deny having made that statement, in substance, to me at that time?

A. Yes, I do. I do. Here is another statement: "Mr. Elliott thinks that in time fully 50 per cent of all the lands now held by the railroad company will be valuable chiefly for the growing of fruit, vegetables and other farm products." I do not think I made that statement.

Mr. Fenton: What is the answer?

A. I say in here it says: "Mr. Elliott thinks that in time fully 50 per cent of all the lands now held by the railroad company will be valuable chiefly for the growing of fruit, vegetables and other farm products." I do not think I ever made such a statement.

Q. Well, do you deny that you made that statement?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. You swear positively, do you, that you did not make that statement, in substance, as set forth in the document which you now hold, and which you have read?

A. I do.

Q. At the time that I have stated, that is, at about the month of August, 1907, and in the old Grand Jury room of the Post Office Building of the United States, in the City of Portland, in the State of Oregon, you deny having made that statement to me, do you?

A. I do. And I will tell you, I will make a little explanation of that. I do remember you asking me the question about what per cent of the lands were agricultural, in the grant as now held by the company, and I said that there was none of it, practically none of it, from the fact that the agricultural lands were taken up before the company got their grant, and that prior to this time the company had sold to actual settlers, wherever they had any improvements on the land, or wanted to buy a small portion of land adjoining their holdings, they had bought it up, and at the present time there was practically no agricultural land in the district, in their grant, although I said that there was occasionally a patch all through these large timber holdings, that might be considered as agricultural land—small portions—and also that there was quite a proportion of it that was only valuable for grazing lands. Then you made the broad interpretation of agricultural lands as including these grazing lands. Now, you said, "Supposing that you call agricultural land what you call grazing lands—grazing is a department of agriculture, that comes under the head of agricultural."

Q. I said that to you, did I?

A. You said that to me.

Q. You remember that distinctly, do you?

A. I remember that.

Q. And you swear to it now, do you?

A. I do, yes, sir, I swear to it. And I said, "Well, that would make quite a difference, because there is a great portion of it that has always been considered as only valuable for grazing lands." But as to saying that even that portion would amount to 50 per cent, taking the grazing and agricultural lands together, I might possibly have made that assertion. But I think it is pretty large. This next statement here: "Mr. Elliott thinks that there were quite a number of instances where people had actually settled on railroad land, and wanted to buy the land for agricultural use, but were too poor to pay the price which the company demands, and were, for that reason, prevented from acquiring the land. In these instances, the price was very much in excess of $2.50 per acre." Now, I am positive I never made any such assertion as that. But I did tell you that wherever there was an actual settler on the land, the Railroad Company had always, so far as my knowledge was concerned, refused to sell that land to any one else but the actual settler, and in very many cases, where it was just simply a forty acres adjoining their homestead, if they had a little fence on it, a little piece of it in cultivation or fenced in as pasture, wherever that came to our knowledge, the Railroad Company refused to sell that to any one but the actual settler.

Q. The question is do you swear that you did not make the statement you have read as set forth in that document?

A. I do. I say that I did not make that statement. (Hands back statement to counsel.)

Q. Is there any other portion of this statement that you deny having made to me at the time and place that I have indicated?

A. Well, there are several little places in there where I don't think I made it just exactly. I think you have given it a different interpretation from what I did.

Q. I want those pointed out. That is what I asked you to read it over for.

A. All right, sir. I will do that. Now, this statement here, Mr. Townsend. I don't know just what—it says. "The general instructions with reference to cruising were substantially the same during the entire time Mr. Elliott worked for the company." This statement here, now, "but the use to be made of the cruising apparently changed as the demand for timberlands increased." I don't know what could be meant by that, and I don't know why, if I did make such a statement, I don't know why it should be made. "But the use to be made"—because the use of these cruises was always the same. It does not make any difference what they were looking for, whether they were looking for agricultural lands, or what they were looking for, the actual cruise of the lands, you know, was made for the purpose of classifying and appraising the lands; always was that; and I don't know why that statement should be made in there, "but the use to be made of the cruising apparently changed as the demand for timber-lands increased." The use of it—I surely would not make such a statement as that, because the purpose of all these cruises was to ascertain the character and the value of the land.

Q. Do you deny having made that statement to me at that time and place that I have indicated in my former question?

A. Why, yes, I do, because the use of these cruises has always been for the same purpose. I surely never would make an assertion like that. Now, "The efforts to sell were to meet the condition then existing, which was that sales could be made to none except those who wished the land for agricultural or grazing use." I probably made that assertion there, but that was not to intimate that the company could not sell for anything but that, but that there was no sale for anything but agricultural or grazing use.

Q. I am not asking you to explain any of these statements made in there, but I am asking you whether you made them.

A. Well, I probably made that one, yes. I think that is about all that I would say.

Q. With the exceptions that you have noted, is it not a fact that you did at the time and place that I have mentioned make the statements set forth in this document?

A. I probably did, in substance, as you have it there.

Whereupon complainant offered in evidence as a part of the cross examination of witness the document last referred to in his examination as "Government's Exhibit 122" to which defendants objected upon the ground that it is a narrative or purported narrative based upon an alleged conversation between witness and Mr. Townsend and contains attempted or purported conclusions of Mr. Townsend from the conversation with the witness and is hearsay and not impeaching testimony and the document is unsigned and not a statement of the witness but the statement of counsel based upon his understanding of what witness may have said and is therefore incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Whereupon defendants also moved to strike out said document for the same reasons which said "Government's Exhibit 122" was received in evidence and is as follows:

"GOVERNMENT'S EXHIBIT 122.

"INFORMATION RECEIVED FROM F. A. ELLIOTT.

"Mr. Elliott now lives at Newberg, Oregon. In the fall of 1888, he came from Illinois to Oregon, and in the spring of 1889 was employed as a member of the cruising staff of Mr. N. E. Britt, who was the chief land examiner of the Ore. & Cal. R. R. Co. Mr. Elliott commenced work in May, 1889. Just before starting out upon the cruise, Mr. Elliott overheard a conversation between Britt and Mr. Andrews, the acting land agent, and Mr. Andrews said, in substance, that he hoped Britt would find a lot of agricultural and grazing lands this trip, to which Britt replied that he hoped he would find a lot of good timber land, the same as he did the year before.

"Mr. Britt had been in charge of a cruise conducted by the railroad company the preceding year, the work being done in the Mohawk Valley, in Lane and Linn counties, in the viciniity of the Cascades. From information then and afterwards received, Mr. Elliott learned that the first general cruising done by the company was commenced in 1888. Prior to that time, what cruising had been done was for the purpose of individual sales.

"Mr. Elliott continued in the service of the railroad company from May, 1889 until May 1, 1907. The first two years Elliott worked as compass man with one of the crews. Then he became an estimator, and worked in that capacity with others for about seven years, when he became chief cruiser, in which capacity he served the company for the last nine years of his service. During the course of his employment, Mr. Eliott visited every portion of the grant, and there are but few townships which he has not examined in whole or in part.

"The general instructions with reference to cruising were substantially the same during the entire time Mr. Elliott worked for the company, but the use to be made of the cruising apparently changed as the demand for timber lands increased. When Mr. Elliott first started to work, there was practically no demand for timber lands. Speculation in any of the lands was very rare. The efforts to sell were to meet the condition then existing, which was that sales could be made to none except those who wished the land for agricultural or grazing use. The theory of Mr. Andrews seemed to be that the company's principal chance of selling the land was to settlers who desired to cultivate it, or use it for grazing purposes.

"The general plan of the cruising was to ascertain first whether the land was timber land or not, and if timber land, whether the land was valuable for agriculture or grazing after the timber was removed. The same report was made with reference to the lands which had no timber. Agricultural lands were graded No. 1, 2 and 3, and grazing lands had the same grades. The theory of Mr. Andrews, as quite frequently expressed, was to find large tracts available for agricultural use and then induce settlement of large colonies, and disposing of the land to the members of the colonies. The lands were cruised with this purpose in view until the demand for timber began. This was in about 1892.

"Down to that time, there had been practically no demand for timber land for the timber itself. But the demand for timber land increased quite rapidly from 1892, and within the course of five or six years, there was a very heavy demand for timber lands by mill men and by lumber men, generally for speculation, as well as for actual milling use. Large lumber men from Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota and other eastern states came west in the years following 1892 and made large purchases.

"Mr. Elliott says that until about 1892, the railroad company did not believe that the timber lands had any value which could be realized out of them for many years. That Mr. Britt, in cruising the lands in the Mohawk Valley in 1888, found large timber lands, and called the attention of Booth-Kelly people to them, and finally induced them to buy, and this was about the first sale of timber lands in any quantity, and was possibly made in the year 1891 or 1892.

"From Mr. Elliott's conversation, it is certain that Mr. Andrews, and those conducting the land business for the company, understood about the Act of 1869 which limited sales to actual settlers in limited quantities and for a limited price. This question was discussed some during all the time Elliott worked for the company. It is apparent that Andrews and Mills understood this point, and that they endeavored to dispose of as much of the land as they could before they were stopped, commencing about 1892, because as soon as there became a brisk demand for timber lands, the policy of the company seemed to change from trying to dispose of agricultural lands to that of making a special effort to find purchasers for timber lands, and the timber land sales were exploited thoroughly. During all this time, it is a fact that Mr. Andrews got as much for the land as its then market price. He was better informed than most of the timber owners, and was able to sell in large quantities; and taking advantage of these conditions and his knowledge, he constantly demanded the top market price for timber lands.

"There was never any effort made to obey the conditions of the Act of 1869. Everything was done to sell the land as rapidly as possible in as large quantities as possible and for as high a price as possible without reference to the character of the purchaser or the use he intended to make of it.

"It was quite generally supposed and particularly by Andrews and the other railroad men themselves, that the eastern speculators were paying more for this timber land than they could get out of it for many years to come.

"The cruising was continued without reference to sales so as to include the entire grant as rapidly as possible, and the entire grant was practically all cruised by 1906 or 1907.

"Indemnity lands were cruised prior to selection for the very purpose of giving the company information to enable it to make intelligent selections. This does not mean that indemnity lands were all cruised before selection.

"Shortly after Mr. Harriman got control of the road in 1901, Mr. Eberlein came to the coast and organized the land departments of the different railroads in the Southern Pacific system. One of the first things he did was to stop sales and took the matter of sales entirely out of the hands of Mr. Andrews and Mr. Mills. The entire land business was checked over under Mr. Eberlein's direction. Mr. Eberlein expressed one of his reasons for this, because he frequently said that Andrews was selling lands at much less than their actual value.

"Mr. Elliott does not know anything with reference to any instructions Mr. Eberlein has had from superiors, but recalls that the sales were stopped just about the time of the oil boom in California.

"Mr. Elliott remembers Eberlein explaining his reason for stopping sales by saying that he desired to acquire personal familiarity with the lands and their values before any more sales were made.

"Mr. Elliott remembers distinctly that there was a very marked change in the manner of land sales at about 1892. Prior to that time, there were practically no sales except to actual settlers in small quantities and for agricultural use. Then the demand for timber land began and developed very rapidly, and from that time on, nearly all of the sales have been of timber lands to timber men and speculators in large quantities and at prices considerably in advance of those obtained before.

"Mr. Elliott states that he is familiar, in a general way, with the lands in most of the large sales, and that all of the large sales contained some lands which had been reported to the company as valuable for agricultural use after the removal of timber, and some of the sales contained a considerable quantity of such lands.

"The character of the land and its susceptibility for agricultural use was apparently never considered. Sales were made in large quantities to the timber speculators of any of the lands without regard to their agricultural character. The company never refused to sell lands to timber speculators where the price was satisfactory on the ground that the lands were capable of settlement. In a great many localities the Government land adjoining the timber land sold in these large quantities was actually under cultivation by settlers growing fruit, vegetables and other farm product. This had progressed to a limited extent because all of the country was undeveloped and settlers were just commencing to come in. Mr. Elliott thinks that in time fully 50 per cent of all lands now held by the railroad company will be valuable chiefly for the growing of fruit, vegetables and other farm products.

"Mr. Elliott thinks that there were quite a number of instances where people had actually settled on railroad land and wanted to buy the land for agricultural use, but were too poor to pay the price which the company demands, and were, for that reason, prevented from acquiring the land. In these instances, the price was very much in excess of $2.50 per acre.

"The general instruction of all the cruising was to ascertain the actual value of the land for all purposes, and Andrews endeavored to secure a liberal price for all the land. In fact, tried to get all that could be gotten out of the land.

"Mr. Elliott remembers very well the sale to Hammond & Winton in Tillamook county. It was a well known transaction at the time, and is the largest sale the railroad company ever made. There is absolutely no doubt about the genuineness of this sale in 1901. Mr. Elliott and Mr. Britt together conducted the cruising of this land.

"The earlier contracts, even for timber lands, were, about all of them, ten-year contracts, and as the sales increased, Andrews took advantage of the increased demand and shortened the time of payment so that the latter ones were for seven years and some even for five.

"Mr. Elliott is confident that the railroad company never relinquished any forest reserve lands under the lieu selection law. The land in the forest reserve was sold by the company, and the purchasers made lieu selections.

"There was no substantial amount of agitation of the rights of the company to sell in quantities greater than 160 acres until during the past year. When the matter would be mentioned in the presence of Andrews, he would ignore the question and say that it was all tommy-rot or evade it in some such manner as that.

"Mr. Elliott thinks that there is about 2,600,000 acres left in the grant unsold, but this includes unpatented lands and unsurveyed lands, and Mr. Elliott is not very certain just how much of the land is unsurveyed.

"Mr. Elliott has just completed cruise of Polk county railroad lands, and examined practically 193,000 acres and cruised it at nearly 7,000,000,000 feet of merchantable timber at a valuation of about $5,000,000.00. Mr. Elliott thinks the timber alone on the remainder of the grant now owned by the railroad company is worth from thirty to fifty millions of dollars, and this is on a conservative estimate of quantity, as well as price.

"The Southern Pacific Company is running three mills in Lane County. They cut everything and make it into ties, bridge timber and other timber generally."

Q. Do you remember who were present at the time you had the conversation with me and that I dictated a statement to the stenographer as the conversation proceeded?

A. I do not.

Q. Do you remember who the stenographer was?

A. I do not. I don't think I knew at the time. I probably did not.

Q. Was it a man or a woman?

A. Well, I think it was a woman, but I would not be positive of that.

Q. There were three or four other persons in the office at the time, were there not?

A. Yes.

Q. I had something like five or six clerks there?

A. Yes, probably, and a door-keeper.

Q. A door-keeper?

A. Yes, some man standing at the door to introduce me.

Q. Do you swear to that, Mr. Elliott?

A. I think I would, yes.

Q. That I ever had a door-keeper, or that anybody ever stood there to introduce you or anybody else?

A. Well, I was thinking there was a man there, I would not be positive of that.

Q. Well, why would you be mistaken on that?

A. Didn't you have a door-keeper, one that ushered people in?

Q. Never had in my life, here or anywhere else.

A. Well, I may be mistaken on it then.

Q. Why could you be mistaken on a point of that kind, if you are attempting to tell the truth here?

A. Well, I was under the impression that there was a man there to usher people in and out.

Q. Any reason why you should imagine anything of that kind?

A. No, sir, none whatever. That is just my recollection of it. It might have been one of your clerks.

Q. You say he was a big door-keeper, do you, too?

A. He was big—there was a big man there, I remember. It might have been one of your clerks. I don't know who he was.

Q. Fulkerson weighed 110.

A. No, there was a larger man than that there.

Q. How many rooms did I have there?

A. I don't know. I was only in one room, I think.

Q. It is a fact, isn't it, that as I discussed this subject with you, I dictated it in my own narrative, as this statement shows, and not in the first person for you to sign. That is true, is it not?

A. You were dictating, talking to a stenographer there all the time. I didn't know whether they were taking it all down, and apparently they did not take it all down. That is, the conversation as we talked it.

Q. Well, is it not a fact that I would discuss a subjest with you for some few minutes, and then turn and dictate a sentence or two embodying the substance of our conversation?

A. That is what I thought you were doing, yes.

Q. Well, you heard what I dictated, didn't you?

A. I think I did at the time, yes.

Q. Did you correct me in any particular?

A. I don't remember now at all. I do remember asking you at one time if you were having it all taken down, the questions and answers.

Q. Do you not remember that, in response to that, I told you that we would discuss each subject until we had agreed upon the form of the statement, and that then I would dictate it to the stenographer, and that that plan was carried out?

A. I don't remember that at all. You might have said it.

Whereupon witness further testified that he left the employ of the Railroad Company May 1st, 1906, to take other employment. He was not dismissed from or requested to leave the service and it is not a fact that he and Mr. Britt were both dismissed from the service at that time. He thinks he has a copy of his letter of resignation, not with him, but he thinks he can produce it and the answer from Eberlein at the time, stating that he was sorry that he saw fit to quit. He has never been discharged from any employment of the kind. He does not think he ever told any one that he had made a statement to Mr. Townsend, counsel for the complainant, concerning this case, and he never told any of the employes or attorneys or officers of the Railroad Company, that he had made a statement; he may have mentioned the fact to Rees, but never to any attorney or any one else, since this trial began, meaning since the testimony was being taken, when he was here a month ago. He may have done some work for the Railroad Company in the summer of 1907 but thinks 1908 was the first time after 1906, when he cruised Polk County. That fall he worked for a pulp and paper company in California and Nevada and may possibly have worked for the Company some in 1907, but he thinks it was not until 1908. When he left the employ of the Railroad Company—May 1906, he went to work on the county cruise of Polk County for the County Court of Polk County for assessment purposes. He cruised everything in that county, that was timbered. He did not examine other lands excepting to see that they were not timbered. They would take a township, where it was all timbered and would naturally cruise all of it. This took him five or six months and he had six to fifteen people assisting him, a crew all summer of from six to fifteen men under the direction of himself and Walter V. Fuller, the man who had the contract with him. They had made a contract with the county, to cruise these lands. Mr. Fuller has already testified as a witness for the Railroad Company in this suit, as he has been informed. Fuller had been cruising lands before they undertook this work. Fuller was in the timber business, buying and selling timber but not associated with him. This cruising for Polk County, is the first association they had ever had, in a business way. He did not quit the Railroad Company for that work, but because he thought he could do better, working for himself, than on a salary. He does not remember what time in the fall of 1906, but it was probably in September that they got through cruising the lands in Polk County. After that, he went to California to work for the Floriston Pulp and Paper Company who are practically the same people who own the Crown Columbia Pulp and Paper Company at Oregon City. He worked there in California until the fore part of December, when he came home. The next year he and Fuller did a little buying and selling and cruising for other people, part in Polk and Lincoln Counties for about a year. He does not think he worked for anyone on a salary during the summer of 1907. He thinks they were doing a little timber business during that year. The first work he did, after this work that he and Fuller did in 1907, was probably for the Central Pacific Railway Company in California, but he is not positive about that.

He thinks he worked during the summer of 1908, probably 4 or 5 months, in the employ of Eberlein a short time and later in the employ of McAllaster. He does not think he was there when McAllaster came in September 1908. He only had worked a month or so for Eberlein that summer but it might have been in the summer of 1909 that he worked for McAllaster 4 or 5 months. He only worked a short time for Eberlein, if it was in 1908. Eberlein is the man who had charge of the Oregon and California Railroad land grant in Oregon at the time witness resigned. Eberlein wrote him, that he had some special work for him, to do, down in California and he came down there to do it for him and probably worked a month or six weeks in all for him at that time cruising and checking up a trespass that a timber company had made on the railroad land. When he went to work for McAllaster the next summer, in 1909, he was making a preliminary cruise of the timber in northern California in Siskiyou County and was employed probably four or five months. That was the last work he thinks that he did in California. When he got through in California he came up to Oregon and did a little work in this grant that same winter, until about February and since that time he has not done any work for the Company. That is probably the time he did this little work in Clackamas County, in February 1910, that he had forgotten about. Since that time he has not done any work for the Railroad Company.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

Q. Now, upon what do you base your testimony that I assumed that you had a grievance against this railroad company when I had my interview with you?

A. Just from the way you began talking to me.

Q. Well, what did I say?

A. Well, you said that, the way I remember now, I don't say—I wouldn't swear that this was just what you said, but that "you are out of the employ of the company now, and of course you,"—now you didn't say this just in this many words, but you intimated that, of course, I would tell all I knew about it, about the company.

Q. Well, was there any reason why you should not?

A. I didn't know that there was.

Q. Was there anything that I said there to indicate that you would tell anything that was not true?

A. Well, I don't know if there is, only I think you misinterpreted a good deal of the conversation.

Q. Well, isn't it a fact that instead of assuming that you would tell anything that was not true, I simply stated to you that I assumed, from the fact that you were out of their employ, you would tell the truth about it? Isn't that all there was to it?

A. Well, I don't know.

Q. Isn't that true?

A. State that question again.

(Question read as follows): Well, isn't it a fact that instead of assuming that you would tell anything that was not true, I simply stated to you that I assumed, from the fact that you were out of their employ, you would tell the truth about it? Isn't that all there was to it?

A. Well, I don't know as that would be the natural assumption at all.

Q. Well, didn't you swear a few minutes ago that I said to you that now you were out of the employ of the Railroad Company, I assumed that you would tell all you knew about it? Didn't you swear to that?

A. How is that? State that question.

(Question read).

A. I don't think I did.

Mr. Townsend: Please read that answer back a page or two.

(Answer read as follows): "Well, you said that, the way I remember now—I don't say—I wouldn't swear that this was just what you said, but that 'you are out of the employ of the company now, and of course you,'—now, you didn't say this just in this many words, but you intimated that, of course, I would tell all I knew about it, about the company."

Q. Did you not a few moments ago testify in answer to a former question of mine, that I said to you in substance that you were out of the Railroad Company, and I therefore assumed that you would tell all you knew about the company?

A. I think I did, yes.

Q. Well, why have you changed your mind? Did you not testify in answer to two or three questions back, that you did not so testify a few moments ago?

A. I don't think I did.

(Question and answer read as follows): "Q. Well, didn't you swear a few moments ago that I said to you that now you were out of the employ of the Railroad Company, I assumed that you would tell all you knew about it? Didn't you swear to that? A. I don't think I did."

Q. Did you not testify a few moments ago just as the Examiner has now read to you?

A. Is that the same question he asked before? The first testimony was there that from your conversation I thought that you assumed this. I didn't say that you said this, but I said that from your conversation, you seemed to assume, or I thought that you assumed, that because I was out of the employ of the company, that I would say so and so.

Q. Well now, is that your version of it?

A. As near as I can get at it from the different questions you have asked, they are all the same.

Q. Well, have you not, within the last ten minutes both sworn that I said in substance that because you were out of the employ of the Railroad Company, you would tell all you knew about it, and at another time, that that did not occur? Have you not sworn both ways in the last ten minutes?

A. I don't think so, no.

Q. Well now, have you anything else to justify your present testimony that I assumed that you had a grievance against the Railroad Company, and would testify against them?

A. No, I have not.

Q. Did you tell me that you had any grievance against the Railroad Company?

A. No, sir.

Q. In our interview in 1907?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you tell me that you had had any trouble with them?

A. I did not, because I never had had any trouble with them.

Whereupon witness further testified that he became State Forester on March 25, 1911, and has served in that capacity ever since and has had a number of men in his employ engaged in the general work under his charge, including local fire wardens. He has had in his employ what he calls supervising wardens in all the heavily timbered counties. The local fire wardens are under their supervision. The supervisors, as they call them, are hired generally by the timber owners. There is about one supervising warden to each of the counties containing large timber. Last year, (1911) they had, he thinks, twenty-three. This year probably twenty-six. Some counties last year where they had one man in two counties they had one for each of the counties this year, and he had three men employed in that manner who were formerly employed by the Oregon and California Railroad Company. That is all that he could recall. Roy Woods, W. J. Lander and Porter S. King, are all that he remembers now, that have been in the employ of the Railroad Company. He has no list with him of these supervisors working for him during the time he has been State Forester. There is a list of the supervisors for 1911 in "Defendants' Exhibit 360" being the first annual report of the State Forester. The form used while Andrews was in charge was changed soon after Eberlein came into office to a form similar to "Defendants' Exhibit 261" and "Defendants' Exhibit 358." He cruised a portion of the land near Marcola in Lane County, adjacent to the mill of the Southern Pacific Company, mill No. 1 he thinks it is called, and at various times cruised a portion of the railroad lands in Eastern Clackamas County,—he thinks some lands in almost every township in which the railroad lands are situated in Clackamas County, but could not say that he has cruised all of them. He thinks he has cruised some lands in all of these townships except one or two, possibly. He has cruised nearly all the railroad lands in Polk County and has seen and observed the character of them and has cruised quite a good deal of the lands in Jackson County and has cruised all along the California line and has cruised some in the Butte Falls country and some in Evans Creek and on the main Rogue River and has cruised in the Jenny Creek country in townships

39, 40 and 41, ranges 4, 5 and 6 east. His opinion as to the character of these unsold lands involved in this suit applies, generally speaking, to the even numbered sections intervening those lands. There may have been a quarter section taken up here and there that would support a family, and there might have been a quarter section sold years ago, but the land that is now vacant, that is now in the hands of the Railroad Company and the lands that are not held by settlers, or not being cultivated or lived upon, he would say as far as he knows, there is none that will support a family. The length of time it would take to grow timber large enough for milling purposes on logged off land, depends on the location. Where the red and yellow fir grow one gets fairly good small saw timber in fifty to seventy-five years, good piling and some saw logs out of it. Pine timber would take longer. At present prices the present growth of timber would average about $3,000 a quarter; that would be a very conservative estimate of the valuation on it. For timber lands say $20.00 an acre, referring to the value of timber. He thinks the only practical use that can ever be made of that land is with proper methods of reforestation, to reforest it and get a new crop of timber about every seventy-five years. In seventy-five years from now it would probably be worth as much as the present crop is at this time, anticipating an increased price for the timber. At present prices it would not be worth so much. In his judgment there is approximately 4,600,000 acres of land within the exterior boundary limits of this grant that will never have any practical use excepting that of reforesting and getting a new crop of timber about every seventy-five years. This includes the land in the immediate vicinity of the Southern Pacific Company's mill at Marcola, that is the main portion of it. There may be little strips of land along near the Mohawk Creek that would be of more value for agricultural or grazing purposes, but the main portion of the land is of more value for raising timber. The country there is quite rough and generally is too rough for agricultural purposes.

Whereupon the witness further testified as follows:

Q. How about that country in around Butte Falls? Do you find any quarter sections there that would support a family among the railroad lands?

A. I do not think there are any of them there supporting a family—any quarter section in that country.

Q. Well, the Railroad Company will not let them.

A. No, but I mean the Government lands. You asked me about the Government lands.

Q. No, I asked you about the railroad lands.

A. Well, I don't think there are. And I say that I don't think there are of the Government lands where a man is living there on a Government piece of land or any piece of land, he has a little bit of agricultural or hay land and he uses several hundred or possibly several thousand acres of land to range his few stock on to make his living.

Q. Well now, if there are a large number of families living on the even numbered sections in the township in which Butte Falls is situated, and have been living there for years, making a very comfortable living, and none of them with more than 160 acres, is there any reason why you should not have seen it when you went through there?

A. No, there is not.

Q. And if there are a number of families maintaining themselves on not to exceed 160 acres of land in the immediate vicinity of the mills of the Southern Pacific Company at Marcola, is there any reason why you should not have seen it?

A. No, sir. There are families in there along the Mohawk River, that are living on probably 160 acres or maybe less. But that is land that has been taken up for years, and it is not such land as is now vacant.

Q. It is entirely different from the lands of the Railroad Company, is it?

A. It is entirely different, in that it lays along the stream and is either little bottom lands or very low bench lands, and not rough and broken, like the vacant lands are.

Whereupon witness further testified that he knows a man by the name of Balderee who is logging foreman for the Gerlinger Logging & Lumber Company in the Black Rock country in Polk County. He thinks that during the time witness was cruising near Marcola for the Southern Pacific Company, that Balderee was with the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company. Witness would not swear that he never saw a family cultivating and supporting themselves on logged off lands immediately adjoining these railroad lands, of the same character except that the timber had been removed and the land cleared and subjected to cultivation, but he cannot recall a quarter section of land that has been sold by the Railroad Company, on which a family is being supported. He became acquainted in a general way, while working as a cruiser, with the identity of the lands that had been sold by the Railroad Company, as well as the lands which still remain unsold. For a number of years he cruised practically all that the Company sold.

Whereupon on redirect examination witness further testified that he was in attendance upon this hearing under subpoena issued in this cause and served upon him.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence pages 19, 20, 21, 22, 23 and 24 of "Defendants' Exhibit 360" as to the list of State Fire Wardens for 1911, showing patrolmen paid from Federal funds under section 2 of the Weeks law and State Fire Wardens serving without compensation, or in employ of timber owners or the U. S. Forest Service.

Whereupon witness further testified that these people whose names are on these pages were employed during 1911 as there stated.

Whereupon HOMER D. ANGELL, being called as a witness on behalf of defendants, and being duly sworn, testified that he is thirty-seven years of age, an attorney, and resides at Portland, Oregon. He and his partner were employed by the land department of the Oregon and California Railroad Company for some time under Eberlein, and had charge of several men who made examinations of various parts of the grant and made reports on the character of the land and took photographs of certain portions of it. That has been four or five years ago now. He is a practical surveyor; began surveying during the summer when he was a small lad, and was employed continuously in that line of work from 1891 until 1903, and has had some, but not extensive, employment along that line since. A good portion of that time he was employed as chainman or other work on surveys, and for a number of years he did contracting work. He considers himself a competent surveyor in matters of that kind, but he never did any surveying for the railroad company other than assisting in locating these lands, of which pictures were taken. He assisted in taking some of the photographs marked collectively "Defendants' Exhibit 270." He assisted in taking the photograph, locating the land from the Government corner, and made the notations, referring to John L. Snyder's cabin on the southeast quarter of Section 17, Township 4 north, range 3 west; and also the notation marked "2" thereon; also Nos. 3, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10. These seem to be all the pictures that he can identify other than there were two large pictures taken, when he was present.

Referring to Defendants' Exhibit 267, with a notation attached to it, and affidavit made by himself and F. A. Elliott, he made that affidavit so signed by him, and assisted in taking the picture, and he is one of the men shown standing on the right hand corner of the picture, which was taken by Gifford. The picture was taken from a point in the south half of section 8, township 7 south, range 6 west, and covers an estimated distance of perhaps eight miles in the view shown in the picture. The camera stood, he thinks, on section 8, an even section, but the lands that they were endeavoring to show in the picture were further out, and the picture is a correct representation of what it purports to show.

Referring to the photographs identified by him as part of Defendants' Exhibit 270, they determined who erected these cabins first, by the notices posted upon the cabins, presumably by the claimants, and by the names of the claimants on the notices, and in some instances they saw the claimants themselves, who were present. There was no one living in any of these cabins shown in the pictures which he has identified. In some few of them there were some small utensils for cooking, and in one, a roll of bedding, he believes. The cabins did not have any appearance of having been the domicile of a family or of anybody other than one or two showed that some one had camped there for a night or such a matter. There was an excellent stand of timber in each case where these cabins were situated; chiefly fir.

Whereupon complainant objected to this testimony as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and it was agreed that this same objection shall be considered as taken to all the testimony of the witness relating to the character of the lands within the limits of this grant and settlements thereon and public land entries thereof.

Whereupon witness further testified that he thinks he is familiar with the stand of timber in Western Oregon, which would be deemed commercially valuable. He gained his knowledge chiefly from his work in the Government service, in surveying timber lands. His work has been quite largely in timbered areas, and it was necessary to his report, to characterize the topography of the land, including the timber upon it, and the chief value that he ascribed to the land, and his experience in making these surveys and reports was in Oregon, and especially timber lands in Oregon, Washington and Idaho, and some portions of Montana. In each instance, the claims upon which these cabins were constructed, and upon which these parties whose names he had given, had made claims, that he examined, were taken upon lands that had a very heavy stand of timber, and there was no instance where a claim was made on lands that would not be classed as timber lands. What is considered a stand of timber per thousand feet board measure in Western Oregon that would make it commercially valuable for timber, depends somewhat upon its location, but his general experience is, that if there is a million feet to a quarter section, unless it is so isolated that it would be impracticable to market it, that it is valuable for timber. He has been over a considerable portion of the lands involved in this suit. He has been in Klamath County, but could not definitely say whether he has been on the portions of the grant in that county, but he has been pretty well around in the timbered area of that county. He has been along the road from Ashland to Klamath Falls, and on most of the prominent roads, leading out from Ashland. He did some surveying in Klamath County several years ago, near Ashland, but does not recall the township. The timber through which he went where he made these surveys, was of good quality and a good stand of timber. A portion there, is exceptionally valuable for Oregon timber. It is what is called, he believes, sugar pine, and various qualities of pine, not very common in this state. But the major portion of timber is fir. He has been through Jackson County from several different directions, and especially in the timber. He surveyed, he thinks, at least one township in Jackson County, but on Williams Creek. He went from Jacksonville, and it is not a great way out there, west. He has been over lands of the company in the Williams Creek country in Jackson County. The stand of timber in there is not so good as the general stand in some sections of Southern Oregon. The timber is more scattering, but the land in that township is valuable only for timber, in his estimation. Outside of the timber lands, and outside of the valleys of the Rogue River and streams that lead into it, in Jackson County, in his opinion, the lands are of little value. These lands are rocky, covered with very thick brush, and scattering timber in places. There are open places, but outside of small tracts along streams, they do not seem suitable for agriculture, and there is a very poor stand of grass for grazing purposes on the major portion of it. The brush that grows over a good portion of this land that he has thus described, is buck brush, commonly called, and manzanita, and these have no commercial value whatever of which he has ever learned. He has been over quite a portion of Josephine County out from Grants Pass. In a general way, these lands are similar to the lands in Jackson County, although the timber is better, he thinks, than in Jackson County, and perhaps more mountainous. The soil of the lands in Josephine County, on these uplands, is of poor quality, not adapted to agriculture. A good portion of the soil is a sort of red soil. There is a great deal of decomposed granite soil. In fact he has had occasion to ship some of that granite from Grants Pass for use at Portland in making walks, and it is used as ballast on railroads to some extent. He does not know of any use that it can be put to for agricultural or horticultural purposes. He has never been in Curry County. He has been over Douglas County quite generally. He did considerable surveying for the Government in that county, ran about thirty miles in length of the Willamette Meridian, he thinks, in Douglas County, and the lands of the company with which he is familiar in that county, are very mountainous and covered with heavy timber or undergrowth, with the exception of isolated tracts on creek bottoms or streams, and are not suitable for agricultural purposes. They are chiefly valuable for their timber, and there are portions suitable for grazing, but not to any great extent, back in the mountains. The chief stand of timber, a very valuable stand in that country, is fir. He has been over portions of Lane County in the timbered area; in fact, up on the McKenzie River, and north and south. He has made some examinations of timber lands in Lane County in a general way, looking to see the quality of the timber, and if there were timber lands vacant, but has not made any examination, or been over any of the lands west of Eugene, in the Siuslaw country belonging to the company, or other timber owners. The lands which he examined in Lane County, or has seen, were principally tributary to the McKenzie River. They were very high mountainous lands, covered with timber or old burns grown up with undergrowth, and the chief value of these lands covered with timber, were for their timber. It was practically its only value under known conditions. He knows of no use to which these burned over lands in their present condition could be put, but he presumes that if they could be denuded of the brush so that grasses might grow, they would be suitable for grazing, but the cost of putting them in such shape that they would be suitable for that purpose, would be prohibitive. He has been in the Eastern portion of Linn County in the timbered area, in the Santiam country, up from Lebanon. He did some surveying on the Santiam, in township 10 south, range 4 east, but is not sure that this is in Linn County. He has been over a considerable portion of the company's lands in the eastern part of Linn County, and especially in connection with Government surveying. The chief characteristic giving these lands value is their timber; practically their only characteristic, other than isolated portions. These portions that might be utilized for some agricultural purposes, are small tracts, and his experience has been that there is no tract other than just a few acres, that is suitable for agriculture, at least without an enormous expense. These tracts are isolated and separate from one another, and lie chiefly along streams. There are certain level patches on divides that might be adapted to agriculture, but no body of land of any considerable size. He has not been in Lincoln County to any extent. He has been over portions of the timbered area of Marion County, and the lands, according to his information remaining unsold in the grant in that county, are mountainous and rough, and portions of them are covered with a good stand of timber, and their chief value is for the timber. There is a considerable area of burned over lands in Marion County among these lands. They are covered with stumps and standing dead trees, and heavily covered with undergrowth. Such lands have practically no value under modern conditions, of which he knows. He has been out through portions of Polk County, and has been on and examined some of the lands of the Company. The lands that he had to do with in Polk County were timbered lands, and portions of them were in old burns, and those that were covered with timber were chiefly valuable for their timber. The burned over land is of very little use without a great deal of expense in attempting to clear it. He has been over portions, but not over the whole of Clackamas County. He has been in places over the timbered lands on the Clackamas River. These lands are timbered, with the exception of portions that are scattering burns. The chief value of the lands belonging to the company that he has examined in Clackamas County, was their timber. He has crossed over the mountains going from North Yamhill to the Coast in Yamhill County, over the headwaters of the Trask, and in going that way he presumes he would see or go over unsold lands of the company. The company's lands are scattered through there in the odd sections, and he thinks it would be impossible to go across, without crossing the company's lands. These lands and the adjacent even sections are mountainous, and considerable portions of them are covered extensively with timber, a good stand of commercial timber, and in places there are burns. He has to some extent been over the company's lands in Multnomah County, up towards Latourelle Falls, back from the Columbia River. These lands are very mountainous, exceptionally so, and covered with a heavy growth of timber. Portions of those lands perhaps have the heaviest growth of timber in the grant. He has been in the vicinity above Latourelle Falls, and towards Larch Mountain, and these lands have an exceptionally good growth of timber. It is his impression that he has not been over any of the lands in Washington County. He has been over roads leading into Tillamook County, which passed through the mountains, and in doing so, had to go over the timber lands. And from his knowledge of these lands in Tillamook County, he would say their chief value was for the timber. There is an excellent stand of timber on the mountainous lands in Tillamook County. He has been in Columbia County, out in the vicinity of these claims, the pictures of which were identified by him, and he examined somewhat the character of the lands surrounding these claims. The general character of the unsold lands of the Company in Columbia County is very heavily timbered and covered with a very heavy undergrowth. Their commercial value is for the timber only. According to his understanding of the value of timber, these claims of 160 acres each, are worth from $5,000 to $20,000. The market value of stumpage on such timber in Western Oregon runs from 75 cents to two or even three dollars, owing to location with reference to ability to get it out. He has not dealt in, bought or sold timber lands, but knows of them being bought and sold. He has quite a general knowledge as to the value of timber, for the reason that he had considerable to do with it at the time he was connected with the Oregon and California Railroad Company. The lands that were sold, the stand of timber was taken, and he placed valuations upon it, and then he had to do with the value of timber other than that. He surveyed in the Forest Reserves, but not for the purpose of locating the reserve itself. He has surveyed for the Government, lands that were in the reserve. He has been through Coos County, and thinks he surveyed a small fractional township in that county, in the timbered area, which had an excellent growth of timber. The character of the lands which he surveyed in Coos County is very rough and heavily covered with undergrowth. Its chief value is for its timber. He was reared on a farm in Eastern Oregon, and lived in a farm until he was about fifteen years old, and since that time has some knowledge of farm life from observation in this country, particularly in Western Oregon.

Q. Now, suppose the company had sold these lands to so-called actual settlers, in quantities not exceeding 160 acres, and at a price not exceeding $2.50 an acre, and the actual settler had obtained a good title to the quarter section thus sold to him, and it was covered with this stand of timber or with the timber that is on these unsold lands, how long do you think it would be after the so-called actual settler got his title at $2.50 an acre, that he could sell that land to timber investors?

Q. And what would be the best use that he could make of that land?

A. Practically the only use he could make of the land would be to sell it for its timber, or sell the timber. My experience has been, in surveying in the timbered areas of this state, as well as other states, that lands acquired by homestead from the Government on the timbered areas are never occupied for any appreciable period after title has been acquired. I suppose that in all the lands that I have surveyed, and that I have been connected with since 1892, there were not half a dozen that were acquired either by homestead or by purchase, that the parties lived on after they secured their title.

Q. What did they do with the land?

A. They moved off, the buildings went into decay, and the small portions that were cleared were soon overgrown with undergrowth, and if there was timber on the land, the lands were sold to holders of large timbered tracts.

Q. Would that be the experience of these lands if the title was passed to these so-called settlers, in quantities of 160 acres at $2.50 an acre?

A. It would.

Q. Now, suppose that a settler was expected, under the Act, to go out there and live on one of these quarter sections, like some of these photographs which you have taken here, and to make a living for himself and his family on that quarter section, and to confine his stock that he might own and might pasture to the quarter section, what, in your judgment, would be his ability to make a living for himself or his family on that quarter section.

A. In my opinion it would be impossible to make a living off the land itself. If the land was contiguous to roads, he might cut wood and haul that to market and make a living, or he might by trapping or hunting; but by making a living from agriculture on the land, it is an impossibility.

Q. Could he make a living by grazing on the land?

A. There might be some isolated claims that he could, in some portions of Southern Oregon, but in the mountainous regions of Tillamook County or Yamhill County, Columbia County, or in the Cascades, along the border of the Cascades, where the company's lands are now located, it would be impossible in practically every instance to make a living by grazing.

Q. If he undertook to live on any of these quarter sections by means of pasturage, would he or would he not have to have an out-range besides?

A. It would be impossible to make a living off any one of these timbered quarter sections by grazing, being confined to that quarter only, in its present condition.

Q. Suppose a man went up into these big burns, picked out a quarter section that was burned over, or that did not at the present time have any considerable amount of timber on it, and undertook to make a home there for himself and his family, put some of this land to grass in the stumps after burning off the debris, do you think, or do you know of any quarter section within the limits of this grant where a man could go and take his family and fence his quarter section and make a living by pasturage on that quarter section?

A. I do not think there is a quarter section in the grant that could be used for that purpose. One of the main reasons why I am inclined to that opinion is that these lands are in high altitudes, and there is considerable snow falls there, and it lies on for a long period, and it would be necessary to raise hay in order to winter stock, or else take them to some other place during a large portion of the year. And a great deal of this land, when we begin surveying in June, the snow is very deep, especially on the north hillsides and all the mountains, and does not go off until midsummer, and then snow begins to fall in September in a great many places. As soon as we have the fall rains in the valley, it is snowing on the mountains.

Q. Some of these lands under the testimony here have been classified as grazing, and there has been some testimony that these lands when logged off could be seeded, after the fire had run through and burned over the land, and that the land could be pastured in that way over considerable areas. Do you not think, or do you think, that would be practicable, that it could be done?

A. Not practicable under present conditions. From my own personal knowledge, I know of thousands of acres that have been logged off that are admirably situated for that thing, if it could be done, but they are not utilized for that purpose, and I presume the chief difficulty is that as soon as the timber is removed, there is a very dense growth of undergrowth springs right up, and that may all be taken off one year, and next year it is all on there. It is almost impossible, seemingly, without taking the stumps and plowing the land thoroughly from year to year for a number of years, to eradicate the undergrowth.

Whereupon witness further testified that re-forestation of these lands has not been called to his attention and he has no knowledge of that. He discontinued his employment about the time Mr. McAllaster became connected with the company, he thinks about four years ago, and since that time he has had no employment with the company, or with the Southern Pacific Company, and thinks he never made any cruising or formal reports to the company of cruising, with the exception, possibly, of one or two instances, practically none.

Whereupon, on cross examination, witness further testified that he was born in Eastern Oregon, about eight miles from The Dalles, and remained on the farm until he was fifteen years of age, but was going to school a portion of that time. He was admitted to the bar in 1902, and has been engaged in the practice of law since 1903. Since he was twenty-one years of age he has been in the Government service other than when he was a student during the winter time, until he was admitted to the bar, the Government service referred to being Government surveying. He was a student in school during the winter and engaged in surveying during the surveying season, working for W. E. Campbell, United States Deputy Surveyor, and for Ed Sharp, who was a deputy, and after that witness was a contractor. He had been employed by contractors, men who had Government contracts, up until about 1900, and then for about ten years he was contracting for himself. He has owned farm lands since he reached man's estate, but he has not been actually engaged himself in farming, and would say that he understands farming as it is practiced in this country, but has not been engaged personally in the work of farming, and he has not been a farmer, except as an investor in some lands that he owned that are farm lands and that are being farmed; his experience until he was fifteen years old, on a farm, and since then, his people being farmers, he has had more or less to do with farmers. He is not a timber cruiser, although he testified as to having made some cruises of timber within this grant. He had made estimates of timber standing on claims, and he supposes it might be said that he made these as a timber cruiser, although he is not a cruiser and does not pretend to be. He thinks he can determine in a fairly accurate way the stand of timber on a claim. His experience in the woods has been such, he thinks, that he can do that, but he has never followed timber cruising. The memorandum noted on these photographs referred to by him, were made as soon as he returned after taking the picture, perhaps the next day. He made the notes in the field and then had them written on the typewriter. He made notes and wrote them as soon as he could get to a typewriter. These are not memoranda that he made on the ground, he does not think they are even copies. He made notes and then made this up from his notes as soon as he could get to a machine, and they are not verbatim memoranda that he made on the ground. The affidavit attached to Defendant's Exhibit 267 was not made on the ground, but immediately after returning from the field, possibly the next day, when the matters were fresh in his mind. Two or three days was usually the extent of any one trip. He supposes he would say that he was in charge of the parties that were cruising this land, making the examinations and taking the photographs, if one would say that any one was in charge. They went out, two or three of them, to take the photographs, and received all of their directions from Eberlein. The photographs were taken in 1907, on the dates indicated in the memoranda. He thinks that it was after the people had filed their applications, as they were first filed in San Francisco. He was informed by the company, and it was his understanding, that these people had filed applications. It is his impression that he surveyed a township for the Government on Indian Creek, in Klamath County, but he is not certain whether it was Klamath County or not, but he does not recall the details, because it is a good many years ago, and he has had no occasion to refer to it. He thinks that it was in, perhaps 1902. He did not, in 1902, survey that entire township, it was prior to that time. He was not in charge of the party. He was doing Government work at the time, but went with his nephew, who had some work there, and witness had some work in another place and they joined their cruise together, and went in on that work. He thinks that is the only township he surveyed in Klamath County, and he is not sure that it was in Klamath County, but he has been over Klamath County pretty much. He went from Klamath Falls to the lake, and then from the lake down to Medford, on a trip to see the country. He then went back on this work when they went up Indian Creek, and he passed through Klamath County, from Ashland to Klamath, and has been on the railroad running from Weed, California, up close to Klamath Falls. He is not sure whether that touches the lands involved in this grant or not. These trips that he made were traveling along the public highways and not surveying trips, except the one surveying trip that he had there. He made one or two other trips in that country. He thinks it is Klamath County, looking at some lands in connection with work for the company. Rees and he went down there. He does not recall the township; they went out from Ashland, back into the mountains. He surveyed a township in Jackson County, and he thinks it is 39 south, 6 west, but is not sure—it is on Williams Creek, and that is the only township he surveyed there, he thinks, and the only surveying he thinks he did in that county. He thinks he did not do any cruising there. In Douglas, he did quite a little surveying, where he ran the Willamette Meridian, if that is in that county. It is either in or right on the boundary line, but may be on the boundary. He thinks he was on Township 32 south, to 27 south, going north. Referring to Defendants' Exhibit 259, it is his impression that they ran the meridian line from the southern boundary of township 30 south, to the northern boundary of township 27 south. He does not recall that he has done any surveying in that county excepting these two townships, and running the meridian, and he thinks perhaps not. He went through that country, through the timbered area there, looking for vacant lands after that, but did not make an accurate cruise of the timber, but sized up the timber going through. He did not go through the entire timbered area in Douglas County, but went over quite a bit of the timber near that he mentioned that he surveyed, and west of that. Since he became twenty-one years of age he has been in the mountains in the summer time, and in the winter in school, with no particular place of abode, excepting that his people live at The Dalles, where he supposes his headquarters would be, where his mother lived. He attended the University of Oregon four years after leaving The Dalles, and then three years in Columbia University in New York, and has lived in Portland since 1903. He does not recall whether he did any surveying in Josephine County.

Q. In Lane or Linn County, have you surveyed any there?

A. I have done no Government work there.

Whereupon witness further testified that he had not cruised any lands in Linn or Lane County, but had been through the lands, looking at them to determine their character and the amount of timber, but not to make an accurate cruise. Some of that work was done for the company, and locating certain lands to see what they were valuable for, and as to other lands, he was looking for Government land that might have timber suitable for taking under the Timber and Stone Act. He has never filed a Timber and Stone claim or homestead entry, and never dealt in timber lands.

Q. Why didn't you file on some of the timber-land there was an opportunity to get?

A. If you had told me that ten or fifteen years ago, I would probably be worth $10,000 or $15,000 more. One reason I did not, when I was in the Government service I was prohibited from taking any lands under Government Act. That prohibited me from taking lands when I was directly connected with the Government, but not after I discontinued.

Q. You were not connected with the Government or working for the Government?

A. Oh, yes, I was. I was a contractor, and under bonds, and had to file my oath of office.

Q. That was while you were engaged as a contractor?

A. Yes.

Q. On the survey of these lands?

A. Yes. That continued up until about 1904, because there were certain contracts had not been closed up until some time after I was practicing law; they hadn't been finally disposed of, and I was still connected with the Government.

Q. Well, that merely contractual relation would not prevent you from filing on timber-lands, would it?

A. I think so.

Whereupon witness further testified that he would like to correct his testimony if he stated that he had made numerous trips over a number of counties looking for a timber claim. He did not state he was looking for a timber claim. He said he was looking for timber land, or lands that might be desirable to be taken under the Timber and Stone Act, but not for himself. He was looking for these lands for various persons. He had told two or three people where they might find timber claims, and he thinks they paid him for this information. That is the only selecting that he ever did. He never did any surveying or timber cruising in Polk County. He has examined the character of the lands with reference to timber for the company, but has not made accurate cruises. He thinks he has never cruised or surveyed any lands in Benton, Washington, or Columbia counties, but he has examined lands for the company and made some other examinations for their general character. There was a great rush for timber lands here and the people who lived in Oregon, most of them, woke up about the time the timber was all gone, to the fact that they were valuable. After the lands practically were all taken, he did some reconnoitering around through various counties to see if there was any timber that might still be had. This was along from 1900 on. The timber excitement in Oregon started before 1900. He knows a great many people came here from Michigan and Minnesota as early as 1892, and took lands in the Santiam country. Large portions of these timber lands were acquired from the Government in 1900 and subsequently. He noticed the excitement with reference to filings in his Government work as early as 1892. Perhaps it was not so generally known then—it was more quiet. People who had come from timbered states, such as Minnesota and Michigan, were quietly taking up claims, and his connection with it was to the extent: these people who would locate on a township and where there would be three in a township, they would make application, and ordinarily the Department would order the township surveyed, so that in all these townships that they surveyed they would find three or four settlers, maybe half a dozen, who were acquiring timber claims under homesteads. There were no other persons in the township. It gradually increased until along in 1900. It was, he supposes, at its height along in there some place. Large bodies of these lands were acquired in 1900 and subsequently through Santa Fe and other scrips that were required to be filed on surveyed lands, although he has no particular knowledge as to that. He did not have much to do with lands upon which scrip was placed. Scrip was either placed after the lands had been surveyed, or if it was scrip for unsurveyed lands, they knew nothing about it. They would put the scrip on and would not ask to have it surveyed. That was principally Northern Pacific scrip. There was some "additional" scrip. These photographs were all taken in the examinations of this land made while he was employed by the O. & C. Railroad Company and under the directions of the officers of that company. They were practicing attorneys when they were employed by the company. Their work when they began for the company was chiefly with reference to the investigation of titles. There were a great many of the grant lands that had been sold for taxes, and some of them had adverse possession running against them, and there were gaps in the rights of way, and matters of that sort, and their operating lands were involved. There never had been a thorough investigation of the titles, to see what condition they were in, and when Eberlein took charge of the office he started an investigation of that sort, and Mr. Bristol had charge of that for some considerable time. After Bristol quit the service they took up the work, and that was chiefly the work that they were doing, although they did do some work along the line that he has been testifying, in the way of examining lands and making reports on lands upon which applications had been made under the Act of 1869; but the major portion of their work was in reference to titles. When that work was completed their services were discontinued.

Q. After the agitation of this suit began, then you were put on this work of examining into settlements?

A. Well, we made some examinations while we were closing up the other work. When the other work was closed up, why—

Q. That was in 1907?

A. Yes.

Whereupon on re-direct examination witness further testified that as he is informed, Henry S. Graves is Chief of the Forest Service, succeeding Mr. Pinchot, and he has seen the article "Defendants' Exhibit 345" purporting to have been written by Mr. Graves. Whereupon defendants offered in evidence this article entitled, "Farms in the National Forests," reproduced under the head of "Extension of Remarks of Hon. William Kent, of California, in the House of Representatives, Thursday, August 15, 1912," beginning at page 12098 and including page 12102 of the Congressional Record, and being the article in the Saturday Evening Post of August 17, 1912,—to which complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and not properly identified,—which was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified as Defendants Exhibit 345.

Whereupon witness identified the document "Issued June 17, 1911. U. S. Department of Agriculture, Forest Service—Bulletin 88, Henry S. Graves, Forester. Properties and Uses of Douglas Fir." Washington, Government Printing Office. 1911," which was marked Defendants Exhibit 346.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence this document, to which complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and Defendants' Exhibit 346 was received in evidence, and the part thereof particularly offered is in words and figures as follows:

"PROPERTIES AND USES OF DOUGLAS FIR.

INTRODUCTION.

It is the purpose of this bulletin to present the facts about the mechanical properties and uses of Douglas fir which have been collected by the Forest Service. Part I, which deals with the mechanical properties of Douglas Fir, is based on an exhaustive series of tests made in the laboratories of the Forest Service. The results of these tests are of special interest to the users of structural timber. Part II, which deals with the commercial uses of the timber, is based on information furnished by lumber manufacturers and other industrial concerns that use Douglas fir. The gathered facts are of interest in that they show the wide utilization of this tree.

Since 1903 the Forest Service has been making a comprehensive series of tests to determine the mechanical properties of the commercial woods of the United States. The work has been done at laboratories conducted in cooperation with the Yale Forest School, New Haven, Conn.; Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind.; the University of Colorado, Boulder, Colo.; University of California, Berkeley, Cal.; the University of Washington, Seattle, Wash.; and the University of Oregon, Eugene, Oreg. General summaries of the results secured have been published in Forest Service Circulars 32 and 115, 'Progress Reports on the Strength of Structural Timber,' and from time to time other circulars dealing with particular series of tests have been issued.

The tests on Douglas fir were made at the Oregon and California laboratories; the material was cut in Lane County, Oreg., and was contributed by the Pacific Coast Lumber Manufacturers' Association and by the Oregon and Washington Lumber Manufacturers' Association. For the information contained in Part II the Service is indebted to many manufacturers and users of Douglas fir, and especially to the officers of the Oregon, Washington, and Pacific coast lumber manufacturers' associations, for their cordial cooperation.

Douglas fir may, perhaps, be considered as the most important of American woods. Though in point of production it ranks second to southern yellow pine, its rapid growth in the Pacific coast forests, its comparatively wide distribution, and the great variety of uses to which its wood can be put place it first. Estimate of the available supply range from 300,000,000,000 to 350,000,000,000 feet board measure. It is very extensively used in the building trades; by the railroads in the form of ties, piling, car, and bridge material; and by many of the manufacturing industries of the country. As a structural timber it is not surpassed, and probably it is most widely used and known in this capacity.

The species is most abundant and attains its largest size not far above the sea level in southern British Columbia and in the region between the coast of Washington and Oregon and the western foothills of the Cascade Mountains. (See Diagram 1, map.) Here large trees crowded close together rise to a height of from 200 to 300 feet, forming, either alone or mixed with hemlock, very dense forests that yield from 35,000 to 60,000 board feet per acre and sometimes as much as 100,000, and are in one recorded instance 500,000 feet.[1]

The wood is strong and hard, not very heavy, and fairly durable. These qualities particularly recommend it for structural purposes. The grain is straight. The spring and summer wood vary greatly in density; the spring growth is soft and spongy and almost white in color, while the summerwood is hard and flinty and very dark. The grain varies from as few as four or five rings to the radial inch to as many as forty-five.

In the eastern part of its range in the Rocky Mountain region, where the rainfall is not abundant and where extremes of climate occur, the trees are much smaller, rarely over 1½ feet in diameter and over 90 feet high. In this section the stand ranges from 2,000 to 8,000 board feet per acre.[2]

Douglas fir is known by various names in different sections of the country. The most common names and the States in which they are used are:

Douglas fir (Utah, Oregon, Colorado, Washington.)

Red fir (Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Montana, Colorado).

Douglas spruce (California, Colorado, Montana).

Yellow fir (Oregon, Montana, Idaho, Washington).

Spruce (Montana).

Oregon pine (California, Washington, Oregon).

Fir (Montana).

Red pine (Utah, Idaho, Colorado).

Puget Sound pine (Washington).

Douglas tree.

Cork-barked Douglas spruce.

The name Douglas fir has been adopted by the Forest Service and by various trade and technical associations, and is coming into general commercial use.

[2]For a comparison of the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast forms of Douglas fir see Forest Service Circular 150 Douglas Fir, by E. H. Frothingham.

Whereupon witness recognized "Circular 150," "U. S. Department of Agriculture, Forest Service—Gifford Pinchot, Forester," marked Defendants' Exhibit 347," and recognized the same as an official bulletin issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Whereupon defendants offered said document in evidence, and particularly page 13, which shows the timbered area "(1) North Coast Region," Douglas fir covering the western part of the state of Oregon and Washington, to which complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, which Defendants' Exhibit 347 was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon witness recognized as an official document issued by the Department of Commerce and Labor, Defendants' Exhibit 348, being "Forest Products, No. 2 Lumber, Lath and Shingles 1910 Compiled in cooperation with the Department of Agriculture: Forest Service, Henry S. Graves, Forester, issued February 20, 1912."

Whereupon defendants offered said document in evidence as Defendants' Exhibit 348, and read into the record that part of the table, page 4, "Table 2.—Lumber, lath, and shingles" as follows:

Number of active mills reporting and quantity of lumber cut, with per cent of increase and per cent distribution, by states: "1910, 1909, and 1908," under the column:

State	Rank in Production			Number of Active Mills Reporting
	1910	1909	1908	1910	1909	1908
Washington	1	1	1	951	1,143	929
Oregon	4	9	8	574	696	595

Page 5, "Table 2.—Lumber, lath, and shingles—Number of active mills reporting, etc.

State	Lumber Sawed
	Quantity (M feet b. m.)			Per cent of increase		Per cent distribution
	1910	1909	1908	1909 to 1910	1908 to 1909	1910	1909	1908
Oregon	2,084,633	1,898,995	1,468,158	9.8	29.3	5.2	4.3	4.4

Also page 6 of this document, which reads:

"Mississippi, also a yellow-pine state, retains third place, and Oregon, with a greater cut than ever, has advanced to fourth place, while Wisconsin, the leading state 10 years ago, stands fifth. The rise of Oregon has been exceptionally rapid. This state, which ranked twenty-third in 1899 and reported 734,538,000 feet of lumber, has increased its production since that time 183.8 per cent, the cut in 1910 amounting to 2,084,633,000 feet, by far the larger part of which was Douglas fir."

Also diagram of the "Lumber production, by states, 1910," page 7, giving the "Billions of Board Feet" in a table, showing Oregon fourth, and which reads as follows:

"Probably not less than one-fourth of the lumber shipped from Oregon and about one-fifth of that shipped from Washington goes by water, the larger part of it to California ports. Large quantities of lumber produced in these states, however, are shipped directly to Australia, China and Japan, South America, Africa, Mexico, and Central America, in the order named, and a considerable amount to Hawaii, Alaska, and the Philippines. The Alaska trade, however, is decreasing owing to the erection of lumber mills in that territory.

"California, producing chiefly redwood and pine, reported in 1910 the highest production since 1907. This state also ships part of its product to non-contiguous possessions of the United States and foreign ports. The three Pacific Coast states, together with Idaho, supply the bulk of the timber required in the western half of the United States."

Also page 9, bottom of page, commenting on Table No. 3, the following:

"The rank in point of production of the five leading woods was the same in 1910 as in 1909, Douglas fir showing the greatest relative gain.

"For more than 10 years yellow pine has been the leading wood in point of quantity produced. In 1910 this wood furnished a higher proportion of the reported cut than in any other year except 1904 and 1909. Douglas fir, with a greater production than ever before reported, ranks second, as it has done since 1906."

Also page 13, under the subject "Douglas Fir."

"The estimated stand of Douglas fir timber in the United States is greater than that of any other softwood and more than the combined stands of all the hardwoods.

Its geographic range extends over 10 states, from Colorado and New Mexico westward to the Pacific Coast. Its best development and heaviest stands are found in western Washington, western Oregon, northern California, and Idaho."

Also Table No. 5, "Lumber, lath, and shingles—Douglas-fir lumber—Number of active mills reporting and quantity cut, by states: 1910."

Douglas Fir Lumber Sawed:

State	Number of active mills reporting	Quantity (M feet b. m.)	Per cent distribution.
United States	1,347	5,203,644	100.0
Washington	516	3,259,546	62.6
Oregon	452	1,714,462	32.9

"Washington produced more lumber in 1910 than any other state, and practicaly four-fifths of the amount was Douglas fir. Nearly two-thirds of the Douglas-fir cut was reported from Washington; about one-third from Oregon, and the remainder, amounting to less than one-twentieth, was divided among eight other states."

Also page 17:

"The 1910 cut of western pine was the largest ever reported, exceeding that of 1907 and showing an increase of 4.1 per cent over 1909. California, Idaho, Oregon and Arizona show a moderate increase in production from 1909 to 1910, while Washington, Montana, Colorado, and New Mexico show a slight decrease," Oregon showing 180 mills actively reporting sawing western-pine lumber, quantity 209,636 feet board measure; per cent of distribution 13.4.

Whereupon witness testified that Defendants' Exhibit 349 is an official document issued by the Forest Service September 5, 1907, to which complainant objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial. Which said Defendants' Exhibit 349 was offered and received and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon witness, upon re-cross examination further testified that he owns a small tract of land in Washington County, one the line next to Clackamas, in section 12, township 1 south, 1 west, close to the meridian, consisting of 28 acres of farming land. He supposes that it was timbered at one time, a good many years ago. A portion of the lands surrounding it, large bodies of it, is timbered at the present time. It has been logged off and is now cleared, and most of it was cleared when he purchased it. He owns the larger part of the stock of a corporation which owns a piece of land in Tillamook County, not far from the town of Tillamook. It is not a farm, it is a sort of waste land or burn. He has never seen it. He took a chance in buying it without seeing it, and does not know very much about it excepting that he had a man go on it and examine it. It is not dairy land. It has some timber on it, not a great deal. He didn't pay very much for it, and thinks there is 80 acres in it. He is not putting it on the market to sell, but just letting it lie there. There is quite a dairying country around in Tillamook County, but he does not know as it is in that vicinity. There are dairying interests there in that county.

Whereupon, on redirect examination, witness further testified that there are no dairying lands on these timber lands of the company, and that these dairying lands in Tillamook County are down in the valley, around the town of Tillamook. It has been his experience on the land grant lands that all those portions of the grant that were suitable for agriculture or for dairying, or anything of that sort, were acquired by individuals soon after the grant was acquired, and while the grant was being sold, a great many years ago.

Whereupon, on re-cross examination, witness further testified that his last statement is from his observation in the field and from a study of the maps showing the lands that have been sold by the company or under contract. He could not tell by observation in the field when the land had been acquired, but could tell by observation in the field that certain lands that had belonged to the company were now under cultivation and had been acquired a long time ago. These lands were not timber lands.

Whereupon A. W. REES, called as a witness on behalf of defendants, being first duly sworn, testified that he is fifty-one years old, resides at Portland, Oregon, and is an employe of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and has lived in Oregon thirty years, with the exception of three years when he was in British Columbia and Washington. He has been in the saw mill business in the capacity of head sawyer and operated a mill from 1882 up to 1904 or 1905, and most of the time since, he has been in the timber business or cruising timber. Up to the present time, except in the last two or three years, he had charge of the Portland office of the Oregon and California Railroad Company. He is manager of the field work in Oregon for the company, and is a practical cruiser of timber lands.

Referring to Defendants' Exhibit 353, showing 16,351 acres being east of Willamette Meridian on one sheet, and 31,907 acres west of Willamette Meridian on another sheet, witness testified that he cruised these lands, he believes, all within the last four or five years, and these lists were made up from cruise reports that he made that are now in the office, and they show the character of the land as shown by the reports, and show the present condition by township, range, section, county, and whether timber, grazing or agricultural, as shown by these reports, and they also show the condition of the land when denuded, as shown by these reports, to which testimony complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and it was agreed between the parties that this same objection should be considered as taken to all the testimony of this witness relating to the character of the lands involved within the limits of the grant and to settlements thereon and public land entries thereof.

Whereupon witness further testified that these statements showing 7,124 acres in their present condition classified as timber lands, and 6,282 acres classified as grazing land, and 2,945 acres classified as agricultural lands, or 18 per cent of the total of 16,351 acres in their present condition as agricultural, are correct so far as his reports show and from his actual knowledge of the lands in the field, that is his judgment. The statement that when denuded there are 10,866 acres classified as grazing, and 5,485 acres as agricultural, and that the agricultural is 33.54 per cent of the total of 16,351 acres lying east of the Willamette Meridian, is correct according to his judgment, according to these reports. The statement showing 29,492 acres west of the Willamette Meridian, classified by him as timber, 2,295 acres classified as grazing, and 120 acres classified as agricultural in their present condition, or .376 per cent agricultural in their present condition, and when denuded 30,740 acres grazing and 1,167 acres agricultural, or 3.65 per cent of the total 31,907 acres, is correct according to his judgment.

Whereupon defendants offered and there was received in evidence these two tabulated statements marked "Defendants' Exhibit 353," there being no objection that the original reports from which these are tabulated are not produced, which exhibit is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon witness further testified that he had about two of each kind of these reports which he made as a cruiser, with him, and producing three of such reports testified that he prepared Defendants' Exhibit 354, being three reports, and delivered the reports to the company, from actual cruises in the field made by him while in the service of the company as to these lands, and they are a fair representative sample of all of the reports made by him, upon which Defendants Exhibit 353 is based. These reports were made to the company to be acted and relied upon by it in the course of its business, and expressed his best judgment at the time they were made. F. A. Elliott, S. A. Carmichael, T. J. Cronin, C. A. Cavill, M. F. McGown, John McDonald, Ben Pack and Wm. W. Penoyer, who were cruisers for the company, made reports to the company in the same way, and these reports are in his custody as custodian of the records of the land department at Portland. He cannot explain how it is that Defendants' Exhibit 354 has two different forms, or how these forms happened to be used or adopted, as they were given to him to use by the San Francisco office, and some three or four years ago they changed the form of report, sending him the brown colored form S-5649 to be used in the future in place of the other form. Defendants' Exhibit 261, showing the cruise reports of McLeod and McLennan are substantially the same as this brown colored form. In preparing Defendants' Exhibit 353, he used the classification that is given on the form with reference to certain sections cruised, and did not have on these forms a classification for land that is barren or rocky, or totally unfit for any purpose, as a separate classification. That character of land is classified as grazing land. Lands are either timber, grazing or agricultural in their original condition, under these reports, and when denuded they are grazing or agricultural. He included in grazing any lands, if there were any, that might be rocky, barren, or without any soil, or timber, or any value. Everything is grazing that is not shown as timber or agricultural land. His instructions were to classify the land as timber, grazing or agricultural lands. The timber lands are lands chiefly valuable for the timber, the stand of merchantable timber thereon. Agricultural lands are lands of very little timber and which could be plowed and cultivated, in quarter sections or less, used for agricultural or orchard purposes, and that would yield a reasonable return on the investment. All other lands are classified as grazing lands, regardless of whether they have any value for grazing purposes or not. That is to say, if they were neither timbered or agricultural, they would be classified as grazing.

Whereupon defendants offered and there was received in evidence Defendants' Exhibit 354, which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon witness further testified that Defendants' Exhibit 355, purporting to be a tabulated statement showing the cruising of F. A. Elliott, is a correct statement.

Whereupon defendants offered said Defendants' Exhibit 355 in evidence, to which complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and that the witness is not competent to identify the accuracy of these cruises, but no objection is made that the defendants do not produce the original reports.

Whereupon said Defendants' Exhibit 355 was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon witness further testified that S. A. Carmichael is a timber cruiser, who worked for the company a number of years, and that Defendants' Exhibit 356 was made from these cruisers' reports made by Carmichael to the company in his custody, and to the best of his knowledge that exhibit shows correctly what the cruise reports show. He caused these tabulated statements to be prepared under his supervision. A few of the reports he prepared himself, he actually participated in the work, and saw that the others were correctly done.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence Defendants' Exhibit 356, to which complainant made the same objection as last above. Whereupon said exhibit was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon witness further testified that T. J. Cronin, C. A. Cavell, M. F. McGown, John D. McDonald, Ben Peck and Wm. W. Penoyar, whose names appear on tabulated statement marked "Defendants' Exhibit 357," were timber cruisers who cruised the timber for the company at various times. Each of them made his report to the office, and these tabulated statements are correct reproductions of the summary of these reports so made, to the best of his knowledge and belief, and these reports are in his possession as custodian of the records of the company at Portland. These cruisers' reports were made in the usual and ordinary course of business, and these men were then in the employ of the company, and he believes they are all competent cruisers, they were supposed to be, and so far as he knows their work was satisfactory.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence these tabulated statements marked as "Defendants' Exhibit 357," to which complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, but made no objection that defendants did not produce the original reports, which said exhibit was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon witness further testified that these cruisers' reports upon which Defendants' Exhibits 355, 356 and 357 are based, were all made upon substantially the same forms as Defendants Exhibit 354, and Defendants' Exhibit 261, possibly there were a few of these examination reports made by land examiners instead of by timber cruisers, which were used, although not many of them. Defendants' Exhibit 358 is the form that was possibly used by some of these cruisers. These forms were for making special reports on certain tracts of land that were to be examined for various purposes, and were not generally used in the general cruising. This form, Defendants' Exhibit 358, has grades of agricultural lands, first grade, second grade and third grade —and timbered or wooded land, cultivation, care and extent, grazing land, first grade, second grade, third grade. They were used for special examinations of tracts of contract land that had reverted, or any other special examination.

Whereupon defendants offered and there was received in evidence as a representative sample of a report of a land examiner, Defendants' Exhibit 358, which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon witness further testified that he does not think that these Defendants' Exhibits 343, 344, 353, 355, 356, and 357, which are based upon cruisers' reports in his office, include any lands cruised prior to April 18, 1906, reports of which were made before the fire and burned in the fire. The cruisers' reports of the company which were in existence prior to April 18, 1906 were all taken to San Francisco, and he presumes were burned in the fire, that has been his understanding. These tabulated statements would show only a very small portion of the lands actually cruised based upon existing records, and do not show all of the lands which he cruised from time to time since he became an employe of the company, down to date, nor very few of the lands cruised by F. A. Elliott, and there were quite a number of cruisers at various times whose reports the company does not have; cruises that were made previous to the time the records were taken from Portland. The cruisers' reports of N. E. Britt, for instance, were sent to San Francisco along with the others, and he presumes were destroyed in the fire. The cruisers reports made by F. A. Elliott, other than these showing that he cruised apparently about 2,000 acres, were sent to San Francisco, and these tabulated statements only show a portion of the total cruises of these parties that did work before the fire of April 18, 1906. He has prepared or caused to be prepared a map which reproduces on the map, the location of the various tracts cruised by these various parties whose reports are tabulated in these exhibits, and Defendants' Exhibit 342 is such map, and that map, he believes, to be substantially correct. It may include a few lands or tracts not shown in the statements but does not include any lands that have not been cruised, as shown in these colors. The 880 acres which he cruised in Multnomah County is in the eastern part of that county. The 875 acres of that total of 880 acres classified by him as timber, is Douglas fir, generally called yellow or red fir, and the lands are chiefly valuable for timber. The five acres classified by him as agricultural, is land that has very little timber on, level enough to farm and plow, and fairly good soil. These parcels or acres classed by him as agricultural in their present condition, are generally situated along the creek bottom, while the other land extends back on the hillsides, although there are a few sections where it is bench land, level benches, with fairly good soil and level enough to cultivate and not too many rocks. These agricultural parcels are isolated and widely separated from each other. His classification as grazing when denuded, includes all lands that are not classed as agricultural land. It might be worthless land, or any land not classed as agricultural land. Some localities make fairly good grazing land after they are denuded of the timber. Other localities are very poor, and there are some places where the lands are classified as grazing lands that have no apparent value for any purpose on account of being very rocky and no forage of any kind. A timber eighty, where the eighty is covered with an excellent stand of merchantable saw timber, he classifies as grazing after the timber is cut off and becomes what is called logged-off land. Usually one would have to do considerable clearing of brush, of lands that can be used for grazing purposes. The brush grows up very quickly after the lands are logged-off and they would have to be cleared to a certain extent, not to the extent of taking up the stumps, but to the extent of clearing it of brush and logs. There is a great deal of that land that could not be used at all for grazing. When the merchantable timber is logged off of these tracts of land, there is considerable of timber left of inferior quality, not suitable for milling purposes. The lands which were cruised in Clackamas County generally lie along the Clackamas River, where they include the bottom lands along the river, extending back onto the hills to some extent, but they cover lands that have more than an average of agricultural land. The difference in the amount of grazing lands in the percentage in their present condition in the counties of Multnomah and Clackamas, as compared with the counties of Douglas, Josephine, Jackson and the other counties named in his statement of lands lying west of the Willamette Meridian, is, that in Clackamas and Multnomah there are large burns, considerable of that land examined was on burned sections that had no timber at all, or scarcely any, and these burns were generally classified as grazing lands, A large burn is in 1 south, 2 south—5 and 6 East, Clackamas County, Oregon, of rather high elevation as to a considerable portion, probably 2,000 feet to 4500 feet. These burns are usually covered with dead snags, trees that were killed years ago, and the trunks fallen down to the ground, and the ground usually covered with brush. These burns are generally covered with different kinds of brush, briers, and some wild grasses, and some places there is fairly good soil, and a great many places it is very rocky, and in most of the old burns the soil is very gravelly and unproductive. He cannot tell exactly when he began work for the company, but it was ten or twelve years ago—he knows it was more than ten years ago. He began in the capacity of timber cruiser, and before he commenced to cruise for the company he had been in the saw mill business, worked in timber for a number of years, ever since he was a grown man, the greater part of the time. He has done considerable cruising in Washington County, probably from one-half to three-quarters of the land that the company owns in that county, and he thinks he has cruised at least one-half of the unsold lands of the company, inuring to the company under both grants, in that county. He has cruised nearly all of the lands in Multnomah County. He cruised with one other cruiser at one time, when they would take alternate sections, and he had been in Multnomah County at various times to cruise other sections. In Yamhill County, he presumes he has cruised only about seven or eight sections, but has examined quite a number of tracts. When he made an examination he would go on to the section and might go once or twice across it, making a general report of the character of the land, and not make a cruise of the timber. These examinations would enable him to tell in a pretty accurate way the character of the timber as well, or practically as well as to make a cruise of the timber. He thinks he has seen every section in Yamhill County that the company owns, but he has not made reports on every section. He supposes he has cruised about fifteen or twenty sections in Clackamas County, but has examined a considerable portion of the lands. There are some lands in Clackamas County, considerable, he has never made any report on, but went through and looked over in a general way, to get an idea of the character of the land. He has cruised about one-fourth of the sections in Polk County, but is familiar with practically all of the lands in that county. He does not remember of cruising but a few sections in Marion County, that is, making timber cruises, but has examined the greater portion of the lands in Marion County.

Referring to the map, Defendants' Exhibit 342, in the preceding testimony and in his subsequent testimony, he could tell better which lands he had examined and cruised, than from memory. He cruised about one-fourth of the lands in Lincoln County. He does not remember that he examined any lands in Lincoln County excepting in 13 South, 8 West, and two or three sections on the south side of 12 South, 8 West. Defendants' Exhibit 342 shows the boundaries of the various counties. He has cruised about one-third of the lands in Benton County. There were three cruisers there together, taking alternate sections, when he worked there. He does not remember of having made any special examinations in Benton County, although he has been through that county a number of times, and over the lands at different times. He has actually cruised only a small portion of the lands owned by the company in Linn County, and he does not remember of having made reports on more than probably ten per cent of the lands in Linn County. He has been over the lands in Linn County pretty thoroughly at different times. At one time he had a gang of cruisers in Linn County on the Santiam River. They camped at 12 South, 3 East, began at 11 South, 3 East, in the upper northwest corner of the township, and did some cruising there. By examining a piece of land he means that he has gone to the land and made an examination for some special or other purpose. Some times it would be to determine whether there were any improvements on the land, and he would then make a formal report of such instances, such as has been introduced in evidence as one of the exhibits in his testimony. There was a party of three cruisers, of which he was one, in Lane County which cruised Township 15 South, Ranges 6, 7, and 8 West; 16 South, 6, 7, and 8 West; 17 South, 7 and 8 West, at one time. He presumes he cruised one-third of the land. He cruised considerable of the lands in 15 South, 1 East and 1 West; 16 South, 1 East and 1 and 2 West; 17 South, 1 and 2 West; some few sections in 20 and 21 South, 1 West, and cruised, or was actually with a party of other cruisers, of which he was a member, more than half of the total of 299,606 acres in Lane County, but it would be pretty hard to tell what proportion of this total area, outside of what he cruised or participated in cruising, that he examined or made an examiner's report. He can remember a great many sections that he made some report on. He knows the character of and has been over the greater part of the company lands in Lane County. He thinks he has cruised or has been in a company with cruisers in which he participated, of about one-eighth of the 616,843.14 acres owned by the company in Douglas County. He had made examiners reports only of a small portion of the lands in that county. He has been over about all of the balance of the land that he did not actually cruise or examine. He thinks he has been in every township probably, over the lands wherever there is any road or trail, and a good many places where there is not, and he can tell the character of most of the lands. He never did a great deal of cruising of the company lands in Coos County. He has been over the greater portion of the company lands in Coos County. He has been over the company lands in Curry County, but never made a cruiser's report of the company lands in that county. He is acquainted with the character of a greater portion of the company lands in Curry County, he thinks. He has only cruised a very small portion of the company's lands in Josephine County. He has been over them very often, and made quite a number of reports of various kinds in special ways on different tracts. He was with a party that cruised six townships of the company's lands in Jackson County, and there are three sections, he thinks, upon which he made reports, and he is acquainted with the greater part of the lands of the company in Jackson County. He has actually cruised or been with a party of cruisers and participated in the work of cruising all of the lands of the company in Klamath County. He presumes he has cruised, or been with a party who has cruised one-fourth of the lands in Columbia County, and has been on the greater part of the balance of the sections in that county. He does not remember that he ever made a cruiser's report on any lands in Tillamook County, but he has been generally over the lands in that county belonging to the company, enough to have a fairly good idea of the character of the land, and can tell pretty nearly what they are. The lands that the company retained there are generally pretty rough, and a part of these lands is heavily timbered, and their chief value is for the timber, he would say, the timber land. Taking the entire grant over which he has examined, in its present condition, he believes that not over four or five per cent of it, is suitable for agriculture, and he thinks about seventy-five per cent of the total area of this land grant in its present condition, in his judgment, would be classified as timber and chiefly valuable for timber only. He would say that about twenty per cent of this total grant in its present condition, in his judgment, would be classified as grazing, including old burns where there is some soil and timber but not suitable or valuable for timber, and including also lands that are rocky, barren or unfit for any useful purpose, and making three classes, timber, agricultural and grazing. He may have the timber estimate too high, he does not know, but that is approximately correct, he thinks, as nearly as he can tell. There are lands, if the timber is cut off and cleared, that could be used for agricultural purposes, lands that are level enough and soil good enough. From his knowledge of the grant, such lands that could be thus cleared and grubbed and made available for plowing after the timber is removed, that would be classified as agricultural, would be a pretty small per cent, especially a small per cent that the value of the land would justify the cost of clearing. He has made some inquiry at different times about the cost of clearing, and has cleared a little bit of land himself. There is a great deal of this land where it is heavily timbered that he does not think could be cleared for less than $100 an acre, that is, cleared of stumps, and some of it much more than that. He presumes there are places where it might cost $500 an acre to clear an acre of land, but he would place the general cost for clearing timber lands at from $100 to $150 an acre; it would be above $100 an acre, the average over the grant. In some places in the Willamette Valley, he thinks, good agricultural land can be purchased for that price, clear, or comparatively clear of all timber. He only knows by hearsay and what he knows of land selling for as to the range of prices of agricultural land five or six miles away from cities, convenient to transportation, in the old settled part, say in Marion and Yamhill counties. It can be bought from $50 to $150 an acre.

Defendants' Exhibit 362 was tabulated from Defendants' Exhibits 343, 344, 351, 353, 354, 355, 356 and 357. It is a compilation from these other exhibits. These exhibits, including Defendants' Exhibit 362, are based upon cruisers' reports in his office. They do not pretend to cover or include any cruising made prior to April 18, 1906, reports of which were destroyed in the fire. They include practically all the cruisings made since that date which are in his office. There are a few that were missed in making up the statements, but the acreage is approximately correct; fractions are dropped sometimes. Defendants' Exhibit 362 is substantially correct, and Defendants' Exhibit 342 is correct, he believes, although some places where more than one cruiser would cover more than one section, the coloring on the map could not show both. It showed the last cruise made. He did not discuss with Elliott what his best testimony would be, or in any way influence Elliott directly or indirectly as to his testimony, and there was no promise on his part directly or indirectly expressed or implied to induce Elliott to testify, and none by anybody else to his knowledge. Oswald West was Governor at the time Elliott was appointed State Forester. He is not acquainted with Buxton of Forest Grove, but believes that he represents the Oregon State Grange as a member of the Oregon State Board of Forestry. Geo. H. Cecil is a member of the United States Forestry Service. It is his opinion, but he is not sure that George W. Peavy represents the Forestry Department of the Oregon Agricultural College. The Oregon and Washington Manufacturers' Association is made up of timber and mill men of Oregon and Washington. The Oregon Forest Fire Association is an association of timber owners of Oregon. The Oregon and California Railroad Company is not a member of this association, or of the Oregon and Washington Lumber Manufacturers' Association, but it maintains its own fire patrol, excepting in one or two places, where the company has a joint patrol with other people.

Whereupon defendants offered and there was received in evidence Defendants' Exhibit 362, which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence and identified as such.

Whereupon witness further testified that he is not acquainted with R. G. Balderee, but knows he is one of the intervenors or persons claiming to be intending purchasers of some of these unsold lands of the company.

Defendants' Exhibit 363 entitled "Map of the State of Oregon published by the J. K. Gill Company, Portland, Oregon," is the best map he could get of the State of Oregon. The colors traced on Defendants' Exhibit 363 correctly outline the two grants, with place and indemnity limits.

Whereupon defendants offered and there was received in evidence Defendants' Exhibit 363, which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this statement of the evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon witness further testified that Defendants' Exhibit 363 is as clearly correct as any map that is published, and the map shows a fairly accurate location of the lines of railroad of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, Southern Pacific Company, Oregon Electric Railway Company, S. P. & S. Ry. Co., and O-W. R. & N. Co., and other lines, and nearly as actually constructed and operated. The Pacific Railway & Navigation Company, running through Hillsboro by way of Butxon and Nehalem River, to Tillamook Bay and Tillamook, is in operation at the present time. It was completed in the winter of 1911 some time, but he does not remember the date. The hatched dotted lines show proposed railway lines. At the time this map was published, the Oregon Electric is shown as a proposed line from Salem to Albany and as far south as Eugene. This has been constructed and opened for traffic very recently, if it is open at all; he is not certain that it is. Its completion was celebrated recently at Eugene, on October 15, 1912. The road indicated by dotted lines from Springfield to be constructed by the Oregon and Eastern to Klamath Falls to connection with the constructed line at Klamath Falls, is in operation from Springfield to or above Natron, and under construction from there on to Klamath Falls, and is a mountain road part of the way. The road marked "P. and E. Railroad," from Medford in Jackson County, is in operation from Medford to near Butte Falls. The proposed railroad from Drain down the Umpqua River to Marshfield, has not been constructed. It was attempted to be constructed by the Southern Pacific Company, but has been abandoned. The Willamette Pacific Railroad Company, an affiliated or subsidiary line of the Southern Pacific Company, is constructing a line from Eugene westerly to the coast, down the Siuslaw river, in what is known as the Siuslaw country. The Corvallis & Eastern Railroad shown on this map from Newport or Yaquina Bay, through Corvallis, Albany, on to Mill City, or a point just east of Mill City, is in operation. There is some level land along the creek around Mill City, with mountains on each side. The character of the country is generally mountainous, with timber growth. He is not certain if that timber growth extends further than Detroit, if so far. That appears to be about ten or twelve miles east of the eastern boundary line of the 30 mile or indemnity limits of this grant. The general character of the country as to quality of timber in that section is good yellow and red fir.

Whereupon on cross examination, witness further testified that he marked these boundary lines shown on Defendants' Exhibit 363, showing the limits of the O. & C. land grant, but these limits were not traced on that map prior to any work done by him. The only thing that he had to do with the preparation of the map was the marking of these limits, of the boundaries of the grants, and re-tracing the line of railroad of the Oregon and California Railroad Company. That is a stock map purchased from J. K. Gill & Company. He looked the map over carefully and considered it as good a map as there is published of the State of Oregon. He thinks that the line of road leading from Tillamook mentioned in his testimony, is recognized as being a part of the Southern Pacific Railway System. The proposed road leading from Eugene to Marshfield, is said to be a part of the Southern Pacific System, and the work has recently been started and they are doing work there now, but he is not able to say how far; the actual construction has been going on less than a year. The road from Springfield around to Klamath Falls, he believes, is what is commonly termed a cut-off of some kind, and is reputed to be a part of the Southern Pacific System from Springfield down to Klamath. The road running from Eugene to Springfield has been in operation for many years as part of the Southern Pacific System, but there is another branch of the Southern Pacific Company from Woodburn to Springfield, which has been in operation for a number of years as part of the Southern Pacific System. The road leading from Albany through Gates and Mills City, commonly termed the Corvallis and Eastern, is said now to be a part of the Southern Pacific System. His knowledge of the ownership of all this road is by common repute and by his connection with the Railroad Company and riding over the railroad lines.

In cruising lands he generally used what is called the "double run" cruise; that is, running twice through each forty acre tract, making his count of two acres on each cruise, giving four acres in a forty acre tract, and making the estimate on that. A timber cruise is approximate always. In Southern Oregon where the timber is more scattering, he often made a tree count, that is, count all the trees on the forty, but the general method as described by him, applied more to Northern Oregon, to the Douglas fir district. Grazing land includes all land that is not classified as timber or as agricultural land, whether it has any special value for grazing purposes or not. Some forms of his reports have three different grades of grazing lands, as good, fair, or poor, but these are examiners' reports instead of cuisers' reports. They use examiners' reports when making special examinations for any certain purpose, where they do not care for a cruise of timber, and he presumes it would be used where there was an application to purchase agricultural lands, if they had such application and were making examinations for that purpose, no doubt he would use the examiners' report. It goes a little more into detail than the cruisers' report does. The examiners' reports contain no blanks for estimates of the amount of time on the land, or for timber cruisers' reports. He does not remember when they began using these examiners' reports, but thinks it has been about four years. They had two or three different forms of examiners' blanks prior to the time they began using the present blank, different from timber cruisers' blanks. He does not remember that they had any blanks for making reports at the time they used the book form. This book form was the only one used, that he remembers of. There is some fairly good grazing land within the limits of this grant, but the amount is very limited. There is a large burned area in Clackamas County. This is usually very rough land, covered with dead trees, down logs, overgrown with brush, and would be very expensive to clear, and it is a high altitude. Some of it at an elevation of 4500 feet. One place that he remembers of, according to the aneroid, is 4700 feet, and he would judge the minimum altitude to be 1500 or 1800 feet. There are several townships that are entirely denuded or partly denuded of timber in that burn, but the fact that that land has been burned over would not alone render it incapable of cultivation. In making these cruises shown on Defendants' Exhibit 342, there would be several cruisers who would go into some township or locality, and one of them would take one section, another would take another section, and in that way they would cruise the land, and usually they had a compassman to run the lines or make the location for them. He does not mean to say that he could state accurately the character of every particular tract of the grant in Lane County, but generally speaking he is familiar with the lands in Lane County, and he thinks he could state accurately the purposes and uses to which these lands could be applied, judging from whether other lands are being used of like character and what they are being used for, if used at all. That is not what he bases his opinion on altogether. There is considerable land that is too rough to be used for any purpose unless for grazing purposes. It would be pretty hard to take a township in Lane County and describe section by section the lands in that township, but there are some townships in which he can remember almost every section. Perhaps he could not recall every section in very many townships without referring to the plats or maps, or something. He was cruising this land at the time of the fire, and cruised some lands after the fire. A great deal of the land that he was over, was for making special reports of different character. The greater portion of these cruises have been made since 1907. He had cruisers at work engaged in cruising this land from 1906 to the present time, and has cruisers at work now, and has Bruce, McLennan and McLeod working now as cruisers, but no others at work now. McLeod is not cruising timber all the time, but is part of the time on other work than cruising.

Witness has not had a great deal of experience himself in farming in the last twenty years. He was raised on a farm until he was grown, and he has been around among the farmers a great deal in connection with this work. In the work he has got to go over the country and stop at farm houses sometimes. The farm he was raised on was in Vermilion County, in Ilinois, at the edge of the timber. The whole area there was prairie south of the timber where they were, and there was prairie north of the timber. The earliest settled portion in that locality was not in the timber, they settled along the edge of the timber. The farms were usually along the prairie, but near the timber. Extending south from the timber, where he lived, there was no timber for a great many miles. He does not think that that land in this vicinity in Illinois, was ever covered with underbrush and timber at one time. It was covered with prairie grass—open prairie—as long as he can remember. He has been south of that place on the border between Illinois and Indiana, around Perrysville or East of Danville, and south, and a great deal of that was timbered country. He cannot say whether or not it has been cleared off and is practically all under cultivation at this time. He has not been there recently. He has farmed in Oregon at Newburg, Yamhill County, owning some land there and farming it one season, but does not remember the section, township and range. This was in 1882 that he owned that land; after that he had it farmed by other people. He had about seventy, or a little less than eighty acres. It was near Newburg, at a little place called Spring Brook, and the farm cornered at the station at Spring Brook, or within two hundred feet of it, lying west and north of Newburg, about two miles. It was part of the Heater Donation Claim. He has owned no other land excepting a small tract that he now owns, which he has farmed; it is outside of the city limits; they raise potatoes and garden stuff, and berries on it, but he does not hold it as a farm, but as an investment. He has been employed by the company and engaged in its land work something more than ten years.

Whereupon, on re-direct examination, witness further testified that the timber cruising method described by him, is generally used by all timbermen for a basis for purchasing or selling timber lands, and it is a reasonably safe guide to ascertain the value of the land. These examiners' reports referred to by him were for the purpose of ascertaining the particular character of any particular piece of land trespassed upon, or where the contract was forfeited, or where the circumstances required special investigation other than cruising.

Whereupon, S. C. BRUCE, called as a witness on behalf of defendants and being duly sworn, testified that he resides at Portland, Oregon, and is a timber cruiser, and has so resided since October 1911, and before that resided in Jackson County about seven years. He has been engaged in the business of timber cruiser for about eight years, for Standard Lumber Company and Fidelity Lumber Company of Newport, Washington, and in grading lumber sold by both of these companies. He has been employed by the Oregon and California Railroad Company since August 1907, examining lands and cruising timber, and he is still in its employ, engaged in that business, reporting to A. W. Rees, Manager of the Portland office, having charge of matters relating to the lands of the company. Defendants' Exhibit 342, shows the lands that he cruised. Whereupon defendants offered said map, Defendants' Exhibit 342, in evidence, purporting to show lands cruised and examined by S. C. Bruce, S. A. Carmichael, C. A. Cavell, T. J. Cronin, F. A. Elliott, M. F. Mc-

Cown, John McDonald, D. C. McLennan, L. D. McLeod, Ben Peck, William Penoyar, and A. W. Rees, showing in the legend a color for each of these persons, under promise to call each of the other witnesses, and particularly A. W. Rees, to show that the map correctly tabulates, and by these legends shows, the lands that these parties cruised.

Whereupon said Defendants' Exhibit 342 was received in evidence, and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon witness stated that Defendants' Exhibit 343 shows the lands that he cruised, being a tabulated statement of such lands, showing a total acreage of 170,309 acres, and showing present condition of this acreage as, timber 134,312 acres, grazing 27,133 acres, agricultural 8,864 acres, and when denuded, grazing 132,669 acres, agricultural 37,640 acres.

Whereupon defendants offered said tabulated statement in evidence as Defendants' Exhibit 343, to which complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial. And it was agreed between the parties that this same objection should be considered as taken to all testimony of this witness relating to the character of the lands within the limits of the grants, settlements thereon, and public land entries thereof. Whereupon the same was received in evidence, and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon witness further testified that this tabulation or statement, Defendants' Exhibit 343, correctly states the proportions of these lands and the classifications according to his reports as they were compiled and tabulated, and according to his examination as made in the field. He classified as timber lands that would have 100,000 feet or over to the forty acres, and he classified as grazing in the present condition, land that had no timber, and as agricultural in the state of nature land that was level enough to be tilled and land that was not too stony or rocky. Under the column "When denuded" and under the column "Grazing", showing a total of grazing lands examined by him when denuded, of 132,669 acres, there would be a certain per cent that was agricultural and a certain per cent grazing. By classifying land as grazing, when denuded, he means land that is level enough to be farmed or tilled, put into cultivation, after the timber has been cleared off and the stumps are grubbed and the brush burned, etc. He classified land as agricultural, when denuded, which would be level enough to work, to farm, for tillage, after the timber had been removed and stumps extracted. That is, if he found a forty that might have a very heavy stand of fir timber, but that was sufficiently level, that it could be plowed, he would classify that, as agricultural when the timber was denuded. If he found a tract of land that was rocky, or the soil of which, was not fit for cultivation or for agriculture, he classified that, as grazing when denuded. So that all the land that he examined or cruised was put by him into two classes when denuded, one grazing and the other agricultural. He has not made any allowance for lands unfit for any kind of vegetation. There is a certain portion of these lands classified by him as grazing lands, which he supposes would be too steep for any kind of crops, but he thinks it all could be used for grazing. Some portions of this grant in Jackson County, is worthless on account of rocks and chaparral. The general character of these lands in Coos County was that they were all heavily timbered. In order to put these lands into the class of grazing lands, the timber would have to be all removed, logged off and seeded down, if there was not sufficient grass there for grazing. In spots, there is grazing in these Coos County lands. There is wild pea vine.

Q. What you mean, then, as I understand you, is, that if the timber is cut down, and the brush and debris burned after it is logged off, and sowed to grass, grass seed, that there would be some sort of grazing that could be had on these lands?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Booth has testified that that would be the condition of a certain per cent of the lands owned by the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company in the eastern part of Lane County, and that that would be the process by which the land could be made grazing. Is that the same classification (or the same understanding that you have of this defintion) of grazing that you have made?

A. Yes, sir.

Whereupon witness further testified that in classifying 1285 acres of the total acreage cruised by him in Coos County, as agricultural when denuded, he means land that was level enough to be farmed and cultivated after the timber was taken off. By the 110 acres of this total area cruised by him as adapted to agriculture, he refers to lands generally on a bottom, somewhere along a creek, and would not be all together, but would be in small, irregular tracts, where there was no timber. The 110 acres in section 33, township 27 south, 10 west, is land that was on top of a bench of the mountain, was level, and there was no timber on it, and he classified it as agricultural in its present state. The 15,197 acres classified by him as timber land in Coos County, would go close to 40,000 feet per acre, which is a heavy stand of timber. The timber in the main, in Coos County is yellow and red fir, with some cedar. The timber in Marion County cruised and classified by him is yellow and red fir, and would probably go 25,000 to 30,000 feet to the acre. The land classified by him in Marion County in a state of nature as grazing, was open land, upon which there were fern and old snags in places. It had all been burned over years ago. In places, it is rocky. Where he thought it was too rocky to be classed as agricultural land or unfit for the plow, he classified it as grazing, so that this acreage of 3845 acres in Marion County, classified by him as grazing, was so classified if it was not timber or agricultural. Wherever there was soil suitable for agriculture, or land that was level enough for such, he classified as agricultural. If it was not too rocky and there was no timber, he would call that grazing land. He made no class for lands that were absolutely worthless, but considered that to be a certain grade of grazing land, and he did that all through the lands in these counties that he examined, so that the grazing classification includes all the lands excepting those that are covered with timber, or that are agricultural. In this compilation of the total acreage of lands examined by him of 170,309 acres, he made three classes in their present condition, timber, grazing and agricultural, and these are the same lands classified into two classes, grazing and agricultural, when the timber is cut off, and he has made no class of lands that were rocky and unfit for any purpose. He has put all in as grazing land or agricultural. In making his reports of his examinations to the company, he used the regular cruise report blank of the form of Defendants' Exhibit 261, and in making his examinations shown in Defendants' Exhibit 343 he used the form Defendants' Exhibit 266, and filled out the blanks as indicated. In making out these reports he filled in these forms as nearly as he could in every particular, where there was a blank to be filled, and made out a report for each section that he cruised, and this would apply to all of the lands that are described in Defendants' Exhibit 343.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence Defendants' Exhibit 343, which was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence, and identified as such.

He prepared Defendants' Exhibit 343, excepting copying, and he prepared the data from his reports, and it is a correct reproduction of the facts stated in his reports as far as they are shown in the exhibit, and is correct. These original reports are in the office of the Land Department in the care of A. W. Rees.

Q. Suppose an actual settler, or any person should want to go on one of these quarter sections that you have classified as grazing when the timber is taken off, or in its present state where it is grazing, and for the purpose of making a living, supporting himself and his family, and his opportunity for that was confined to this quarter section, and he was required to make his living from the uses to which he put that quarter section for grazing purposes, state to the court whether or not such person, or any person under such circumstances, could support himself and his family on this quarter section of grazing land?

A. It would be doubtful.

Whereupon witness further testified that one head of stock could be supported upon about 20 acres of a quarter section of this grazing land as classified by him, confining the stock to that quarter section. That would be about eight head of stock for each quarter section. A man and his wife and family might make a living on eight head of stock pastured on 160 acres if the land was not too steep. He hardly believes a man and his family could make a living on eight head of stock supported on this 160 acres, although he never tried that kind of an experiment and never saw anybody else that did. He has heard of people taking numbers of goats in the mountains back on the range somewhere, where they would probably have 1000 acres, but not on 160 acres.

Whereupon, on cross examination, witness further testified that he commenced to cruise timber in the fall of 1909 and devoted his time, until the present time, to cruising these lands. He personally cruised all of these lands reported in Defendants' Exhibit 343. He had different parties assisting him in that cruise, the others were compassmen, he was the cruiser, and these other men were working under him as compassmen and assistants.

Whereupon L. D. McLEOD, called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and being first duly sworn, testified that he is thirty-six years of age, resides at Portland, Oregon, and is employed at the present time as a cruiser for the Oregon and California Railroad Company. He commenced to work for the company in 1908 as a compassman or land cruiser, mostly cruising land the first year. He was then off and came back he thinks in the latter part of 1909. Anyway he has been in the employ of the Company enough to make about four years. He has had practically the last three years' experience in cruising, ever since 1909. Before that he had been out with the cruisers running compass, and did considerable work alone in making examinations of different kinds before he commenced cruising. In making cruise reports he used standard blanks, such as Defendants' Exhibit 266. Defendants' Exhibit 266 consists of three reports prepared by himself and three that would seem to be reports of D. C. McLennan. In making his reports on all of the lands for the company, he used that form of report and returned these reports to A. W. Rees, acting agent or manager in charge of the office of the Company at Portland, whose superior is B. A. McAllister of San Francisco. Referring to Defendants' Exhibit 344, purporting to show that he has cruised in all 65,681 acres and Defendants' Exhibit 342, he says that he supposes the map shows correctly the lands which he cruised, to which testimony of the witness complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and it was agreed that the same objection should be considered as taken to all testimony of this witness relating to the character of the lands within the limits of the grants and settlements thereon and public land entries thereof. Whereupon witness further testified, that as far as checking that exhibit with the map, he had not done it. That was done under the direction of Rees, but he prepared the tabulated statement, Defendants' Exhibit 344, from his cruise reports and he would say that Defendants' Exhibit 344 is approximately correct; and by that he means in putting in the acreage he had not used the fractions; and aside from the fractional lots, as to the acreage, which covered a very few acres, the statement is correct. The classification in timber and grazing and agricultural, is based upon his judgment of the lands from an examination made in the field, and upon the form of report, Defendants' Exhibit 266, which he used. By the term timber, used by him in his classification, he included lands that were more or chiefly valuable for timber than for grazing or agricultural purposes. Lands that were classed as "agricultural" in a state of nature, were those that could be cleared and cultivated. Often lands were classed as agricultural lands, the value of which would not justify the cost of clearing. Agricultural lands were such as could be cleared and cultivated. He had three classes of land in the present condition, one timber, another grazing and another agricultural. When these lands are denuded he has only two classes, grazing and agricultural. All denuded lands that could be cultivated, if cleared, are classed as agricultural, whether they were heavily timbered in the original state or not. The lands that were not classified as agricultural when denuded, were classified as grazing, regardless of whether they were fit for any purpose or not. He has not made any classification of lands other than grazing that are unfitted for any purpose. In Clackamas County, according to the classification made by him, in their present condition, there is an area of 16,358 acres of timber lands, and 31,297 acres of grazing lands in a state of nature. Practically all of that country has been burned over, leaving spots of timber in the lower lands, and high benches, where it was damp and moist, and the grazing lands have been burned over. The timber has been destroyed, and some of the lands there that are classed as grazing, are really too stony and steep for any purpose. In the 4238 acres in Clackamas County classed by him as agricultural, in their present condition, are lands that could be cleared and cultivated, or at least level enough to clear and cultivate. In the second classification of grazing when denuded, of 44,138 acres in Clackamas County, there is included a part of the timber lands, when denuded, and a part of that old burn that has been classified as grazing. There is a small per cent of these lands that would be grazing under present conditions, at this time. A greater part of it, before it would be of any great value for grazing would have to be cleared and seeded, and some of it classed as grazing, could not be made grazing under any conditions, because it is too steep and stony. Some of it is mountains of rock. The increased classification of agricultural land from 4,238 acres in a state of nature, to 7,755 acres when denuded, results from the lands that would be cleared where too heavily timbered to be agricultural without clearing the timber away. He supposes he has a general knowledge of the cost of clearing these timber lands and it would cost anywhere from $75.00 to $500 an acre. There is quite a difference as to the cost of putting these so-called grazing lands, where they are capable of being made grazing, either by cutting the timber off, or cutting the brush off and burning it, and seeding it into pasture, but he would judge it would run anywhere from $10.00 to $75.00 an acre approximately. He does not mean where he would grub the stumps off the land for grazing purposes. If a person was going to clear it, though, and cut the brush off and burn it and put it in good shape for grazing or for pasture lands, it would cost considerable to put some of that land classified as grazing land, and that would produce grass; some of it he would say would cost $75.00 an acre, even for grazing purposes.

For a man to log off the land that was heavily timbered, then run a fire through it, burn up the brush and the rejected saw timber, timber that was not fit for logging, then go over it by hand, and sow the grass seed in the ashes, it would make grazing, but it would not be nearly so good as if one went over it and burned all the logs. It is hard to burn things off clean with a fire that way, without slashing. There is considerable timber left, as a rule, when these lands are logged off for commercial purposes. The timber left is too small to pay for logging. There are a lot of logs and tops of trees left in the ground after logging, and there is a certain percent, chiefly unsound or punk trees, left standing, depending upon how much there is that would be unsound.

"Q. Now, suppose a man were to go out there in this country on any of these lands that you have cruised, and examined, with his wife and family, and was expected to make a living on 160 acres of these grazing lands, confining his herd or his stock and its increase to 160 acres that he would buy, what is the fact, if you know, as to whether a man could support himself and his family by such use of this land or any of it?

A. He could not do it.

Q. Suppose a man would go out there as a so-called settler, and get some of this best timber-land, a quarter section of it, which you cruised, and was expected to settle on the land and support himself and family, if he had one, by living on that land, making a home on it, and it had commercial timber on it, what would you say would be his ability to make a living?

A. He could not possibly make it.

Q. What would he have to do with this land covered with timber in order to get his money back, if he bought it, say, at $2.50 an acre?

A. He would have to sell the timber sure.

Q. Well, would it be necessary for him to live on it, to be an actual settler, in order to sell the timber, or could he come to town? If he had a quarter section out there worth $10,000, for the timber, he could sell it, couldn't he, without being a settler on it?

A. Yes, if he had a deed to it.

Q. That is what I mean.

A. Yes."

Whereupon witness further testified, that a commercial stand of fir timber in this state, considered sufficient to make the land chiefly valuable commercially for timber, depends a lot upon logging conditions and the amount of timber adjacent and how large a body of timber one has. The 6.77 per cent, shown in Defendants' Exhibit 344, means that there is 6.77 per cent that could be made agricultural land, or could be cleared and used for agricultural purposes rather and that it is not timber land at the present time. The 12.44 per cent under the column "When denuded," means, that there would be that per cent of the lands more valuable for agricultural purposes than for any other purpose after being denuded of the timber. Under that classification, the balance of the entire 65,681 acres would, when denuded, be chiefly valuable for grazing, where the land could be used at all. When making these reports and making up this memorandum, he did it with the knowledge that there is really considerable of these lands that could not be used for any purpose and are really of no value for any purpose whatever. He has not undertaken to segregate in these compilations, a class of worthless lands. He would consider lands worthless that are really too stony or steep to grow grass, or to be used for any purpose to produce anything on. There is a considerable percentage of these lands, included in Defendants' Exhibit 344 in that class. He did not classify them in the reports, while he knows there are considerable. In this table, they are classified as grazing lands. Agricultural lands, other than this 65,681 acres in a state of nature, is not all found in contiguous bodies. Those lands that are classified as agricultural lands, are generally found in patches along small streams or creeks and are usually in patches, though one might possibly find them all in one place in one particular section. They are, however, more generally scattered. Defendants' Exhibit 261, being a report prepared by him, February 13, 1912, is a typical illustration of the facts reported by him in all of these reports, depending on each a particular case. In his report of June 13, 1910, the SW¼ of Section 33, Township 1 South, Range 6 East, Willamette Meridian, Clackamas County, Oregon, containing an estimate of the total feet, board measure, 8,310,000 of the value of $9,422.50, is classed as timber and valuable for the timber on it. That value is possibly a little above the average, compared in value with timber quarters generally, though he has seen quarter sections cruising from 15 to 20 million feet. The timber lands that he has been over, he would judge would cruise something like six or seven million to the quarter section, which is a fair average. Yellow fir has been estimated in this valuation at $1.25 per thousand feet, board measure, cedar at $1.25 per thousand feet and hemlock at 75 cents. This tract is two miles from Little Sandy, with favorable logging conditions and that would be a fair valuation, he thinks, to place on timber in that locality. Whereupon defendants offered in evidence Defendants' Exhibit 344, which was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence, and identified herein as such. Whereupon on cross examination witness further testified, that he has been cruising timber since 1909 and worked as compassman under Bruce, who preceded him as a witness in this case. Before being employed by the Railroad Company, he worked for the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company as a car conductor for about three years. Prior to working for the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company, he did some contracting and was in the wood business in Astoria, and he had some teams there, and he did the same thing in Seattle, and then he was in the cigar and tobacco business for awhile. After he sold out his outfit in Seattle he was in the mercantile business in Denver for awhile, that is, he sold mercantile contracts under the tontine line. He was born and resided on a farm and was in the farming business until he was twenty-one. He was born and raised on a farm in North Carolina and came to Oregon about fifteen years ago. His timber experience has been mostly confined to his employment by the Oregon and California Railroad Company. In the South, his father was in the lumber business and interested in the mill business, but the experience of witness in that business was very small before he commenced to work for the Company. The classifications made by him is to show what the lands are mostly valuable for in their natural state. He has classified the lands as agricultural under the head "present conditions"; that is, that they are chiefly valuable for agricultural purposes in their present condition. Referring to such lands as can be tilled and cultivated, if cleared; their chief value is for their agricultural purpose, in their present condition, these lands that are so classified. Practically all of them may require clearing to render them susceptible to cultivation. His work as a cruiser commenced, he supposes, about the latter part of 1910, but he was working with Bruce in the latter part of 1909. Whereupon on redirect examination witness further testified, that he identifies Defendants' Exhibit 268, purporting to be a panoramic picture, or photograph, of certain places in Township 20 South, Range 1 West, taken by Mr. Gifford, April 3, 1912. He was present at that time and recognizes that the photograph is of the lands in that section, township and range. The photograph was taken from Eagles Point shown on the blue print, which is correctly located, with reference to the entire township. The snow peak Mount June, shown in the photograph on the left, would be outside of the township. These photographs are correct reproductions of the scenes that they purport to record. He was present when the photograph, Defendants' Exhibit 269, was taken by Gifford, showing a point from which it was taken in township 4 North, range 3 West, Columbia County, and he saw the premises shown in that photograph and it is a correct reproduction of how it appears on the ground. He has been in other parts of the grant in other counties than those located in Columbia, Multnomah, Clackamas, Marion, Jackson, Polk, Lane, Douglas and Josephine Counties, shown in Defendants' Exhibit 344. He has been in practically all the counties in which the company owns lands and over the grant considerably in other work. He has been in very nearly every locality in the grant. There are a few localities in which he has not been. He has been over the grant quite thoroughly. He has not been over the lands in Jackson County as fully as he has in other counties, in fact, less in Jackson and Klamath than in any other counties, he believes. He has a general idea of the remainder of the unsold lands in Douglas County, other than those he actually cruised, because he has been over the county quite fully on the different roads leading through the county in different directions, and from his knowledge of the 616,843 acres in Douglas County, he is not prepared to say what per cent is chiefly valuable for timber as well as he would be as to what per cent of lands could be used for agricultural purposes. The lands are heavily timbered he would say. Roughly speaking, from what he has been over in the grant, he would say a person would be putting it large to say that there was five per cent of these lands in Douglas County that in a state of nature were chiefly valuable for agricultural purposes. The lands in Coos County lie principally in the Coast Range, and he would think that five per cent, in a state of nature, would be agricultural lands. These lands in their present state are chiefly valuable for timber. The per cent of lands in Lane County that would be chiefly valuable only for agricultural purposes, would not run over six or seven per cent in their present state. He would not want to testify as to Linn County, because he had not been over the county as thoroughly as he had over some of the other counties. He has made several trips into Benton County at different places, but would rather not testify as to the lands in Benton and Lincoln Counties. He would judge that the percentage of lands that would be chiefly valuable for agricultural purposes in Marion County would run about seven per cent, and in Polk County about five or six, possibly seven per cent; and in Clackamas County about 6.77 per cent in their present state. He has been over Yamhill County quite thoroughly, but would rather not testify on account of not having examined the lands personally. He has been in Curry County, on several trips, walked 105 miles in three days to go in and out; that is an awful rough country, very rough and broken. The majority of these lands are not very heavily timbered. They are steep and rough. They are not very good even for grazing. These lands are principally on the Rogue River in a rough country. The per cent of lands that would be chiefly valuable for agricultural purposes, in a state of nature, in Josephine County is rather small, because a lot of them, even the level lands there, are unsuitable for agricultural purposes. There is a granite formation there, and the larger part of the soil is like trying to make a rock produce and the per cent would run not more than three or four per cent, taking the county all the way through. In classifying 3,030 acres he had reported 10 acres that might be used for agricultural purposes, and that is a pretty fair sample he supposes. 1220 acres he classified as grazing in the present state, and in this classification he includes these granite, decomposed, lands. He has been over a considerable of Jackson County, but would rather not estimate the percentage. There is a very small percentage of it that is agricultural, even taking the lands that do not belong to the company, and include the lands that are down in the valley. There is not much valley land down in Jackson County. It is mostly mountainous. He has been over the county in a general way, in different places and parts of it he has been over he has found it very rough, broken and mountainous and there is a very large per cent of it that is not even good for grazing, what he would call good grazing. Outside of the work done on the cruise reports he has made several trips into Columbia, Tillamook and Washington Counties—in Columbia County four or five different times, probably the same in Tillamook and Washington. The unsold lands of the Company, in Columbia County are chiefly valuable for timber. Of the lands which he has been over in Columbia County he has not seen any that he would think a person could possibly go on and make a living. The lands in Tillamook County are generally rough and mountainous and are chiefly valuable for their timber. He has been over some of the lands in Washington County and they are chiefly valuable for timber, if they have any value. Whereupon upon re-cross examination witness further testified, that besides making cruises he had looked after the lease and trespass work of the company, and that had taken him into different parts of the grant in different localities considerably and some of the lands a number of different times. By trespass work he does not refer to people who have settled on the lands, but to those who have cut timber from the Company's land. He does not refer to those people who have built houses, or cabins, or shacks. He has called on those people in regard to leasing and things of that kind, some who were living on the land at that time. It is the policy of the company to have those living on the land, lease it. He does not mean by trespass any reference to what has been referred to in this suit as the "Lafferty settlers" in Columbia County. He has covered each one of the legal subdivisions shown in Defendants' Exhibit 344 by a report that he submitted to the Company, and that covers all that he has cruised for the company, but not all that he has examined or been on. He would not say that this tabulated statement covered all the lands that he has cruised, because he has cruised some between the times he worked for the Company and when he was not in the employ of the Company, that is, not railroad lands, but other lands in the grant, within the limits, for other people.

Whereupon W. J. LANDER, called as a witness on behalf of defendants, and being duly sworn, testified, that he resides at Portland, Oregon, and that for the last thirteen months he has been Supervising Fire Warden for the State of Oregon over Douglas County, Oregon. He has lived in Oregon over twenty-five years, and his residence has been Roseburg, Harrisburg and Portland, Oregon. He has lived at Roseburg, Douglas County, about fifteen years and while residing there usually was in the land business; looking up land for himself part of the time. He has done some farming and became acquainted with that business in Pennsylvania, where he was born. He had a farm near Harrisburg, Linn County, but could not say definitely how long he had been engaged in the farming business, although several years in Linn County. He has had experience in cruising and examination of timber, for the purpose of ascertaining the character, quantity and commercial value of timber and is pretty well acquainted with the unsold lands of the Railroad Company in Douglas County. He has been over nearly all of Douglas County during the last twenty-five years, but in the last fifteen years he has been over the greater portion of Douglas County, both timber and farming lands and is well acquainted with the character of the lands owned by the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and other lands in Douglas County. He has examined timber lands on his own account, for himself and for the Oregon & California Railroad Company; he thinks he has been in the employ of the company as Fire Warden; thinks he was first Fire Warden in Douglas County, about thirteen years ago or more. He has been in its employ as Fire Warden until the last two years and is now acting as Fire Warden of the State Board of Forestry of the State of Oregon. Frank A. Elliott, State Forester, is his superior officer. As Fire Warden for the Oregon and California Railroad Company he patrolled certain districts, watched out for and extinguished fires, if he found them. His duties related to timber lands and his work was particularly active from June 1st to October 1st, of each year. In performing his duties as Fire Warden he patrolled a considerable portion of these lands each year quite thoroughly; that is, by going over the lands, following trails and roads. As Fire Warden for the State Forester, he has supervision of all fire wardens in that county, either State or privately paid wardens. This last summer he had ten federal patrolmen, five paid by the Railroad Company and five paid by the Douglas County Fire Patrol Association, which is composed of timber owners of lands in Douglas County. Some heavy timber owners that participate in this Douglas County Fire Patrol Association are the Musser Lumber Company, the Kribs-Pillsbury people, the Weyerhaeusers, Southern Oregon Company, and Neenah-Oregon Land Company, and several others. He has examined for the Oregon and California Railroad Company in probably all of the western counties within which the grant lies. He made a good many examinations after the San Francisco fire, in regard to defaulted contracts of the company. The company seemed to have lost the contracts and he would go out and hunt these up. In making these examinations, he would go out on the land and see whether it was timber land or occupied, and when it was bought and whether the purchasers were still there, and he would examine the land as to its improvements, whether it was timber, or grazing or agricultural land and make a report. Whereupon the complainant objected to the testimony of this witness relative to the character of the lands within the limits of the grants involved in this suit and settlements thereon, and public land entries thereof, as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and it was agreed that this same objection should be considered as made to all the testimony of the witness on these subjects. Whereupon witness further testified that these lands were lands that had been sold by the company under contract, but the parties had defaulted and forfeited their contracts. He found that the railroad lands that could be used for grazing or agricultural purposes were about all bought or appropriated in some way, that is, these tracts have been bought. There was no demand for these timber lands until recent years, except where there was a little mill along the Columbia River, or some other river. The character of the land that was in demand, belonging to the Railroad Company, prior to the time, timber became an object of demand, was such that it could be easily cleared, or was cleared, little prairies that could be used for grazing purposes, situated mainly along the foothills and back intermingled along with other lands up the little streams, sometimes a little prairie along a sidehill that people could use for grazing, where there wasn't much timber. This land was generally bought by people that would want to go out and clear up a little home. Adjacent farmers would also buy them so as to have more pasture, or something of that kind. There was some inquiry for timber lands of this kind, such as these unsold lands in the foothills and mountains, about thirteen or fourteen or fifteen years ago. He has been over Jackson and Josephine Counties quite a good deal; and has been over the westerly part of Jackson County, but has not been further east in Jackson County than up Butte Creek as far as Prospect and Trail. He has never been in the Jenny Creek country and is not familiar with that country. He has not been very much in the Jenny Creek Country, very little. In Jackson County, the timber lands he only examined as to those defaulted contracts, or sometimes where there had been some depredations after the fire, when the company offered to sell grazing or agricultural land. He thinks it was just before this suit was started, the company offered to sell grazing or agricultural lands. Where people applied to buy those lands, sometimes the company would send him down to examine them. His acquaintance with the lands in Josephine County is about the same as in Jackson County, and he thinks he examined those lands that had been applied for, during the times of which he speaks, as agricultural or grazing, where those applications had been made to the land department. He sometimes found them timber lands, but usually found timber lands and lands not fit for agriculture. He has been some over the lands in Washington, Polk, Yamhill, Benton, Lane, Clackamas, Linn, Marion and Columbia. He has not been in Klamath or Tillamook, but has been some in the Eastern part of Coos County. From his knowledge of the lands in Douglas County, and his acquaintance during the good many years that he has had charge of the fire patrol, he would say that, without clearing, the unsold lands of the company in Douglas County, in their present state, there would be very little, he does not know of any, that could be utilized for agricultural, horticultural or farming purposes. Probably three or four per cent of these lands, if they were cleared, would be valuable or could be used for agricultural or grazing purposes in Douglas County. Some of these timber lands that are heavily timbered, if they were cleared and grubbed, might be used for grazing or some agricultural purpose. Some of the burns might be cleared—there are burns in these timber lands—for probably $50 to $75 an acre, up to $300 or $400 an acre in heavy timber. The chief value of these unsold lands in Douglas County is for their timber.

"Q. Well, why wouldn't it be profitable for a person to buy these heavy timbered lands, or these lands that are more or less timbered, and sell the timber, and then clear the lands and put them under cultivation of some kind? Why wouldn't that be practicable and profitable to a settler?

A. It would not be profitable because you could go and buy land already cleared for less money than you could clear them.

Q. Now, suppose that a settler wanted to buy a quarter section of these timbered lands in Douglas County, at $2.50 an acre, and 160 acres in a tract, not exceeding 160 acres, and the company sold it to him and gave him a good title, and he went out there with his wife and children, if he had any, undertook to make a living on that quarter section, what would you say would be his chances of success?

A. He couldn't make a living on it. He couldn't clear enough of it to.

Q. Suppose the company had sold all of these timbered lands in this grant to so-called actual settlers, at a price not exceeding $2.50 an acre, within the last eight or ten years, since timber has become valuable, and had sold them in quantities not exceeding 160 acres, and these actual settlers had gone out on the quarter sections and built cabins, like some of these homestead settlers have done, what would have become of these lands, and what would have been their chief value after they had got title?

A. You could not find these settlers there. They would be just the same as on the even sections, where they have dug out little homes there. The people are not there—they have sold out to timber companies. They are not living there, as a general thing.

Q. Well, why do they not live on these lands?

A. Well, they wouldn't be profitable to stay there. They couldn't make a living on them.

Q. Then, if I understand you, these lands are chiefly valuable for the timber that is on them?

A. That is what I said awhile ago.

Q. And they are not capable of actual settlement?

A. No.

Q. Now, you may state whether or not that same condition obtains as to all of the unsold lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company in the various counties where you have examined them?

A. The same condition prevails."

Whereupon witness further testified that he made the four reports, identified as Defendants' Exhibit 350. Two of these reports were on lands for which there had been applications to purchase at the time the company was offering to sell the lands. These are his original reports. The company was offering grazing and agricultural land and the applicants applied to purchase Section 19, Township 27 South, as such, but when he examined the land he found it was timber land. He made the examination in the report of March 14, 1912, for 113.19 acres in Douglas County, Oregon, which land was nine miles from Myrtle Creek. That is very fair grazing land and a little grass grows there. It was occupied by J. A. Worthington, and has been enclosed by him for twenty-five or thirty years, and he is the man that owns the land around it. It includes his farm, but he made no claim. He had it enclosed and used it. The additional 40 acres in Coos County is as shown in his report on November 25, 1911, and the diagram showing a little tract marked in red color, and marked "open burn," he considered might be used for agricultural purposes. There was a man living on a burn east of that, and he had a slashing on this. That is on top of a high hill. When he burned his slashing, it burned the timber and brush, deadened it on that little spot, and that is about all the level land there is on it, and this man made no claim to the railroad land. The land described in his reports of October 6th and 7th, 1907, being in Section 15, Township 5 South, Range 7 West, Yamhill County, Oregon, excepting a 40, is very poor grazing land; just a little grazing there among the timber.

"Q. Now, Mr. Lander, you are a farmer, and have had some knowledge and experience of farming; what do you say as to the ability of a settler, or a man, with or without his family, going on 160 acres of this land that might be utilized for grazing purposes, and fencing this 160 acres and confining his stock and the receipts from the produce of that 160 acres to the 160 acres, being able to make a living?

A. Take land of that class, I remember that section very distinctly—there is very little grazing. He couldn't keep two cows in there in the summer.

Q. Now, from your knowledge of this grant, suppose these lands were cleared for grazing purposes, that is to say, the lands became logged-off lands, and the stumps and brush were burned over, and a farmer or settler sowed timothy or other native grasses in the stump on the ashes, and in that way got some grass growing, but that he was compelled as a settler to only pasture this 160 acres, and support his cows or his horses, or whatever it may be on there, and attempted to make a living in that way, I will ask you to state whether or not that would be at all possible or practicable?

A. It would not be practicable.

Q. Would it be possible for a man to make a living in that way?

A. No, I don't think so. A very poor living."

Whereupon witness further testified, that the Southeast quarter of the Northeast quarter of Section 27, Township 27 South, Range 7 West, Douglas County, Oregon, examined by him May 24, 1907, and Section 19, Township 27 South, Range 7 West, Douglas County, described by him in his reports when classified as "timber lands" was so classified when all covered with timber. There was scattering oak trees and saplings on Section 27, and that is very poor grazing land. There is a little grazing on it. Section 19, of the same township, is mostly red fir, 30 inches in diameter, and would be merchantable saw-timber. Agricultural lands are such as would be comparatively level, as he classified them, they might be used for agriculture sometime, if it was level, if the timber was cut off. Section 19 is all rocky and rough land. Speaking generally of the grant, it is very rough and broken, usually rocky in the southern part of the State. It is a kind of clay soil, not very good, in the heavily timbered belts of Douglas and Lane Counties. Whereupon defendants offered in evidence these four documents, as Defendants' Exhibit 350, which was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence, and identified herein as such. Whereupon witness further testified that he had never made any cruise for the company. He would sometimes state the approximate amount of timber on a section. He could not say how many reports of the character of Defendants' Exhibit 350, he has made to the company, but has made a good many. He was engaged from time to time in doing this character of work since shortly after the San Francisco fire, but did not work regularly. Sometimes he would work several months and be at some other work. In the summer time he took up the fire work. When he came to Douglas County twenty-five years ago, these unsold timber lands of the company were not worth anything, because there was too much timber on the land. Timber was not worth anything and it cost too much to clear it. He wanted to buy some himself, and he thought he would buy, probably, some agricultural lands himself, and he looked over the county pretty thoroughly, and didn't find any. He did not buy any railroad land from the company, from the fact it would cost too much to clear it. He has been down on the Siuslaw River, in Western Lane

County. Twenty-five years ago these timber lands in the Siuslaw country were not worth anything. He supposes they had a value, referring to the company's lands. These lands included the even sections and were not worth much, very little, because it would cost too much to clear them. Their chief value now is timber, and they are very valuable at the present time, he thinks. The highest price that he knows of any quarter section of timber lands in Douglas County, or in Western Oregon, being sold for is about $5,000 per quarter section. That was along the Coos County line, near the Coos River. He is not now in the employ of the company. Whereupon upon cross examination witness further testified, that he is now sixty-five years old, and was forty years old when he came to Oregon. He formerly lived in Monroe County, along the Delaware River, 90 miles from Philadelphia, before coming to Oregon. He lived near the Blue Mountains, near Delaware Water Gap. When he was a boy, he helped clear up a farm on the hills in Pennsylvania, in which State the land all had to be cleared, as far as he knows. Some of it was mountainous. But the mountains, take the Blue Mountains, those mountains they did not clear; it was rolling land that they cleared. He does not think there are a great many farms in the Alleghany Mountains, in the Western part of Pennsylvania. He has traveled on the Pennsylvania Road, between Harrisburg and Pittsburg, and never noticed from the train, farms along the mountain sides extending up to the top, along that line. There are little places there, but most of the good farms are along the rivers in Pennsylvania. He was raised along the Blue Mountains, and they are about like the Alleghanies, but a different formation of soil. A good deal of the time since he has lived in Oregon, he has been buying and selling lands, farmed part of the time, but did not farm much for himself. His farm was a mile and a half from Harrisburg, he thinks in Section 14, Township 15 South, Range 4 West, but would not be positive. He took up a homestead, located in Douglas County, located in Section 8, Township 26 South, Range 8 West. His farm near Harrisburg was in the valley, and was prairie land. He owned other lands besides the farm and his homestead, but never farmed them. It is about thirteen or fourteen years since he first went into the employ of the company as Fire Ranger and has been engaged as such practically every summer, although not altogether for the company. He is now employed by the State of Oregon as Supervising Warden, under the State Board of Forestry. He has charge of the Oregon and California Railroad Company fire rangers, under arrangements with that company, and the State Board of Forestry. He does not know what arrangements the Railroad Company has made with the State Board of Forestry, except that he is instructed to assume charge of that work. He receives pay from the State and not from the Railroad Company. The Railroad Company is not in the Fire Patrol Association. The timber companies form the Fire Patrol Association. He ceased to work for the Railroad Company last May (1912) and has not been employed by it in any capacity since that time. He worked last winter for the company in the land office in getting out records of public land entries that had been made in the local land office. Sometimes he would go in the land office and look up the lands. He is the W. J. Lander that prepared, or assisted in preparing, the plat marked "Township 13 South, Range 7 West," shown on Defendants' Exhibit 264, and he prepared a number of these plats for use in this suit. Other than his duties as Fire Warden, prior to 1911 he was land examiner and would go out and examine and classify lands for the land department of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, under its manager, A. W. Rees. He always got his instructions from A. W. Rees, and did not deal directly with the San Francisco office. His directions were, to go out and examine lands. At the time he made these examinations this suit had not been commenced. They did not send him the applications to purchase at the time he made these examinations, before the suit was commenced. The company would say, that the land had been applied for, or something of that kind, and it would so state in its letter of instructions to him, and that is all the knowledge that he had with reference to that matter. He only acted as Fire Warden in Douglas County. His territory covered all of Douglas County. He had charge for some years of the fire patrol of the railroad company in Douglas County, but never had any patrols in Josephine, Jackson or Lane, or these other counties through which the grant extends. His examinations covered different counties. His examinations might be in places from the Columbia River to the California line. They might be anywhere, any county where the company had lands. He thinks the company had other men employed in making examinations of lands besides himself. He might examine a piece of land in Jackson County, and the next piece of land might be in Washington County. He examined the land only after the San Francisco fire. He had no authority to approve any applications to purchase, or any leases. He would only send the applications to lease in and report the character of the land and send in the application. The leasing would be done afterwards. He knew nothing about the execution of the leases or the sale of the land. Sometimes in examining these lands he would put a value on them.

Whereupon D. C. McLENNAN, called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, and being duly sworn, testified, that he is of the age of fifty years, resides at Portland, and has resided in Oregon twelve years. His business has been cruising timber and foreman in different logging camps. He has cruised for the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and for different timber companies in Portland. Some of the companies he has cruised for are Finley Morrison & Son, J. D. Lacey & Company, E. W. Barnes and B. Giltner. He first cruised for the Oregon and California Railroad Company about six months in 1902, and his next work for them began December 1, 1909 and he has been with the company continuously since that time, and is now in its employ. He made the reports contained in Defendants' Exhibit 261. Whereupon complainant objected to the testimony of this witness, relative to the character of the lands, within the limits of the grants involved in this suit, and settlements thereon and public entries thereof, upon the ground that the same is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and it was agreed that this objection should be considered as made to all of the testimony of this witness upon those subjects.. Whereupon witness further testified, referring to Defendants' Exhibit 261, that he classified this land in a state of nature as "timber land," "grazing land" and "agricultural land"; and when they were denuded of timber, he made two classes, grazing and agricultural. This classification was based upon those reports which he made in the field. He did not prepare Defendants' Exhibit 351, but it was prepared from his reports under the direction of A. W. Rees by some one of the office force. Speaking from memory, he would say that the acreage stated is correct. He did not have anything to do with the preparation of Defendants' Exhibit 342. He did his work in Columbia, Washington, Yamhill, Polk, Benton, Lane, Douglas, Coos and Tillamook Counties. He may have done a little in some of the other counties. He thinks he cruised in Tillamook County, as shown on Defendants' Exhibit 351, something over 10,000 acres, but he does not know about that, he never figured it up. The ordinary course of business in making these cruising reports, was, first, the location of the section, and then they usually would pace off 660 feet, called two tallies. Supposing they had located the southeast corner of the section, they paced off two tallies west, and then paced right through the section, right straight north, till they got to the north line of the Section. Then they paced four tallies west, and paced through the other line of forties to the south side of the section; and so on through the section. In doing this they made a record, by keeping an account of the number of trees, or the number of feet on each two acres. He kept an account of the number of feet; when he paced a tally he would have two acres cruised. When they got four tallies, that is across a forty, one subdivision, they would have eight acres.

If the timber seemed to be fairly equally distributed over the forty, he would just average it up. When they had gotten eight acres figured up, what was on the eight acres, they would just multiply it by five. That gave them the forty acres; and so on through the section. Sometimes they measured the trees to get an average. This was one of the accepted ways of cruising timber for the purpose of ascertaining the merchantable timber standing on the lands. Where the timber was not equally distributed over the forty, supposing the timber is heavier on one side and lighter on the other, they would examine both sides a little more carefully, to get an idea of the amount of timber to the acre, and by this result one can figure it very closely. He made a memorandum of each tally of the amount of timber, and also noted in this memorandum the character of the soil, topography of the country, and everything relating to the character of the land. Whenever he crossed a stream he would mark it. He also marked bridges or cliffs, or anything of that kind, so that he would have a fairly good description of the land when he was done. He would take note of the adaptability to agricultural uses, and the character of the soil and whether the land would be suitable for agriculture or grazing. There was no account taken of lands that are unfit for any purpose, but they are classified when denuded as either agricultural or grazing. If he found any land actually unfit for any purpose, it would be classified as grazing land. From his knowledge of the lands which he has cruised, he thinks the proportions as stated are approximately correct, with the exception of the grazing land. There is a lot of that, that is classed as grazing land, that is hardly fit for anything, but there is no provision made in the reports for saying anything about that. He thinks from his actual knowledge of these lands and from his cruising each 40 acres, that this exhibit is a fairly accurate estimate of the percentage that would be agricultural in the present state. As to its being agricultural in the present state, it requires a lot of clearing and such as that. This 30,098 acres, would be without any timber on it. The other is land that has no merchantable timber on it at present, and all that it is good for, is its value as agricultural land. It would be fit for agriculture, and there is no merchantable timber on it. There are stumps and logs and stuff of that kind, which are not valuable for anything. The acreage of agricultural lands from 5,958 acres to 30,098 acres would be increased by clearing. That is, the land is more valuable for timber than for agricultural purposes where there is a certain amount of timber and where there is only a small amount of timber it is probably more valuable for agriculture than for the timber that is on it. In a state of nature he found 5,958 acres that was more valuable for its agricultural uses than for any other purpose, but by denuding or clearing a little more he found 30,000 acres, having more or less timber on it, that would be more valuable for agricultural purposes after the timber was off. The 157,941 acres of grazing that would be left after the whole thing was denuded, would include lands that would be timbered and the timber would be cut off, logged off, and would also include any land whether it was rocky or otherwise. This 5,958 acres of so-called agricultural lands in their present condition, was scattered all over the land that he cruised, small pieces in different parts. They would be separated. Whereupon defendants offered in evidence Defendants' Exhibit 351, which was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence, and identified herein as such. Whereupon witness further testified, that he had been logging foreman in the east before he came here and had been logging foreman on the Columbia River and also for the Southern Pacific Company at Marcola.

"Q. Now, suppose, Mr. McLennan, that the company had sold these timber-lands, these unsold lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, to these so-called actual settlers, at $2.50 an acre, in quantities not exceeding 160 acres, and had sold them since the timber became valuable, and had given them a good title, what would have become of these lands thus conveyed? What disposition would these actual settlers have made of them?

A. Why, if it was timbered land they bought, they would likely sell the timber; and if it was fit for agriculture, they would probably clear it up and use it as agricultural land, or as grazing land.

Q. Suppose the land had merchantable timber on it, and land should be sold at $2.50 an acre that would cruise and be worth $75 an acre, what would be the experience—what would become of the land? Would it go to timber investors, or would the purchaser live on it?

A. He couldn't live on it—couldn't make a living on it.

Q. Why couldn't he make a living on this for himself and his family?

A. There is nothing on it but timber and brush. He would have to clear the timber off in order to graze stock.

Q. Well, could he clear the timber off it if he went there to make a living?

A. No, he couldn't. No, he couldn't clear the timber off and make a living at the same time.

Q. As a matter of fact, what has become of the even sections in this timbered country, that have been homesteaded or taken under the timber and stone act, so far as your knowledge is concerned from having gone through these woods?

A. Those homesteads have had a small piece of clearing on them, some half an acre, some three or four acres—very few of them any more than that—and they have been sold to timber companies, and as soon as the people have sold they have left, gone away. They are abandoned, and those clearings are all grown up with brush.

Q. What is the fact, if you know, in these mountains—the Coast Range and the Cascade Range, within the limits of this grant, wherever the land has been settled in this way by homestead claimants, or purchased under the timber and stone act where no settlement was required, as to who owns those lands at the present time?

A. Timber companies.

Q. Did these homestead claimants or homestead entrymen ever make any homes on these lands?

A. Why, they got to stay there as little as possible, but they don't make a living on these homesteads. They go out and work. If they have a family, they leave their family on these homesteads until such time as they get title to them, and then they sell out and leave.

Q. Did you ever know, in all your experience in these timberlands, of a family living on these homesteads, as a class, continuously, enough to comply technically with the law?

A. After they get their title, they don't live on those lands, without it is some of those claims that are close in to the valley close to the valley, where they could graze stock or use it as agricultural land—but that would be in the edge of the grant. When you get out into the railroad grant, there is very little farm land. All the lands that are fit for agricultural or grazing were taken up or sold, or bought some time ago.

Q. Is it or not a matter of common knowledge, and haven't you observed it all through this grant where you have been, that the even sections where they have been homesteaded have cabins, that were log cabins or built of shakes, shingled with shakes or boarded up, that are in a state of decay, with practically no clearing, where there is no evidence of any human habitation ever having been there except that? Isn't that the history of the homestead entries in Western Oregon?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, suppose that a man pretending to be an actual settler should buy some of these quarter sections at $2.50 an acre, and want to utilize it for grazing purposes, and was required to confine his stock to the 160 acres and to support his stock from that 160 acres, and then support himself and his family from that, what, in your judgment, would be his ability to do that?

A. He couldn't do it.

Q. Then when you speak of these lands as grazing, do you mean to be understood as saying that 160 acres would be sufficient grazing land to support a man and has family?

A. No."

Whereupon witness further testified, that he helped clear 160 acres within the city limits of Portland some time ago, in a tract known as the Vernon tract, about half a mile, a mile or so, from the Willamette River. He had a contract of clearing that of small brush and stumps. There were not very many stumps and no standing timber, just brush and some stumps and a few old logs. It was level land and was not of the class of this land in this grant. He has had no experience or knowledge of clearing timber lands, such as he cruised. He has seen clearings on the road leading up the Necanicum River from Seaside, about fifteen miles, a few clearings on either side of the road. He recalls that stumps are left about 15 or 20 feet high, which at the butt are two or three times the heighth of a man. The method used now in getting this down-timber into a pile to burn is donkey engines to get it together. The big stumps are blasted or burned out with powder, or split up and generally piled together with those donkey engines. Some of these stumps are quite close together, probably 8 or 10 feet apart sometimes, sometimes maybe 4 or 5 rods apart. There is a great deal of stuff in the ground that one cannot see on top. After you take the top of the timber off, there is quite a lot on the ground on those lands that he knows anything about.

These lands he has cruised compare favorably with those along the Necanicum. Some of the lands he cruised are not so heavily timbered. It would cost to get the stumps out, clear the land, and get those stumps off, as high as $200 or $300 an acre to make it fit for plowing.

"Q. Mr. Booth testified that the price would range all the way from $50 to $500 an acre. What is your judgment about that?

A. I should think that would be a pretty fair estimate."

Whereupon witness further testified, that these timber lands of the company that were unsold would be chiefly valuable for timber. The stumpage value of this timber on these lands runs from a dollar to a dollar and a half or two dollars, it depends on the location and the quality of the timber. Whereupon on cross-examination witness further testified, that before coming to Oregon he lived in Minnesota a good part of the time and was engaged in the timber business there, and has been engaged in that business since he was eighteen years old in one capacity or another most of the time, practically all his life. He first started to work for the Railroad Company in 1902, and worked he thinks about six months cruising timber. He then worked for the Southern Pacific Company as logging foreman for about six or eight months in 1906. He started to work the last time in 1909 and has worked for the company continuously since that time, and all this cruising mentioned in these reports here, was done since 1909. He worked for the company under the directions of A. W. Rees. He sometimes cruised each day 160 acres and sometimes half a section. Some days less than 160 acres, cruising by 40 acre tracts. That is a fair average of cruising by the method used by him.

"Q. Now, Mr. McLennan, can you give me the names of any homesteaders that you know of that have merely settled on timber lands to obtain the title—or descriptions of the land?

A. Beg pardon?

Q. Can you give me the names of any homestead entrymen who have entered homesteads, built a shack, made a small clearing merely for the purpose of acquiring the title to the land in order to sell the timber on it, and not for the purpose of making a home out of it?

A. I don't think I made that statement; but I can show you lots of homesteads, just a small cabin, which has fallen into decay, and a small piece of clearing—some of them haven't got any clearing, and what little clearing there is is grown up to brush. I don't know the people that made the entries—I never looked into it. The people were not there, so I never went into that.

Q. You never examined into the history of the land?

A. They seemed to all have the same history, judging from—

Q. How did you know that that was a cabin that was placed there merely by some homesteader?

A. Because it is on Government land, and there would be no other object in building the cabin and making this small bit of clearing, and then letting it grow up.

Q. Don't you know, Mr. McLennan, as a matter of fact, that any number of cabins have been built in Oregon upon lands that were soon to be opened by survey, merely for the purpose of holding the land in order that scrip might be filed on it by big timber companies?

A. Well, in that case there is no homestead in those hills. They are all alike. I don't know what they have been taken up for, but I haven't seen any man living on a homestead in those mountains.

Q. You don't know what the cabins were built for? You merely have seen the cabins that have been abandoned?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the only thing you base your testimony on?

A. I took it for granted that they were homesteads. In fact, I have been told that they were. But I didn't see the people—the people—were not living there."

Whereupon witness further testified that he never engaged in the examination of the lands for the company, other than this cruising about which he has testified. He has examined trespasses and such as that, in different localities out from Portland, wherever he ran across a trespass, meaning where timber had been cut off the railroad lands. He has no reference to where someone squatted on the land, but refers to trespass by timber companies, or where farmers were cutting timber for their own use, or anybody for that matter. Whereupon on redirect examination witness further testified that he had a compassman with him when he was cruising these lands.

Whereupon ROY WOODS, called as a witness on behalf of defendants and being duly sworn testified that he is thirty-six years old, resides at Newburg, Oregon, and at the present time is in the fire patrol with the State. He had been a compassman at various times for the Oregon and California Railroad Company since 1902. He has been over the lands of the company as a compassman, some in Columbia, Josephine and Coos Counties, and very little in Douglas County. He was compassman for Charles Cavell and D. C. McLennan, who has just testified. He was not with him as compassman during the time he made all of his cruises but was compassman for McLennan in December 1909 up to March 1 1910. His first year out as compassman for Covell was in Josephine County, some in Douglas and Coos Counties but he is not certain as to Jackson County. He was with him as compassman something like probably about five months. He did not work with him in Multnomah, Washington, Linn, Lane or Clackamas Counties. He has had experience as a compassman with other cruisers for other people. He was out with the Moylans who were cruising he thinks for the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company in January 1903. He has not worked for the Oregon and California Railroad Company since June, 1912. During the work that he did last for the company, he was looking over some of its lands and out with a photographer. He was looking out for people who had attempted to settle or locate on some of these lands to see the character of the lands where it was improved where it was inhabited and what was its general character. These lands were in Columbia and Washington Counties, some in Jackson and Josephine Counties. The lands he then examined, upon which parties had attempted to trespass or settle, were mostly timber lands. He was present and examined the timber lands in Columbia County where a lot of photographs were taken by Gifford and C. W. Kempton.

Whereupon referring to "Defendants' Exhibit 269" witness recognized photographs Nos. 2942 and 2943 and testified that he was present and saw these two photographs taken. Besides himself, Kempton was close at hand when they were taken and he thinks L. D. McLeod was on the ground at the time. He had occasion to run these lands out in 1910 when he was there and also had occasion to run these lands out this winter and is pretty well acquainted with that section, having been to most every corner in that township and that is the way he ascertained where the camera was placed. The top of the picture was taken from the place indicated in the blue print attached to the photograph. The three corners indicated are all perfect. The land in the prospect shown in the photograph is heavy timber mostly and the land on the ridge is timber. In the immediate foreground of both of these photographs, the timber has been burned. Prior to that time it had been heavy timber. He would say that this land is on a straight line about 10 miles from the Columbia River and Houlton was the closest railroad station on the main line of the S. P. & S. Railroad Co. formerly the Northern Pacific. He was with Gifford at the time of taking another photograph, "Defendants' Exhibit 269." This photograph shows the character of the improvements made on these three quarters in section 8 same township. On one piece of land there had been a house at one time, but it had burned down. This land was, or had been government land at one time. These improvements were abandoned. They were all on even sections, at one time government land. From the lands he had covered and been over in person, the lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company that he had visited, are a good deal more valuable for the timber than for anything else. He would think that the amount of timber on a forty necessary to make it of commercial value as timber land, would be a good deal owing to the character of the land, whether it is standing on end or could be cultivated after cleared. He does not know how much timber there would have to be on a forty to make it valuable to sell as timber land. He is not a timber man in that sense and does not know how much some of these forties run in board feet. He has had no experience in clearing this land. He has never taken a homestead himslf, and has no knowldge of abandoned homestead claims in timber regions. On the even sections in this grant he has seen a good many of them that were apparently settled and abandoned. Some of these entrymen were living close to where their homesteads were, some of them he does not know where they are. In a great many cases titles to these lands have passed to timber corporations. In most cases where he was able to find the improvements there was a pile of rocks and a few scattering shacks all dilapidated. Some places there would be a board house probably with a little patch around it, a few berry vines or something where they had grown up all over the place, with windows and doors all out. There was no evidence of continuous settlement any more than just what is required to become in possession of the land. He has been in Columbia County and the homesteads on the ground that he went over were practically all abandoned, whereupon complainant objected to all the testimony of this witness relating to the character of the land within the limits of these grants, settlements thereon and public ruling thereon as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and it was agreed that the same objection should be considered as taken to all the testimony of the witness upon these subjects.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

Q. Well, now, what would you say as to the ability of a man to go onto one of these 160-acre timber quarters as an actual settler, to make a living for himself and family on the land?

A. It would be impossible.

Q. Why?

A. Well, there is nothing there to make a living from. There is no ground that you could derive anything from whatever.

Q. Couldn't he get out there and grub these big trees up, and cut the timber down, and sell it for cordwood, and sell it to these timber people, and in that way make a home for himself and his family?

A. Well, he might if he lived to be a thousand years old—he might get a patch big enough to support himself and family.

Q. Then, if I understand you, you would regard it as practically impossible for a man to go on these premises as a settler?

A. I do.

Q. And make a living for himself and family?

A. I do.

Q. Well, what is the fact as to whether he could not buy this land from the company, supposing the company was willing to sell it, at $2.50 an acre, and go out there and fence it, and make a living off it by raising cattle and pasturing it, or raising stock of some kind, using it as grazing land?

A. What do you mean—on this 160 acres?

Q. Yes, just 160 acres. What is your answer to that?

A. No, I don't think he could, no, sir.

Q. Well, now, suppose the company had sold all of these timber-lands to these so-called actual settlers, of which there are some several thousand actual or potential settlers shown in this record, at $2.50 an acre, in quantities not exceeding 160 acres, and had given the so-called actual settlers a good title, what would have become of these lands?

A. Well, practically in about the same condition they are today. What was handy to a mill would be logged off, and the balance would be in the hands of some timber corporation, standing just as it was.

Q. Then these so-called settlers would have to sell them, or would sell them?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that right?

A. Why, that would be the only thing they could do. That would be the main object in taking them, I should imagine.

Q. Would they be able to sell them at an advance of $2.50 an acre under the present market conditions?

A. They certainly would.

Q. Some of these timber-lands in Columbia County that you saw there, what would they be worth for 160 acres at the present market conditions?

A. Present market value?

Q. Yes.

Mr. Rabb: Objected to on the ground that the witness has not shown himself competent to express an opinion relative to the market value of timber-land, as he is shown only to have been a compassman.

Q. You may answer.

A. Those claims in there went from twelve to fourteen—there is one young man, I think, in there has a claim in section 22, the northeast quarter of 22, if I remember the description right, has a standing offer of sixteen thousand or eighten thousand—I forget now which it was, with a lumber company there, I was informed.

Q. Sixteen or eighteen thousand dollars?

A. I wouldn't say for certain which it was at that time, but I was informed.

Q. Is that the fair market value of these lands?

Mr. Rabb: I move to strike the answer of the witness from the record as hearsay.

Q. Is that the fair market value of these quarter sections?

A. That is what they were sold for, I understood him.

Whereupon witness testified that he is not in the employ of the Company; that he discontinued his employment June 5, 1912, and is now in the employ of F. A. Elliott, State Forester, as supervising fire warden for Multnomah County. He has knowledge of what little timber lands there are in Multnomah County, but does not know where the unsold lands of the Company are situated. There is a small strip of timber lands in Multnomah County situated on the extreme west line of the northwest corner and the extreme northeast; that is up the Columbia River from Eagle Creek south. There is no timber above Eagle Creek; there is also timber east of Latourell or Bridal Veil country. The timber in that section is fir and larch and is of average quality. It is merchantable timber.

Whereupon upon cross examination witness testified that he now resides at Newberg, Yamhill County. He is under F. A. Elliott, who is State Forester, formerly an employe of the Oregon and California Railroad Company. Since he was twenty-one years of age he has followed stationary engineering for saw mills, flour mills, brick yards, ice plants and worked at various times since 1902 for the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and his acquaintance with these lands is such as he gained while in its employ. He had the names of parties that had taken these homesteads that he mentioned as abandoned but can only recall one or two. One was Julius Floeter, who was in the southwest quarter of section 4 North 3 West, and a man by the name of Anderson on the northeast quarter of section 8, same township, and a man by the name of Wilson on the southeast quarter same township and section. These cabins were all near the section lines between the even and odd sections, within the limits of the grant, but he does not know whether these cabins were intended to be placed on the railroad lands. The entry calls for the ground the cabins are situated on. The names and descriptions of the land were taken off the government records. He supposes they were handed to him by someone in the office of the Railroad Company at the time he went out to make the examination of these lands from January up to June 1, 1912.

Whereupon C. M. STITES, called as a witness on behalf of defendants and being duly sworn, testified that he is fifty-four years old and lives in Washington County, Oregon, and is a farmer. He has lived in Oregon since 1882, moving to Williams Creek, Josephine County, in 1883. He lived on a farm there until 1886 or 1887. He was assessor for Josephine County in the years 1895 and 1896 and always made his home called Williams Creek until 1907, when he moved to Washington County, where he is now living. His first experience in the sawmill business was in California. He worked there the season of 1897 and next at Merlin in 1898 for the Sugar Pine Door & Lumber Company and worked for that company every season except 1895 and 1896. He thinks he quit that Company in 1900 and in 1901 worked awhile for the Booth-Kelly Lumber Company at Coburg, starting in as a common laborer and finishing as foreman of the mill at Coburg, which mill had a capacity at that time of about 70,000 feet for 10 hours. His first experience in cruising timber lands in Oregon was when he commenced in 1897 when employed by the Sugar Pine Door and Lumber Company. He was superintendent of their mill or mills and cruised and then sawed out. In 1904 he began cruising for any person who wanted the work done and had worked for a great many different people. This cruising for the Sugar Pine Door and Lumber Company done by him was in the vicinity of Merlin and Wolf Creek in Josephine County. He never cruised any for the Oregon and California Railroad Company but cruised Josephine County for the County of Josephine and made two trips as a cruiser to Eastern Oregon for the California & Oregon Land & Live Stock Company. He is familiar with the lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company in townships 32 to 41 south inclusive, ranges 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 west. Commencing with 32, which is in Douglas County, Oregon, and along in the northern boundary of 33 south, which is the boundary line between Josephine and Douglas, the water-shed is the boundary line between these two counties. Township 41 south is bordering the State line between Oregon and California. The actual cruising was done on surveyed land. He did not cruise any unsurveyed lands which would be in the north part of the county, Range 7 and 8 west is the boundary of the surveyed lands, and in the southern part of Josephine County there are some surveyed lands as far west as range 9. He has been in 39 and 40 south, ranges 2, 3 and 4 in Jackson County, on the head waters of the Little Applegate and partly on the head waters of the main Applegate, southwest of Jacksonville. He was never in the Jenny Creek country in the eastern part of Jackson county, but has been across the mountains and in Klamath Falls and through that country, but did no cruising in that part. He has also been on a trip of reconnaissance to Fort Klamath and north of Fort Klamath, but did no cruising in that part of the country. He cruised all of the surveyed land of Josephine County for the County while he was assessor, but cruised no unsurveyed lands. His cruise included the unsold lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company. He has cruised in 32-7 and 32-8 in Douglas County for himself and individuals. That would be in the south boundary of the county and in the country drained by the west and middle forks of Cow Creek. He has not done any cruising in the western part of Douglas County. He made a trip to Coquille and down through that country, cruised some in there, probably a section or something of that kind. As far as he saw, he became familiar with the general character of the timber in the western part of Douglas County but of course was not noticing that particularly. He has been in a part of what he supposes is Coos County, but does not know,—in the Coast Mountains within the 30 mile limits of this grant. He has been in Lane County. He made a trip up the middle fork of the Willamette River and across the range. He has made that trip some three or four times, first in 1893 on a pleasure trip. Then in going to Eastern Oregon he made two trips across there and immediately after he had been over the mountains he began cruising but did no cruising west of the summit of the Cascade Mountains. He saw all the timber that was in sight of the road, that is all, and the general character of the country of course. He has not been in the western part of Lane County and had no opportunity to see the timber lands of the Company and others in Linn, Marion or Clackamas Counties, although he had been through Clackamas some but paid no attention to the timber. He has not been in Benton, Linn, Yamhill, Washington, Columbia or Tillamook or through the timber lands of Tillamook County. He is more especially familiar and has directly cruised all of the lands in Josephine County and does not think there is more than 1½ or 2 per cent of these unsold lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, with which he is familiar, that are suitable for settlement or agricultural or horticultural or other such purposes. His judgment is based on his farming experience and the observation of the experiments that have been tried by others on these lands and from farming operations and fruit raising operations that he conducted himself and saw others conduct there and is also based upon his actual knowledge in going over these timber lands that he has cruised. He was acting for Josephine County when he cruised these lands and has never been employed by the Oregon and California Railroad Company, to do any cruising of any of its lands. Of the lands that he cruised in Douglas County there is none that are suitable for agricultural purposes. The chief value of these unsold lands of the Company in Josephine and Douglas Counties and other sections with which he is familiar is the timber. In Josephine County the lands are very mountainous and what is really unsold contains very little pasturage, or would contain very little under any conditions. The pasturage in the higher mountains would amount to considerable, and does under natural conditions, from about the first of June until November first. To give a good idea of how much pasturage is furnished, he would say that township 39 south, ranges 5 and 6 west, and township 40 south, 5 and 6 west, furnish pasture in the summer, and the maximum pasture has been furnished there for 1,000 to 1,100 head of stock which have absolutely eaten all the pasture in these four townships in that time, besides this stock was pastured outside of this area to some extent, referring by stock, to cattle mostly. That area would be something over 80,000 acres necessary to feed 1,000 to 1,100 head of cattle during that period. The foothills around the valley, in his judgment would raise good grapes, that is quite a per cent of it, probably 50 per cent of the percent he has named. Possibly once in awhile a place would raise peaches or pears and it is his judgment that is the extent of what the land would do. There has not been enough of these lands utilized to amount to a percent. There is one demonstration that proves that grapes can be grown commercially on such lands. He does not remember what section but it must be in township 37 south range 5 west, probably a mile from the Applegate River on a farm owned by H. Carson, who has he thinks 60 acres in grapes now. It is hill land. The expense of clearing this land and putting it to any such use as that would vary with the conditions and would run from $30 to $40 an acre up to $100 or $150 per acre, something like that. There is a limited area of that character of land in Josephine County. Land that is covered with saw or commercial timber would cost to clear it and make it available for plowing, if there was soil, from $50 to $200 an acre, some places as high as $300 per acre. The soil of these lands in most of the eastern part of Josephine County is granite soil, decomposed granite. In township 35, 6 and 7; 36, 5 and 6, there is quite a lot of flat and small hill lands of decomposed granite mostly underlaid with beds of gravel, especially in 36—6. There never has been any profitable farming done on any of that land. Granite is a stone and this is just simply decomposed by the action of the weather. This township 36—6 he speaks of, the flat land is to the southwest from Grants Pass and is underlaid with a deep bed of gravel, he does not think any one knows how deep it is. It is gravel the size of a fist and down, so that the water leaches right through the ground and takes all the substance out of it. If it were irrigated it would possibly be suitable for cultivation, but it does not hold the fertilizer or moisture. It would not be at all practicable to irrigate these hill lands—it would be out of the question to do that. The supply of irrigating water from the gravity system is all taken and taken again. Probably streams that have one thousand inches have claims for three or four thousand inches. The talk of irrigating these lands is idle because there is not the water. He does not think there is any possibility of the lands which he cruised in Douglas County being utilized for any agricultural or horticultural purposes.

Whereupon witness further testified as follows:

Q. Now, suppose, Mr. Stites, that an actual settler, so-called, should apply to the company to purchase 160 acres of these lands that you speak of, at $2.50 an acre, and should be expected to go out there and settle on these lands, enclose his quarter section, and make his living for himself and his family on this quarter section, and confining his stock range to that quarter section, or his agricultural or horticultural productions to that quarter section, what, in your judgment, would be his ability to succeed or to utilize that quarter section for settlement purposes?

A. Well, the unsold lands are none of them that I would consider a man would be justified in undertaking such a thing.

Q. Suppose a man went out on a quarter section that had commercial timber on it, ranging in value according to the stumpage from $5,000 to $10,000 per quarter section, and the company, under pretense of his being an actual settler and applicant under this act of April 10, 1869, should sell him this quarter section, and he should go out there with his family, or alone, build him a shack for a home, undertake to live there, make a home out of it, and to make a living, what use would he put that land to, do you know?

A. That would depend in a great measure on how far he was from transportation where his land was located, and all those kind of things.

Q. Well, what would be the best use that he could put that land to, if it was heavily timbered?

A. The best thing he could do with it would be to sell the timber off the land, in my opinion.

Q. Suppose these timber lands of the company were all sold to so-called actual settlers, a good title given them, in quantities not exceeding 160 acres, at a price not exceeding $2.50 an acre, and they got a good title, were not required under the Act to live there any length of time, but just to settle, how long would it be, in your judgment, and from your knowledge of the way these timber lands have been taken and disposed of, until these actual settlers had disposed of all these timber lands for their market value?

A. Well, I would suppose that they would sell at the first opportunity.

Q. What is your knowledge, if you have any, as to what has become of the lands in the even sections, title to which has been taken from the United States, where they are covered with timber?

A. I am not informed as to what has become of the homestead entries. A great many of the timber claims have been sold—practically the majority of them.

Q. To whom have they been sold?

A. I don't know. Well, I believe that one group on the head of Williams Creek was sold to a man by the name of Olsen.

Q. What class of investors have secured the title to these lands, if you know?

A. I did not understand.

Q. What class of investors have purchased these lands?

A. Well, there has been some bought by mill owners, but mostly by timber speculators, I suppose. I am not very well informed on who has acquired the title.

Q. In your travels through these lands in Josephine County and in Douglas County, did you notice anything in the way of settlement on these even sections? What evidence of homestead settlements, if any, did you notice, and what has become of the improvements?

Mr. Rabb: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

A. The homestead improvements that I recall are mostly in 39—6. There were six homesteads there, which ground, I think I cruised in 1906. At that time the cabins were new, practically new. I seen no one at any of the cabins, but in most instances there was a little piece of ground spaded up, and some garden planted.

Q. What kind of cabins were they as to material?

A. They were built of split cedar.

Q. How large?

A. Oh, I should say 14 or 16 feet square.

Q. One or two stories?

A. One story high.

Q. Any fences?

A. I do not recall any fences.

Q. Any stock?

A. No stock.

Q. Any human beings?

A. No, sir.

Q. Any evidence of anybody living there?

A. None at all. Any more than this, there were outfits for camping and cooking in most of the cabins.

Q. What kind of timber was it where these settlements were?

A. These cabins mostly were built right along the flat of the stream, and the timber right in the bed of the stream was Port Orford cedar mostly. The hillsides were very steep, probably an angle of forty-five degrees, something like that, covered with fir timber, most of it.

Q. Good fir timber?

A. Not very, no.

Q. What was the chief value of these claims that you saw, these homesteads?

A. If they had any value, it was for timber.

Whereupon on cross examination witness further testified that he has been largely engaged in sawmilling since coming to Oregon. He has farmed on Williams Creek in Josephine County, where he owned 100 acres of land and his father owned 180 acres and they farmed together when he farmed. After he went to work for wages his father and the family lived on the farm. His farm is in section 34, township 38 south, range 5 west of Willamette Meridian. He has never filed on a homestead. He cruised all of the lands in Josephine County that he thought was worth cruising. This cruising was not done while he was assessor of Josephine County, but was done in 1905 and 1906 and part of 1907 after he had been assessor in 1895 and 1896. He did not cruise any solid townships in Dougslas County, but cruised around in two or three townships, 32-7, 32-8 and reconnoitered west of there but did not do any cruising. His only knowledge relating to the lands in Lane County is practically confined to a trip taken along the public highway concerning which he has testified. He has cruised a little land on the McKenzie, probably ten or twelve forties, something like that but does not claim any particular knowledge only as to the general lay of the country. He got his information about the homestead improvements in 39-16 from blue prints of the government plats which he always carried with him when he went to cruise the land. He does not know whether these entries have been abandoned or not. He knows that the alleged homestead settler hired these cabins built and he talked with the man that built the cabins. There were a number of them built by the same party, but he does not remember the man's name—the man he met while he was cruising below there. Individual locators or entrymen hired this man to build their homes; that is one man built them all, but the individual man hired this man as he understood it. He does not know whether this same man got the homesteads after the deal was perfected, but he does not imagine that he did, because he did not seem to him to have enough money to buy anything—he did not buy them. This man was working for himself and lived there close to the claims, down the hill from them, and it would be naturally easier for him to build these cabins than anybody in the country. There were no people living in that township, only one man. The other man lived below in the next township. He thinks there was one man but he does not remember his name. Possibly his name is Barnett, he thinks it was, who lives in section 31 of that township. If he remembers rightly Barnett contested with the Railroad Company for title to his land and he was living on railroad land. If a man lives in a cabin he is supposed to have a bed and some furniture. In these cabins there was simply a frying pan or two and a place to lay down some blankets, something of that kind. There was no furniture of any kind. Possibly a block of wood set on end. This was in 1906. He does not remember or recall the names of any of these homesteaders.

Whereupon on redirect examination witness further testified that he had never been in the employ of the Oregon and California Railroad Company or the Southern Pacific Company.

Whereupon C. W. KEMPTON called as a witness on behalf of defendants and being duly sworn testified that he is thirty-six years old and is at present employed as inspector of sewers in the City Engineers' office, of Portland Oregon and has been in Oregon a little over two years and was employed as land examiner and taking pictures of lands by the Oregon and California Railroad Company from January 1, 1911, until along in July 1912. He went out on some lands and took pictures on the Santiam River. He was through Polk and Lane Counties. A portion of the time he was by himself, but a majority of the time, Roy Woods, Kinser and Elliott, the State Fire Warden's son were with him. Witness took the photographs "Defendants' Exhibit 273" and made notes on the back of them, not being absolutely familiar with the different sections of the country he was in, knowing only just simply from examination and finding the quarter corners and by direction of streams that flow in regard to the maps that he carried to show his location. He made the notes on the back of the photographs after they were taken; that is, he would make notes at the time on each film, when he was taking all these, and afterwards would transfer them from that notation to the photograph. These notes accurately record what he noted at the time he was on the ground and they are correct. There is a photograph here showing the south half of the southeast quarter, and the south half of the southwest quarter, section 18, township 7 south, range 6 west, and the photograph was taken showing the improvements on the place April 2, 1912. The claim was a homestead of Alfred Haldeman. All that he has taken were homestead claims. The improvements were badly decayed; the buildings were put up out of shakes. The memorandum shows the size of the buildings that were on the land, the measurements show the size of the house that was built. The house was 12x12 and the barn 12x14 and were not occupied. There was no sign of occupation around them. To all of which testimony of this witness complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and it was urged that this objection should be considered as taken to all the testimony of this witness as to the character of the lands within the limits of these grants, settlements thereon and public land entries thereof.

Whereupon witness further testified that the cabin shown in the photograph taken at this time was built on the bank of the creek and is in a canyon on the bank of a small creek. The timber on the claim was good fir timber and the land was chiefly valuable for timber; it was very rough. The next photograph shown him was taken on the head of what is known as the Rickreall River in Polk County and he knows that very well. The memorandum was a report that this was the homestead of John F. Johnson on the south half of the northeast quarter and the north half of the southeast quarter of section 2, township 8 south, range 8 west, and he got a portion of this data on the memorandum as to when the filing was made and patent issued from the Oregon and California Railroad Company at the time he went out to work and he got the date of the transfer of the title from the records in the Recorder's Office at Dallas. This notation shows the present owner; that is who owned the property at the time, and is what he secured in the office. The improvements on this land were badly in decay, broken down by a tree falling across the corner of the house, not occupied, and no farther improvements on the land or ground at this place.

Whereupon it was agreed that this witness would testify that the memorandum on each of these photographs is a correct statement of what his testimony would be and the same was received as his testimony, subject to the objection made. It was further agreed that the witness would testify that he obtained the information as to when the land was filed on, when patented, from the land office of the company when he started out and obtained the date when sold and the consideration for such sale from the records of the Recorder's office in the various counties in which the lands were situated.

Whereupon witness further testified that he did not examine the County records as to all of these photographs. Those that are in Polk County where they are shown on the back, he has examined them. There may be other notations on some of those others where he did not go to the records in the county. Polk County he went there himself. He went through this county by himself and secured this data and made all the notations or memoranda that were made by him under the circumstances as he has stated he believes. He can tell by looking at the back of them whether or not he did so. He took these photographs according to the dates as placed in the memorandum on the back of the picture. Some few of these photographs are not homesteads. He was engaged in taking these photographs "Defendants' Exhibit 273" from about the 20th of January up to July, 1912, but was not out continuously. The lands shown in these photographs are situated in Polk, Lane, Clackamas and he believes there are one or two in Marion County. These reports or memoranda made on the back of these photographs show the descriptions and the memoranda as to conditions of improvements and occupation and so on are according to the facts as he found them on the ground. These lands shown in these photographs are chiefly valuable for the timber. He found very few of these improvements occupied, he thinks there is but one picture where there was any one occupying the improvements. These improvements were badly in decay and broken down. Occasionally there was an old wagon road going by these improvements, but mostly trails. There was no evidence of recent occupation on these lands, with the exception of one where there was an occupant. One place was occupied, they had been in there about two years and they had not at that time received their patent. The man was a homesteader and had a wife and children with him. The nearest town to which this was would be Mahama on the Santiam River in Marion County, about 12 miles away. He had a cabin and he saw him there in May, and all he knows as to whether he and his family had lived there continuously was the statement of the man that he had been there that time, and that he had been there since he built his cabin. He had about a quarter of an acre cleared. It was too early in the season for him to start the crops, excepting a small garden which they had started and making his clearing there. His cabin had two rooms and with that exception he found no settlements or occupants on any of these claims.

Whereupon defendants reoffered each and all of these photographs marked "Defendants' Exhibit 273" being about 80 photographs in all and all of which are enclosed in an envelope marked on the outside "Defendants' Exhibit 273," which were received in evidence and are hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified herein as such.

Whereupon witness recognized "Defendants' Exhibit 273-a" as that showing the improvements on south half of northeast quarter, west half of southeast quarter of section 24, township 10 south, range 2 east, where he found this man and his family who had been there for some time as the man said. With that exception he found no evidence of occupation, no persons living on these premises shown in these photographs.

Whereupon said photograph so recognized was marked "Defendants' Exhibit 273-a."

Whereupon on cross examination witness testified that these notations on the back of these photographs were made in his presence, he dictated the memoranda from the notes that he made at the time he was on the ground on the films; he had a note book that he kept notes in and he used an Alvesta panoramic camera and these pictures were all taken while he was in the employ of the Company. He was employed by the railroad company from January until July, 1912.

Whereupon on redirect examination witness further testified that these memoranda on the back of these photographs are accurate from the memoranda made in his book at the time each day. He dictated these at the time they were copied on the photographs taken from his memoranda. The Oregon and California Railroad Company's land office furnished him the data of when these homesteads were entered and patented. It was the Portland office in charge of A. W. Rees that furnished this information. Some of these photographs had been enlarged, but were all taken with the same camera. The data as to when sold and the consideration, for what sold, where it appears on the back of these photographs was obtained by him in person from the Recorder's Office at Dallas. He would go to the volume that contained the record of the deed and take the date of deed and the consideration stated and verify the description of the land to see that it was the same land that was given as a homestead. He ran it down from the legal descriptions.

Whereupon witness testified as follows:

"Q. Did you pay any attention to see to whom these lands were conveyed, and what class of people were buying them? Whether they were timber companies or what?

A. Gone into the hands of timber companies."

Whereupon upon re-cross examination witness testified that he had charge of the party with whom he was, when these pictures were taken. His instructions were, to go through and examine these lands and photograph whatever he found, they giving him the homestead locations and the descriptions of the homesteads. In taking photographs it is necessary to have weather conditions suitable for that purpose. These photographs are all of lands in range 5, 6 and 7 west and without referring to his notes he could not just recall what townships they were in but the lands were scattered over the strip and in ranges 5, 6 and 7 west but he could not recall without referring to his notes. He did not take a photograph of all the lands that had been entered from the government by homestead entries in these townships, weather conditions did not always permit and they did not return for that purpose. There were a few people living in these townships who had patented homesteads from the government other than he had shown. His only knowledge of these lands was such as he obtained on this trip. He was in Polk County something like three months.

Whereupon on re-direct examination witness further testified that very few of these homestead claims that he did not photograph were occupied. There was very little occupation. The condtiion of these that were not occupied, as to improvements where he did not take the photographs, was about the same as the photographs displayed. He was engaged in this business from January until July, something like six months, but not continuously, as weather conditions were such that at times it was not justifiable to put out any films. He would say there would not be two per cent of the homesteads that he saw in all that time in all that country that had any settler actually living on them. The even sections were all taken with the exception of about, if he remembers correctly something like 840 acres in Polk County that was not taken of government lands. These lands that were homesteaded were very rough and rocky and they were chiefly valuable for timber, if they had any value. All of these photographs taken showed lands within the limits of the grant. A couple of these photographs were taken on an odd section but this is shown on the back of the photograph, with that exception they were all taken on the even sections, within the limits of the grant.

Whereupon ALICK WILKINSON called as a witness on behalf of defendants and being duly sworn testified that he is forty-two years old and resides at Gresham, Oregon, and has lived in Oregon over 8 years and has been in the business of lumbering or acted as compassman with cruiser McLennan. McLennan cruised in township 3 north, range 3 west and the southern part of 4 north range 3 west; township 19 south, range 4 west and part of township 3, range 5 west; township 21 south ranges 7 and 8 west; township 22 south, ranges 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8 west and he was with him during the time he cruised these lands as compassman. All of these townships are rough. To which complainant objected as incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant and it was agreed between the parties that this same objection should be considered as made to all the testimony of this witness regarding the character of the lands within the limits of these grants and settlements thereon and public entries thereof.

Whereupon witness further testified that to the best of his judgment about five per cent of these lands would be suitable for agricultural, horticultural or some settlement purposes. These lands are chiefly valuable for timber. He has had no experience in cruising lands other than as a compassman for a cruising party. He has worked in the timber business ever since he was fifteen years old and has been doing everything—foreman in logging camps, all kinds of work, everything in logging camps and did work in a sawmill a little. He is not familiar with the character of these lands outside of the particular lands that he was over with McLennan, which had on them fir, cedar and hemlock, which were in Douglas and Lane Counties. He was also with McLennan when he cruised the 840 acres in one body in Washington County and 1340 acres in another body, part of it in that county, but could not say how many acres in that county. He served with him as compassman while McLennan was cruising them. He was with McLennan when he was cruising in Lane County in three townships. He was with McLennan in Douglas County from about the 4th or 5th of March up to the date he testified in October, 1912. The work that he did with McLennan was in Lane, Douglas and Washington Counties. He is still in the employ of the Oregon and California Railroad Company as compassman and commenced work this time for that company February 1, 1912. In the spring of 1910, he was out with them 27 days in Washington County. To make a quarter section of timber land commercial would depend upon where it is located and how close it is to transportation. Some would be worth more than others. Some that is way back is not worth so much, others close in are worth quite a little. A 40 that is only a million feet board measure is marketable, it all depends upon the quality and location and accessibility and distance from transportation.

Whereupon upon cross examination witness testified that he had been working in the timber as his occupation all of his life since he was fifteen years old, worked in Northern Wisconsin; came to Oregon in the spring of 1894 and did everything in logging camps; has been sawing in this country. Northern Wisconsin was a timber country.

Whereupon BEN IRWIN, called as a witness on behalf of defendants and being duly sworn, testified that he is an abstracter, residing at Portland, Oregon, and was employed by the Oregon and California Railroad Company from 1905 to 1910, chiefly abstracting and in some cases making examinations of land. He has been in portions of the grant in nearly all of its extent, making examinations. In Columbia County he has examined pretty closely. He has made examinations in Multnomah, Clackamas, Linn, Lane, Douglas, Josephine and Jackson. The most careful examinations were in connection with getting information relative to settlers or trespassers on the company's lands in Columbia and Multnomah Counties. He searched for the location of certain lands claimed to have been settled upon by certain applicants for the purchase of these lands under the $2.50 per acre clause, and particularly lands thus applied for by persons represented by A. W. Lafferty in this litigation referred to in this record. He was on the work of finding their depredations and operations on the company's lands. These photographs, Defendants' Exhibit 270, containing a typewritten memorandum pinned to each thereof, signed "Ben Irwin," which memoranda thus signed are numbered 1, 3, 2, 16, N, 23, 24, 20, 19, 5 and 8, and unsigned numbers 26, 29, 27, 31, 30, 34 and 33, being in all eighteen photographs, were made under his direction in the field, in connection with A. W. Rees. He and Rees located all of these photographs—all of these cabins and views.

Whereupon defendants offered in evidence said Defendants' Exhibit 270 with the memoranda attached, to which complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and it was agreed between the parties that the same objection should be considered as taken to all evidence of the witness relating to the character of the lands within the limits of the grants involved in this suit, settlement thereon and public land entries thereof.

Whereupon said Defendants' Exhibit 270 with said memoranda having been heretofore offered and received in evidence, are here reoffered and herein made a part of this Statement of the Evidence, identified as such.

Whereupon witness testified that he ascertained the descriptions and location of these lands upon which these cabins shown in the pictures, are located, by finding the section corners or quarter section corners, and pacing the lands in connection with his work as compassman for Rees, the cruiser and field agent of the company. These memoranda attached to each photograph were prepared by witness, in his report furnished to the company shortly after the examinations were made, and correctly represent the descriptions and dates, both signed and unsigned, as they were found by him at the time in the field. These photographs are of cabins and depredations upon land on the summit of the mountains between the Columbia and Nehalem Rivers, in Columbia County. The lands were very rough as a general thing, and steep, and the altitude was high. There was very heavy timber on nearly all of these lands. Fir was the predominating tree. He went into these cabins and in most instances there were a few dishes and frying pans, bedding, and in a few instances the parties or persons were near there trespassing upon the premises. In most cases there was no one present. In most instances the cabins were not occupied, but in a few instances they were occupied.

Whereupon complainant objected to said last mentioned testimony as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and it was agreed between the parties that this same objection should be considered as made to all other testimony of this witness relating to the settlements, conditions and improvements made by settlers on the lands within the limits of these grants.

Whereupon witness testified that these photographs were taken about the date stated in the memoranda by Fred H. McClure, mostly in the presence of witness. Some of these cabins were constructed of logs, and some logs and shakes. The shakes were split pieces of cedar. The cabins were roofed over with shakes. This material for these cabins apparently was obtained in all cases from the lands contiguous thereto. These lands upon which these improvements or cabins are located, as shown in these photographs, were chiefly valuable for their timber. In going to these cabins they traveled from Houlton to a point in the vicinity of the lands and occupied unused houses in section 8, township 4 north, range 3 west. There were many unused and abandoned houses, but they stayed at a house which had been used at intervals by the owner.

Q. Well, were those cabins of the same general character as these shown in the photographs, where you say they were abandoned?

A. There are not many cabins in there. They are about of that character.

Q. Well, were those on the even sections?

A. They were, yes, sir.

Whereupon witness testified that in township 4 north, range 3 west, from the best information he was able to gather, and he endeavored to find it, there was not a single permanent resident at that time. They had abandoned their places, such as they were, and removed. He was present when other photographs were taken that have been introduced in evidence, and participated in taking the remainder of the photographs in Defendants' Exhibit 270 to the extent of locating them and directing the photographer, as described in the memoranda attached to the photographs. Photographs Nos. 96 and 88, looking northwest, are upon lands that did not belong to the company. They were in Columbia County, about three miles south of the lands upon which the trespassers were found, and represent abandoned cabins of former residents.

Q. Do you know whether these were homestead claimants or not, as shown in 96 or 88?

A. I do not know whether they were homestead claimants or not. My information in the locality was that they had formerly lived there.

Q. How long did it appear that those cabins had been abandoned?

A. About four or five years.

Whereupon witness testified that it is his recollection that they made several trips, and that the dates shown on the memoranda and photographs are very nearly correct, except that the 1907 dates are undoubtedly erroneous, that is, May and February, 1907, should be 1908. The first trip that he made was in December 1907. These photographs which he has identified were taken by Fred H. McClure, called as a witness in this case. Witness and Rees found the corners and paced out the distance and located the exact points where the cabins were found. He has had some experience in ascertaining corners and lines of lands in this country. For four years he located lands at intervals, and the work required him to find the corners. These descriptions on these various photographs are all correct, excepting in a few instances the trespassers had erroneously placed their cabins upon lands other than they had intended, that is, some of the cabins were located off of the line of the lands applied for. He found a great many notices of these so-called applicants, or so-called settlers, in nearly all cases, he believes, usually posted on the cabin or on trees near by. The notice belonging to No. 45, appears to the left of the door, about three feet from the bottom, and was nailed to a log. The notice for No. 41 appears in the photograph nailed upon the door. In all cases these notices had some name signed thereto. These cabins appear to have been constructed within a few months or less time, with reference to the time these photographs were taken, and were constructed from timber cut and trees destroyed upon the land, and were built of logs and shakes. A shake is a split piece of cedar. The predominating and controling tree of these forests shown in the photographs is Douglas fir. Nearly all of these lands upon which these cabins are located, and in all the contiguous territory around the same, were very rough, and all were chiefly valuable for timber, and nearly all of these claims were heavily timbered, and would run, as estimated or measured by a cruiser, from five million to fifteen million feet per quarter section. It was the best timber to be found. There were some roads to go to these cabins, but the great majority of them were at some distance from roads. He was required to travel either over very poor trails or through the untrodden forest. A wagon could not be gotten to more than one cabin in five. There were no school houses or churches near these lands. He was present at the time other photographs were taken of the grant lands. He took a few photographs in Douglas County, west of Drain. These taken by him were taken after all of the other photographs shown in Defendants' Exhibits 273, 267, 268 and 269 taken by other persons. He has taken views of other parts of the grant, but not for this purpose. These photographs taken by him near Drain were taken for the company, and showed the character of the lands to be very rough. He had to do with taking some photographs in the vicinity of Larch Mountain, east of Portland, near Bridal Veil and Bull Run and that section, but was not present with Homer D. Angell when the photographs containing his signature to the memoranda were taken. Larch Mountain country is in Multnomah County. The character of the lands up there where these photographs were taken is very rough and rugged and heavily timbered. The land is chiefly valuable for timber. He has only been a compassman in other parts of the grant for Rees. When Rees was cruising he was with him every moment. He was cruising or looking at the character of the lands on only isolated portions of the lands when he was acting as compassman, except in Lane County, which includes a number of the parcels shown in these photographs. The lands shown in 20 south 1 west are in Lane County. These lands described on the bottom of these photographs are situated in Lane County, on a tributary of the middle fork of the Willamette River, southeast of Eugene. These lands are very rough, mountainous and timbered. Measured by what he has observed while he was carrying and compassing for the cruiser, and while he was going through other portions of the grant, he would say that very little of that land could be cultivated without clearing at an expense greater than the land would be worth after being cleared. He has knowledge from investigation or personal experience as to the probable cost of clearing these timbered lands, where there was any soil that could be utilized after it was cleared. He has cleared a few acres himself and under his direction, and his information is that it would cost from $100 to $200 an acre to clear heavily timbered, or even lightly timbered land, and that cost would depend upon the extent, number and size of the stumps. There is a large amount of land in the southern part of the grant which is useless for any purpose except raising timber, on account largely of the climate, and the great majority of the land in the grant is not suitable for anything except timber. The soil of the land in the southern part of the grant is rocky, the land mountainous, and climate requires irrigation. The soil is not fit for anything—rocky soil that will not grow anything. He has been over the lands of the company in Jackson and Josephine Counties to a considerable extent, and has been practically in all parts of the grant except Benton, Washington, Tillamook and Lincoln counties. He uses his independent judgment with reference to the character of these lands. He is not now in the employ of the company.

Whereupon witness produced certain photographs, which he says he took in other portions of the grant than those indicated. Whereupon the same were marked Defendants' Exhibit 313, and the witness testified that these photographs were taken in Douglas County and purport to show locations within the limits of the unsold lands of the company involved in this suit, and these lands are in section 27, township 22 south, range 6 west, and the photographs were taken March 9th or 10th, 1909, by him, and correctly represent what they purport to show.

Whereupon defendants offered these photographs, so marked, in evidence, and the said Defendants' Exhibit 313 was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence, and identified as such.

Whereupon witness testified that the lands where these photographs were taken, were heavily timbered and chiefly valuable for timber. The lands were very rough in most instances. The cabins were not occupied. They appeared to have been abandoned a few months. The cabins were constructed from material made from trees cut upon the land, and were built from shakes and logs, and had been built within a few months. From his experience and observation, the stand of timber per quarter section, would be about six million feet, and that would be, relatively speaking, medium heavy. Douglas fir was the predominating tree. He knows how to measure or estimate the number of board feet and has done some of it.

Whereupon witness, upon cross examination, testified that prior to his employment by the company, his occupation was that of a stenographer principally. He has worked at other occupations, clerking in stores, farming, etc., farmed in northern Nebraska, a prairie, open country, left the farm in Nebraska when he was about twenty years old, and is now employed as an abstracter in the City of Portland for himself. He has not been employed by the Oregon and California Railroad Company or Southern Pacific Company since 1910. These examinations made by him of the lands involved in this suit, were made while he was an employe of the Oregon and California Railroad Company. The office in San Francisco designated some of the lands he was to examine, and some of them were designated by Angell & Fisher, and he obtained his instructions principally from Angell & Fisher. The last examination made by him, he believes, was made under the direction of the California office, receiving instructions from General Land Agent B. A. McAllaster. The instructions were sent jointly to Rees and himself. He found the persons referred to by him as trespassers upon the lands that he knew belonged to the company. He knew the company owned, or claimed to own the land. He has had two or three years experience in the timber, while he was in the employ of the company, and that is the only experience in the timber he ever had. He cruised timber in Clackamas County and assisted in cruising timber as compassman in Multnomah, Columbia, Lane, Polk, Josephine, Jackson and Douglas Counties, between 1907 and 1910, inclusive. The earlier cruise was in connection with land that had been contracted to be sold by the company and had reverted. He does not think, take it all in all, that the greater part of his examinations of the land had been made with reference to lands that these men had squatted on in the grant. These particular examinations were made after the suit had been filed by Lafferty in behalf of these parties. He made a good many examinations prior to 1908 in different parts of the grant, but referring to the lands especially in Columbia County, in 20 south, 1 west, that he had mentioned as having been settled upon by trespassers, they were all examined in 1908 and subsequently after suit had been filed by some of the parties at least to obtain title to the land.

Whereupon FREDERICK A. KRIBS, called as a witness on behalf of defendants and being duly sworn, testified that he is fifty-two years old, is a land dealer by occupation and resides at Portland, Oregon, and has resided there since February, 1902. Prior to that time his home was in Minnesota. He has been engaged in the timber business, buying and selling timber lands, making investments or handling timber lands, about twenty-seven or twenty-eight years, and his experience in that line has been principally in Minnesota and in the Coast States of Idaho, Washington, Oregon and California. He is acquainted with the unsold lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, inuring to that Company under the Act of Congress of July 25, 1866, and May 4, 1870, involved in this suit. He is more familiar with the lands in Coos and Douglas Counties and some few lands in Curry County, and is familiar in a general way in Linn and Lane Counties. He is not very familiar personally in Washington County, although he has had men out examining lands in certain parts of this County. He has been out in Eastern Multnomah County, over in the Bull Run District, up towards the Mt. Hood country. He has ridden and driven through that part of the country a great deal. The character of these lands is principally mountainous. To which complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and it was agreed between the parties that this same objection should be considered as taken to all the testimony of this witness relating to the character of these lands within the limits of these grants, the settlements or possibility of settlements thereon and public entries thereof.

Whereupon witness further testified that these lands in Multnomah County are valuable for timber. He has made no personal examination of the timber lands of the Company in Yamhill County. He has driven through the country a great many times, but has been only on the farming lands in Yamhill County. The unsold land of the Company in Clackamas County is all timber and mountainous country. He has made two trips into that country. Generally speaking the character of these lands is mountainous and timbered, and some are burned over lands. At the present time these burned over lands would not have much of any value. They are too remote. He presumes they could be used in the summer time for a short period for grazing land, or something like that. In the mountainous country, stock is generaly put in, in the months of May, June, July and August. Snow or heavy stormy weather in the higher altitudes generally keeps them from going in earlier. About that time of the year, they drive their stock in. Right back of Falls City in Polk County, the lands are mountainous and timbered and he would regard the value of these lands as pretty nearly wholly for their timber. The Abiqua and Molalla are rivers heading up in the mountains, especially the Abiqua. Abiqua basin is extra heavy timber and he is familiar with that particular vicinity. The other range of mountains, through there, he would assume is timbered the same in like way. He is not familiar with the lands situated on the Santiam River adjoining Lane County, near Mehama in Marion County. He has not been in that section. He would say that the value of this unsold timber land in Marion County is chiefly for the standing timber. He has no actual personal knowledge of Alsea Bay, which is outside of the grant, but has been all over the country west of the Alsea Basin and knows it is a timbered country from hearsay. His holdings in Lincoln County lie west of the Company's lands. He has made no examination in Benton County. Thomas Creek, Santiam River, Calapooia and other streams, heading in the Cascade Mountains, which run west to the Willamette River, are all high in the mountains and the country as a whole is what is called a mountainous or timbered country and these lands of the Company situated in Linn County, are chiefly valuable for the timber. In a general way, he has knowledge of the timber lands of the Company in Lane County, as he owns a good deal, a good many of the even sections. It is all high and mountainous country and principally valuable for its timber. He thinks the Railroad Company had lands in 15 south 2 and 3 east, 14 south 2 east and 15 south 1 and 2 west, and that his Company acquired a good deal of lands over in that country. The timber lands in Lane County as compared with other sections of the State are very heavy timber lands, excepting the old burns. The country is rough and mountainous and as a whole he would say, would be at this time, wholly valuable for its standing timber. These old burns are pretty much the same all through the mountains. The green timber has been killed and old stubs standing, or the timber has fallen upon the ground and there is generally a thick growth of brush. It is commonly reputed that these fires have been caused from fires that have gotten loose from time to time, from careless hunters or campers, though a good many burns were known to exist in places before some of the old time settlers came there over fifty years ago. These burned over lands in some places would have a very fair soil. In other places they would be rocky and poor and not of much value. Where the good timber is, through the Cascades, he would say the elevation would go from 1200 up to 2500 feet. Vegetation on these burns would be mostly different kinds of brush. In places, there is found pea vine, and in real open spots with not too much brush, little tufts of grass here and there and different kinds of brush, hazel brush, salal and vine maple. There is not very much of anything that could be done to use these burnt over lands at this time that would bring much of anything in the way of income or money. There are some spots where there might be here and there a little feed, now and then a creek coming through and the country being open, there might be a little grass, but one would have to have quite an area of that country, if he were going to make a stock range or stock proposition out of it.

Whereupon witness testified as follows:

Q. Suppose that a so-called actual settler should apply to purchase 160 acres from the company at $2.50 an acre, and the company should sell it to him in good faith, for the purpose of allowing him to make settlement on it, giving him a good title, and he was expected to go upon the land with his family, and fence it, and devote it to any useful purpose, such as grazing or agriculture, and make his living, confining his pasturage to that quarter section, what, in your judgment, would be his ability to make a living on any of these quarter sections in that way?

A. Well, over these mountains, on account of the bad weather and conditions generally speaking, I do not think he could make a living. I do not think he would stay there.

Q. Suppose that the company had adopted the policy of selling all of these lands, timbered and otherwise, to actual settlers, in quantities not exceeding 160 acres, at a price not exceeding $2.50 an acre, and had conveyed to these so-called actual settlers these timber-lands with the understanding and expectation that they would go out on these timber-lands, attempt to make settlement, make a living, make a home, what use would these actual settlers make of these lands and what would become of the title?

A. Well, they would hold it until there was a good——

A. They would hold it according to their means, until there was a good market, and they would sell the timber to some lumberman or speculator, and it would all be owned by lumber companies now, or the most of it.

Q. What would be his ability, or what would be the possibility of a man being able to make a living as a settler on one of these quarter sections of timber-land?

A. Well, he might make some kind of a living, but it would be a very poor one, if he confined it strictly to one of these quarter sections high up in the mountains.

Q. Are these lands or not fit for actual settlement?

A. I would not say they were fit for settlement.

Whereupon witness testified that he is pretty familiar with all the timber lands in all parts of Douglas County, odd and even sections. He is familiar with some lands, knows more about them than he does others, but in a general way he is familiar with nearly all of the lands that are colored on that map, "Defendants' Exhibit 259." There might be some to the extreme east side that he does not know much about, on account of their location being so far up streams, but generally speaking the greater part of these lands are valuable for standing timber and in many townships he has made personal examinations and estimates. The character of the timber in Douglas County on these lands, is fir, and in the higher mountains principally old yellow fir; in the lower altitudes, red fir with now and then a little cedar and other kinds of timber but it is principally fir timber. The topography of the country where these timber lands are situated, are rough and mountainous and the elevation runs from 1200 to 3000 feet but through the upper Umpqua he would think about 2200 feet would strike a general average. He thinks the lands owned by the Railroad Company in Coos County would be the lands that would be up on the Coquille waters. He has selected a large part of his Company's lands on the head waters of the Coquille and these remaining lands he presumes are the ones that were not purchased. They are heavily timbered lands as a whole and their chief value is timber. He is acquainted with the timber lands of the Railroad Company in Curry County. In Curry County, these lands are in Townships 34 and 35 south, ranges

11 and 12 and township 31 ranges 12 and 13. 31-12 would be in Coos County, 31-13 mostly in Curry County. They are principally heavily timbered lands. Township 35, ranges 11 and 12 must be these green lands shown on the map. They are on the Rogue River and there are a few lands that he cannot personally tell about. The topography of the country, of these lands in Curry County, is mountainous. He is acquainted in a few places in Josephine County but has not an active personal knowledge, as he has never done much work personally in that country. He has had men in different parts of the country and along back from the roads and mountains generally, a rough mountainous country, and the lands where there is timber, are valuable for timber. In other places, there would be old burns or openings. He has gone through there in a general way, but has not done a great deal of work in that country. The character of the topography is mountainous. There are some places where the soil would be fair in Josephine County in these timbered areas. Other places quite a bit of rock and more like a mining country. Up the Rogue River in Jackson County there is land known as the Hopkins tract on Jenny Creek, he thinks that would be in the south side of the county. There is a tract known as the Goodfellow tract on the Upper Rogue on the east side which is fine sugar and yellow pine and the odd sections in through that end of the country are also fine timber, and the land is chiefly valuable for timber. He has not been personally in the western part of Jackson County on the Applegate Creek. He had a man or two in there. Lands that are not covered with timber in Jackson County, but which are covered with chaparral, manzanita and other such like small growth, would have to be used for grazing land, something like that. The topography of these lands, both timber and otherwise, is all high elevation, mountainous. A man could have a tract of that and use it for summer grazing for cattle and sheep and so on. If a man was in the stock business for a living, and had 3000 or 4000 sheep, he ought to have about 14000 or 15000 acres of land, to graze them on. He does not know what the Forest Service figures this pasturage at, per acre, of these burned over and timber lands to sheep men or other stock men per annum, but he rents land east of the mountains in the same localities and gets seven and a half cents an acre for them. They are able to graze these lands generally from April to in September. A man could not make a living at a rental of seven and a half cents an acre for 160 acres of this grazing land. It would not amount to anything. He spoke of some lands known as the Jenny Creek country but he could not say from memory whether that is located just in Jackson or Klamath County. It is a very high grade timber on that stream. Jenny Creek as shown on this map is in Jackson County. Most of these lands to which he refers are in Klamath and part in Jackson Counties. That is fine timber, some of the best in the State. These timber lands in Klamath County are chiefly valuable for the standing timber. He is not very much acquainted with the unsold lands of the company in Columbia County. He has been along some of the roads but has never been interested in the timber there. He has had men out in Tillamook County but has not been there personally. He optioned and spent a lot of money in examining two different tracts of land in Tillamook County. It was very heavy timber land but he did not buy it. These lands that he optioned would be in the edge of the grant, just outside the indemnity limits of the grant of July 25, 1866, and within the limits of the grant of May 4, 1870. These lands that he had under investigation were heavy timber, very rough and mountainous. He has no knowledge of the unsold lands of the company in Washington County. He is acquainted with the holdings of the Simpson Lumber Company to an extent, in Coos and Douglas Counties and is acquainted with the timber holdings of the C. A. Smith Lumber Company in Coos and Douglas Counties and has been over a great many of these lands personally and he thinks he is able to judge the timber character of a 40 when he sees it. There are two ways of ascertaining the timber stand on a given forty, with a view of buying or selling and that is what they call "double running." The land is all run out in its legal subdivisions by use of the compass and is checked up on the different points to see that it is correct, then they make a tree count, or if the timber is standing pretty evenly all over the forty, measure half acres or acres here and there, strike a general average of what it is thought it will average per acre, right through and then multiply by the number of acres of timber, and have a scale measure on the stump and do the figuring from the scale. The location of the unsold timber lands in this grant in western Oregon and the even sections owned by different people are considered good and the timber belt is considered about the largest in the United States. The predominating commercial tree in that territory, is Douglas Fir, which ranks as a tree that will make very good lumber. It is secondary in value to high grade pine but is considered very fine lumber. Referring to "Defendants' Exhibit 315" witness says that he has been pretty much through all that country where these pictures were taken. He could not identify from the picture, the identical 40 acres of land that any particular picture was made from, but knows these pictures were all taken down in Mr. Smith's timber and he knows the man who took the pictures. He has two or three of these himself and these pictures fairly and correctly represent what they purport to show. Relatively speaking the timber lands of Coos County is a larger belt than in other localities and it is heavy in point of stumpage. It will average all about as well in quality.

Q. What is the highest price for which a quarter section of a large holding of timber-lands has been sold within your knowledge and experience in this part of the State of Oregon, western Oregon, for instance?

"A. Where I am posted, the last two or three years, there were quarter sections sold from $4,000 up to $12,000 per quarter. But before that it was some cheaper, as there was not a great deal of opposition in picking up timber then."

Whereupon witness testified they are asking for timber lands in the locality near Timber in Washington County in the Nehalem and Tillamook, since the railroad went in, from $2.00 to $3.00 per thousand for their stumpage, and there are quarter sections there that will go from ten million as high as twenty to twenty-one million to the quarter section. Some of these quarter sections could not probably be bought short of $60,000.

"Q. Well, then, if an actual settler under this law should apply to the company to buy one of these quarter sections at $2.50 an acre, of which there are some 7,000 intervening in this case, actual or potential so-called settlers, his quarter section would cost him $400. Would he or not be able to sell one of these quarter sections for the prices that you have named?

A. He would get a good fat price as soon as he would get his title."

Whereupon witness testified that he had no connection with the Oregon and California Railroad Company or the Southern Pacific Company in business or otherwise and his business is that of dealing in timber lands principally.

Whereupon on cross examination witness testified that he had been engaged in the timber business practically all of his business life, twenty-five to twenty-seven years and since coming to Oregon he has been engaged in the timber business as a timber broker and an investor. He did a great deal of cruising the first two and a half years he was here in Oregon. The first two years, he would have so many varying reports as to what there would be on a quarter section of timber, that he put in a hard week's cruising here, on some of these lands to find out who was right and who was wrong according to his judgment. He started out in the timber business and cruised for a great many years and that is all he did as a starter for many years. Since coming to Oregon, as a whole, he has cruised comparatively little. That cruising was in most all parts. He had generally made it a point, and would today, of going into a brand new territory, to go out and check up lands here and there and find out for his own satisfaction about how he thought it would average per acre, or how the tract would go. He depended largely upon reports of cruisers that he had tried out and tested. He does not personally go over everything in great detail as to lands that he purchases or invests in or sells or buys for other people. His knowledge concerning the lands included in this grant in Multnomah County result from his having driven through Multnomah County and he has been out over the timber belts and could observe them as he was driving through them. He was simply driving along the public highways and has been off on some of the smaller roads. He has been offered trades for property in town, personal or real, for lands alleged to be timber. In some instances they were and in some they were not; he went out to look up some of that himself. He does not know that he can give the location by township and range, without looking it up, but some was out in what they call Sandy River waters, and one piece out near Cherryville, this side of Estacada. He has not made any extensive personal examination of the lands in Multnomah County. In Clackamas County he made a run in through some timber some years ago and then put men in there and he checked up some of their work. Take the county as a whole he has inspected a very small portion of the lands in that county. He has been out on one or two of the streams and ranged around through there and saw that it was a heavily timbered country where he was. It would not be a very large area of what he would call any detailed cruise but he got over quite a bit of the country, ranging through it on roads and trails to get general ideas of the country. He was in what they call the Abiqua Basin country. There is a smaller stream coming in through there, either the Clackamas or Molalla waters. He has had men in two or three different locations up in the mountains of this county looking up timber but has not been personally in any other portions than he has mentioned. As to Marion County his information is directly from men he sent there and is not personal knowledge. In Linn County he has been pretty much in Township 12, ranges 1, 2, 3 and 4; township 13 south, ranges 1, 2, 3 and 4; township 14 south, ranges 1, 2, 3 and 4; township 15 south, range 3 east; township 15 south, ranges 1 and 2 west, upon the Santiam and Rock Creek waters through there. In Lane County, he made one trip up the east or coast fork of the Willamette and was over on the Mohawk waters and was up above Wendling on that little railroad and back into the timber there.

A few miles in Jackson County, he looked into a lot of scattered lands that were offered to him east of Medford and then he was up in the Jenny Creek country looking over what is called the Hopkins tract and then up the Rogue River and looked into what is called the Goodfellow tract. All together he should think he ran over in a general way 140,000 to 150,000 acres. He went all through the different sections and examined now and then, a forty here and there, to verify other people's work. He made quite a general inspection in Josephine County about 10 or 11 years ago, and concluded not to invest and so his personal work has mostly been in the counties on this map—Douglas, Coos and Curry Counties—referring to "Defendants' Exhibit 312." In Josephine County he made one trip quite a number of years ago but cannot name the creek now. It was no main river. He went up two different creeks and went into a very high rough country, saw a good deal of timber, but a man would have to have a very large area in order to have a large amount of stumpage in that particular part where he was. He could not give the township and range of the general locality. That was 11 years ago. In Douglas County he has been pretty much over all the lands owned by the C. A. Smith Company, also by the Pillsbury, Kribs Company, and what is known as the Shook lands, and several other tracts. He has been pretty much over the timber belt all over Douglas County on the Smith and Umpqua Rivers and its branches and on that part of the Coos River that heads into Douglas County. A large part of the lands he has mentioned, would be located in township 27, ranges 7 and 8, township 23, ranges 4, 5 and 6; townships 27 and 28, ranges 8 and 9; townships 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30 and 31, ranges 9 and 10; townships 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31 and north part of 32, range 10. In fact he has tripped that whole country pretty nearly through to the ocean. In Coos County he thinks he has been in the part of range 9 which is partly in Douglas County; that would be townships 26, 27, 28, 29, 30 and 31, range 9; then in township 25, range 10; townships 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31 and 32, range 11, townships 27, 28, 29, 30, 31 and 32, range 12. Range 13 is partly in Coos and partly in Curry County. He has been pretty much in nearly everything that was bought there one time or another. He has been around through these lands. He only knows the railroad lands in Lincoln County from hearsay. His lands are farther to the west along the coast.

"Q. Now, you spoke of leasing land for seven and a half cents an acre for grazing purposes. You get other consideration in addition to that, do you not, in the way of fire protection and removing of underbrush, removing the fire risk?

A. Well, the contracts claim that they will keep a watch out for fire, but there is no brush clearing, or anything like that.

Q. Naturally stock running through the timber would naturally remove a great deal of inflammable material, would it not?

A. Well, if you put in a band of goats, they would eat quite a lot of stuff. I don't know as sheep do very much but eat the grass."

Whereupon witness testified, that in taking the elevations in the Coast Range they used the barometer nearly all together, and he took the elevations in many places. As to elevations, he testifies in some cases from general knowledge and in other cases he took the elevations himself. They required, that their cruisers should take the elevations everywhere in the mountains and as to a great many elevations he is depending upon the reports received from the cruisers. His interest in lands in Oregon are principally with the corporation, in the stocks, etc., so that they own their stock together. He does own some personally but could not tell exactly without looking it up, several thousand acres. He is interested in probably somewhere about 100,000 acres all over the State of Oregon and has a substantial interest in these lands which are all valuable. He has been dealing almost all together in timber lands. In making purchases of lands, he looks after their timber value. In the last few years he has had also a soil examination made, but only in the last three or four years. He purchased principally for timber. Logging conditions and the stand of timber would outweigh any of the soil possibilities in his estimation. He knows about where the lands were, where these photographs shown in the magazine were taken, as shown in "Defendants' Exhibit 315" but not exactly, the exact spot. He was not there when the photographs were taken, but knows when the work was going on and he helped arrange and lay out the work. He really has no personal knowledge that these are photographs of lands in Curry County and he did not assist in doing the work but sent men to help them. He knows they performed the work to his satisfaction.

Whereupon upon redirect examination witness testified that he did not recognize the photographs shown at page 49 of "Defendants' Exhibit 315" as that of any particular timber that he knows, but he can take one into a great many places of timber that Smith owns and he owns and get just as good a picture as that. The photograph is a fairly good reproduction of the scenes of forests on some of these lands of the C. A. Smith Timber Company. He cannot tell where the picture shown on page 51 of "Defendants' Exhibit 315" was taken but knows of several stands that would make a picture as good as that. He has seen timber of that kind in Curry County. The picture shown at page 53 of "Defendants' Exhibit 315" would be one of these mountains or ridges of timber taken from a high open spot. He has seen timber stands of spruce such as shown at page 55 of "Defendants' Exhibit 315." The tree shown at page 65 called "Second growth" is a young er tree than the old growth. He always figures that the same kind of a tree, but the second growth is a young tree. He has seen stands of second growth timber on this land of the C. A. Smith Timber Company in Coos County, such as shown in that photograph. The view shown at page 67 of "Defendants' Exhibit 315" is a fairly good mountain view of the location of the timber holdings of C. A. Smith Timber Company in Coos County near Marshfield. He has been all down through that country in that section where that is shown. The view shown at pages 68 and 69 with the very high mountain in the distance, looks like it might be a scene taken from Johnson Mountain looking towards the south fork of the Coquille and the headwaters of the Sixes River, and that mountain looks something like Johnson Mountain. One can find in various locations trees like that shown at page 77 of "Defendants' Exhibit 315." They are very large and nice trees. Trees could be found like that on the C. A. Smith Timber Company's lands and on other lands and on the lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company. There is such timber as is shown on page 79 of this exhibit on the head of the Sixes. Port Orford cedar is what is called white cedar. It is of the cedar family. The bark looks about the same as the red cedar tree. The wood is white and has a very strong odor and is used mostly for finishing and sometimes in boat building. It is practically all situated in Coos and Curry Counties with a little in Douglas County and he has never heard of it being anywhere else in the world excepting in this section. He can find spots in this heavy timber on the lands of the C. A. Smith Timber Company in Coos County that one can get a picture like that shown on page 99 of this exhibit. The capacity of the C. A. Smith Timber Company's mill at Marshfield, he thinks now would be about 600,000 feet per day and it is about the most modern mill of which he knows. The C. A. Smith Timber Company ships at the present time by vessels to California where that company has a distributing point. The transportation obtained for all of the timber on the Coast Mountains or streams leading into the Pacific Ocean is principally by the steamers, in some instances by logging railroads. The Portland mills secure their logs largely by hauling them into the Columbia River and its tributaries or by having a logging railroad from the timber to the Columbia River and then towing their logs to the Portland market. The Portland mills get their lumber to market by water and by rail. The cut or manufacture of the mills in the City of Portland is about 600,000,000 feet per year ordinarily and he thinks probably 50,000,000 to 75,000,000 of that goes out by water and the rest by rail. Of that he is not sure, he has heard the relative amounts but cannot remember. The railroads carrying lumber from Portland are the Southern Pacific Company, the Northern Pacific and what is now called the North Bank, Great Northern, or Spokane, Portland and Seattle Railway Company. The railroad to Puget Sound from Portland would be the Northern Pacific and the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation Company. He does not know if that is the Southern Pacific or who owns that now, that is the Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation Company. The Chicago, Milwaukee and Puget Sound Railroad runs to the Sound but he does not know whether it has connections at Portland or not. The general character of Western Washington as to lumber manufacture and timber is a rolling country and these logs are either gotten out by the streams or by railroads and the lumber marketed by rail and by steamer. The country is principally all timber. He thinks there is more lumber manufactured in Washington, taking the small mills out on the roads, than in Oregon, but the two States manufacture much more than any other state. He was subpoenaed to be a witness here and he has an interest in a small tract of these Oregon and California grant lands purchased from Acting Land Agent Andrews several years ago and he bought some tracts that were assigned to him by other people and he would say that he is interested in about 4,000 or 5,000 acres situated in Coos County and he thinks they are involved in one of these forty-five suits brought by the United States. The Pillsbury Lumber Company is the defendant in the suit involving the lands in which he is interested, referring to the so-called Innocent Purchaser Suits in which the United States is plaintiff. The Smith-Powers Logging Company does the logging for the C. A. Smith Lumber & Manufacturing Company. He supposes that the picture shown at pages 84 and 85 of "Defendants' Exhibit 315" is that of the mill plant of the C. A. Smith Lumber & Manufacturing Company at Marshfield and it is a fairly good picture. He has been there and recognizes it as such. He has seen such boards manufactured by mills in Oregon, as is shown at pages 84 and 85 of "Defendants' Exhibit 315" and this is not an imaginary picture scene. He has seen the lumber yard or unite yard of the larger Marshfield mill of the C. A. Smith Lumber & Manufacturing Company shown in the picture at pages 94 and 95 of "Defendants' Exhibit 315" as it is moving its lumber more or less all the time. This is a picture of the lumber yard and he believes it to be a picture of Smith's yards. Marshfield is on Coos Bay.

Whereupon on re-cross examination witness testified as follows:

Q. Mr. Kribs, you do not want to convey the impression in the record here that the photographs of this timber that is referred to in Defendants' Exhibit 315 is a fair showing as to the stand of timber on the O. and C. lands, do you?

A. I have not said that.

Q. You do not want to convey that impression?

A. You can go on the O. and C.—you see those pictures there, Mr. Smith would have a great many lands in places well timbered, where he could not go and get probably as nice a picture as some of those. He pictured nice places here in a good body of timber. Now, you can go on the O. and C. and pick out lands, and you will get nice pictures like that.

Q. What was the purpose of that publication, Mr. Kribs, Defendants' Exhibit 315? I understand from your testimony that that was prepared partly under your supervision.

A. These photographs, I picked out men who were familiar with all the roads and trails, and knew all that part of the country, in good shape, and had them go out with the photographers who came out from Chicago, and did not know anything about timbered lands or woodcraft at all. Had reports to get very nice pictures and how the work was going on, although I was not there myself personally.

Q. This is what you might term a booster issue of the publication that it purports to be?

A. It was really, you might call, an advertisement, gotten up by the American Lumberman at Chicago, and they probably worked the deal up for Mr. Smith, as he was starting out in this country, a good advertisement to show up his plant, timber, and general resources, make him better acquainted, and be a good thing for him, and they got him into it.

Q. Those photographs in that magazine show what might be termed the best stands of timber in Coos County, don't they?

A. Well, I don't know as you would say it was the best, but they would pick out in a good body of virgin timber, and then get pictures that would make nice pictures—get good pictures they took for the advertising.

Q. This stand of timber, you do not attempt to say it extends over this grant, such a stand as is shown in the photographs here?

A. No, there are some photographs there would not be any stand like that in the world, even—redwood.

Q. Some of the finest timber in the world, then, is shown in those photographs?

A. Some of the nicest places they could find, of course, which would be a higher average than a whole large body of timber; but Mr. Smith's lands have been very carefully selected, and are generally all pretty heavy right straight through.

Q. Those photographs are not taken within the limits of this grant, are they?

A. There would be some of those pictures that were taken over in the Coquille country that would be right in where the company has got quite a large acreage, as I recollect.

Q. Coquille is not within ten miles of the limits of the grant, I believe, is it?

A. I should think it would be farther away than that.

A. There are places where I think some of those pictures were taken, up in the Eagle Mountain country, up in 31-10, some in 31 and 32-11. I think they were up there, and the Railroad Company have a large area in there.

Q. Do you know, as a matter of fact, where those photographs were taken?

A. Well, I had reports from one of the men that they were going up to take some pictures up on Eden Mountain, they were going to Cold Creek, which would bring them in 32-11. Then they swung around, and took some up the Coos River, some east of Marshfield, down near the Beaver Slough country, and then whenever these camps were located, which would probably be a little east from Marshfield, they took pictures generally all over the whole tract. That was the idea.

Q. You only know that from reports?

A. The orders were given to get pictures everywhere through the whole tract.

Q. I say your testimony as to that is based solely upon the orders that you gave, and the reports that you received?

A. Yes.

Q. Coos County contains about the heaviest stand of timber in the timbered belt there of any county in the state, does it?

A. No, I don't know as I would say that. It is about as heavy, will average about as heavy right straight through, take the main large body. But we have other locations in the state that will average up very heavy indeed.

Q. This locality where these photographs were taken is unusually heavily timbered?

A. Yes, that is extra nice timber.

Whereupon witness testified that he is agent for one of the C. A. Smith corporations known as the Linn & Lane Timber Company, which has very large timber holdings in Linn and Lane Counties. He is worth and owns property of more than several hundred thousand dollars and would say that he has spent about twelve years of good hard cruising, had a pre-emption claim, familiar with that class of people and saw them all through the wooded country and had about as little to eat as the rest of them had and he has a pretty good idea what a fellow can do in these wooded countries and if one would put it away back in the mountains he can make it a good deal stronger. All of the lands in which he is interested are generally remotely located. They have at this time a speculative value and he could not give the true value of the same. He could not do it very well. It would be all guess work but he would consider himself to be worth several hundred thousand dollars.

Whereupon on re-direct examination witness further testified he began life as a hard working boy and knows what the needs and wants of the poor man are.

Whereupon W. R. WHIPPLE, called as a witness on behalf of defendants, and being first sworn, testified, that he is sixty-seven years old and resides at Grants Pass, Oregon, and has resided in Josephine County for about fourteen years, about that time at Grants Pass and the balance of the time in the southwest portion of the county. His business during that time has been surveying and civil engineering. He has been deputy County Surveyor, and deputy United States Mineral Surveyor for four years, and has also done some work in that county in the location of timber lands, or timber claims and is familiar with the unsold lands of the company in Josephine County. He has been over most of the grant in the near vicinity. The grant is mostly mountainous in Josephine County. He has surveyed land, run ditch lines and done mineral surveying in general when he went over the lands. In performing that work he became acquainted with and has knowledge of the character of the lands in that county. It is mostly hilly ground. To which testimony the complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and it was agreed between the parties that this same objection should be considered as taken to all the testimony of this witness relating to the character of the lands within the limits of these grants, settlements thereon and public land entries thereof. Whereupon witness testified that they are hilly, and the soil is generally poor, mostly too broken to be cultivated; in fact, there is very little that could be cultivated. Probably about fifteen per cent of these lands in Josephine County are covered with timber of a merchantable character. He is making a rough estimate from his knowledge of the country. The balance of most of the land has been burned over. There has been timber on it sometimes, it is generally brushy and rocky, but part of it along the Rogue River district is decomposed granite, and it has very steep hills. He does not consider any of these burned over or decomposed granite lands as fit for any kind of cultivation, unless there may be some very small tracts. There would probably be ten per cent of the unsold lands of the company in Josephine County that would be covered with chaparral and manzanita. He would not consider that character of land of any value, except there might be some near a town where a person might possibly make a home and a living out of some other business. It is close to Grants Pass and a man might use it for a site to put a house on, but he would have to do something else to make a living, besides agricultural pursuits. There is very little of this land close to Grants Pass that a man could live on. The land that is rocky, is unfit for cultivation. All of the ground that is really fit for cultivation, has been settled years ago. It had been sold in the early days and bought from the railroad company and occupied by small settlers, and then a great portion of the land was settled before the railroad land grant, under the Donation Land law and under other laws. He is familiar with the boundary line between Josephine and Jackson Counties and recognizes Defendants' Exhibit 259, showing the unsold lands of the company in colors.

"Now, assuming that there is that number of acres of unsold railroad land in Josephine County, consisting of 167,480.98 acres, what is the fact as to whether or not there are any lands in that list, that lot, capable of actual settlement, upon which a home-builder could or could not make a living?

A. I doubt whether there is. There might be once in a while a quarter-section where they possibly could by working hard, but I don't know of any where they could make a comfortable living, with a reasonable amount of work.

Q. This land that is timbered, if cleared, what would be the character of the soil as to the greater portion of the lands in that county?

A. It is nearly all poor, rocky, shaly soil.

Q. Would it or not be susceptible of agricultural use after it was cleared, even?

A. It would not.

Q. Now, Mr. Whipple, what is the fact, if you know, as to whether or not the settlements in Josephine County that have been made in the history of the state, haven't been made chiefly, if not almost entirely, on lands taken up under the Donation Act or settlement laws previous to the grant to the railroad company, as to whether or not these settlements have not absorbed practically all the land in that county that are fit for agricultrual uses?

A. They have.

Q. That is the fact, is it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, are you familiar with the topographic map of the United States, issued by the United States Geographical Survey, that has recently been placed in the hands of Deputy United States Mineral Surveyors and other officials of the United States?

A. They are on sale by the Government.

Q. You have seen those maps, have you?

A. I have."

Whereupon witness further testified that he is familiar with Defendants' Exhibit 310, being a topographic map of the United States, issued by the United States Geological Survey and recently placed in the hands of deputy United States Mineral Surveyors and other officials of the United States called "Riddles Quadrangle," showing the topography of a section of the country from Roseburg south. Whereupon defendants offered and there was received in evidence said map, marked Defendants' Exhibit 310, which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified as such. Whereupon witness testified that Defendants' Exhibit 311 is a map of the United States Geological Survey, prepared by George Otis Smith, Director, showing the topography of the quadrangle, known as the "Grants Pass Quadrangle." Whereupon defendants offered and there was received in evidence Defendants' Exhibit 311, which is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence and identified as such. Whereupon witness testified that the small black dots on these maps represent buildings of all descriptions and kinds and he thinks every building in the whole quadrangle is marked on the map, all sorts, cabins and houses, barns and buildings, and mining camps and everything of that kind, including cabins of homestead claimants, or any cabin built by any one, whether occupied or not. It also shows mines, roads and trails, mountain peaks and buttes and bench marks with the elevations. Everything is explained on the back of the map. Whereupon on cross examination witness testified that he had resided in Oregon about twenty-five years, fourteen years in Josephine County. He had never resided in Jackson County, but had done some work in there, surveying and cruising. His occupation during this time has been that of a surveyor. He has prospected some and located a few timber claims—cruised for timber. He was deputy United States Mineral Surveyor for four years and deputy County Surveyor about 1909, 1910 and 1911, but not regularly employed during these three years as such deputy County Surveyor, was employed only as work was done, as called for by people living there, temporarily as the work required, but was deputized all of this time, doing work whenever it was called for. Several years ago, he was employed during this period by the Oregon and California Railroad Company, classifying lands of different kinds and attending to protests of mineral cases. It has been about ten years since he has done any work for the Railroad Company, and was employed approximately only eight or ten months, and then was a kind of an agent for the company for these lands in the Illinois Valley in Josephine County, for three or four years. He attended to all the cases wherever they had land applications; he went and looked at the lands to classify them and establish values. In classifying lands, he went out and examined the lands and classified them as to what they were best adapted to, agricultural or grazing, or whether timber, etc., made a statement exactly what they were and gave the general description of each 40-acre tract, in every section. He received his instructions as to what land to examine from Mr. Andrews, acting land agent for the company at that time. Descriptions were sent to him of each tract, that he examined, or 40 sometimes. Sometimes there were only forties that were unsold in some sections. He examined only the lands, descriptions of which were sent to him. These were not lands that had been applied for, to be purchased from the company. Those that were examined for classifying, except a few tracts that had been applied for to be purchased from the company, but most of the lands that he had examined for the company were not in Josephine County. In Josephine County, he only examined those lands that people applied to purchase. It is not true there are scattered throughout Josephine County a great many very fine ranches and farms. There are not very many good, nice farms in Josephine County. There are a great many fruit ranches in Josephine County, but he does not consider them first class. They have been asking pretty high prices for these fruit farms, and marketing quite a good deal of fruit land down there, during the last four or five years especially. He knows in a general way, pretty well, but not altogether, what lands are railroad lands, and what are in private or public ownership, in Josephine County, and knows that there is a big body of railroad land in general sections or communities. He has looked over the railroad maps and run a great many lines, and knows from running the lines which are railroad and which belong to settlers, and he has looked up a great deal in the assessor's office to find out. He often needed to know the ownership of different tracts. He has testified that lands that were susceptible to agriculture within the limits of this grant had been taken up under Donation Land claims and other entries, nearly all of them. These granted lands, he thinks, have been withdrawn from entry since about 1870 and he knows that the railroad lands could not be entered by a donation claim, or homestead entry, or any entry provided for by federal laws, not at present; all that was taken up, was taken before the land grant, that is, all that was obtained from the Government. Then there is some that has been purchased from the railroad company. He attended to the sale of quite a number of pieces that had been contracted for, at least, from the railroad company. His acquaintance with these maps, Defendants' Exhibits 310 and 311, has been obtained by purchase of them from various people, who handle the same through the valley, and perhaps from some Government officer. Whereupon on redirect examination, witness testified that these fruit farms or ranches referred to, are situated along the Rogue River, and all of the ground nearly that is surveyable, that is reasonably level, so that they can plow it, has been planted to orchards—fruit trees and grape vines and such things. None of these fruit farms or ranches that he knows of, are on railroad lands.

"Q. Is it or is it not true that the fruit ranches are mainly in the Rogue River Valley, on lands that were obtained from the Government of the United States under the Donation Land law and the other settlement laws of the United States, and not on railroad land excepting on occasion where lands had been sold in the early days to purchasers?

Mr. Rabb: Objected to as leading.

Mr. Fenton: Yes, it is leading. I admit that. You may answer.

A. That is true."

Whereupon, FRED H. McCLURE, called as a witness on behalf of defendants, and being duly sworn, testified that he is forty-two years old, resides at Portland, Oregon, and is a photographer. He has been a photographer for ten years. During 1907 and 1908, he took a number of photographs at the request of Angell and Fisher. Referring to Defendants' Exhibit 270 witness testified that he took these photographs of this land, and made the notations on these photographs, explaining each. To which testimony complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and it was agreed between the parties that this objection should be considered as taken to all the testimony of this witness relating to the character of the lands within the limits of these grants, settlements thereon and public land entries thereof. Whereupon witness testified that these photographs correctly represent what they purport to show. Homer D. Angell accompanied him on one trip when these photographs were taken and A. W. Rees and Ben Irwin accompanied him on all the other trips that he made. One of these three was present at the time each of the photographs was taken. He cannot state whether or not Angell accompanied him at that time and was present when the photographs were taken to which the name of "Angell" is attached to the memorandum on the photograph; and he cannot positively swear that Angell was present when he took the pictures that Angell had his name attached to, but he can say that one of the three persons mentioned was present at the time each of the photographs was taken.

Some of these photographs were taken in Columbia County. They went to Houlton and then went west from Houlton by wagon usually into these mountains or forests, where these photographs were taken. They could not go by wagon to these claims, a great many of them they would only get access to, over trails. They went on foot by trails usually. The country was extremely rough, and covered with trees. He is familiar with forests and would say that these lands where these various photographs were taken are heavily timbered lands. The predominating tree was principally fir. There were occasionally cedars. Some of these trails were well defined and others extremely hard to follow. He could not say where was the nearest railroad point to these places. He left the train at Houlton on the line that runs to Astoria, formerly called the Northern Pacific. These lands are situated in Columbia County. Some of the other photos were taken in Linn County. The only knowledge he has as to whether these descriptions of the lands contained in this memorandum are correct or not is that he got his descriptions from notices posted on nearly all of the cabins. Those accompanying him in some instances, assisted in verifying the descriptions and locations of the property. Several of these cabins at the time these photographs were taken were occupied. He thinks in one or two cases the people were present. There were not more than one or two instances in which any one was living in these houses or cabins at the time. Most of them were vacant. Some of them had evidence of occupation,—blankets, food, etc. In most cases, the people that purported to own the cabins, or to claim them, were not there. The McLaffertys were there. The date stated in the memorandum attached to the photographs is about the time when the McLaffertys were there with their families, as well as he can recall it, but he cannot swear to the date. He noticed that one of the McLaffertys had two children. He does not know how long they have been living there, and does not know whether they are living there yet. They did not have anything in cultivation around there, except as shown in the photographs. He took all of the improvements which these people had, on the premises. He tried to show a general view of the surroundings. He does not remember any improvements, and did not see any garden, or grain fields, or orchards or trees planted, or school houses or any other evidences of settlement, excepting these cabins. In one or two cases there may have been a way to get a wagon to some of these cabins, but of this he cannot positively swear. Most of the cabins were pretty close together. There was one case on the other lands on which a man had a cabin, an old homestead which was occupied. He did not see any old homestead cabins that were abandoned and does not remember any habitations of any kind, except the one mentioned. He has taken other photographs for the company in Linn and Columbia Counties and made one trip into Clarke County, Washington, but has taken no others, except that he does recall that he took some photographs in the neighborhood of Bridal Veil, in the Eastern part of Multnomah County. Whereupon on cross examination, witness testified, that he was employed to take these photographs by the Oregon and California Railroad Company, by Angell & Fisher, who were attorneys for the company. He was employed in taking these photographs, in the actual work of photographing the locations, sometimes they would be out for a week, sometimes a day or two. When there were several applications made for land, they would send him out with Rees and Irwin to take the photographs, but usually they would not go out for one application. He was sent out to take photographs of places which parties had applied to purchase from the company, meaning the McLafferty applications, involved in the Lafferty suits, and described by Lafferty as "actual settlers." In taking these photographs either Rees or Angell usually directed him as to the position he should set his photographic apparatus, in taking the pictures. They selected the spot where he should set up his apparatus and photograph the places, although he had a certain amount of latitude, and was supposed to show the general conditions in different directions. He was working under their direction. They were with him, had charge of his work and directed it, and he received no orders from any one but them. He was engaged by them to take the photographs and naturally took them where they told him. He did not engage in the examination of the lands and he is not a timber cruiser, or anything of that kind. They usually cruised the land and he took the photographs. In each individual case, it depended on the nature of the ground, how long it would take to cruise it. He would remain on the ground sometimes while they cruised the timber and sometimes he would follow them. He could not say how long he would remain on the quarter-sections, the average time. Usually there were several pieces to cruise in one neighborhood, but it would take but a short time to take the photographs. Sometimes they would be in a week for several claims, located in one spot. They came there and would go out and cruise the land and he took the photographs. They did not stop longer than a day on one particular claim. He never attempted to go over the ground and examine the territory. He could not report on the ground. He carried his camera after the cruisers and had about all he wanted to do, on account of the rough ground. He knows nothing about the descriptions of these lands except as he has testified to the notices and so on, on some of the doors. It is possible that one can so set a camera or photographic apparatus, in taking a picture, that if a house set at the edge of a clearing, in a clump of trees, the picture would show a forest, the house in or on the edge of a forest there, without showing the clearing behind the camera, the photographic apparatus taking nothing but that which is in front of it. The photograph is taken, embracing a certain angle in front of the camera and does not show what is behind it. Whether one can take in a wooded country, a very small area in a photograph, depends on the lens. If one uses a wide angle lens, he can embrace about 75 degrees, if a longer focus lens, one could embrace less, a longer angle. These photographs and these cabins show a very small area of land, they show probably 45 or 50 degrees angle. The photographs would take about 45 or 50 degrees, probably. None of those cabins or houses shown in the photographs, are very large. The relative area covered by the picture can be compared with the cabins shown on the land, although if the cabin is in the immediate foreground it shows much larger—naturally shuts out more of the distance. In most of the cases, the photographs were taken in different directions, to show the general conditions around the cabins, that is, several photographs were taken of each cabin. Possibly these owners of cabins, or occupants, may have been temporarily absent during his visits there. He was there only a comparatively short time and did not attempt to make a general examination of all that country there. He took the shortest and most convenient route for going in on to these lands, and was not looking for school houses, churches, or anything of that kind. He simply went up there to take the photographs of these lands as he was directed to do. He was glad enough to stick to the trails, without getting outside to look for schoolhouses or churches. Whereupon on redirect examination, witness testified, that naturally any schoolhouses or churches along in there, he might have seen them, and would be near the trail. He saw no clearings out there in those woods, of any consequence, except on a homestead that was not on railroad land. He does not remember any other clearing that was larger than a quarter of an acre. He thinks the man on the homestead had three or four acres cleared. The balance of his land was heavily timbered, just like these. From appearances, this homestead had been there a number of years. The man's name was Schweitzer. He cannot tell how far out from Houlton his place is. It adjoins some of these railroad claims and he had no neighbors for a good many miles, except the applicants for this land, meaning these people that began to make application after this agitation came up to purchase at $2.50 an acre. These photographs Nos. 104, 112, 111, 108, 109, 106, 126, 127, 120, 121, 123, 124, 101, 100, 97, 98, 115, 117 and 118, were taken near Larch Mountain, in Multnomah County, near Bridal Veil, about twenty-five or thirty miles east of Portland. He made the notations that appear on the photographs and he can only identify the location by the notations made on the photographs. These notations made by him appear in the photographs and were made directly on the negative, so there is no possibility of making a mistake. He got the description in most cases from the notices on the cabins, in some cases from the people who accompanied him. He got the description of the name of the applicant, like William Cain, from the notice on the cabin. He is able to verify in most cases, the photograph and the description from his own examination made of these notices, which he now sees in the photograph. Whereupon on recross examination, witness testified that he made certain notations on these photographs, directly on the negative, printed on with the print, so there could be no discrepancy, and made the notations after he returned from the trip. He made notes on the trip, and made the notations on the negative from the notes he took on the trip. In some cases, he found in his book that he made a record of the different entries or notations on the negative. He knew what section, township or range to put on the negative, because the plates were numbered before he took the pictures. They correspond with the numbers on the negatives. For instance he took No. 18 and put down the section and number and township and the man's name, and the direction in which the photograph was taken, keeping the photograph or numbered plate. They were always numbered. Referring to his book, he was employed in this case nine days in taking these photographs, but this book does not embrace all. His book shows that the photographs were taken between September 24, 1907, and at different times until November 18, 1908, including the photographs of the so-called Lafferty actual settler lands. He charged from the time he left until he got back, as well as while he was on the ground. Whereupon on redirect examination, witness testified that after he got home he would then prepare his negative and make these pictures. Roughly speaking, he supposes he made a dozen trips. He was never employed by the company in any other relation than as taking pictures, which is his own business. He was employed as any other photographer might have been. He took photographs for any one who wanted them. Whereupon on recross examination witness testified, that he put in thirty-seven days and six hours on this work, including the time consumed in going to and returning from these lands, as follows: September 24, 1907, six hours time; September 26, 1907, one day's time; December 17, 1907, nine days' time; February 1, 1908, three days' time; February 18, 1908, four days' time; May 21, 1908, six days' time; October 31, 1908, ten days' time; and November 18, 1908, four days' time.

Whereupon B. A. GIFFORD, called as a witness on behalf of defendants and being duly sworn, testified, that he is fifty-three years old, resides at Portland, Oregon, and is a photographer by profession, and has been such for about thirty-five years. His place of business is at Portland at present. He took the photographs, Defendants' Exhibit 367. To which complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and it was agreed between the parties that the same objection should be considered as taken to all the testimony of this witness relating to the character of the lands within the limits of these grants, settlements thereon and public land entries thereof. Whereupon witness testified that this photograph is a fair representation of the country covered, the physical objects shown in the photograph, which it purports to show, that the matters stated in his affidavit are correct as stated, except that he does not know what the sections were, excepting as they were pointed out to him when he made the photographs there. He is not a cruiser, but that is the photograph made from the point that they went to on that trip. The place where he put his camera, was pointed out to him by F. A. Elliott, Homer D. Angell and L. D. McLeod. He obtained these descriptions in his affidavit for them, that was the only way he had of doing it. He does not know what the elevation of his camera was with reference to the elevation shown in the photograph. He knows that it was a good hard climb to get up there. They climbed to a point so they could overlook the territroy, to get a point of view, to show the general lay of the timber and country. He has pretty nearly forgotten which way they went to get there. It is a mountainous country, the picture shows that. At the time he took these photographs he was living at The Dalles. These lands lie in the Coast Range, west of the Willamette Valley, west of Dallas in Polk County. It is so stated on the photographs. He did not keep track of that. It was some time in the spring of 1908, he does not remember the date. Defendants' Exhibit 268 is a correct photograph or panoramic view, taken from near the quarter-post on the east line of section line of section 12, April 3, 1912, and is four photographs in panoramic form; the lower right hand corner of the picture is the point from where he took the picture shown in the upper one. They were taken about April 3, 1912, and correctly represent what they purport to show. He obtained the descriptions of these lands from McLeod, who went with him on the trip. "Eagles' Rest, High Point," is the high point shown in the lower right hand corner of Defendants' Exhibit 268. The country shown in Defendants' Exhibit 268 was almost all timbered, very few clearings. One cannot see any clearings at all in the picture there from that elevation. Referring to Defendants' Exhibit 269, photographs numbered 2942 and 2943, witness says that they were made on an 8x10 plate and enlarged from that. They were made in the spring of 1912, but he does not remember the dates. They are correct representations of what they purport to show. He cannot state from his own knowledge whether Defendants' Exhibit 269, showing where photographs Numbered 2942 and 2943 were taken, are in Columbia County, only from what they told him, that is, the particular place where these photographs were taken were pointed out to him by McLeod and Roy Woods. The upper large photograph shown in Defendant's Exhibit 269, shows in the picture that there were no openings there, in the foreview, and that it was a solid forest. The back view, according to the angle, of his lens, would give him a distance of about eight or ten miles in prospect or in view, measured in distance from the outside of the picture to the outside of the picture. The dark colors in the distance in the lower large photograph, indicate that it is all timbered. It looks like pretty heavy timber in through there, from his actual vision, that is, what they traveled through was. The length of the prospect or view as shown in the lower photograph would be about the same. It was made with the same angle as the other one was. He does not remember what was the angle of the lens that he used. He would have to measure that, before he could tell, that is a long way off in the distance, it would cover a wide space. The photograph is a correct representation of what was actually there on the ground. He took all the photographs shown in Defendants' Exhibits 267, 268 and 269, and made all of the photographs Numbered 2944, 2945, 2948, 2950, 2951, 2952, 2946, 2947 and 2949, being nine photographs in all, and numbered Defendants' Exhibit 270, about June 28, 1912, and they correctly represent what they purport to show. He obtained the description noted on the photographs from the plats they had there, which they showed him. He is not a cruiser. Some of these cabins were occupied and some were not. There was certainly no one living on the premises shown in Photograph No. 2949. He could not say as to Photograph No. 2947, he did not see any one there. There was a party at 2952. 2944 was vacant and also 2945 and 2948. 2946 and 2951 are timber pictures. Rees, Wood and Kempton are shown in Numbers 2948 and 2950. There was an old man living in a cabin on 2952. He does not know how long he had lived there. When he took these pictures of the homesteads, about which he has testified, he went by wagon most of the way from Scappoose, leaving the railroad at Scappoose. He took these photographs at the request of Rees. The only other photographs he took for the company, other than those he has now identified and described, was that of a cabin on the first trip, when he got this big panorama. His photographs are known throughout the United States. He took the famous picture of Mt. Hood, showing the shadow of Mt. Hood in the lake. This picture is shown all over the world. He has also taken photographs of Crater Lake, and other points of interest in the State of Oregon, and they are known everywhere. Whereupon, on cross examination, witness further testified, that he was a commercial photographer, and employed a great deal by railroad companies in preparing their pamphlets and books in the way of getting views, etc., and employed by the Harriman Lines, the O. R. & N., and Southern Pacific Company to do considerable work. A full half circle is represented in the back ground, or far horizon of the photograph or panorama of Defendants' Exhibit 268, it would be a hard guess to state the distance in miles. It would embrace a good many miles in half circle embracing the horizon clear around. He would say, it would be surely fifty miles, possibly seventy-five, possibly one hundred, it would be a half circle. The photograph was taken after four exposures. The half circle would embrace fifty or seventy-five miles away in the distance, and from one extreme to the other, in a full half circle, it might be more than that, that could be figured out according to distance. He assumes that the point where he set his camera would probably be twenty miles across, possibly further, it might be sixty miles. It is not very difficult to judge the character of lands in a photograph a distance of this length, covering an area of this amount, not any of it that one can see, but it is true that one has but a small area of print to show an enormous area of ground, and therefore he could not set out in any detail in a photograph, showing the specific formations of the land. The panorama shows what appears to be a valley, through which appears to run a stream, but he does not know what stream that is. Along the creek there are a few ranches, one can see them there. One could not see them if he was on that point, very clearly, unless he looked for them, but they are there. Everything in sight there shows in the photograph. It would depend on the size of his picture and the distance from the photographing apparatus. Anything one can see with his eye, one could get with the camera. The peak in the distance shown, is a snow mountain, but he does not know the name. The land in the immediate foreground of Defendants' Exhibit 269, in the upper photograph slopes down, that is the only thing deceiving in the camera, it makes land look more level than it is. When taking a picture of a mountain, it looks lower, not higher, when taken from an elevation. Generally speaking, if one gets onto a high elevation everything before one flattens—looks much lower than it is, when the camera is higher, but when it is lower it looks much steeper and higher than it really is, but those are all made from higher elevations. The photograph in Defendants' Exhibit 268, in the lower left hand corner, is made from a lower elevation that the lands shown in the photograph. The photograph on the right hand side is made from a trail that they went up on. The hills appearing in the background in the lower photograph of Defendants' Exhibit 269, are not very much higher than the elevation from which this picture was taken, if it had been, this timber line would be way up here. They were up pretty near as high as the mountains when they made the photograph. The hills or mountains shown in the background are a considerable distance away, about six or seven miles across, possibly ten, to that point, maybe twenty miles; that is away in the distance; still a range beyond this one. He obtained the descriptions of these lands upon which these photographs were taken, and the area covered by them, from the cruisers that were with him. He did not examine any corners, or know anything concerning the sections upon which he took the photographs, or area covered by the photographs. He could only estimate the area covered by the photographs by looking at it, and judging it, that is just the area without the description. He was at these cabins represented in these photographs only for a short time while taking photographs. There was nothing in these cabins, except the one where the man was living. He was in and saw the interior of all these cabins. There might have been an old shack of a stove that fell down, something of that kind. They were seemingly deserted. Sometimes McLeod, sometimes Wood selected the spots from which these photographs were to be taken. He was employed by the Oregon and California Railroad Company to make these pictures, and thinks he was paid by checks. He did not go into the timber shown in the background in these photographs, and knows nothing about that except what he could see from where he was. He made no personal inspection or examination. The timber in the background was about twenty miles away he should judge, some would probably be nine or ten miles. Whereupon, on re-direct examination, witness testified, that when he speaks of the area covered by the photographs being sixty or seventy miles, he means to the skyline, as one sees it in the distance. If there were cultivated clearings they would certainly be visible to the naked eye and the photographs or camera would show it. He could show some clearings in this picture, referring to Defendants' Exhibit 268, and there is some in this that did not have any clearings in sight. There is one there. If it is wished he can point out some clearings along the little creek. Referring to Defendants' Exhibit 268, he does not know how he can describe it, but there is a house right there. It is just a cabin, no one in there at all. Now just down there is a mill; there used to be a mill there, where they stayed over night. There was a little ranch there and a rancher lives there, where he has been for twenty years or more, and that is what he refers to as showing any clearings, or ranches, or houses, or any object that might be within the view of the camera. Whereupon, on recross examination, witness testified, that there might be other ranches, other clearings in the valley that could not be seen with the naked eye, if they were hidden by trees.

Whereupon ELMER S. SHANK, called as a witness for defendants, being duly sworn, testified that he is thirty-two years old, and is an attorney and real estate agent, residing at Grants Pass, and has lived there five years, and followed the real estate business all the time, that is, the general business of selling lands, principally in Josephine and Jackson counties. He located at Grants Pass immediately after he finished college, and was in the real estate business partly for the purpose of finding the name of every ranch owner and knowing all pieces of property, all water rights, where the ditches came out, and to secure a personal acquaintance with every resident of the county, that it might help him in prospective future law business. He would think he had negotiated sales during the time he has been in that county amounting to nearly $500,000. He travels about in his automobiles and otherwise, about an average of 1200 miles a month. He has had occasion only to go over the lands of the company in that county as he was passing to and from lands that might be offered for sale. In the general real estate business, many people having located homesteads, wanted to sell their improvements, and would ask him, as a real estate man, to bring customers to see them, but he does not think that he was ever able to locate any one in the five years, either on a relinquishment or homestead. Most of his customers were those who were able to purchase improved properties, and all of them, upon examining the homesteads, would decide that it would not be a paying proposition to settle on them. The homesteads range from places with perhaps an acre of clearing, run-down orchard, vineyard, or berry patch, with improvements of a log cabin or shack, up to improvements and clearings which had cost as much as $3000—house, barn, well, orchard, and fencing, to which testimony complainant objected as incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant, and it was agreed between the parties that this same objection should be considered as taken to all the testimony of this witness relating to the character of the lands within the limits of this grant, settlements thereon, and public land entries thereof.

Whereupon witness testified that the average value of the improvements on the majority of these homestead claims that came to him for sale, he thinks, would not be over $500 to $700, perhaps $1000, and at the time they were offered to him for sale, these homesteads were almost invariably vacated. Aside from the improvements referred to by him, these homestead entries had clearings from one acre up to forty acres, with an occasional piece of land that perhaps in 160 acres would have 60 acres that might have been more of the nature of prairie; but he would be incompetent to say whether it was really prairie or not, but it looked as such, that is, grazing land. He would not think that he had noticed over a dozen of these places that had as much as forty acres cleared. They were on what might be termed the first or second benches. First are the river bottoms, and then first and second benches, and then the hillside land. From what he has seen of abstracts, and from his acquaintance with the old settlers there, he thinks most of the present occupied land was taken by pre-emption and homestead—he doesn't know exactly what the law was—Donation Land claims they call them down there, and these were taken between the years 1852 and 1880 largely, he thinks. He thinks the map of definite location of the line of railroad of what is now the Oregon and California Railroad Company for his territory, was made some time during the year 1883. Prior to that time, all the lands not too heavily timbered were taken, and run as agricultural, horticultural, or grazing land. There was a time, about 1890, when the first large planting of orchards occurred in that valley. The bottom and river lands contained most of the orchards. Then there is another class of lands in little coves, protected sub-irrigated spots. He thinks nearly all of these lands fit for orchard use, were taken promiscuously from the even and odd sections, but mostly before the withdrawal of any of the railroad lands. The Railroad Company got very little of these lands that are suitable for that purpose. From his investigation and knowledge of others at Grants Pass engaged in the timber business, he would say that from eleven and twelve to sixteen per cent of the total unsold lands of the company in Josephine County would be chiefly or solely valuable for timber purposes. From his knowledge of the total area of these unsold lands of the company in Josephine County, he would say that between four and five per cent of them is capable of being put to agricultural uses, but of this four to five per cent there is about three per cent that on account of being heavily timbered, uneven in character, or burnt over land, would not be agricultural until the land was cleared, the expense of which would run from $40 an acre to $75 and $100 per acre. He has had considerable experience in paying for clearing land of that kind. A settler generally tried to get as much cleared ground to start with as possible. That is the drawback against his country. The land costs so much to be cleared, and it is easier to sell at twice its intrinsic value, land that is cleared, above that which is not cleared. There are two general divisions of soil in Josephine County, red soil and granite soil. The unsold railroad land is largely granite land or red land, of rather high elevation, meaning by high elevation from 1600 feet upwards. Geographically speaking, that district is very old. It is of volcanic formation, and thrown in a great deal of confusion. The ranges are not long, but are broken—short, steep hills—and wherever the grade is above twenty per cent, it is very rocky. He would think that twenty or twenty-five per cent of this unsold land was quite rocky, but as to be totally unfit for cultivation, that it is a question almost impossible for him to answer. Not over two and a half per cent would be available now for practical settlement. They class the unsold railroad land with Government land. Most of their customers are from the Eastern or Central States. The old definition of homestead in these timbered countries is used—that the Government bets the settler 160 acres of land that he will starve to death before he can prove up on it, and the Government usually wins, that is his regular stock description when one wants that land.

Q. In other words, if the land is not valuable for timber, or for mining purpose, or some such purpose of that kind, neither the lands within the even sections nor the lands within the railroad sections, would be available for actual settlement? Is that your answer?

A. No, sir.

Q. That is the way I understand you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is correct, is it?

A. Speculative investment on these unsold lands, both the unsold railroad land and the Government land, is about the total of the market possibility today.

Q. Well, now, what speculative investment would anybody want to make of these lands? What would there be in there that he might speculate about?

A. There is a class of people in the large cities of the East who think if they can buy any land at $2.50 to $10 an acre, they can sell it at an advance.

Q. That is to say, the class of people that would buy acreage, but would not know whether they could get good land or bad land?

A. They expect to raise nothing on the land but the price, and they think if the price is below a certain point, they can make a profit.

Whereupon witness testified that he does not know very much about the mineral side of Josephine County. As a general popular understanding in his county, they consider it a pocket country. There are pockets, and a host of prospectors continually fitting out, hunting pockets. In the Illinois Valley the "Queen of Bronze" seems to be a good mine, and slightly west from that, running north and south, is a ridge that seems to be of consistently strong formation of copper, the Alameda, in the Galice District, being in this line. There are some reputed good placer gold mines near Leland, and west of Leland, near the Alameda, which is a mine of high percentage ore, quite famous in that part. His general information as to the Columbia mine, is that it is about six miles from Leland, and it is a gold placer mine entirely. Gold mines are usually quartz mines in that county. Copper, he thinks, is almost entirely ore. There are two smelters in that county, one at the Alameda, the Galice District; one at the Queen of Bronze, at Takilma. He believes the Queen of Bronze is outside of the 30-mile limit of this grant, and is forty miles from Grants Pass, but just where the line directly from the railroad cuts through, in relation to that mine, he is not positive. The other smelter is about twenty-five miles from Grants Pass, and sixteen miles from Merlin, which is nine miles from Grants Pass. The climate where this railroad land is situated, is quite dry in summer time. The country needs irrigation. It is the best climate in the world. Rogue River runs beside or through Grants Pass, which is six miles west of the line dividing Josephine and Jackson counties. The valley there is somewhat narrow. In Jackson County, about twelve miles east of the county line between Josephine and Jackson counties, the valley becomes very broad, and of a prairie nature, extending at right angles to the course of Rogue River and running south up Bear Creek to Ashland, about twenty to twenty-five miles. The Rogue River valley is about eight to twelve miles wide. There is very little level land of the unsold lands of the company in the Rogue River valley between Ashland and Grants Pass. There is a tract of land in the Rogue River valley called The Desert. It is known to almost every person that has ever passed through that country. It is largely unsettled. There is a land scheme on foot which claims to be able to make a part of it productive under irrigation. Without irrigation it is valueless. There is no unsold railroad land in that desert. There may be some on the northeast part of that in Jackson County, but he is not very familiar with the land on the east side of the desert.

Whereupon, on cross examination, witness testified that he has lived in Grants Pass five years, engaged during that time in the practice of law and selling real estate, and generally dealing in all kinds of land, all kinds of types and soil, in the general real estate business, selling whatever was listed. He does not know what proportion of these lands handled by him has been fruit land. The largest acreage has not been of fruit land sold, although it can be said that any land sold for any purpose, is still good for some kind of fruit in that valley, but the lands handled by him have not been what are called fruit lands in contradistinction to other lands. The largest total of dollars in transactions has been of fruit lands, but the largest acreage in other lands. In 1908 he made a study for about six months of each particular section of railroad land then unsold in Josephine County, thinking that this might be sold some time in the near future very rapidly, and he wanted to be the best informed of any of the real estate men in that section in regard to the lands. He got the descriptions of the unsold railroad lands from Roseburg, he thinks from Mr. Alley's office, and got a series of blue prints, and from them could tell which sections were unsold, and there are a number that have had settlers on a short time. To get the boundaries of these adjacent to owned lands, the ones that would be first attractive to purchasers, he would get them largely from owners, hunters, timbermen, cruisers. He was not positive within 15,000 acres before today of the accuracy of the area of unsold lands of the company in Josephine County. He thought in that county there were from 160,000 to 175,000 acres of unsold lands. His knowledge of the boundaries of these lands, was gained largely from others, but the knowledge of the lands was by walking or driving over or around them himself. He would think that he had made a personal inspection of 120 quarter sections, around in that neighborhood, of these lands, included in the grant in Josephine County. He figured from 36 south, 6 west. These quarter sections were from 36 south, 6 west, figuring north to near Glendale, around Wolf Creek, and down to 38—to 40 south and 2 east, along that right of way out 20 miles—about 10 miles east and north of the railroad right of way, and 20 to 40 miles west, wherever they happened to occur. Glendale is thirty-three miles north of Grants Pass, in Douglas County. Grants Pass is in 36 South, 5 West. He has made an examination of these lands about twelve to eighteen miles northeast of Wimer. Most of those lands in there are valuable for timber, and he has looked at them from a timber standpoint, but he has not made a personal inspection of all the odd numbered sections in that township, referring to Township 35 South, Range 4 West. He has not examined over twelve sections, he would think, in that locality. He has examined Sections 31, 35, 27, 25, and 5 and 7, in that township. He believes he has been over every piece in 36-4; most of the north half of 37-5; nearly all of 38-5; everything in 35 south, 6 west, and has been all over 36-6 west, and personally inspected that. He has been in all of 35-7 west, excepting 19 and 31. There may be five sections in township 35, range 7 west, that he has not been in. This is at the upper head of Pickett Creek, and he has not been north of that. He has been in everything in the east four tiers of sections in 36 South, 7 West, and in 37 South, Range 7 West, except two or three sections in the southeast part, and probably all in Township 37 South, Range 8 West, excepting sections 5 and 7. Of these lands mentioned, he would not think that over five per cent would be agricultural land, or could be rendered so by clearing where there is any growth that would need to be cleared. There are 20 to 40 acre patches of good agricultural land yet unsold of these railroad lands; but, for instance, in 36 South, 4 West, in Josephine County, nearly the entire amount of land is rock. It is not good for anything, never will be unless the climate changes and the rock decomposes. He would think that on Evans Creek seven to ten per cent of that land in Township 36 South of Range 5 West, would be available for agricultural purposes, but it is a poor class of soil. It has much granite in it. He did not in his direct testimony estimate that eighty-five per cent of these unsold lands were not good for timber, but that fifteen per cent had good timber, and that four per cent was agricultural land. The homesteads that he had for sale were largely relinquishments that had been brought to him to put on the market, but he never sold one. He made a business of dealing in homestead relinquishments as a competitor in the business; he had them offered, but never succeeded in selling one. He usually spoke against them because in showing two dozen in five years no one ever bought. He always had something else that attracted more than that. Some of these homesteads had valuable improvements on them as much as $3000. He had one particular homestead in mind for sale with $3000 improvements on it. It was in 36-6, or 37-6. He would not say that the greater portion of Josephine County is waste land. The two largest valleys in Josephine County are the Illinois Valley and the Rogue River Valley. The Illinois Valley was settled about 1852, and twenty years ago, from what he could see of the buildings and improvements and the old orchards, that valley was far ahead of where it is now (1912) in total valuation. The price of property generally, has increased in that valley during the last fifteen or twenty years, as a general proposition, a very large ratio of increase, but the Illinois Valley was intrinsically worth more fifteen or twenty years ago than it is now. The ranches and farms situated in Josephine County are generally irrigated. He believes there are a few successful ranchers in Josephine County, who have no irrigated lands. Fruit propositions are about the only successful non-irrigated propositions. Josephine County is more profitable for agricultural pursuits with irrigation. The conditions are extremely varied. Nearly all land will be benefited by irrigation; some land must have it; a few spots are sufficiently sub-irrigated for fruit, and some bottom soil, with years of the rainfall of 1912, irrigation would be unnecessary. He would not say that you could not successfully operate a ranch without irrigation in Josephine County—that would be stating it too broad, because those who come there, the Easterners, think they can make more money by paying higher prices for the irrigated land. Therefore, the unirrigated lands are not sufficiently tried out. The cultivation of the non-irrigated lands is not on a broad scale, by a class of people who farm it as well as it should be. As a general proposition, farming in Josephine County is not really successful without irrigation, except bottom lands. His knowledge of mineral lands is rather inferior. His personal experience in mining operations in Josephine County is from personal examination with prospective settlers in the valley, visiting mines or so-called mines, but he never panned a half-dozen pannings in his life, but can detect whether there is gold there very quickly, and knows the character of dirt which pays. In visiting these mines, specimen pannings have been made to show investors what the value per pan would be. He has gained as thorough a knowledge of mining, geologically speaking, in perhaps an aggregate presence, with expert miners, of thirty days in his five years there—whatever that amounts to. He has made a study of mining in so far as it affects Southern Oregon and Northern California, but is not a practical miner. He is a geologist. His knowledge was gained from personal inspection with men who have knowledge of the leading mines and prospects of the community. He has inspected Granite Hill with Mr. Morphy; Swastika with Mr. Howland; Queen of Bronze; the Michigan mine; Logan mine; Wimer mine; the mines on the Three Pines Timber Company land; Greenback. He would go to these mines with the manager and would have an automobile of four to eight people—one or two automobiles of people—to look over the country—capitalists from the East. They would follow the manager or foreman of the mines and learn all that they could therefrom. As a geologist, he tried to use his brains. He did not feel qualified to locate a person upon a mine, but could pass upon the mineral qualities of the land.

Whereupon R. L. BOOTH, called as a witness on behalf of defendants, being first duly sworn, testified that he is sixty-eight years old; by occupation, stock-raiser and farmer, and resides about seven miles north of Willamina, in the southwest part of Yamhill County, and has lived there since 1869. He lives in section 1, township 5 south, range 7 west, and is pretty well acquainted within an area of six miles each way from where he lives, but he does not know much about the land in Tillamook County, and is not acquainted west of McMinnville. His knowledge extends to the even as well as the odd sections within that six mile area. The township of railroad land east of him there is principally timber, saw timber, good timber, and he would say that that is the chief value of that land. The other railroad land there has dead fir timber on it, burned down many years ago. The snow-fall in the high part of it is six feet in the winter. The burned over land is red shot land. This burned over area was at one time covered with heavy timber. There have been saw mills there. There has been scattered timber on the creek west and northwest; it is all dead, that is, practically speaking—just a few trees left. The burned over land is good enough soil. The timber is of no value at all. The stumps are still there pretty thick. It was good timber, some of it—very nice timber—large fir timber. The roots of these trees are still in the ground and sound. It would probably cost to clear timber land of that character from $100 to $125 an acre, and it could be cleared. It would cost that per acre to clear it, the best a man could do. The low lands, where the hills are not so high, would be pretty good fruit land. On the ridges, where the ridge switches off, the land is pretty steep. He thinks that there would be about twenty-five per cent of this land that could be cultivated if it were cleared, and this is true of the even sections in that same territory. He was County Commissioner eight and a half years. He would not want to farm this land on the higher points, which is covered with five or six feet of snow. Crops would be late starting in the spring, and the weather would be cold early in the fall, and he does not think it would be practical to use for agricultural purposes. It might do for grazing—something of that kind, but not general farming. He is an old pioneer of his county, and is a cousin of Senator Robert A. Booth, but has no business relations with him, and has not seen him since he went out to the saw mills.

Whereupon, on cross examination, witness testified that his home in Section 1 was taken up as a Donation Land claim before the line of definite location of the railroad grant was filed. He bought his land, and it had been under cultivation prior to 1869, when he went there. He knows the country at large but not the definite sections. He has followed stock business principally. He is not engaged in active farming now, but has been. He has been in the county business, but has not done much since. Stock business is what he has followed principally—raising cattle and hay, and that is what he does. In his community they use the land a good deal for cattle range. If this unsold railroad land in that locality was cleared off, it could be used for grazing purposes, but would require labor to clear the lands off. He has been through the Tillamook country to the coast, through the Salmon and Trask. Next to the coast there are dairy ranches—clearing the land off and raising grain on it, but they are not doing that in his vicinity. After one gets over the ridge in Tillamook, there are lots of that kind. That shot soil on these ridges produces fair when cleared off, that is where it is not on the high land, but on the ordinary ridges where it is not so high. The land spoken of covered with snow, is only covered with snow in the winter time, and would produce grass all right. The altitude of that land is about 700 feet—the ridges way below that. He does not know how high that would be, not the main ridges. The surveyors told him that these ridges were about 700 feet high. The community is pretty well settled south of him, down below, the valley part is all thickly settled, and he has a number of neighbors in his immediate vicinity; his nearest neighbor is about half a mile away. That is an old settled community. The valley has been settled quite awhile—been taken up by Donation claims. Yamhill County at large is a fruit country, and some of this land referred to by him would be good fruit land, meaning these hillsides. He could not say anything about grape culture, because he does not know, because it has never been tried there. He could not say whether grapes would do well or not. They raise English walnuts in Yamhill County, but not in that part. They raise them out more towards Amity, in the red hills. He could not say whether walnuts would do well or not on these lands; they have not tried to raise them, and he could not say anything about it.

Whereupon, on re-direct examination, witness testified that he lives on the Al Gates Donation Land Claim, and the Charles Fendall Donation Land Claim is right down the valley south of him, about five miles from where he lives. All of the agricultural land, practically, on Willamina Creek was taken up under the Donation law or Homestead law.

Whereupon H. W. SCOTT, called as a witness on behalf of defendants, being duly sworn, testified that he resides at Forest Grove, Oregon, and is engaged in real estate and farming and has done more or less cruising of timber lands for the last twenty years, spending considerable time at that work, but could not say exactly how much. He has cruised lands in Washington, Yamhill, Columbia, Clatsop, some in Douglas and a little in Coos County. He has lived in Washington County about twenty-two years and in Yamhill County about ten years but never resided in Tillamook County. He is familiar with the timber lands in Tillamook County in a general way and with the timber lands in Clatsop and Columbia Counties. He knows that these unsold lands in Washington County were obtained under two grants which overlap each other in that County. He is familiar with the lands say from 1 south 4 west, on west. He has been over the country in a general way, east of there, but never paid any particular attention to that. In a general way he is familiar with the lands in township 1 south, ranges 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8 west included in this grant; also township 2 south, ranges 5; 6, 7 and 8 west; township 3 south, 5, 6, 7, and 8 west; township 4, 6 and a little in 5 west; in 4 south, 7 west; 5 south, 6 and 7 west; 6 south, 6 and 7 west; 7 south, 6 and 7 west; 8 south, 6, 7 and 8 west; 9 south, 6, 7 and 8 west. He is not very well acquainted, only in a general way, with the lands of the Company north of the Base Line and west of the Willamette Meridian in townships 2 and 3, ranges 2 and 3 west. He never did any cruising in that part of the country but has been through the country there. Township 2 south, range 2 west is in Columbia County and part in Washington County. In the east, along next to the Willamette River, he never did any cruising but has been through it, all through all of that country there and has been through township 3 range 2 north of the base line and west of Willamette Meridian, where the green marks are on the map, referring to "Defendants' Exhibit 259" and has also been through township 3 north, range 3 west; township 1, range 5 west; township 1 south, range 6 west; township 3 south, range 1 west; township 1 south, range 2 west; township 2 south, range 2 west; township 1 south, range 3 west; township 2 south, range 3 west; township 1 south, range 4 west; township 1 south, range 5 west. Some of these lands involved in this suit are in Tillamook County and he is familiar with these lands. He is familiar in a general way with the timber lands in Columbia County belonging to the Company but has not cruised that part and has cruised in Tillamook County in 1 south, 6 and 7 west; 2 south, 6, 7 and 8 west; 1 south, 1 and 2 west; 3 south, 8 west. More particularly than in other parts of Tillamook County, and has cruised in townships 2, 3 and 4 south, range 8 west; townships 3 and 4 south, range 7 west. He has cruised and is familiar with lands of the Company in Washington County south and from 1 to 4 west, but not east of that and has sold considerable lands of different kinds and different descriptions, and he generally goes through and looks it over; sometimes he looks it over in a general way and sometimes for people who wanted to know the amount of timber there was on it. In cruising a piece of timber land, one finds a section corner, or as near as possible, of the land, and paces the distance off to the land to be looked at or measured the distance with a tape line or chain, sometimes both, but ordinarily the distance is paced. There are several ways of doing the work. He begins at a corner of a forty, called single lining it, and paces off half way through that forty, if it is wanted to cruise 160 acres of land he paces off 250 paces and then runs through the center of that forty to the center of the forty, if going north then west through the balance of that forty to the center of the next forty, then south through the center of the forty and south to the section line where he started to check up and see how he came out. If they are "double running" it the process is reversed and the work is done east and west. They get the amount of timber there is on the land, the general topography of the country, the way the streams slope and all kind of data in regard to the land, timber, soil and one thing and another. In making this cruise or search he would ascertin the character of the land as to soil and as to its being capable of settlement and as to its best possibilities. The character of the unsold land of the Company involved in this suit situated in Washington County is generally rough and broken, heavily timbered in a great many cases and a great deal of the land is rocky and not fit for cultivation on that account. It is unfit for cultivation on account of being too rough, steep and broken. In a great many cases there is quite a high altitude, snow getting very deep in the winter. The soil is generally all coarse mountain land and very unproductive. In order to clear this land for cultivation it would require ordinarily from $100 to $200 an acre to put it in cultivation, to which testimony complainant objected as incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant, and it was agreed between the parties that this same objection should be considered taken as to all testimony of this witness relating to the character of the lands within the limits of these grants, settlements thereon and public land entries thereof.

Whereupon witness testified that not over twenty per cent of these lands in the aggregate could be used in any way for agricultural purposes, even after the timber was cleared off, and he would not consider, in his judgment, that any of it would be available for any agricultural purposes without the removal of the timber. There might be an isolated case where somebody has gone on to a piece of land, cleared up a few acres and abandoned it. There are a few cases like that where they started out on it and could not make a living on it, referring to both the even and odd sections. He saw a great many places in the last two or three years where there were notices tacked up on trees notifying people that they had settled and located on a certain piece of railroad land and every case that he ever saw where these notices were, was always where there was good timber. He never saw notices posted up on the burned places. From his observation within the limits of this grant, the so-called "actual settler" notices were posted on heavily timbered land, chiefly and only valuable for timber. He would say that probably one-fourth or one-fifth of the railroad lands in Washington County had been burned over. Formerly this area was heavily timbered and it now has left burnt trees and logs there. The large part of that land would not be fit for anything that he knows of and it would cost to clear from $100 to $200 an acre. It would not be any more suitable for settlement than any of the rest of it and there would not be more than twenty per cent of it that would be fit for cultivation. The soil is coarse mountain soil, coarse shot and clay and often rocky. The largest part of this land is of a high elevation, some running to about 3,000 feet elevation, and snow gets in there six and seven feet deep lots of winters and lays on sometimes for a big part of the winter, some parts of it all winter, three or four months at a time. There are a great many homesteaders on the even sections within the limits of this grant in the Counties of Washington, Tillamook and Yamhill, who have abandoned their claims before they proved up and others took them up. A great many of these homesteaders who have proved up on the lands have abandoned them afterwards. They could not make a living on them. These homestead claims that have been proved up have been bought up generally by timber companies. He remembers one place on the South Trask on the bottom where it was settled up and houses were there, were settled twenty-five years ago and ten or fifteen years ago they were all abandoned, the houses going to rack and some of them had quite little clearings in there. They sold these lands. Some of these homestead entries within the limits of this grant with which he is familiar were abandoned before final proof, they were finally retaken. A great many of them were taken under the timber and stone act and proved up under that act. The lands within the limits of these grants in Tillamook County is very rough and mountainous, steep and broken and rocky in a great many places, heavily timbered and chiefly valuable for its timber, the only value that he considers the land has now. It would cost to clear any of these lands that might have the soil that could be utilized for agricultural purposes $100 to $200 per acre. He has had a great deal of experience of this kind of clearing up. Three years ago he cleared up some heavy timber land of his own. He blew the stumps out with powder and it cost him all the way, for powder alone, from $40 to $80 an acre. After that he had the holes to fill up, the logs to burn up, the blasted stumps to clean up and he don't know exactly, because he did a great deal of work himself and the boys, and he never kept any exact account of the labor, but kept an account of the powder because he was trying to find out whether it was profitable to use powder or clear the land without powder. It costs in those cases ordinarily $150 an acre. That was about what he estimated it did. This land of his was situated in township 1 south, 4 and 5 west but had been originally homesteaded, but he had bought it. He owns 430 acres in one body about seven miles from Forest Grove on Scoggins Creek. Part of it is on high lands and part on low lands. He has cleared of this land about 40 or 50 acres from time to time extending over a number of years, some one time and some another. Part of this homestead owned by him was agricultural when it was first entered. He has been on this land twenty-five years and probably twenty per cent of it was really available for settlement in its original state. He has cleared at the heavy cost mentioned by him in the last few years by using powder, probably about 10 or 12 acres. He does not think there is any more economical method known to the people here by which this heavily timbered land can be cleared and made susceptible to cultivation. That is the cheapest way that he had ever tried. He does not believe that there is ten per cent of the unsold lands of the Company in Tillamook County within the limits of these grants that would be available for agricultural purposes, and there is none of it that would be suitable for agricultural purposes without the timber being removed. The soil of these lands is a coarse clay and shot soil. The unsold lands of the Company in Yamhill County with which he is familiar is the same as in Washington County and chiefly valuable for the timber. There would be about fifteen to twenty per cent of the total unsold lands of the Company in Yamhill County that would be available for agricultural purposes, including such lands as might be available if the timber was removed. There would not be any portion of these lands in Yamhill County with which he is acquainted that would be available or useful for agricultural purposes without some clearing or something like that, that would not pay for the cost of cultivating it. The soil of these lands in Yamhill County is coarse clay and shot soil and rocky, a great deal of it is very rocky. These unsold lands in Washington, Yamhill and Tillamook Counties are all in the Coast Range excepting these lands east of Forest Grove in 1, 2 and 3 west, which would be in the foothills and hills of the Willamette Valley. Beginning at 1 south, 4 west, from there on is all in the Coast Range of mountains. The lands in Columbia County through which he passed, with which he is acquainted are generally heavily timbered. He would not say there was over fifteen or twenty per cent of these lands that would be available for any agricultural purpose with the timber removed and without the timber removed there would not be any.

Whereupon witness testified as follows :

Q. Well, isn't it true, Mr. Scott, that here and there throughout this grant, in the low little valleys and ravines and draws leading down to the larger streams, there is here and there a spot where a house could be built, that is level, with a half-acre in a place, that you could get a garden, plant a few potatoes, sow a few oats, and make a pretense of a home, and settle on this land?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, what would the balance of the settlement be good for?

A. It wouldn't be good for anything. A man would starve to death on a settlement like that.

Q. Well, where these quarters were timbered, and a man could find half an acre where he could build his cabin or his house, put out a garden of a half-acre in potatoes and things of that kind, couldn't he make a living by getting the timber?

A. Yes, if he could sell the timber for the price it is worth nowadays, he probably could live off the sale of the timber. He certainly wouldn't live off what he would produce from the soil anyway.

Q. Then such claims on such tracts, if I understand you, would be chiefly valuable for the timber?

A. Yes, sir. There is another thing now I think of it. Take those bottoms you speak of along the rivers, out in this Coast Range of mountains, a great deal of that is the poorest land there is out there.

Q. How does that happen?

A. It is beds of gravel; the formation is steep, and the rivers and streams are very rapid, and the alluvial loam has washed away. You can see that upon the Willamette and Columbia rivers here—it has washed away, and lodged down on the low ground and flats.

Q. Then, as I understand you, within the limits of these railroad lands, the level bottoms are very small?

A. Yes, sir, just little places along the canyons.

Whereupon on cross-examination witness testified that he has not lived on his ranch for twenty-five years but has lived in Washington County that long and has been in that county all the time excepting three years when he was in California. He has lived on his ranch and in the town of Forest Grove, moving to Forest Grove five years ago and living there ever since, but he farms his place, going back and forth almost every day when not doing something else. He has cruised for a great many people or for his own purpose for the purpose of selling timber and has cruised for the Hammond Lumber Company and Louis Blaumauer who is now dead. Blumauer owned some timber land, some 1600 acres out there. Witness cruised for a great many people who did not even own timber, who wanted him to look at a piece of timber they wanted to buy, and cruised for lots of others he could not name. He was employed by the Oregon and California Railroad Company about twenty-two or twenty-three years ago when it started in to examine its land, could not tell the man with whom he cruised the timber and who took him through these lands in Washington County and showed him in a general way the section corners or lines and trails and packed some for him. This was in Washington County south of the base line and in Yamhill and Tillamook Counties. He has never been employed by the Company in any other capacity since that time. He never cruised any lands in 2 and 3 north in ranges 2 and 3 west, but went through and looked over that in a general way. His object in going through it was to see what the timber and country were like and how much Government land there was, that was good timber and all that kind of thing. At different times he went to look at pieces of land for other parties, people who wanted to sell out or something of that kind and he would go and look at it. In some cases he ran section lines of the Company's lands in this locality. In running a section line there would be a railroad section on one side and Government land on the other, and his knowledge of these lands is of a very general character. He only made an examination of the Railroad Company's lands in Washington and Tillamook Counties in township 1 south, ranges 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8 west when running the section lines out looking at the Government land and would also see a great deal of the railroad land, quite a lot of that he would have to run through and look the lands over. In fact he looked over quite a lot of that for the A. B. Hammond people and made a personal inspection of a great deal of that land. He inspected a lot of that country before it was surveyed and located a great many people on the lands there before it was surveyed and built cabins and a big part of those trails through there he built and helped to build. At the time they first went in there they supposed that the Government would get all the land and in there on the unsurveyed part and so they looked over that just the same as they did the Government part of the land. He first started into that country twenty-five years ago and a little farther south of there he was in thirty-five years ago. He has been along in that Coast Range in that country, cruised timber and land, hunted and prospected that country more or less in the last thirty-five years, outside of the three years he was in California. This railroad land has been withdrawn from entry ever since he has been in that country. He had a good many other occasions besides that referred to for the Hammond Company, to make special inspection of the Railroad Company's lands. He bought some of the Railroad Company's lands himself situated in township 1 south, range 5 west near his ranch. None of his ranch was obtained from the railroad land, but all from the Government, part of it was in odd sections but was taken before the railroad came through. He has been engaged in locating people on homesteads in that section of the country and has located people on the even numbered sections within the limits of this land grant, and he has filed and perfected a homestead entry on the northeast quarter of section 22, township 1 south, range 5 west, right north of Sheridan, it was 5 south and 6 west he believes, but does not know if he can tell the section without looking it up. There are a great many times that he looked at these lands with reference to the soil and all the conditions connected with the lands, logging and soil and streams, climate and all that kind of thing, but his principal knowledge concerning these lands was obtained while he was cruising the timber. He could not find out anything about the land without he was out in there. There was no other way that he knew of. He lived seven years on his homestead in 1 south, 5 west in section 22 and two different winters they were there the snow was five feet deep in his yard, so he knows pretty well about that. He used to go out and shovel snow off of some of the cabins out there, where the people were not there, six and seven feet deep and had a pretty good way of knowing about what that was. Portions of this land of the Railroad Company is very heavily timbered and has a good market value, good quality of timber. The money a person would receive for his timber would help some in paying for the clearing of the land. The value of the timber would not largely pay for the cost of clearing the land. He has 160 acres of timber land himself in 2 south, 5 west and the best offer he ever had for it was $3500 and he does not think one could clear that land for $200 an acre. He would not take the contract to do it at any less than that. Clearing land in these mountains is a little different from what it is down in the valley where a man can get at everything and where everything is accessible, good roads and railroads. One has to transport all his powder and material and build a wagon road in there. It would cost $10,000 to build a road to it.

Whereupon on re-direct examination witness testified that he filed on his homestead on the northeast quarter of section 22, township 1 south, range 5 west, twenty-five years ago last spring. The land is steep and broken and rough and chiefly valuable for its timber. He lived on it seven years and stayed there two years after making final proof. He did not make it his home because he could not make a living on it and if he had not been cruising timber and one thing and another like that, he would have starved to death on it. He first took it up as a pre-emption and when the time was drawing near for proving up, paying $400.00 the Secretary of the Interior allowed him to take that as a homestead, to relinquish his pre-emption filing and take it as a homestead, although he had had a homestead once before, he allowed him to perfect title to it, which he did and that was his salvation. He was no nearer having the $400.00 when near the end of that time, when the 33 months was almost up than he was when he went there. He used to go and work out, grub stumps for the neighbors there for a dollar a day, as good a wage as he got at that time, and buy bacon and flour and take it back to his family. At the end of the week when he came home they had everything eaten up he took there the week before and he could not say that he was getting any farther ahead. When this timber excitement came up, people came in taking up timber, he knew all the country, all about it, all the lands, etc. Then he started in on that and his place was a kind of stopping place and they stayed there as long as that went on. That was all he made out of that. When he went there timber had no market value. He went and homesteaded because he did not know any better. He wanted a piece of land and had to have it. These homestead settlers in that general vicinity all abandoned their claims practically every one of them and the lands were re-entered and taken up under the timber and stone act. He located people on both. Most of them were at first homesteaders and then when they saw they could not live on the land and comply with the law they either abandoned them or relinquished to other people and they took them up under the timber and stone act. These lands were finally nearly all bought up by different timber companies. The timber is all they were any good for. He bought some railroad land from the Company somewhere about eight or nine years ago in the same vicinity, he thinks about 300 acres altogether first and last. Some of these lands he sold under his contract with the Railroad Company but it was all paid out. He assigned his contract to others. The land was chiefly timber. He does not own any of it now. Different parties own it. One man by the name of Longren owns part and another man in Spokane, Munson, owns a piece of it and it is owned by people who are holding it for the timber values. His knowledge of these lands that he did not specifically cruise is sufficient to enable him to tell the character of the land as to soil and timber and other possibilities. He can tell exactly what the condition is just as he has, and knows absolutely what he is talking about.

Whereupon on re-cross examination witness testified as follows:

Q. You never have made an examination of these railroad lands?

A. Quite a good many of them I have.

Q. Wait till I finish the question, Mr. Scott.

A. Yes.

Q. For the purpose of determining whether 160 acres of land could be obtained in contiguous bodies, not by legal subdivision, that would furnish a sufficient amount of agricultural or tillable land for a man to make a living on? I don't mean that he could make money on, but that he could make a living on, supply himself and family with the necessities of life?

A. Yes, sir, I did. I looked for my own personal benefit, for I wanted a piece of land just like that. I went onto the Nestucca country 34 years ago this summer, and went down there and looked at a piece of a section of railroad land at that time, for that purpose, and looked it all over, and looked that country thoroughly to see if I could find a piece of bottom land, or something of that kind, that was suitable for making a home; and I spent a good deal of time in there at that time. I lived then north of Sheridan.

Q. You don't mean to testify, however, Mr. Scott, that you have made such an examination as I have described in my question previously asked you, with reference to all of these lands that you have testified concerning, some of which you have testified that you never cruised, that you merely had passed through and made some casual examination of?

A. Well, now, I will answer you in this way: I have went all over that land, and all through all that country, and looked for just those things, just exactly like what you are talking about now; and I remember the nearest of anything that I found of that kind was a piece of land in Section 5, Township 2 South and 5 West; and I think a woman here of the name of Mrs. Badgley, right here in town, owns the piece of land now; and that was in a railroad section, and was supposed to be railroad land. Now, I will show you how thoroughly I looked out and hunted it up; and from the fact that nobody seemed to take it up, and the railroad people would not offer to sell it, I went farther, and had an attorney to look it up, and looked the thing up and found that this land had been filed on prior to the time of the railroad grant, and had been abandoned. And I got that—got a party to take that as a homestead. Now, that lay in a "T" shape there, and there was a kind of a swale. There is some of this what we call alder flat land, and it was the best piece of agricultural land that I knew of. It was just kind of a little strip—little spring branches run down, this kind of black alder land; and they took that then as a homestead.

Q. That was on an even section?

A. That was on an odd numbered section. Section 5, 2 South, 5 West. It had been picked out—I forget now—sometime about '62 or '63. That is the best of my recollection. I think this railroad grant was about 1865, wasn't it?

Mr. Fenton: One was 1866 and the other was 1870.

A. Well, it was prior to that time anyhow; and this former entryman had picked this out as being the best piece of land that he probably could find in there, and I done the same thing. I was looking for something of that kind.

Q. You don't remember the description of that land, do you?

A. Yes, sir, I do.

Q. What is that?

A. It was the north—it was "T" shaped, now—I might make a mistake in it; it is section 5.

Q. What township and range?

A. 2 South, 5 West, section 5. It is right at the quarter post anyhow. I think it was the north half of the northeast quarter and the southwest of the northeast quarter, and it might possibly have been the Northwest of the Northeast and the Northeast of the Northwest, and then a row of forties run south of that. That is the way that stream ran in there. I wouldn't be just positive now, off hand.

Whereupon GEORGE W. JONES, called as a witness on behalf of defendants, being first duly sworn, testified, that he resides at McMinnville, Yamhill County, Oregon, is at present County Clerk, and has resided in that county for forty-seven years. He will have been County Clerk, at the close of this term, eight and a half years, before that he was in the lumber and sash and door business. His first sawmill was on Panther Creek, in Yamhill County. In 1876 he purchased 320 acres of land of the Oregon and California Railroad Company in Section 9, Township 3 South, Range 6 West, and operated there ten years, and removed to Section 3, Township 3 South, Range 6 West, and operated there fourteen years. The first mill on Panther Creek was about eight miles and the other two about seventeen miles from McMinnville. His first purchase, including the railroad and non-railroad land was 320 acres. After that he purchased the north half of the Northeast quarter of Section 3, Township 3 South, Range 6 West, that is, after he moved the mill. He made his first purchase from private individuals on Panther Creek. He is conversant only with the lands of the company located in Townships 2 and 3 South, Range 6 West, and probably one tier of sections in the west of Township 2 South, Range 5 West, and Township 2 South, Range 6 West. While he has been on and hunted over some of the lands in 4 South, 6 West, he is not so conversant with them and would not wish to testify as to anything but what he absolutely knows. He has ranged these mountains a great deal, but is only conversant with these two townships, and wishes his testimony to be confined principally to them. The general character of those lands, referring to the country, is very abrupt, cut into deep ravines and gullies. He supposes the highest elevation would be about 2,000 feet. His first mill was located at 1,200 feet above sea level; his second one not so high. The general character of these lands with the exceptions of now and then an isolated swale or tract that he has knowledge of, is not agricultural, is wholly fit only for the timber. For the time that he ran his mill, for twenty-four years, he didn't even raise vegetables, it was cheaper to buy and haul them in than to raise them. He does not think that five per cent of these lands, with which he is acquainted, could be used for agricultural purposes. To all of which testimony complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and it was agreed between the parties that this same objection should be deemed taken to all the testimony of this witness relating to the character of the lands within the limits of these grants, settlements thereon and public land entries thereof. Whereupon, witness testified, that only those few tracts that he speaks of, that had been taken years ago, in a state of nature could be used for agricultural purposes. He cites one taken by Mr. Carr in Section 12, Township 3 South, Range 6 West; he refers to lands heretofore sold and taken; of what is remaining, he does not know of any that could be used for agricultural purposes. The land is what is termed "shot land." It is a kind of rocky formation. In fact the rocks are almost to the surface of the ground. There is very little soil. After the timber is removed some grasses grow there; it could be used for stock raising, but the principal growth is what is called salal and Oregon grape—not very much value. Nothing will grow where the grapes and salal are, but where there is no salal and grape, after the timber is removed there is a species of grass that will grow there that will furnish very good summer grazing; but owing to the deep snows in winter, a man would be compelled to have some place to take his cattle. He could not maintain them in that range. He has no knowledge of the cost of clearing this heavily timbered land, but knows that it would cost enormously. There are several kinds of trees in that section. In Township 2 South, 6 West, the principal growth is yellow fir, with a considerable amount of hemlock, and what is termed here by the people "larch." He knows of the burned area within the limits of this grant, west of McMinnville, what is called "the Meadows." Those tracts of land that were taken along above Meadow Lake, on what is called Walker Creek were taken years ago principally for the dead cedar timber, that was burned, that could be worked up into shingles, posts, etc., and shipped out. There was one or two beaver dams in there, but he has never known them to cultivate them at all. The soil of this burned area, he considered unfit for agricultural purposes, except where it was in a swale, an ash swale or something of that kind, where it is beaver dam, or something of that kind, where it has deposits. That would be a small, not a large area. Some of these even sections within the limits of this grant, these railroad lands, most of them he knows of, have been abandoned since they removed the cedar timber. Some of them have been sold. One does not find many of that class where the timber is not removed, except on Walker

Creek, in Section 12—3 South, 6 West, taken by Mr. Carr. He sold to some other party. There are very few of these settlers left on the lands in the even sections; after removing the cedar timber and taking from them what they could to make a living, they have abandoned them, or disposed of them. There is a very small amount of that class of land in these two townships. In going over the head waters of the Trask in his fishing and hunting trips, within the limits of this grant, as far as he saw, he considered both the even and odd sections about the same nature as those of Townships 2 and 3 South, Range 6 West, except they are more precipitous and more rugged. The timber was all he could see any value for. The mountains lying along where the elevation is in some instances 2,000 feet above sea level, and are called the Coast Range. They are very nearly parallel with the Pacific Ocean. It is a continuous mountain range from the Columbia River to the California State line, and thence on down. Whereupon, on cross examination, witness testified, that he has been engaged in the milling business and in the manufacture of products of timber since his residence in Oregon, and his acquaintance with land has been as a timber man. He owned no lands in 2 South, 6 West, but his lands adjoined. He has been in 3 South, 6 West, and has been through a great portion of 2 South, 6 West; has hunted and fished over most of it. Has a general knowledge of, but never cruished the timber, or ran the lines of these townships, and has a general knowledge from traveling through the country, hunting and fishing. He located a timber claim in 2 South, 6 West, but never perfected his title to it; he let it go, but he wishes he had. He has purchased from the Railroad Company, in all, 600 acres. The first purchase he made was in 1876 and he paid $1.25 an acre for the first 400 acres. The second purchase he paid $3.00 an acre. He afterwards paid $5.00 an acre for the north half of the northeast quarter of Section 8, Township 2 South, Range 6 West. This Meadow Burn that he speaks of—he does not know, but he supposes they were burned—there is no evidence of very much timber ever have been on it. It is a meadow three quarters of a mile long and averaging an eighth of a mile wide, now covered by a lake that is located in Sections 8 and 16, Township 3 South, Range 6 West, a half mile west from his mill, right down to the lake. He is not now engaged in the lumber industry. He never attempted to raise anything on any of his lands, and never attempted to clear them, or produce any products from the soil.

Whereupon J. D. ZURCHER, called as a witness on behalf of defendants being duly sworn testified that he is thirty-three years old, an abstractor and engaged in buying and selling timber lands. He resides at Roseburg, Oregon, and has resided there five years. During that time he has been engaged in the business of abstracting and buying and selling timber lands. The name of his Company is the Commercial Abstract Company. "Defendants' Exhibit 312" was prepared from abstract records in his office and correctly represents the ownership of land as shown by the deed records of Douglas County. The abstract records in his office are built up from records in the Court House of Douglas County, that is from the records in the office of the Recorder of Conveyances. His records are also based on the Land Office records. What the deed records do not show they search the Land Office Records for additional information and he is able to say that he has verified the sources of information with the official records and traced the same or reproduced the same upon this map.

Whereupon Defendants offered this exhibit in evidence marked "Defendants' Exhibit 312" to which complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and it was agreed between the parties that this same objection should be considered as taken to all the testimony of this witness relating to the character of the lands within the limits of these grants, settlements thereon and public land entries thereof.

Whereupon said exhibit was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidenc and identified herein as "Defendants' Exhibit 312."

Whereupon witness testified that "Defendants' Exhibit 312" is a map of Douglas and Coos Counties as prepared from the plats on file in the United States Land Office and on that he has painted the lands owned by the Oregon and California Railroad Company, C. A. Smith Timber Company, the Neenah-Oregon Land Company, the Roach Timber Company, Kendall Brothers, Pillsbury Lumber Company, Lennan Land Company, the Bradford-Culver Timber Company, the Myrtle Lumber Company, the Gardiner Mill Company, Weyerhaeuser Land Company, A. H. Hinkson, and Sparrow, Coach & Kroll, in different colors. This legend on the left hand side of the map shows these respective land holdings and the colors are shown in a small square. The light or pale green colors represent the unsold lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company in Douglas County. There are none of these lands shown in Coos County. The dividing line between Douglass and Coos Counties is the dotted line through the map and his records do not show any of the unsold lands of the Company in Coos County and so far as the map shows the timber lands of these other people and the unsold lands of the Company it is confined to Douglas County alone with the exception of one or two places where the line crosses over which would make it lay in Lane County and in Josephine County and Jackson County, just on the border. He has been over practically all of Douglas County through the mountains and they have in their office cruises of timber of practically all of Douglas County and he has ascertained by personal inspection the timber character of these lands. They buy and sell timber lands, and it is necessary for them to inspect a great deal of this timber in buying it and he has done that personally. He has traveled over and through this grant, the unsold portion of it, and is acquainted with what is called merchantable timber. He does not know or cannot say as a cruiser how timber cruisings are made nor has he ever made any cruisings as a timber cruiser. He knows how that work is done from his knowledge of how timber is cruised. It depends upon what kind of a cruise one wants to make. They will go through and measure a tree, the heighth of it and count the number of trees to the acre. It is estimated as a rule that way. Of course a man may go out and walk through the timber and guess at it and make a cruise that way, but they measure the heighth of the trees. There are several different methods by which one can measure the heighth of a tree. A man becomes familiar after years of practice of estimating the heighth of a tree. One does not take a tape line.

Whereupon witness testified.

Q. Now, assuming that this timber on certain parts of it stands upon soil that, when the timber was removed, it might have some agricultural value, or some value for grasses or fruit or grazing purposes, or other agricultural or horticultural uses, about what per cent could be made available for such argicultural or horticultural purposes when the timber was removed, in your judgment?

A. Oh, I should suppose it would average 15 or 20 per cent.

Whereupon witness testified that he could not say exactly what it would cost to remove this timber and clear the stumps and roots and make it available for use in agricultural pursuits, but should estimate that it would run all the way from $100 to $300 or $400 an acre to cut that timber off and clear it.

Whereupon witness testified.

Q. What is the character of the soil of this land that you would speak of as being cleared, or subject to clearing, this fifteen to twenty per cent that might be made available for some agricultural purposes? What would be the character of that soil in the majority of the grant?

A. Well, that is generally first-bench land, and the soil is fairly good, because it is on the best soil where the best timber grows.

Whereupon witness testified that the land that was first settled in Douglas County was upon the Creek bottoms, open land. The best soil in the county at that time was taken up under the Donation law and these lands were in the valleys. Drain is on the main line and there is a surveyed projected road on Elk Creek. There was some land originally granted to the Railroad Company along the line of the railroad between Elk Creek and Roseburg but practically all of that land has been sold by the company to settlers, that is, such of it as the company ever obtained title to. This road was not built until about 1878 and the country was settled up in 1850 or thereabouts and as a result most of this land was acquired under the Donation and homestead laws and cash entries. The unsold land in the vacant places shown on this map outside of the solid blocks, or the checker board lands, are nearly all barren, rocky points, and have not very much value of any kind. A settler might make a home in there but he would not make a living. This land that is left there would be suitable for goat pasture in the spring when the grass was a little green, what little grass grows there. The checker board shown by this map in color shows the lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company in light green. He thinks that that map practically defines the timber land both east and west of the railroad as to the main body of the land; where this main body begins is about the line of the timber land, it is probably varied a little in places. The southern part of that map shown in shape of checker board form, indicates all timber land down through there, pointing to the green squares as shown on the lower half of it. He would say that about seventy per cent of the unsold land of the Company in Douglas County was merchantable timber land, that would leave about thirty per cent of that land that would be practically worthless, the soil being rocky and unfit for cultivation of any kind. The country is all very rough. The Gardiner Mill Company he believes is the only Company at the present time of those shown on the map that are manufacturing lumber out of their holdings in Douglass County. The Neenah-Oregon Land Company is a Wisconsin corporation and he thinks also the C. A. Smith Company. Kendall Brothers is a partnership of Pittsburg, Pa., Pillsbury Lumber Company he presumes is a Minneapolis concern. The Lennan Land Company he thinks is an Oregon corporation with offices in Minneapolis. The Bradford-Culver Timber Company is a Wisconsin corporation. The Myrtle Lumber Company is an Oregon corporation, but the principal stockholders are the Lovejoys who are eastern people. The Gardiner Mill Company is an Oregon corporation whose principal stockholders are California people. The Weyerhauser Land Company represents the Weyerhauser interests and everyone knows who they are, not a resident, but a foreign corporation. A. H. Hinkson lives at Eugene, Oregon. Sparrow, Coach & Kroll he believes is an eastern company. The C. A. Smith Company is not manufacturing any lumber from its Douglas County holdings, but it has holdings also in Coos County and a mill at Marshfield. With the exception of the Gardiner Mill Company, none of these large holdings are being utilized for the manufacture of lumber or any other useful purpose. These timber lands of these various Companies other than the Oregon and California Railroad Company in his judgment, are the best timber lands in Douglas County. He is acquainted with the stumpage or number of thousand feet on a forty on some of these lands. Township 26 south, range 9 west, is very heavily timbered. The land in section 14, township 26 south, range 9 west is owned by the C. A. Smith Company and will run 16,000,000 feet of timber to the 160 acres. West of the railroad in Douglas County in the Coast mountains the land is reckoned among the best timber in the State of Oregon. On the east it is not so good. With the exception of the Gardiner Mill Company of which he can speak positively and the exception of the Neenah-Oregon Land Company, all this timber was bought about five years ago by these Companies, that of the Neenah-Oregon Land Company has been purchased within the last two years. This map shows all the streams, all the roads, all the donation land claims taken up under the donation land law, the principal towns and postoffices in the County. It does not show the mountains but that is shown by the topography of the map.

Whereupon on cross examination witness testified that he was in the mountains every summer with the timber cruisers when they go out but he is not a timber cruiser. He is an office man and has a working knowledge of timber which he obtained while in the employ of different companies and while working for himself. He was in the employ of the Southern Pacific Company for about two years. His principal knowledge concerning these lands was not gained while so employed. He had four or five times as much experience in timber lands since he left the Southern Pacific Company than he had before that time. While employed by the Southern Pacific Company he did work with reference to these lands both in the field and office, investigating the matter of squatters upon the land and reporting upon the kind of land that it was. He would examine and report on the character of the land, also on the people who had settled on the same. His work was all over the State, but the principal part of it was in Douglas and Jackson Counties. He was in the employ of the Company during the years 1905 and 1906. In 1907 he entered the employ of Frank E. Alley who was engaged in the abstract business and witness was in business for himself at the present time. "Defendants' Exhibit 312" while showing Douglas and Coos Counties, the colorings and work of witness on this map was confined to Douglas County. He was raised on a farm in Eastern Oregon and Ohio, but had never farmed in a timbered country such as this. He is acquainted with the possibilities of the soil by observation. He knew of no sales of logged off land in Douglas County, unless it would be down on the Coast. His knowledge concerning the settlement of this land was obtained from the records. His knowledge about the conditions and settlements of the land about 1850 he obtained from the Land Office records. He could tell when settlements and filings were first made upon the land by the records in the land office. In the entries under the Donation Law the applicant states when he first settled on the land and that is what he formed his opinion from. There are several small companies operating in Douglas County that are not shown on "Defendants' Exhibit 312." He obtained his knowledge as to the residence of the corporations mentioned by him from the records in the Clerk's office and personal correspondence with the people. He does business with quite a number of these corporations. He bases his knowledge as to the amount of this land that is valuable for cultivation or could be rendered agricultural land from his own observation. Somebody else might disagree with him on that. There is probably a little land along creeks in sections 1, 5 and 7, township 32 south, range 4 west that could be cultivated. In township 29 south, range 5 west there is not much agricultural land in the township except in sections 30 and 31 and a little in 33 and 35, but he could not state positively as to the last two mentioned sections. In township 30 south, range 5 west, there is some very fine land, but not unsold railroad lands. Referring to township 30 south, range 5 west, the agricultural land follows the river up to about the southeast corner of section 9, then begins to narrow up into the canyon, closes in and opens out above in three or four places and then it is a narrow canyon all the way up. There is no agricultural land in the unsold railroad lands in township 31 south, range 6 west, but he cannot tell exactly whether there is any land of this character in section 29. He speaks as to a whole township. There is very little agricultural land in that township. In 23 south, 6 west there is some fairly good land along the creek but this land is all heavily timbered. The same conditions exist in township 24 south, range 6 west. The land in there as a rule is pretty fair down in the southern part of the township. This land is close to Oakland. In township 24 south, range 6 west, through which he had marked the Umpqua River as running he would say that it was very rough. The river runs through a deep canyon and that country is all very rough through that whole township, odd and even sections. There are a few farms but not very many. There is some farming land in this township. In his judgment not more than one-tenth of one per cent—five or six hundred acres—out of the total of 616,843 acres in Douglas County is in its present condition suited for agriculture.

Whereupon on re-direct examination witness testified that the settlers referred to on this unsold railroad lands they called squatters who go out and build a little cabin, clear a little place for a little garden, some of them would and some of them would not do that and start in to making posts, cutting and selling wood. In no case that he investigated had the so-called settler made any offer to the Railroad Company to purchase the land. They were trespassers. In his experience these cases were few and were in Douglas and Jackson Counties. There had been a number of homestead entries relinquished and a timber and stone filing made on the land. As far as he knew, cabins and improvements of homestead entrymen on the even sections within the limits of the grant had all been abandoned as soon as title was perfected and the title passed to timber companies, especially in a certain section. These lands that were homesteaded and subsequently entered under the timber and stone act in even sections, were all timber lands.

Whereupon witness testified.

Q. Well, then, if I understand you, Mr. Zurcher, there are not very many settlers within the limits of this grant, on the even sections, at the present time?

Objected to as leading.

A. There are not. Take practically all this territory in through here (pointing to the southeast part of the map), and all you will find is an occasional bachelor's cabin. Once in a while you will find a man with a family on a little creek. You won't find any farming country in there at all.

Q. These cabins that you refer to on these homesteads, what were they? What kind of structures or homes were they?

A. Log cabins.

Q. Are they inhabited at this time?

A. Some of them are, as I say—an occasional one.

Q. Well, those that are abandoned are not inhabited, are they?

A. No, sir.

Q. These that are inhabited, along what streams are they?

Q. Where are these people's claims or settlements with reference to streams and little valleys, if there are any?

A. Well, you will find some along the South Fork of the Umpqua River, up on Cow Creek, and up on the West Fork of Cow Creek, on Camas, and a few up on Rock Creek.

Q. State to the court the extent of the agricultural lands, if any, along those creeks, that are within the limits and still belong to the Oregon and California Railroad Company. Is there any of it?

A. There is very little, except, as I say, along the creek bottom, there would be a little land that might be susceptible to cultivation after clearing it.

Q. How large a spot, we will say to a forty, or to a quarter section, where there would be a chance for a man to make a clearing and to put a house, on any of this land that is unsold belonging to the railroad company?

A. Well, I would say that a ten-acre tract would be a large one.

Q. And what would be the character of the balance of the land?

A. It would be hilly and covered with timber.

Q. You have taken into consideration all these facts in making your estimate of percentages, have you?

A. Yes, sir.

Whereupon witness testified that his knowledge, concerning the homestead, timber and stone and other public land entries on the even sections within the limits of this grant in Douglas County, was obtained from the Land Office Records as to what the notices are, and from traveling through the country all over Douglas County. He found that in the even sections, which were the only sections that could be entered, he would find a timber claim entered and a homestead entered, for instance one would go out and take up a timber claim and contiguous to it would take up a homestead, live on it there until he would commute it and either hold it for investment or sell it to some timber company. The lands obtained through a majority of these entries have been sold to timber holding companies. This country is all rough, broken land, heavily timbered.

Whereupon upon cross examination witness testified that not all of his information with reference to the settlers on even numbered sections was obtained while in the services of the Oregon and California Railroad Company and engaged in ejecting settlers from the lands in Douglas County, but that is where he received his first information.

Whereupon upon re-direct examination witness testified that he was employed by the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and not by the Southern Pacific Company.

Whereupon C. H. STEWART called as a witness on behalf of defendants being duly sworn testified that he is sixty years old and is manager of the Commercial Club at Albany and came to Linn County in 1865, and was County Clerk of that County from 1882 to 1884 and County Judge from 1904 to 1908. After the close of his term as clerk in 1884, he went into the hardware and implement business and remained in that business until about 1902. He was in the real estate business for one year prior to the time he came to the management of the Commercial Club of Albany. The name of his firm was Steel & Company, that was in 1902 or 1903, not very largely outside of the city. He was County Clerk two years and as such ex-officio a member of the Board of Equalization for Linn County, and was County Judge four years and as such a member of that board. He is to some extent acquainted with the unsold lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company in Linn County. He has lived in Albany and in Linn County during all the time he has been in Oregon and he has, if he remembers correctly, been through 1 and 2 east considerable, hunting and fishing and several times in looking at the general character of most of the land in 1, 2 and 3 east for the purpose of taxation. He has been through considerable of ranges 1 and 2, townships 9, 10, 11 and 12, and in that section in the south part of the county in township 15, he thinks that runs to 1 west. He has been over that part of the lands considerable at one time. In the north part of the county he was there several times hunting and fishing, but while he was County Judge he went through townships 9, 10, 11 and 12, ranges 1 and 2 east and down in township 15, probably 1 west and 1 and 2 east, for the purpose of taxation, and he thinks his knowledge would enable him to testify in a general way as to the timber or general character of these lands, at least they determined the valuation of the lands for taxation purposes on account of it. To which testimony complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and it was agreed that this same objection should be deemed taken to all the testimony of this witness relating to the character of the lands within the limits of these grants, settlements thereon and public land entries thereof.

Whereupon witness testified that he supposes that half of the unsold lands of the Company would be cultivated, provided they were cleared, the other half is somewhat rocky and broken, so hilly that it would hardly be susceptible of cultivation. They taxed that half that could be utilized for agricultural purposes if cleared of the timber, at about one-half of the value of the other holdings of private companies; this that was so taxed was timbered, but the character of the timber was not so good. It had been culled by previous purchases. That part of these lands that are covered with timber would be so expensive to clear that it would be almost prohibitive. He would say that it would cost from $150 to $200 an acre to clear. The chief element of value of these timber lands would be the timber. The yellow field on "Defendants' Exhibit 259" beginning at the towns of Cottage Grove or Eugene and extending north towards Houlton beyond Portland, with Salem, the capital, about the center and a little farther south and a little west of south, with the town of Albany in the apparent center at the widest portion, represents the Willamette Valley in Western Oregon. North of this land shown on that yellow field with Corvallis and Albany near the center extending from the east boundary of the indemnity limits of this grant and the west boundary of the indemnity limits of this grant towards Yaquina Bay, was taken under settlement laws prior to the appropriation of these lands by the Railroad Company. There is very little soil on these unsold lands in Linn County; which he has testified are rocky, precipitous and hilly. Probably on the south side of these mountains where it is very rocky and where the winter rains have washed the soil entirely off, it is not susceptible for cultivation at all. The foothills where these unsold lands in Linn County are found, are simply called the foot-hills of the Willamette Valley, or Cascade Mountains. The Cascade Range runs parallel nearly with the Willamette Valley on the east side and runs north and south.

Whereupon on cross examination witness testified that he is manager and secretary of the Albany Commercial Club; has lived in Albany since 1865 and until 1882; was connected with a newspaper, from the time he left school in 1867 and was County Clerk from 1882 until 1884 and from 1884 to 1904 he was in the hardware and implement business and County Judge from 1904 to 1908, and since that time he has not done anything excepting that for a year and a half he has been secretary of the Commercial Club. He has never been a farmer or engaged in farming, but has been very close to that business, selling implements all over that country. He does not own any land in that country but had owned one piece inside of these holdings in 11 south, 1 west, but has forgotten the section. It was partly good agricultural land, the agricultural part was very good. Practically all of these railroad lands in Linn County are rolling. Ranges 1 and 2 east are not in a mountainous country, they do not extend up to the Cascades proper, 3 would get up into the mountains. There are a number of ranches south of that place. He is acquainted with the Maley ranch, the old Thompson ranch, the Hiram Billings place. This railroad land is more broken than these places. These ranches are along close to the Santiam Valley. When one gets back on the ridges, it is very broken and rugged and sometimes rocky. The railroad lands are relatively in the same position as these ranches. The railroad lands are south of them. Counsel for the Government has picked out some pretty good places there mentioned by him. There are other places right by the side of those, or very close to them, that are very bad, a great many abandoned right there. One will find settlers running away up as far as 4 east and following up these valleys that break out of the mountains. The good land runs back following the valleys and people are living there, making their homes with their families, but not on the ridges; they would be in the valleys. Stemgrant, the son-in-law of Billings, has a ranch that is in the valley, part of it runs down on the creek bottom and it is rolling land. A great deal of this land in township south 13 and 14 was timber land at the time it was entered, as shown by present indications and surroundings and has been cleared off and made good ranches of. He thinks that fifty per cent of these railroad lands in Linn County would be susceptible of cultivation if it was cleared of timber.

Whereupon witness testified :

Q. Well, now, Mr. Stewart, in your opinion, don't you think that it would pay to clear that land and make homes there. If these early settlers could go onto that land and clear it when they couldn't sell their timber—there was no market for their timber, it was valueless—wouldn't that timber assist in paying, if not entirely pay the expense at the present day?

A. Where those settlements have been made, it is where they have found some clear land. The land that they have in cultivation has not all been cleared off. It has not been cut right out of the virgin forest. They have taken advantage of clearings, and, of course, cut off some timber, too, in those creek bottoms. They cut that and slashed it, and that has been cleared off.

Q. There has been considerable land cut off and cleared in that country solely for the purpose of marketing the timber?

A. Yes. They have gone on the hills—some people have gone in there. I remember in 1882, when I was clerk, there was a small colony came in there, and something like eight or ten of them took claims up there. Homesteads. Several of them abandoned those claims, and came down in the valleys and rented land, and now own good farms down there. The other men are up there grubbing yet, and they never will get through.

Q. That is your opinion in the matter? You never farmed?

A. I have been very close to the farmer, because I sold him what he did his work with, all of his implements.

Q. But you have never engaged in the industry?

A. No, not very largely. I have hired some of it done. It doesn't pay.

Q. You feel that it doesn't pay to clear land in order to cultivate it?

A. Oh, no; no, life is too short for that.

Whereupon witness testified that up in his part of the country he does not think there is as much cleared land as there was forty years ago. He does not mean that he thinks that the people are leaving their lands that they have cleared, but that the new growth of oak and fir is coming up a great deal faster than it is being cleared. Up to that time it was nearly clear. The settlements have increased in this country. Not very many entries of Government land or homesteads have been taken up throughout the foothills and mountains—that was nearly all taken up before the railroad grant, most of it, but since, there have been some entries of Government lands along in favored places. Speaking of donation claims, homesteads and pre-emptions, he knows that in 1882 to 1884 when he was in there, the business was all done before him and there were very few of these entries. They came to him as County Clerk to execute their papers because it saved them the trouble of going either to Roseburg or Oregon City, that was in 1882 to 1884. Whenever they clear off this land it is good for grazing purpose. It is good grazing and the land itself is rich. Wherever it is cleared of brush or timber, it would be splendid grazing land. The undergrowth is very thick on the west slope of the Cascades. They raise considerable fruit around Albany and nearly all of these railroad lands would be good fruit land. It is not sold at high prices as fruit land, as it is at Hood River and Medford. If these lands were cleared off, it would be as good fruit land as Hood River or anywhere else. The fruit land in the grubs runs from $20 to $50 an acre in his county, but they also raise goats in Linn County and this land in the foothills of the mountains would be fine grazing. A very small portion of this land is susceptible to cultivation in its present state. He has passed through these unsold lands concerning which he has testified, and something like he supposes half a dozen times at different places, out on road business and then at that time in 1904 they were beginning to raise the taxation on timber lands and that subject was up very often in his Court. They were looking into that as much as possible. Whenever he got out into the foothills, although he does not know that he ever went just especially to look at these lands, he always did look at them, while he was there and had them pointed out to him as much as possible, for the purpose of bringing the matter before the court, to settle the valuation of them for taxation purposes. When he was traveling through he would necessarily look at the lands. He did not follow the lines or anything of that kind but had certain sections pointed out as Company lands and generally talked with farmers and settlers in the neighborhood about them. He would not go through these lands like a cruiser would, but made an examination for the purposes of valuation and fixed the values with the assessor. The assessor did not make a personal inspection or have a cruiser inspect these lands. They went up there personally and passed their judgment upon this land by passing through them.

Whereupon on redirect examination witness testified that he knows of quite a number of homestead entrymen, who as soon as they secured their title from the Government sold it, to some of these Eastern land syndicates. These homesteads were on the even sections and were about of the same character as the lands that he has been describing. They were timber lands, that is, the value was in the timber and not in the land.

Whereupon on re-cross examination witness testified that a number of settlers have gone up there and remained on the land, homesteaders, one generally finds them along these streams, or in some places where the rolling country between is open, they have taken advantage of that. It is true to some extent that as the clear lands at the bottom of the valleys are settled up, people have been taking the poorer lands, and going up into the hills, but there has been very little clearing going on up there, one will find a few places where they have done that but very little.

Whereupon W. H. FALLIN, called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, being duly sworn, testified that he is forty-nine years old, lives at Grants Pass, Oregon and works for Josephine County in the assessor's office. He has been assessor of Josephine County since he was elected in 1902. He was deputy sheriff and tax collector four years before that. During his time of office as assessor he had absolute charge of the classifying and cruising of all the lands in Josephine County, railroad, Government and all of it. As assessor he had been on the land a good deal and really knows about the lands. He never cruised any and don't know anything about cruising. The unsold lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company is mountainous, part of it is timber land and part of it is barren. It is bald hills considerable of it; he realy did not cruise it, there wasn't enough timber on it to cruise it. To which testimony complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and it was agreed between the parties that this same objection should be considered as taken to all the testimony of this witness relating to the character of the lands within the limits of this grant, settlements thereon and public land entries thereof. Whereupon witness testified that this barren land that is free from timber, is rough, rocky and barren granite, with some gass growing on it. He would think there was not over five per cent of this unsold land in Josephine County that would be suitable for agricultural or horticultural purposes, that one could use at all. Wherever there is a stream or creek, there is probably a little bit of bottom land there, that might be used for agricultural purposes. There might be a little hillside, but in certain townships, say 36-5 near Grants Pass, there was some lapsed contracts that have gone back, where the land is fair, that can be used as agricultural land, but this is all scattered, isolated land.

"Q. How large a parcel with reference to, say, any particular 160 acres would this parcel or tract be that could possibly be used for any agricultural purpose?

A. Well, there are a few instances where you could get—well, you might say, take 9 Section 36-5, the Southwest quarter, you could get probably 80 acres out of that, and you might out of the Northwest quarter—the west half of the west half—that is pretty fair land; but it has gone back to the company; it has all gone back to the company.

Q. That is to say, this that you refer to as possibly adapted to some agricultural purpose is land which had been years ago contracted for sale by the company and then forfeited by the purchaser?

A. That is it.

Q. Well, then, if the purchaser let it go back, the land was then of not very much value, was it?

A. They couldn't make a living on it. I knew the people."

Whereupon witness further testified that a very small per cent of the lands that are covered with timber, where timber is the chief value, could be utilized for agricultural purposes after the timber is removed, he would say that it was not over five per cent, that would be putting it pretty strong. The character of the soil of these unsold lands in that county, even where the timber is standing and growing, is generally granite formation, called granite land. Grass don't grow where there is heavy timber, but will grow during April, May and June, when there is some grass, and one can graze almost anywhere in the open country, all over there, but that don't last long. There is a kind of browse,—there is pea vine there, and different stuff growing in that country.

"Q. Suppose that an actual settler, so-called, should apply to the company under the act of April 10, 1869, to buy at the rate of not to exceed $2.50 an acre, a tract of this land not exceeding 160 acres, and the company should sell it to him, and there was no other land there over which he could roam his stock outside of his 160 acres, what would be his ability to make a home of his 160 acres, and support himself, or himself and family if he had one, in your judgment?

A. I do not think he could make a living on it. In fact, they don't live there. There is many a township where there is not a settler living there.

Q. Why wouldn't he be able to make a living, as an actual settler, for himself and his family?

A. The ground wouldn't be productive enough. He couldn't raise anything. And he couldn't graze enough cattle on 160 acres—there wouldn't be enough sustenance for them to live on.

Q. Something has been said in the record in this case about clearing off some of this land by grubbing it, burning the timber stumps, and then seeding it to grass. I wish you would state, in your own way, whether or not any of this land is available for such use, and whether it would be at all practicable for this so-called settler to make a living that way on 160 acres.

A. There are thousands of acres in that country without any timber at all. They had bald hills—there is no grass there only for a short time.

Q. Couldn't a man have some of this land cleared, and take 160 acres of it, after the timber was cut down, seed it to grass or some kind of forage, and make a living by raising stock on the 160 acres?

A. Well, he might, but I don't believe but a little of it. Of course, he might pick out a piece once in a while that you could do that.

Q. Do you know of any instance in that county where any other party is attempting to make a living in this way on this land, as grazing land, limiting it to 160 acres?

A. No, not in those outside districts.

Q. I am not inquiring of you, Mr. Fallin, about the bottom land in the Rogue River Valley, or the land that was taken under the Donation land law in such portions of the county as were settled in the fifties and later, under the Donation land law or prior settlement laws, but I refer to lands of the class of these unsold lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company could a man make a living in any way on any of these lands, excepting by selling the timber?

A. Of course, I couldn't tell whether he could, or whether he couldn't make a living. They don't do it—they don't try to do it. There isn't any one living in those districts. Of course, a man might or he might not."

Whereupon witness testified that he does not think there is a settlement in Township 33 South, Range 7 West. There is a man mining in Section 34 and there is another man in that township, but no one lives there; and in Township 34 South, Range 7 West, is about the same, the railroad goes through the edge of that township. Leland is in Section 8, Township 34 South, Range 6 West. One could not get more than ten miles away from that, and if one did, he would be closer to Wolf Creek. There are no settlements in that township. There are some miners there. The reason the country is not adapted to settlements is that they cannot live there. It is different in different townships. He could show a settlement in Township 33, Wolf Creek, and at Tyler Creek, but between there and the lower part, that is a mining country. There is a settlement at Wolf Creek in the little valley along the creek; which valley is narrow, averaging about a quarter of a mile on either side up, and gets into the mountains and is abrupt. There is some red soil in Josephine County, generally on this high land, which is very good; and some white granite, which is not. The red soil is considered good fruit land; and in that red land are all the gold mines and placer mines, the banks are red. When one gets a hillside that is protected right he may get a piece of land that is good for fruit culture, but the per cent would not be great, it would not be over five per cent on the whole, he has included that character of land in his estimate of five per cent, he figured on the whole thing. As a general thing the land in Josephine County is not heavily timbered, although in Township 34 South, Range 5 West there is some very heavy timber on the east line, which is good timber, down in 39-5 and 6 West, is good timber, generally it is light timber, but of good quality. There is sugar pine in there and it is high grade timber, what there is there. There is a reserve there, as shown on Defendants' Exhibit 259, and also a reserve known as the "Ashland Forest Reserve." These reserves are mostly timber lands. The Siskiyou Forest Reserve was established in 1907, and is in Josephine, Curry and Coos Counties, he thinks. He does not know whether any of it is in Douglas County or not. The general character of those lands is timbered lands, mostly unsurveyed land, and as far as Josephine County is concerned, is unsurveyed. These reserves run into the grants. Whereupon on cross examination the witness testified:

"Q. What years did you say that you were assessor in Josephine?

A. I am assessor now.

Q. You are at present assessor?

A. I am working at the office, and I have been since 1902. That is when I was elected. I have been connected there ever since.

Q. You have been assessor since 1902?

A. No, not assessor. I have been working in the assessor's office, but not assessor.

Q. You never have been?

A. Yes, I was six years.

Q. What years were those?

A. 1902 to 1908. I had the timber cruised while I was assessor.

Q. Who is the present assessor?

A. Pollock.

Q. Now, you are a timber cruiser, Mr. Fallin?

A. No.

Q. What has been your business during the last 15 or 20 years?

A. Assessing.

Q. Assessing all during that period?

A. Yes.

Mr. Fenton: During the last 15 or 20 years?

A. Oh, no, I was deputy sheriff four years."

Whereupon witness testified that before entering the public service he was in the merchandise business at Grants Pass. He has never been employed by the Southern Pacific or Oregon and California Railroad Companies. Generally speaking Josephine County is a good fruit country. They raise good fruit there. The same general character of soil does not exist all through the county. There are favored localities where they raise good fruit, and others where they cannot raise it. A large portion of these unsold railroad lands is rolling, and might contain considerable soil for fruit raising. He has never been engaged in the fruit raising business, except just around his home; he has some trees at home, in his door yard, and has some apples, peaches and plums, and different things like that. Grants Pass is the center of a fruit raising country. He had charge of making these examinations of these lands for classification with reference to assessments. He hired men, and thinks Mr. Pollock the present assessor, was his deputy and was one of the cruisers employed by him, getting a cruise of the lands. This classification is on record. There is one in the assessor's office and another in the clerk's office which is the same thing. All of these lands of this grant are classified as to being timbered or agricultural and assessed on that basis. He has assessed in every place and went all over the county. Has not inspected personally all of the land; never went on lots of the land, because he had no occasion to go there. Every place where there was a settlement he had been, assessed the people in there and looked at the land. By settlement he means where there is anybody to assess; he would go and see them, and has done that for many years, that is go and see the settler all over the county. He did not go to every place one year; but he did go, and he has testified from what he has observed during these trips.

"Q. You never made an examination of the 40-acre subdivisions of these lands, to see if 160 acres could be selected that would contain enough land to make a living?

A. No; no, I never did that personally.

Q. Not money, but a living for a man and his family—a settler and his family?

A. I have only examined the reports that the cruisers brought in. They reported on the land.

Q. You base your knowledge largely upon that?

A. Yes to that extent."

Whereupon witness testified that taking all the lands in Josephine County there are about 20,000 acres in cultivation, that is what the assessment roll shows. He does not think there would be over five per cent of the whole land in the county that would be susceptible of cultivation, and does not believe there is that amount; it might run a little bit more, but not much, that is the general average, he thinks, of course, that is only his opinion. Whereupon on redirect examination witness testified that the fruit land adapted to fruit culture and used for fruit in Josephine County is all over the county. They raise fruit all over Josephine County, where there is any settlement. Fruit that is grown for commercial purposes is chiefly located in the Rogue River Valley, on the valley ground. The Rogue River Valley, as it passes through Josephine County, is not very wide. Below Grants Pass it would probably be a half mile on each side of the river in width; that is, the bottom lands. He does not mean the foothills. It is about a mile wide for probably ten miles below Grants Pass. Above Grants Pass it is not so wide. There is not much there, it is a narrow valley. There is some very good fruit lands in the foot hills immediately adjacent outside of this valley. Another half mile on each side would be along the sunny foot hills, along this valley. A lot of this land within that mile which is broken and hilly and some of the soil is decomposed granite and is not all in cultivation by any means. The lands adapted to fruit culture within that mile limit would be more or less spotted. The assessor's rolls show that there is about 20,000 acres of agricultural land in the entire Josephine County, that is, there is that much on the assessment rolls in actual cultivation. He does not know how long it has been since the first lands were settled in the Rogue River Valley, but it was by Donation Claims, under the Donation law. Grants Pass has been a town since 1883, or 1884. He does not know when the railroad was constructed to Grants Pass. He came in 1888 and the railroad was there when he came and had been built through to the California line at that time. He only knows from hearsay when it was completed from Ashland south; it was through when he came there. The population of Josephine County is about nine or ten thousand.

Whereupon IRVINE P. GARDNER, called as a witness on behalf of defendants, being duly sworn, testified that he is thirty-seven years old, by occupation a surveyor and timber estimator, and resides at Myrtle Creek, Oregon, and has lived in Douglas County between five and six years, and has been buying and estimating timber during that time. He had charge of appraising Indian lands for about two or three years, in Minnesota, for the Government, and took the ranger examination and surveyed out and selected ranger sites for the Government in the Cascade-Umpqua National Forest Reserve for a few months, and cruised timber for the last fifteen or sixteen years for a living. During his summer vacations, while at college and law school, he ran compass in Northern Wisconsin and Northern Minnesota, with the exception of one year of the Spanish-American War, in which he participated. In the fall or winter of 1898, he went into the woods in Northern Wisconsin, estimating and logging, and worked there two years, running compass most of the time, and doing some estimating. He then went with Major G. L. Scott, Indian Agent at Leach Lake, Minnesota, and took charge of the surveying and appraising of Indian lands for him. The year prior to that he was superintendent of logging on the Northern Pacific Railroad for the Ashland Iron and Steel Company—estimated timber and cut it for the furnaces. He was with Major Scott then for about two years, and then with Major Michelet at White Earth, Minnesota, in the Government service. He then estimated and bought for Nichols & Chisholm Lumber Company and the Shevlin Company—estimated and scaled in Minnesota. For the last four years he has bought and estimated for the Neenah-Oregon Land Company of Wisconsin, a corporation of Neenah, Wisconsin. His headquarters have been in Douglas County, and all his work in Oregon has been in Douglas County, with the exception of a little in Josephine and Jackson. He has cruised in Douglas County about 4,000,000,000 feet of timber situated on about 100,000 or 125,000 acres. The lands except in the indemnity limits, have been altogether where people have filed or they have been the even sections. He has been in the South Umpqua country, practically to every quarter post and corner, and on most of the railroad lands, with the exception of a year ago this winter, which he spent in the abstract office which they have, in which the President of his company has a half interest, referring to the Commercial Abstract Company of Roseburg, he has been in the woods continually, probably two hundred and fifty days in the year he has been estimating, mostly in the South Umpqua country. He has estimated and bought all the Neenah-Oregon

Land Company's lands on the South Umpqua River and Myrtle Creek. He has a general or specific knowledge of other unsold lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company in a good many localities in Douglas County. He has been out estimating for other people, and one year before he went to work for that Company he worked on general estimating, estimated all over the county, wherever his clients wanted him to. There are three or four methods in use by cruisers. The two general basic methods are, what are known as single running and double running of forties. To single run a forty, one starts at a known corner, and would go north or east or south or west, as the case may be, two tallies or 250 paces; then run directly through the land which they are estimating north, east, south or west, as the case may be, tranversely, directly across it. That puts one on each ten acres of the land that one is looking at. In double running, one goes half the distance, and then horseshoes it, as it were, or 125 paces, which would put one on every two and one-half acre tract of the land. In order to ascertain the amount of timber, one could take it, either strip method or circular acre. The strip method is taking everything for 250 paces, or two tallies, thirty-three feet, on each side, which gives an acre. The circular method is standing in one place and taking everything in a circle within approximately fifty-five paces, giving a circular acre. The contents of a tree, as a general rule, is arrived at through volume tables, which are tables made through the figuring of contents of trees at mills. There are the Clement Table, King's, Spalding's and several others. Spalding's is one of the standards. The Government has adopted Scribner's Decimal C Rule as its standard. As a general rule, a cruiser obtains the height of timber through pacing down timber. In almost all forests there will be a certain percentage of down timber. Probably on a quarter section one would pace ten or twelve, or even only four or five or six trees, to a certain diameter, starting from the butt pacing, and get the height that way. All volume tables practically are made either stump or breast high, inside the bark at the stump. In exact estimating which they do, they always use what is known as a diameter tape, which gives the circumference. Measuring around the circumference and subtracting the bark, will give the diameter figured out. In getting the height of the trees by computation, where it is not paced, one can use a clinometer, which is a scale figured out, or can use half of a square, with a small level on it, and by pacing the base of the square, and sighting up to the top of the hypotheneuse, where one can catch the top of the tree—the base and perpendicular will be the same, what one would have to pace on the base would give the height of the tree. The remaining unsold lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company in Douglas County, Oregon, would average, probably, 35,000 feet board measure straight through per acre, counting everything. To which testimony complainant objected as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, and it was agreed between the parties that this same objection should be considered as taken to all the testimony of this witness relating to the character of the lands involved within the limits of these grants, settlements thereon, and public land entries thereof.

Whereupon witness testified that these unsold lands are chiefly valuable for their timber. In the present condition, at this time, a great deal less than one per cent of this total area, in his judgment, would be available for horticultural or agricultural purposes. Twenty-five to thirty per cent could be farmed after the timber is removed. He has a homestead of his own, and what clearing he has done has cost him from one hundred to two hundred dollars per acre, and he has cleared a great deal of land, and helped clear land in camps.

Q. From your knowledge of the timber that is on this land, that you say might be utilized for some agricultural or horticultural purpose after the timber was cleared, what would you say the average cost per acre would be to clear such land and make it available for use?

Q. Go ahead and answer.

A. After the timber is cut or before, at the present time—take it in its present state?

Q. Take it as it is?

A. Taking it in its present state, the average cost would be from $75 to $100 per acre to clear.

Q. Do you say, or do you think that you could clear some of this land that runs 6,000,000 feet board measure to a quarter section, at the rate of $100 an acre?

A. Why, it would have to be done in a commercial way, with donkey engine and derrick. Certain people are contracting to. It costs from $10 to $25 an acre to slash, and it will take on your trees anywhere from two to ten sticks of powder per stump. I never figured it out that way, but it would take—some of it could be done. It would probably average nearer $150 than $100 to clear it free of stumps.

Q. What is the fact, if you know, as to the presence of the roots in the ground of these trees, after the stumps are blown out by powder?

A. Well, if they blow the stumps out, the roots will bother if not pulled up for a few years.

Whereupon witness testified that these unsold lands are practically all mountain lands. In Douglas County, the part that he has been over, runs from five hundred feet, which is the elevation of the Umpqua River at Roseburg, to points in one or two places, five thousand feet. The majority of the divides between the different places, the summits of them, will probably average from twenty-eight hundred to thirty-five hundred feet, that is, between the different ones—Cow Creek and the North and South Umpqua. A large majority of these lands is in the Cascades and Cascade foothills and Coast Range and Coast Range foothills. The average elevation would probably be 2000 feet. The majority of the lands are at an elevation of about 2000 feet, because in the bottom of the valleys, the elevation will run from 1000 to 1500 feet, and the crest from 2500 to 3000. He uses an aneroid in all his work and takes the elevation on every ten acres and every section line in the country, and at all his bases, he takes the elevation. He bought or estimated all of the lands indicated in red on Defendants' Exhibit 312, owned by the Neenah-Oregon Land Company. He has been over township 25 south 2, for the Ferry Estate, and has been in a great many of the townships at different times. These lands are practically all heavily timbered. The entire holdings of the timber companies represented in there will run very close to 60,000 or 65,000 feet board measure per acre, referring to all the timber holdings represented on that map, Defendants' Exhibit 312, other than the Oregon and California Railroad Company. The majority of these scattered parcels about Looking Glass, up to, say, Yoncalla, shown in green, are open and barren lands, along the summit of the divides, which were not purchased with the bulk of the land. The unsold railroad lands indicated by these colors in green, within the area just mentioned, appearing still to belong to the Railroad Company, are mostly grazing lands in the spring. A great deal of that land was sold by the Railroad Company on contracts that were defaulted, the purchasers did not make the payments. Some few of these scattered parcels in that area along the river are agricultural, but most of that soil is bad. It could be settled on, but a person could use it only for grazing or pasturing, that is, a majority of this land. A settler could not make a living on any of it, or very little. From the records of the land office and district court, and the abstract company with which he is connected, a large area of lands that are unmarked with any color, that are white on this map—Defendants' Exhibit 312—show that they were purchased from the railroad company under contracts, or else taken as donation land claims, that is in the old settled part of the Umqua Valley. He has been all along the Umpqua River from Winchester Bay to Roseburg, and up all around the summit of the divide, and inspected all the range on the summit of the divide, on the South Umpqua and Rogue River divide. Ninety-five per cent of the even sections, within the limits of this grant and adjacent to the railroad lands, is covered with merchantable timber. From his experience in the abstract office and looking up title, checking blue prints, etc., he knows that the title to the even sections, where the title has been disposed of, has passed into the hands of timber companies, a good deal of it. It was originally entered under the Timber and Stone Act, the Homestead and the Commutation or Cash Entry Act, and scrip. A great deal of it has been taken under the Act of July 30, 1898, and the Acts of 1902 and 1903. The Act of July 30, 1898, is the act of Northern Pacific scrip, individual claimant scrip. The Neenah-Oregon Land Company has bought probably thirty homesteads, which it will be glad to lease for taxes, and cannot lease one. It has offered to lease these homesteads to persons who would take possession for the payment of taxes. In five years it has leased one piece, very close to a school house up in the mountains. Very little of this land is capable of being used for agricultural purposes. In the South

Umpqua country, in Township 28 South, Ranges 3, 4, 5; Township 29,—1, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9; Townships 31, 32, 33, most of 34; 31—1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8; 32—1, 2; parts of 32—3; 32—4, there are not five homestead entrymen living on the land, title to which they obtained under the homestead law. There may be more than five, but there are very, very few. Looking over the country generally, his blue prints and in the abstract office, probably in that territory five hundred people obtained that land under homestead or the commutation act. The rest was taken under the Timber and Stone Act. He is not stating anything but what he has examined himself personally, through cruising. A great many of their cabins have been burned, and a great many have been abandoned. Some few of them, the patches that they have are being used by cattlemen and others, who keep up the fences.

Q. What I am getting at is, the entryman that settled the land, what has become of him in nine cases out of ten, if you know?

Mr. Rabb: Objected to as leading, suggesting to the witness the answer to the question.

A. Sold out and out of the country, most of them. A majority of this land in our part of Douglas County was settled in 1902 and '3 and 1901, a great deal of it by people who came from Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota and took up land.

Now, in the main, to whom were these homestead claims or homesteads transferred,—to what class of purchasers, from your knowledge, if you know?

A. Timber companies.

Whereupon, on cross examination, witness testified that he was born in the State of New York, and went to Omaha in 1887, and spent all his summer vacations, until 1898, in Northern Wisconsin. Bayfield was his summer home. Until that time he ran compass, scaled around the mills, worked on the booms, worked with boats. When there was nothing else doing, during his vacation, a good part of it, he worked in the timber business, that is, worked at it when he was not fishing or hunting. By an estimator, he means one who cruises and estimates timber for a living. He actually cruised himself, and was engaged in that business in Minnesota, and surveying. He had charge of surveys, but had to appraise the amount of timber on the Indian lands and the quality of soil for the purpose of selling, and has followed that occupation for a living ever since. The President of the Commercial Abstract Company is DeWitt Van Ostrand, of Phillips, Wisconsin, who is also President of the Neenah-Oregon Land Company, and has a half interest in the Commercial Abstract Company. The Commercial Abstract Company is not interested in the lands. He worked in the office looking up records and titles to what lands they got. His duties in the office are nothing at all, excepting two years ago this winter, in bad weather, he went into the office of the Commercial Abstract Company and his salary went on. He has done very little work for the large lumber companies interested in that vicinity in Douglas County, aside from the Neenah-Oregon Land Company, for which he worked steadily for four years, with a few exceptions. His testimony and his knowledge of this grant is confined to Douglas County. They bought in 35—7 in Josephine County, about one thousand acres, and he has worked quite a little along Rogue River. His specific knowledge is practically all in Douglas County. He knows very little with reference to other lands, and he does not want it understood that his testimony goes further than the limits of Douglas County. He would not testify to anything he did not know personally. Less than one per cent of these lands are agricultural in character in Douglas County, in his opinion, until the timber is removed. He would not include grazing as an agricultural pursuit in the timbered lands, because almost all the green places shown on this map might be classified as grazing lands. There is good grazing land on a good deal of it for a month or two in the early fall and before it dries up in the spring, those rocky ridges. When he makes his estimate on each and every forty, he figures the amount of tillable land on it. His estimate would read something like this: So many acres in cultivation, cleared; so many acres susceptible of cultivation when the timber is removed; so many acres grazing; so much rough and rock and barren. He has a homestead in Section 18, Township 28 South, 3 West. Part of it is agricultural land, what he has cleared, about twenty or twenty-five acres now. He took that up for the purpose of making a home, and he has a home.

Q. Now, Mr. Gardner, referring to Defendants' Exhibit 312, I will ask you as to the lands in Township 28 South—4 West, what percentage of those lands is agricultural?

A. Section 1 is on the divide, on the head of North Myrtle Creek. Along the creek, along the main creek, which is heavily covered with timber, there would be a strip of land when the timber is cut which would be agricultural in character, in the Southwest quarter of the section. Section 3 has some land on it which is agricultural, probably fourteen or fifteen acres. I know very little about Section 5; 7 is on the divide, and has quite a little grazing land on it, very little of it tillable. Section 17 is all rough, steep and mountainous. Section 15 is all very steep, with the exception of some mining land, or land that they attempt to call mining land—illegal mining locations—in the southeast quarter the bottom land is all washed out through placer digging there along the creek. Section 13 has quite a bottom of Myrtle Creek, but the remaining land, with the exception of the north half of the southeast quarter, which is along by the fork and good bottom, is all rough and mountainous. Section 21 is all mountainous, with the exception of a small piece on Lee's Creek. Section 19 is nearly all—all the land on that that is left is quite mountainous, but there is a bench in the northwest quarter that will probably have, when the timber is cut, some very good land on it—the north slope of the bench. Section 29, that is all mountainous, the remaining land. Section 27, the west half of 27 is that west of the creek, west of Myrtle Creek, which goes through in a northeasterly and southwesterly direction. That west of the creek is a gentle slope; that east of the creek is very rough. 31 is all mountainous, practically. 33, there is no agricultural land in 33 at all. 35 is on the crest of the divide between North and South Myrtle Creek. There is very little land on that any use. 23 is covered with mining locations, practically all of it. 25 slopes into Riser Creek, it is quite steep. That is all.

Whereupon witness testified that in that specific township, at the present time, very little of it is agricultural, probably 25 per cent of that township is agricultural when the timber is removed. It is all grazed at times with sheep and cattle, certain times of the year; this year for six weeks from about the first of June until about the middle of August. In the middle of July they take the sheep out. The feed is not good in August. There are probably one thousand acres of the unsold lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company in this township that are good grazing lands. There is a very little of it that could be plowed at the present time, probably forty acres. 29 South is alll grazed at times, everything in the country. The whole country is grazed, but it is not what you might call grazing land. It would take probably an average of 160 acres, more or less, to support a cow. There is some burned over land; there is no bunch grass. Bunch grass is about the only thing they can fatten on in that township; but cattle do well along the creeks in the heat of summer. Practically all of the land in that township has been taken, either commuted or homesteaded. Of the unsold lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company in Township 29—3, probably 25 per cent, after the timber is removed, is agricultural land. At the present time there is very little. When the timber is removed, he would say not over 20 per cent is agricultural. He would not say that all of it is good for grazing, but they graze over it all; but there is very little grazing except on the burned ridges. There will be a burned ridge running through it, that would have fair grass or pea-vine. In the mountains they do not graze on grass much, but mostly on pea-vine, which is only good from the time it gets its growth, gets some substance to it, till the middle of July, when it dries up and is not good. It is a pretty hard question for anybody to answer, what percentage of this land is grazing land when the timber is removed, that is, it would take a lot of time, and it would be a guess for him. He would say that the top of all the ridges which would have pea-vine on for a month in the year, when the cattle and horses could support on that, would be grazing land, but he could not state the percentage, but it would be just a guess. The township grazes, with what they use in the bottom—there is only one man who is extensively in the cattle business, that is Lloyd Ade, in section 21, 16—28, and he runs, with what feed he has in the bottom, about 100 to 150 head of cattle, and he is able to graze them in the summer, and that is about all the grazing that is being done in that township now. He said that with his stock the range was pretty well stocked. When the land is cleared, if it should be seeded down in the ashes, in that township, it probably would be 25 per cent grazing in addition to the 20 per cent of agricultural. Probably one-half of it could be used for grazing when it is cleared and seeded. Very little of the unsold lands of the Oregon and California Railroad Company in that township is agricultural in its present condition, none that he knows of in township 29—3. Probably five or ten per cent along the ridges in township 29—4 would be grazing, but the timber lands are all grazed at certain times of the year, not to exceed five per cent on the burned ridges, in their present condition. All of it is not grazing lands. That is, nobody can answer that. In Roseburg he told Mr. Underwood that one could use that land only for a very limited time; that one could run cattle; the great proportion of it could be grazed, but it would support stock for just a few days in the year. In the present condition, probably 50 per cent of that land could be grazed for only a few days in the year. It is an awfully hard proposition to fix what percentage would be grazing, unless one will fix some basis. The Government fixes the basis for that in the forest reserve. In the township referred to, there is not over 250 head of cattle on the odd and even sections, and the range is overstocked. There is very little land in Township 29—4, probably one thousand acres that are chiefly valuable for grazing purposes. After the land is cleared and seeded there would probably be 2500 or 3000 acres. After the land is cleared very little within 29—4 would be agricultural land, and of the unsold lands of the company probably ten per cent in that township would be agricultural. There are 225 head of cattle grazed in township 30—1 south in the National Forest Reserve during the summer season, and the range is pretty well stocked. There would be about twenty acres in Section 21, in its present state, that would be agricultural. There would be about one-twentieth of one per cent of the thirteen sections in that township that would be agricultural, and about twelve and a half per cent of the unsold Oregon and California Railroad Company lands, probably one thousand acres, in that township, in the National Forest, as grazing land at the present time, and after the timber is removed, or the land is cleared, there will be fifty or sixty per cent of that township that will be grazing, but it is covered with a very heavy stand of timber. About twenty-five per cent of the land would be agricultural land. At the present time, with the exception of an old orchard and old buildings in the northeast quarter of section 23, there is no agricultural land in the unsold portion of township 30 south, 2 west. There are about fourteen or fifteen acres of agricultural land in the Northeast quarter of section 23, which would make one-thirtieth of one per cent of that unsold land in that township agricultural. It is all grazed. There are about seventy-five head of cattle running in there now. Probably ten or fifteen per cent of it would be grazing land in the present condition, and when cleared, probably twenty-five or thirty per cent of good grazing and agricultural land; probably twenty per cent agricultural, and probably 15 or 20 per cent would be grazing land, when it is cleared and seeded and burned. Probably one-tenth of one per cent is agricultural in township 30 south, 3 west, there is just a little patch there, grazing, south of the river, that is, one-tenth of one per cent in the entire township would be agricultural, and twenty-five or thirty, maybe forty per cent in that township, possibly, of grazing land, when the timber is removed. There is a little patch there of agricultural land in the present state, which could be farmed, and when the timber is removed, there will be a probably fifteen or twenty per cent in that township which would be agricultural land, and after the timber is removed probably an additional twenty or twenty-five per cent, maybe more, in that township, would be grazing land. It is a pretty fair township. There is only a small fraction in Section 23, Township 30 South, Range 4 West that is cultivatable at the present time, in the entire township, probably one-tenth of one per cent, and probably ten or fifteen per cent grazing land in the present state. After the timber is removed there may be probably ten or fifteen per cent on the benches that would be agricultural. Practically all the good agricultural land in that township has been taken. There would probably be an additional ten or fifteen or twenty per cent after it is seeded, that would be grazing. In 30 south, 5 west, there are a few little places that are cleared. He thinks most of them are under contract at the present time, and probably five or ten per cent grazing, burned over. Practically all this township when cleared could be grazed. There is very little agricultural land remaining. It is all contracted or sold in that township. Probably five per cent of the remaining would be agricultural, and the balance, probably forty or fifty per cent, would be grazing land. Probably forty acres in Township 31 south, 1 west, is agricultural at the present time —referring to the unsold lands of the company—and probably twenty per cent is good grazing at the present time. About one-fifteenth of one per cent of the unsold lands in that township, would be agricultural; probably fifteen or twenty per cent at the present time grazing. After the timber is removed twenty per cent could be plowed; probably half of it would be grazing land; probably seventy-five per cent of that land would be grazing land. All agricultural lands can be grazed too. He makes these estimates off-hand, from his practical knowledge of it. There are about twenty-five acres in Section 1, Township 31 south, 2 west, which is all the agricultural land there is at the present time, amounting to one-fourth of one per cent, and twenty per cent of grazing land. There is a good deal of burn in that township. Probably five per cent of this township when cleared, would be agricultural in character, and fifty per cent grazing if seeded. 31—3 south, with the exception of a little on Cow Creek, is all timbered and mountainous on the divide. Only two homesteaders went into that. None of the unsold lands of the company in that township are agricultural at the present time. Twenty-five per cent would be grazing. Probably ten per cent would be agricultural, and twenty-five per cent, maybe thirty per cent, grazing, when the land is cleared. About one-twelfth of one per cent of the land in Township 31—4 South, in its present state, would be agricultural, and twenty per cent grazing; and when cleared, five per cent agricultural and thirty or thirty-five per cent grazing. There is no agricultural land in the unsold lands in Township 31 South, 5 West, and very little grazing; he would say about five per cent. This township is all heavily timbered and steep slopes. but most of it, the southwest part of the township, all the railroad land and the other, has been bought by the Duluth Timber Company. He is basing his estimate on these unsold lands of the O. & C. Company, shown by Defendants' Exhibit 312, and is not including the lands of the Duluth Timber Company or any other timber company, in making his estimate. After the timber has been removed from that township, one per cent will be agricultural, and five per cent grazing. There is no agricultural land—no one living in township 32 south, 1 west, except one person in section five. There are ten acres in Section 5, in lot 2, that are agricultural in character, and that is the only agricultural land in that township. One-twentieth of one per cent would be agricultural, and five per cent grazing. It runs from 65,000 to 70,000 feet per acre. After the timber is removed there would be very little agricultural land there; probably one hundred acres in the township, or two per cent of it. On top of these divides there would be a section or two of grazing land, probably ten per cent. Township 32 south, Range 2 west, has just been surveyed. There is no one living in that township except three settlers. This township is outside of the definite limits and has never been patented to the company. He is well acquainted with these lands in that township. The company never had any lands to sell in that township. It is outside of the map of definite location. All of these townships mentioned in his testimony are west of the Willamette Meridian. In township 32 south, range 3 west, one-tenth of one per cent of these unsold lands are agricultural in character, and twenty or twenty-five per cent grazing, and after timber is removed, twenty-five per cent could probably be tilled and probably an additional twenty-five per cent grazing. The company owns no agricultural land in township 27 south, 3 west. Probably twenty to twenty-five per cent of that land in that township is grazing in its present condition; probably ten per cent would be agricultural when the land is cleared, and fifteen per cent additional would be grazing. Of the patented lands of the company in township 28 south, range 3 west, there are no agricultural or grazing lands on either of the two quarter sections. They are both in the forest reserve. The rest of it is all settled on. This exhibit shows nothing but 320 acres of unsold railroad land in that township. He is acquainted with all of the lands of the O. & C., excepting in the Forest Reserve. His acquaintance has been from cruising the even sections. He has cruised all the even sections in these townships and going onto the O. & C. lands and crossing them in criusing the even sections. The two quarter sections shown on this exhibit are both very rough, rocky and mountainous and are heavily covered with a dense stand of timber. The northwest quarter of section 19, and the southwest quarter of section 31, in Douglas County, described in the complaint, are both covered with a heavy stand of timber, and are of very little use for anything except timber value. There is no agricultural land, and probably ten per cent of these lands would be, for a certain time of the year, grazing. There are a couple of pea-vine ridges through there. About 20 acres in township 26 south, range 2 west, is agricultural in character at the present time. In section 7, along the North Umpqua River, there are about twenty acres covered with an application, he thinks the records show, that was in cultivation. Probably twelve per cent of the 8000 acres grazing. The south half of that township is covered with a stand of timber that will run 100,000 feet to the acre, 7,000,000 to a forty. There is a good deal of those benches—that is a very peculiar township, built just like a ladder, the lands jump up about 1000 feet and then there is a bench, and then jump up another 1000 feet, then 3000 feet from the North Umpqua river. These benches are covered with a heavy stand of timber—very good land; they are north slope benches. Probably twenty per cent of that land could be plowed after the timber is removed, and probably an additional twenty per cent would be grazing. In township 28 south, range 3 west, he has testified that none of the unsold lands would be agricultural. He has never cruised the south half of that township, which is in the Forest Reserve. He has not testified in regard to the south half, he never cruised it and could not testify to that. He has been through the south half of the township probably a dozen times, through the trails —White Rock and other trails. He lives in that part of the township, and aside from along Buck Fork and one or two of the creeks, it is quite heavily covered with a dense stand of timber, and probably not over ten per cent would be agricultural when the timber is removed. His homestead is Lots 1 and 2, the east half of the northwest quarter, section 18, township 28 south, range 3 west, Willamette Meridian, Oregon. There are only 320 acres in that township among the unsold lands of the company. They are all rough, rocky, mountainous—that is, the 320 acres. He would estimate none of it as agricultural. Ten per cent would be grazing; there are two ridges that run through it that would be fairly good grazing.

Q. Mr. Gardner, there is no difference between the lands in the even numbered sections and the odd numbered sections in thse townships that you have just previously testified to, is there? That is, Township 30 South —2 West; 30 South—3 West; 30 South—4 West; 30 South—5 West; 31 South—1 West; 31 South—2 West; 31 South—3 West; 31 South—4 West; 31 South—5 West; 32 South—1 West; 32 South—3 West; 27 South —3 West; 26 South—2 West; and 28 South—3 West?

A. Yes.

Q. What makes that distinction?

A. The clearing and settling on the even sections inside of the definite limits, by homesteaders and people that commuted, which—

Q. I know, but— excuse me for interrupting.

A. That is practically the difference, generally speaking. The land originally, there was very little difference.

Q. The land in its natural state was the same?

A. Practically the same, yes, sir.

Q. Now, isn't it a fact, Mr. Gardner, that if these lands in the township just previously mentioned were divided into 160 acre tracts by legal subdivisions, but not by quarter sections, isn't it a fact that the percentage of agricultural land would run from one to two-thirds of the lands situated in these townships?

A. Well, it would, in so far as anything suscepitible of being grazing at all. I will state for the benefit of the court, that the affidavit that you are referring to—they wanted me as a witness—stated that the land, if it is cut and seeded, would be good for agriculture. That is what I stated to Underwood. I don't know whether it is in the affidavit or not. And I stated it would be capable—anything you can run anything through, anything that has a spear of grass on it—you can run it through all of it, I said, except the rocky parts.

Q. Isn't it a fact that one-third would be agricultural lands and about two-thirds grazing lands of these townships that I have mentioned?

A. No. No, that would be the whole of it. One-third and two-thirds make a whole. It would not be that.

Q. You remember of having a conversation with Leonard Underwood, Special Agent of the General Land Office, on the 15th day of March, 1912, with reference to this land?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. And at that time you made an affidavit before Mr. Underwood with reference to some of these lands?

A. I made a statement to him, yes.

Q. I will ask you to examine this document, and state whether or not that is the statement that you signed, or affidavit?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. In this affidavit, among other things, you state (referring to the affidavit): "That he (meaning you) is familiar with, and has been over repeatedly the South Umpqua country, being township 28 S., R. 4 W.; Twp. 29 S., Ranges 1, 3 and 4, W.; Township 30 S., Ranges 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5, W.; Township 31 S., Ranges 1, 2, 3, 4, and part of 5 W.; that part of Township 32 S., Ranges 1, 2 and 3 W., north of the Rogue River Divide in Douglas County. That from his knowledge of said area it is his judgment that one-third of same is agricultural in character, and the balance largely grazing land." Isn't that statement contained in that affidavit?

A. Sure that statement is. The affidavit speaks for itself.

A. The best evidence, I should think.

Q. In this statement do you not also state, "There are now thousands of cattle and sheep annually grazing on same"—referring to the lands just previously mentioned?

A. I will state that that is the whole lands in there, that is including the odd and even sections; and the even sections, a great deal of it along the river, has all been farmed; and I told Mr. Underwood of it specifically, and said, why, certainly there is that many. There are several people run sheep there. They take them up while the pea-vine is green. This year they have had them there five or six weeks, then there was no more feed. They run sheep through there at certain seasons. He said that it didn't make any difference, if the land was agricultural, whether it was covered with a dense growth of timber, he said the land was of an agricultural character no matter how much timber there was on it; and he said that anything that cattle could run over at all was grazing land. Well, then, I said it is all that, because cattle runs all over it.

Q. Referring to the affidavit again, Mr. Gardner, you also stated in this affidavit, did you not, "That he (referring to yourself) is also familiar with and has repeatedly been over part of the North Umpqua country, being Twp. 27 S. Range 3 W; part of Township 28 S. Range 3 West; part of Township 28 S. Range 2 West; Township 26 S. Range 2 West in part. That the above area, in affiant's judgment, would run one-third agricultural land and two-thirds, or the larger part of two-thirds, grazing land"?

A. Yes.

Q. That statement is contained in the affidavit, isn't it?

A. Yes.

A. It does.

Q. Referring again to the affidavit, this affidavit states, does it not, "That affiant believes if said areas above described were subdivided into 160 acre tracts, the same percentage would obtain on an average per 160 acre tract?

A. Yes, sir.

Whereupon complainant offered the affidavit referred to in evidence as Government's Exhibit 117, to which defendants objected as incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant, and upon the further ground that the definitions of grazing and agricultural were given to the witness by the special inspector, Mr. Underwood, and the answer shows that it was the answer of the special inspector and not of the witness, excepting in those general terms. Which said exhibit was received in evidence and is hereinafter set out and described and made a part of this Statement of the Evidence, and identified as Government's Exhibit 117.

Whereupon witness testified that the lands that he had in his homestead, in section 18, township 28 south, range 3 west, are timbered lands, and in a general way are the same general character of land as lands in these townships mentioned as to the timber, but he picked out the only piece in there, that has less timber than there is on either side of him, so that he could clear it. It is in the range running through the Oregon and California, but is not of the same general stand of timber; it contains the same Douglas fir and incense cedar and the same sort of timber as the other lands. He took this homestead up to make a home for himself, for settlement purposes. His acquaintance is principally with the southern part of this grant. He is not so familiar with the northern part, only from occasional trips to look over an individual claim.

Whereupon, on re-direct examination, witness testified that what he saw of the northern portion is on the Calapooia and in the Rock Creek country and on the north Umpqua, and it is heavily timbered and rougher than his part of the country.

Q. Now, referring to this Government's Exhibit 117, who was Mr. Leonard Underwood?

A. Why, Mr. Leonard Underwood was special agent of the General Land Office. He was down there procuring evidence, I guess, for the Oregon and California Railroad suit.

Q. That is, for this suit, on behalf of the Government?

A. He told me that he would want me up here as a witness, and I told him that the land cleared, agricultural land, was very limited in all of it. He said any land which was fairly level, or could be farmed after the timber was removed, was agricultural land.

Q. In other words, he gave you a definition of what he claimed agricultural land was?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he gave you a definition of what was grazing land? What did he tell you?

A. He did, in so far as I told him the sheep came up in there for a certain time of the year every year, and cattle did, all over the grant.

Q. Didn't he tell you that grazing land was any land that sheep or cattle could run over at all and feed on?

Objected to as leading.

A. Well, now, I couldn't state, Mr. Fenton, that he told me that. He said anything that you have ever seen cattle or sheep going over, but he didn't state it as broad as you did. He didn't tell me that.

Q. If he defined grazing land as anything that you have seen cattle go over or sheep go over, that would be his definition of grazing land, as you understood it in this affidavit?

A. Yes, sir.

Whereupon witness testified that the cattle that grazed over the lands of the South Umpqua country are owned by Ben Nichols, of Riddle, and Hi Acker, of Acker's Butte. He is out there in township 29 south, range 1 east. He runs about 65 or 70 head of cattle in that township. Further east, Wright Brothers and Thompson have about 75 or 100 head of cattle, which they run over that whole country, and by what was known as the Short Ranch, now owned by two parties who have bought it, whose names he does not know. They run a couple of hundred head—they range over probably five or six townships. Most of these lands over which they range is deeded. They took these lands when they went in there; in township 31 south, range 1 west, all of section 15, half of 16, 9 and 4, and part of 3, were bought—all the open land was bought that they could run cattle on, and that is where they run most of their cattle.
